HOPE is an amazing thing. The pity is that our use of the word has devalued it, since we often contrast it with faith to the detriment of hope and the highlighting of faith. For the Christian hope is no gamble or risk. We have the glorious blessing of sure, steadfast hope that is an anchor.

At the moment the United Kingdom is in a situation wherein hope is at a premium, to say the least. The sad, dread words of Job are of national application: "My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle, and are spent without hope" (Job 7:6). A recent questions and answers panel on BBC radio discounted any hope at all concerning the future, except for one, Lord Soper, who, to give credit where credit is due, clearly testified to his certainty of life after death. The miserable remarks about being done with at death were chilling, cheerless, almost churlish.

Mind you, only but a few weeks before Christmas we were promised all kinds of things. Expansion was the word freely used by responsible government ministers. It is amazing that we turned our backs on Israel and on the Protestants in Northern Ireland and it all seemed to blow up in our faces.

It has also to be confessed that the spiritual outlook is not too bright. It seemed some months ago as if there were good signs, but as I travel around the land I find that there are discouragements in a number of places.

I must, therefore, share with you the great blessing that has come to me from a verse which speaks of the motivation behind Abraham's great faith: "Who against hope believed in hope, that he might become the father of many nations" (Romans 4:18). Now that's hope!

"Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost" (Romans 15:13).

FUNDAMENTAL BELIEFS OF THE ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH — 1. THE BIBLE: We believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God and that none may add thereto or take away therefrom except at their peril. 2. THE TRINITY: We believe that the Godhead eternally exists in three persons Father Son and Holy Ghost and that these three are one God. 3. THE CHURCH: We believe that the Church consists of all persons who have been regenerated by the Holy Ghost and made new creatures in Christ Jesus. 4. THE SAVIOUR: We believe that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God and that through the death and risen power of Christ all who believe can be saved from the penalty and power of sin. 5. THE HEALER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Healer of the body and that all who will walk in obedience to His will can claim Divine Healing for their bodies. 6. THE BAPTISER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Baptiser in the Holy Ghost and that this Baptism with signs following is promised to every believer. 7. THE COMING KING: We believe in the personal and pre-millennial return of our Lord Jesus Christ to receive unto Himself the Church and afterwards to set up His Throne as King. 8. THE FRUIT: We believe that every believer on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour should produce the ninefold fruit of His Spirit: Love joy peace longsuffering gentleness goodness faith meekness temperance. 9. THE GIFTS: We believe that the Church should claim and manifest the nine Gifts of the Holy Spirit: Wisdom knowledge faith healing miracles prophecy discernment tongues interpretation. 10. THE MINISTRY: We believe that God has given some apostles and some prophets and some evangelists and some pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry for the edifying of the Body of Christ. 11. THE FUTURE STATE: We believe in the eternal conscious bliss of all true believers in Christ and also in the eternal conscious punishment of all Christ rejectors. 12. THE ORDINANCES: We believe in the following ordinances: Partaking of bread and wine in memory of our Lord's death baptism by immersion for believers the laying on of hands and the anointing of the sick with oil.

The acceptable year of the Lord

by John Lancaster

LIKE men standing on the shores of an hitherto undiscovered land and gazing at the mysterious, mist-shrouded peaks lying before them, we stand on the fringes of this New Year and wonder what lies ahead for our world, for our families and for our own lives. Only dimly can we discern some of the possibilities; the rest lies hidden in an obscurity for which we may, perhaps, be thankful.

As I write this, in the closing stages of 1973, the guns are silent in Sinai, but such is the swiftness with which events move in our modern world that I have no means of telling whether such a remark will be quite irrelevant by the time you read my words. Certainly the repercussions of the Middle East war are working themselves out with a fearful logic as the nations of the whole world are waking to the fact that almost their entire economic way of life and much else besides will virtually be decided by the political whims of a comparatively small group of oil-rich Arab states.

Who can tell, then, what political and, possibly, military moves will be made in the coming months as the energy crisis tightens its grip on the nations? Evidence is already to hand — in Japan for instance — that the present crisis is causing nations to take a very definite anti-Israel policy. Whatever our prophetic views may be, it does seem that a major confrontation over the Israeli-Arab dispute is not far off. What is more, the situation seems to bear a striking resemblance to many of the Biblical prophecies of the last days. More and more we are being made to feel that “the end of all things is at hand”.

Looking beyond the political implications of our day and age, is it not possible to see the hand of God in judgment on the nations? Is it possible that the Affluent Society is at last being called to account? To the hungry, homeless, poverty-stricken two-thirds of the world, petrol rationing and the loss of central heating will be meaningless, but to the pampered, morally soft, luxury-loving nations of the West, whose gods have been their cars, houses, material possessions, expensive holidays and electrical gadgets, it will come as a most unpleasant shock. Perhaps God is speaking to the nations — and to many Christians as well — in the only way in which they will understand. Perhaps a cold bedroom and a petrol-less car may achieve what thousands of words could never do — make people at least stop and THINK.

What has all this in keeping with the title of my article? Simply that whatever the economic or political factors involved, every year is still the “acceptable year of the Lord”. As the Revised Standard Version puts it: “the year of the Lord’s favour” (Isaiah 61:2). Even the judgments of God are interwoven with His mercy. He afflicts men in order that He may awaken them to their sin, to their need to repent and to the availability of His grace.

The urgency of the days in which we live ought to make every Christian aware of His responsibilities. Whatever the outcome of our present troubles — and God save us from becoming so bogged down in the niceties of prophetic interpretation that we lose sight of the fact that “the coming of the Lord draweth nigh” — the fact remains that every generation has only a limited time for repentance. The days that are left to us in 1974 are days of grace and we must therefore seek to “redeem the time”.

As a Movement and as individual believers we must give ourselves to Spirit-enabled intercession and Spirit-led evangelism. Read again the Master’s words in Luke 4:17-21. Next turn to John 9:4,5. Then get down before the Lord and ask Him to help you to have the same vision and so enable you to make the most of 1974 — the acceptable year of the Lord.

The Doctrine of the Trinity

1. Is God alone?

by Charles J. E. Kingston

THE Bible, His revelation, takes God for granted: "In the beginning God. . .". On one occasion, He gave His name to Moses. "I am that I am", He said and thus revealed His uniqueness. God alone exists in Himself, unlike everything else: the worlds of nature, animals, mankind or angels all exist by favour of Another, their Creator.

The primary truth about God, revealed to ancient Israel, was His unity: "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord" (Deuteronomy 6:4). This monotheism was in contradistinction to the multiplicity of the gods of the surrounding pagan nations. By the unity of God is revealed that He is One, in opposition to the doctrine of dualism, which teaches that there are two gods, the one good and the other evil. By this it is sought to explain the conflict of good and evil in the world. To this, God replies: "I, even I, am He and there is no god with Me" (Deuteronomy 32:39). "It is true that evil cannot be attributed to a good God as its author; but it is also true that a good God might create moral agents and for wise reasons decline absolutely to prevent their falling into sin. This sufficiently accounts for the existence of sin and its results in the universe." (Finney's Theological Lectures).

Christians, however, believe that in this Unity there is inherent Trinity or Tri-unity: Three in One. The purpose of this series of four articles is to enquire Scripturally into the validity of this belief.

Is God alone? So David prayed: "Thou art great and doest wondrous things: Thou art God alone". So taught Moses: "Unto thee it was showed that thou mightest know that the LORD He is God; there is none else beside Him" (Psalm 86:10, Deuteronomy 4:35). In the beginning — before the creation of angels, before the creation of the vast spaces of the universe, of heaven and the earth — did God in singular oneness exist in splendid and awful aloneness? Did He have no companion? For answer let us examine a number of Scriptures.

1. The Hebrew word "Elohim"

Used for God in the Old Testament more than 2,000 times, it is the plural of "El", a word used only some 200 times. Literally, "Elohim" means "adorable ones". It is used once of angels and four times of earthly judges, as representatives of God. An interesting use of the word "Elohim" is in 2 Kings 1:2 where the god of Ekron is Baal Zebub, the lord of flies, to whom Ahaziah sent messengers. Ahaziah, conversant with the word "Elohim", referring to God, would naturally use the same word when referring to the god of Ekron. Incidentally, there were many Baals in Canaan, where every piece of land had its own deity and the plural "Baalim" is used frequently (see 1 Kings 18:18).

It is this word, "Elohim", which the Bible uses in its majestic opening statement: "In the beginning God (Elohim) created the heaven and the earth". Without giving greater weight than belongs to it, the plural form of the divine name is to be expected if the doctrine of the Trinity be true.

2. God (Elohim) creates (Genesis 1:1-3)

The narrative of the creation reveals that God created by means of the Word and the Spirit. For the first time we are shown the Word as a personal creative power of God: God said, "Let there be light: and there was light". The Holy Spirit is revealed as the bringer of life and order to creation: "And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters". There is thus a threefold centre of activity. "God, as Creator, thought out the universe, expressed His thought in a Word and made His Spirit its animating principle".

John calls Jesus "the Word"; He "was with God; the Word was God; the Word was in the beginning with God; all things were made by Him" (John 1:1-3). John here did not call Him "Jesus", because the Word was not given the name of Jesus until He was born of the Virgin Mary. He received a new name then for a new phase in His work of the salvation of sinners.

The Holy Spirit also created and still does: "Thou sendest forth Thy Spirit, they are created: and Thou renewest the face of the earth" (Psalm 104:30).

3. God (Elohim) confers

"Let US make man in OUR image, after OUR likeness", said God (Genesis 1:26,27). God held a conference with someone or more before beginning the creation of man. The question is: with whom?

One answer is that He conferred with the angels, whom He had created earlier, but this does not satisfy all the facts. Firstly, those whom God addressed were not mere witnesses of His creative act, but were actively concerned in the creation of man and must therefore have possessed divine power to create: "Let US make", said God. Secondly, man was created in the image of God, not of angels. The record reads: "So God created man in His own image. . . in the likeness of God made He him. . . for in the image of God made He man" (Genesis 1:27; 5:1; 9:6). Nowhere are we told that man is made like the angels. Indeed, when the Word became man, He "took not on Him the nature of angels". Thirdly, on no occasion did God consult with His creatures as to what He should do. He "worketh all things after the counsel of His own will" (Ephesians 1:11), we are told.

In Genesis 3:22, "The LORD God said: "Behold, the man is become as one of US". Later, in Genesis 11:7, God said: "Let US go down, and there confound their language". Both these Scriptures are remarkable; they plainly imply a plurality in the Godhead. Since polytheism was the great sin of the ancient world, we would expect all language implying plurality in God to be avoided unless it was really the fact.

4. Scripture speaks of the Godhead as Three Persons

Here are but a few examples:

"Come. . . hear this; from the time that it was, there am I: and now the Lord God, and His Spirit, hath sent Me" (Isaiah 48:16). Plainly, the Word (Jesus) is shown as being sent by both the Father and the Holy Spirit.

Converts of the Gospel are to be baptised in the name (singular) of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Spirit (Matthew 28:19).

Jesus said, "If ye love Me, keep my commandments. And I will pray the Father and He shall give you another Comforter. . . even the Spirit of Truth" (John 14:15-17). If language means what it says, it is evident that the three Persons in the Godhead are indicated here. Jesus cannot be intending to pray to Himself, but to the Father who sent Him (John 5:36) and He promises that another Comforter, the Holy Spirit, will be sent to take His place.

Jesus said: "When the Comforter is come whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of Truth, which proceedeth from the Father, He shall testify of Me" (John 15:26). Again the language used must be interpreted in its obvious meaning; the three persons in the Trinity are all involved.

After the disciples had been baptised in the Holy Spirit, Peter records the fulfilment of the promise Jesus had made to them: "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses. Therefore, being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, He hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear" (Acts 2: 32,33). The Father, the Son — Jesus — and the Holy Spirit all co-operated in pouring out this blessing upon the early Church. Thank God, the Trinity are still blessing all who will humbly believe and receive. Praise the Lord!

5. Conclusion

If there be only one Person in the Godhead, as the Unitarians claim (denying both the deity of Jesus and the Holy Spirit), or if there be only Jesus in the Godhead, as some others would claim (thus denying separate personality to the Father and to the Holy Spirit), then the words of Scripture cannot mean what they say and the reality of Biblical revelation is undermined. As Finney puts it: "To get rid of the doctrine of a Trinity, there must be a most manifest wresting of Scripture, and a practical and total disregard of some of the most universally confessed rules of Biblical interpretation".

Some would object that a trinity in unity is inconceivable, but it is no more inconceivable than the fact of man's own threefold nature, the union of spirit, soul and body. It is no more inconceivable than that light should be composed of all the various shades of the colours of the spectrum, each of which has a definite value of its own. There are, in fact, three primary elements in light: the yellow (the light ray); the infra-red (the heat ray); and the ultra-violet (the actinic ray).

Again, if God dwelt in solitary splendour in the eternity of the remote past, then He could not have been love from eternity. Only if there be Another with Him can He say that He has always been love, for love must have an object to lavish its love upon. Before ever there were angels, before ever there was a universe, the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit dwelt together in love.

Book Reviews

Jesus Christ, Solid Rock, by David Wilkerson. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott, price 30p, postage and packing 6p extra.

SUBTITLED The Return of Christ, this paperback contains contributions by Kathryn Kuhlman, W.A. Criswell, Hal Lindsay and Pat Boone. "Fulfilled prophecy is stronger evidence of the inspiration and the authenticity of the Scriptures than even miracles": from this statement in the opening chapter, the authors proceed to enumerate the prophesied signs of the Lord's return. The well-presented fulfilment of these portents is couched in contemporary language and angled at a youthful readership, but it will none the less be of much interest to all age groups. Having displayed the dependability of the Word, the book challenges the reader to repent and to prove in a doomed world that Jesus is "solid Rock".

William Crawford

If I only love Jesus, by Basilea Schlink. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott, price 20p, postage and packing 3p extra.

HERE is the story of a member of the non-Roman "Sisterhood of Mary" and particularly of her triumph over "a restless nature" and a lingering fatal disease. Her victory is interpreted as flowing from her "great love for Jesus", hence the title. How this love began is clearly shown. When it began is linked with re-admission into the Order after a lapse. The day of "her bridal consecration" is said to have been the beginning of "something special".

This high-priced booklet, 20p for 25 pages, leaves some questions unanswered. Biblical expressions are used, e.g. "repentance", "blood of Jesus", but it is hard to know if they are used with evangelical meaning. Why is mention of the Bible only incidental — or is this why genuine spiritual life is found in a context very different from New Testament Christianity?

CHILDREN'S CORNER

Smiles

Words by Archie A. Biddle
Drawing by John Gregory

WHEN I was a boy, you could buy a big sugary lollipop on a stick for a penny (an old penny!). It would be at least four inches in diameter and about half an inch thick. You did not bite it, but sucked it and so made it last a long time.

Walking down the street one day was a boy who was sucking and enjoying such a lollipop when he was startled by a man who said: "Is that lollipop good, my lad?". The boy looked, and said it was. They walked on together and then came another question: "Are you sure it's good?". The boy said that he was sure that it was good. They continued walking until there was another question: "Are you absolutely certain that it is good?". By this time the boy was getting tired of being asked so many questions. What do you think he did?

He stopped, looked the man straight in the face, offered him his lollipop, and said: "Here, mister, suck it yourself and see how good it is!"

When you love Jesus it is difficult to persuade those who do not know Him that to be a Christian is to have a heart full of joy. I am sure that we would like everybody to believe what Jesus said in John 15. In the first ten verses He spoke about belonging to God and illustrated this by speaking of a Christian as being a branch in a vine. Then He said (v.11): "These things have I spoken unto you, that MY JOY might remain IN you, and that YOUR JOY might be FULL". Fancy that — we can have the joy of JESUS in us and as a result our joy will be filled up to the brim and will run over.

If we are to influence others for Jesus, we must do it with a smile. It was said of a Christian man that, when he walked down the street, the sun came out, the birds began to sing and everybody was made happier for that walk. When we have tasted and seen that the Lord is good we can be filled with His joy and everybody will recognise something in us which is good. They will want to know all about it. Did you know that it is easier to smile than it is to frown? It takes fifty muscles to smile whereas it takes two hundred muscles to frown. Let us do what the old chorus says, "Smile and set the world a smiling, smile for Jesus every day".

Do you know what is the longest word in the dictionary? It is the title of this article. Why? Because there is a mile between the first and last letters.

NEWTOWNARDS

Pastor: W.H. Holohan

THE tenth annual rally of the Newtownards Women's Fellowship was held in St. Mark's Parochial Hall (kindly granted). Attendance was the best so far, the hall being packed to capacity, with an overflow congregation in the vestibule. We had strong support from provincial Elim churches and also from the local denominations. Our guest speaker was Mrs. W.L.I. Bell, who ministered ably and with rich blessing, not only at the rally, but also throughout the week-end. Other sisters taking part in the rally included Mrs. D. Ayling (soloist), Mrs. S. Prentice (Missionary to India) who gave a stirring testimony, and Mrs. W. Dempster (Scripture reading). Our missionary offering at the rally realised £91. Mrs. W.H. Holohan convened the proceedings. At the close the local sisters served a delightful supper to all present.

W.H. HOLOHAN

ROTHERHAM

Pastor: P. Smith

IT had been decided to embark upon a long term programme of evangelism, visiting the small townships on the periphery of Rotherham with one week campaigns, systematically working round until the town has been encircled with witness.

The first campaign was held in the Town Hall, Greasborough, commencing with an after-church rally on Sunday and continuing nightly until Friday. We praise God that a good number of young folk came to listen as Pastor Smith presented in a simple, challenging way Jesus Christ — the Answer for this age!

Five decisions were recorded. Local friends gave ministry in song and testimony of recent healing in answer to prayer.

One very pleasing feature of the campaign was the whole-hearted willingness of our own young people, who distributed invitations in Greasborough and in two large neighbouring estates — Wingfield and Rockingham. It was pleasing, too, to see those same young people earnestly testifying and counselling the enquirers.

PETER BEMROSE

WINTON, Bournemouth

Pastor: G.N. Backhouse

THE first of the weekend of special meetings to mark our fifth anniversary proved to be a time of blessing and of fellowship with friends from other churches who gathered with us. The meetings continued on Sunday and Monday evenings. The ministry of Pastor W. Llewellyn Bell was refreshing, stimulating and much appreciated. We enjoyed the testimony of Mrs. Bell and her ministry on the one occasion when she shared the pulpit with her husband. We enjoyed the singing of the Wessex Gospel Choir under the leadership of Mr. Don House, the duet sung by Terry and Roger House and Mr. Bell's own special, inimitable ministry in song.

The following weekend, on the Sunday morning we had the pleasure of welcoming Pastor and Mrs. A. I. MacInnes from Guyana. Their ministry was thought-provoking and blessed to us all.

(Mrs.) D.F. KEMP

SILVERDALE

Pastor: D.S. Williams

OUR autumn crusade was very successful. It called for much preparation, advertising, personal work and prayer. Under the direction of our Pastor, this was willingly done. Pastor Michael Epton was the campaigner. His ministry was anointed, forthright, and challenging. Seventeen decisions were recorded and several received a touch of healing. We rejoice with the heavenly host to see the kingdom of God extended. We appreciated the supporting items given by the Gospel Five, Mr. J. Talbot (Crewe), Mrs. Coutts (Manchester), and the Longton duetists. Pastor Williams led the meetings throughout.

The preacher at our minister's third anniversary was Pastor Kenneth J. Hathaway, who very ably ministered to exceptional gatherings. Pastor Michael Epton ministered acceptably on the Monday evening. Supporting items were given by the youth choir, the Sunday school trio, and the Gospel Five. The Secretary expressed the appreciation of the Church for the ministry of Pastor Williams. His tireless efforts for the extension of the work have resulted in a year of progress and blessing, for which we praise God. The Treasurer, Mr. A. Maddox, presented the minister with a monetary gift from the members of the Church as a token of respect. Mr. Maddox was responsible for the making of the anniversary cake and the refreshments. Mrs. C. Rowley presented Mrs. Williams with a bouquet. It was a delightful weekend, enjoyed by all.

C. ROWLEY

PORT TALBOT

Pastor: A.J. Taylor

WE have just celebrated the fifth anniversary of Pastor and Mrs. A.J. Taylor at our Church. As Pastor Taylor put it, anniversaries are time for "taking stock".

We look back in humble amazement at what God has wrought. We started our Church with a membership of five people and we have grown to a membership of nearly thirty. Our Pentecostal witness has made an impact on the town, especially during the past summer months when we cancelled our Sunday evening services in order to hold open-air services at the Pavillion at the beach.

Our anniversary was also our annual convention and we had the joy of welcoming Pastor R.B. Chapman as our preacher and his wife who ministered sweetly in song. Pastor and Mrs. Chapman were delighted to see the anniversary cake made by one of our members, decorated with twelve wells and palm trees, a signpost saying "Elim", and the Scriptures, "They came to Elim", Ex. 15:27" and "The Lord added to the Church daily such as should be saved", Acts 2:47".

We were deeply challenged by Pastor Chapman's anointed ministry. Even a power cut on the Tuesday evening could not lessen the sense of God's presence as he read John 21, with the aid of a pocket torch and, in the flickering light of two candles, urged us to love and to serve God as Jesus had urged Peter.

We have been praying for over two years for a new church building. Our faith has been tested many times. We are worshipping in an old St. John's Ambulance Hut which is due for demolition very shortly. The Lord has brought us this far and has promised to supply all our needs and to "lead us out". He will not fail us. We are still waiting for the go-ahead to build our Church and we are trusting God that He will continue to lead and provide for us. He has given us a vision for the future—Port Talbot for Jesus Christ—and He has kindled a Pentecostal flame which is burning steadily and will burn until His purposes are fulfilled in this town.

(Mrs.) B. JONES

ST. HELENS

Pastor: J. Tetchner

HIGH winds, heavy rain, threat of power cuts, large amounts of home work — you name it, we had it, yet we praise the Lord for our one week of "Jesus is life" youth rallies conducted by our Crusader leader, Ron Robinson, musical items being by our own group, Revival and The Commenders from Liverpool. Mr. Winston Dunn shared in the ministry of the Word. Pastor V. Thomas from our new Church in Middleton was our preacher on the Saturday. The final night, Sunday, was family night, the whole of the meeting being taken by the young folk. Many outstanding testimonies were given and a new youth choir sang, "A Robe of White" and "Lord, we praise You". Pastor Tetchner gave us the Word of God. It was good to see our new church filled and to see many new faces. Through this Crusade, twelve teenagers found the Lord as Saviour.

RON ROBINSON

DARLINGTON

Pastor: G.J. Fearn

A WEEK'S youth campaign was conducted by a team led by Neil Martin including Myrtle Amos, Gwen Murray, Ken Legg and Malcolm Hathaway. Forty to fifty gathered, mostly young people. The team were introduced and, after coffee and biscuits, mixed with those present to get to know them.

The Sunday evening service was conducted by the Pastor. Members of the team sang and gave their testimonies. A heart-searching message was given by Pastor Ken Legg. This was followed by a coffee bar when opportunities were given for discussions with all members of the team.

Throughout each following day, the team received a very warm welcome at various schools in Darlington and Middlesbrough. The film, "The Son Worshipers" was shown, followed by group discussions.

Each evening was taken up by the coffee bar, during which great opportunities arose for talks with the young people who gathered. Saturday saw the showing of the film to a quite full church of young people.

Then came the final day, with a tea at 5 p.m. for the young people, followed by the evening service conducted by the Pastor. Two of the team sang a duet, and two visitors from Bradford, the Misses Lelle and Reka Molnar, gave in most beautiful song a number of tributes telling of the love of God and the desire of the Lord Jesus that souls should be drawn to Him. A moving message given by the Pastor was followed by a "get-together" meeting.

The Lord gave a rich, full blessing to this campaign and fifty young people signified their desire to know and to follow the Lord.

H.S. REVILL

LOUGHBOROUGH

Pastor: J.H. Hunt

IN 1948 the Loughborough Church was formed after a tent Campaign by Evangelist Ken Matthew. The first Pastor of the newly-formed flock was our President, Pastor John Lancaster. With much joy, therefore, we invited him for our twenty-fifth anniversary services. We were also pleased to have as our other guest preacher Pastor William J. Maybin.

The opening service was marked by the church being full to capacity. This was preceded by an excellent buffet tea provided by the ladies of the Church. The Northampton Choir joined us for our opening celebrations. Their expressive and enthusiastic singing was enjoyed by all. Many friends and former members, who had left the area, were welcomed by our Pastor, who convened the services. Ministers and members of local churches supported, among them Pastor Barry Killick and Pastor and Mrs. R. L. Currie who ministered in song.

The ministry of the Word was challenging, thought-provoking and instructive. It was indeed a blessed time of fellowship and renewal. We are experiencing times of spiritual refreshing and uplift under the ministry of our Pastor. He and his wife have endeared themselves to the people. We look forward to the enlargement of the work as we go on together with the Lord.

SOUTH SHIELDS

Pastor: A.P. Johnston

GOD is blessing the work here. Under the leadership of Irene Stephenson and Evelyn Arkley (sisters, both born again) the Sunshine Corner work is growing in numbers and interest. When Leslie Todd from Thornton Heath held a special Sunshine Corner week, over 100 children gathered each night and several gave their hearts to the Lord Jesus. The leaders learned many new ideas of putting the gospel over to the children and are still using some of Uncle Leslie's methods. The number of children coming each week has doubled. Much blessing is being experienced in all the other meetings under the ministry of our Pastor. Souls are being saved, baptised, and added to the church. Several of our brethren built the new baptistry in the church and at the first baptismal service fifteen candidates presented themselves for baptism. What a scene it was, with a full church of 145 people. After a message from Rev. R. Scott, a local Baptist minister who is the President of the Free Church Federal Council, each candidate approached the baptistry, was given a promise from the Word of God, and then was baptised by our Minister on confession of faith. The service closed with the hymn, "O Jesus, I have promised". Several others signified their desire to be baptised at a future date.

Please pray for this new church as we look to God for His blessing on all the work here.

RICHARD S. DUTTON

Pastor: R. Hughes

HOW can you retail the atmosphere of a move of the Spirit through the medium of cold print? Words can never fully express the experience. Nevertheless we seek to share the joy of the Lord with our friends and fellowship. The Scripture says, "Though it tarry, wait for it. . . IT WILL SURELY COME" (Habakkuk 2:3).

Some time ago we had a period of trial in our Church. For a while it seemed that the prayed-for blessing would never come. In recent days, however, we have seen God moving in a marvellous manner. The faithful had waited on the Lord for a divine visitation and it came with backsliders restored, bystanders revived, souls saved and an electric atmosphere in the meetings. How thankful we were to see young couples, who had been satisfied to miss Communion and prayer meetings, make fresh vows at the mercy seat. Other believers saw the need for baptism or began hungering for the baptism in the Spirit. The attendance at all the meetings has increased and caused the Assembly to pray, "Still let me guard the Holy Fire".

Recently we held a baptismal service when a young man, who was converted through the open air witness, a young couple, who had said no to God for six years, a lady in her twenties, who had a new experience with God while studying in Cardiff and attending the Cardiff City Temple, and a young mother, who was brought to the Church by two recently-restored backsliders, all confessed their faith in the Lord.

by Daryl M. M. Richardson who assists with the ministry at our Watford Church while studying at London Bible College

PAUL'S second Corinthian Epistle was written after he had emerged from one of his darkest hours. He had known disappointment, apprehension and weakness and had suffered attacks on him personally and on his ministry. Problems abounded in Galatia and Ephesus besides Corinth. "We were pressed out of measure, above strength, insomuch that we despaired even of life. . . we had the sentence of death in ourselves" (1:8,9). The Apostle had written to the Corinthians, warning them of the dangers of associating with immoral persons, but he was misunderstood. After Chloe's household had told him of other troubles and he had been visited by a delegation, Paul wrote the Epistle known as 1 Corinthians.

Eventually Paul found it necessary to visit Corinth. Of this visit very little is known except that he made a hasty retreat. He was openly criticised in the Church; according to certain Corinthians his qualifications were not up to the required standard, his theology was unsound, and his vocabulary was poor. He was considered unfit for the calling of an apostle.

Later Titus was sent with another Letter, written "out of much affliction and anguish of heart" (2 Corinthians 2:4). Paul awaited the reply with great anxiety. During this time he travelled from Ephesus to Troas and then to Macedonia, where he met Titus again. Titus brought him good news; the grievous offender had been dealt with. In Corinth there had been an upsurge of grief, a flaming out of new zeal and a new expression of affection for Paul.

Such was the occasion for the writing of 2 Corinthians. As Paul compiled this Epistle he recollected the time when he had witnessed a Roman triumph, the highest honour that could be given to a victorious Roman general, a tremendous event which probably took place only once in every lifetime. For a general to qualify for such a triumph five stipulations had to be met: he must have been the actual commander-in-chief in the field; the campaign must have been completely finished and the region be at peace again; the victorious troops must have been brought home; there had to be satisfactory gains — at least 5,000 of the enemy must have fallen in one engagement and a positive extension of territory must have been gained; the victory must have been over a foreign foe.

The Success of our General

Paul realised that the victory won by our Lord Jesus Christ was much greater than that won by any Roman general. Paul's anxieties and cares of the past few months had been futile, for he was marching in the train of Christ's triumph: "Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ" (2:14). Why worry when Jesus Christ had already won a complete victory? "And having spoiled principalities and powers, He made a shew of them openly, triumphing over them in it" (Colossians 2:15).

Christians need not be bound by any circumstance; we can apply Christ's victory and triumph over it in His name. The victory has been won already. "We are more than conquerors through Him that loved us" (Romans 8:37). Any apparent obstacle is not just overcome; it can be turned round and used for our own good. The battle cannot be won alone; we can only claim Christ's victory.

The Saviour of the Gospel

Paul extended his theme of the Roman triumph. This consisted of a parade through the streets of Rome to the Capital. At the head of the procession marched the state officials from the Senate, followed by the trumpeters. Then various spoils were on show, along with pictures and models of the conquered lands, a white bull for sacrifice and several captives with guards and priests. Then came the General himself. He rode in a chariot drawn by four horses, wore a purple toga marked out with golden stars and carried an ivory sceptre with the Roman eagle on top, while over his head a slave held the crown of Jupiter. The general's family followed him and then came his army who shouted out his praises.

Paul specially thought of the priests, who swung their censers of incense. "God. . . maketh manifest the savour of His knowledge by us in every place" (2 Corinthians 2:14). A wonderful aroma comes from the life of true Christians, an aroma of prayer, praise and preaching. Christians testify that the Conqueror has come. People especially take notice of how we react to certain situations. Despite setbacks, disappointments and difficulties, we must show that the victory of Christ is evident in our lives. Many can be won for the Saviour as they see the way we triumph in the midst of trouble and praise in times of persecution.

The aroma from the censers reached both victors and captives. To the former it signified joy, triumph and life, but it reminded the latter of death, defeat and the coming execution. Paul shows that "we are unto God a sweet savour of Christ, in them that are saved, and in them that perish: To the one we are the savour of death unto death; and to the other the savour of life unto life" (2:15,16). Matthew Henry reminds us that a person either rejects or responds to the gospel, there is no sitting on the fence. Considering the importance of the aroma that we spread, let us make sure that it is pure in every way, that our lives have been completely surrendered to Him.

The Sufficiency of God

With a sense of awe at the magnitude of the task and a sense of inadequacy, Paul then asked the question: "Who is sufficient for these things?" (2:16). He answered himself: "Our sufficiency is of God" (3:5). We must preach the full gospel as we have been commissioned, preferring to win the approval of God rather than man. Like Paul we may feel that we are apparently standing alone without any visible fruit for our labours, but, as we are engaged in His service, God will always accomplish His work and cause us to triumph in Christ.

Like the army we can shout the praises of our General, unafraid of those who hear, but, unlike them, we are assured of a personal relationship with our General, for we are members of His family. We are assured, not only of His greatness, majesty and power, but also of the completeness of His victory wrought on our behalf. Despite any opposition, times of distress or apparent lack of fruit in our labours, we need not be despondent, discouraged or downcast, because we are marching in the train of the triumph of the King of kings and Lord of lords.

This is the first of a series of meditations from the pen of one of the Deacons of our Winton (Bournemouth) Church, author of Modern Parables and a contributor to Golden Grain meditations.

MOUNTAIN CLIMBING

by S.E. Petts

"AFTER six days Jesus took Peter, James and John and brought them up into an high mountain apart and was transfigured before them" (Matthew 17:1,2).

WE all want the view from the mountain top, but are we willing for the trials of the climb? We grumble at the roughness of the path, the weight of the rucksack or the heat of the sun, but when the summit is reached the beauty of the panorama before us in glistening peaks, wooded slopes and fertile valleys, makes it all worthwhile. We wonder how much of delight we have missed on the way — a mountain stream gurgling merrily on its course, or a verdant patch thickly studded with harebell, gentian, scabious and meadow-sweet — all of which might have encouraged us on our upward mission.

Similarly in our daily walk we are over-ready to complain about the difficulties of the way, not recognising the beauty of Christ's presence with us on the journey.

Was this so with Peter, James and John? It may have been. We know that, when at the top they were given a preview of the heavenly glory of the Son of God, whatever sorrows that there may have been in the climb were obliterated by the exceedingly great sense of reverence and joy that filled their beings.

Jesus, carrying His cross, had a long and bitter struggle up Mount Calvary, but He was strengthened to endure "for the joy that was set before Him".

So should we endure, for He has promised to be with us all the way and to show us His glory.

Stubbornness Judges 2:19

by A. S. F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

MANY were stubborn in their evil ways; "they ceased not from their own doings". The children of Israel did evil in the sight of the Lord and served Baalim. Would to God that believers were more stubborn for that which is good and for God!

There is much talk about power — will power, even the power of the Spirit. If our Holy Spirit experience is to give us success, we must discover the secret that we all possess a power, for want of a better name, "WON'T POWER".

Only the exceptional character has a dominant will, only a few have will power, but all of us have "won't power" in abundance, even weaklings — the drifting, yielding, oh-be-a-good-fellow, anything-to-be-agreeable, go-with-the-crowd boys and girls. We can be just as strong with our won'ts as the supermen are with their wills; that's the beauty of it. The good, all-loving God has so ordered things that it is the same with the least as with the mightiest and greatest, because all we have to do, is to DO NOTHING.

To keep our of trouble — out of the horrible pits that beset the human path — all that is necessary is not to walk in them. It does not require hours of struggle, prayer, courage, a great character and will power to stop smoking and drinking. It is simply not to smoke and drink. It is as simple and easy as that. Until we hate what is wrong and what will cause the downfall of others and ourselves, we can struggle and pray and still slide down the alcoholic slide to destruction. God will never take away what we love and want. There is a way to quit and to stay free — a power, and you possess it now — "won't power", mule power! Have you tried to make a mule do something that he does not want to do?

Solomon gives us not human wisdom, but divine rules from heaven to govern our whole conduct. He said, "Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise" (Proverbs 6:6). I say, "Behold the Mule!"; as a "won'ter" he has no equal; he is plain stubborn. It is wise to say, "I will not". God is always on the side of those who are stubborn against sin and Satan.

Smoking, drink, drugs — be stubborn and say, "I won't". They can lead me to the bar, but they cannot make me drink. I can suffer, crave, die, but no power on earth or under the earth can make me if I simply won't. No matter how vacillating we are, how much of a spineless inebriate, a moral wreck, there is a thing that we can do and be as powerful as Hitler, Julius Caesar or Napoleon — we can "NOT" do a thing.

If only we would see this and believe it, we would be in victory and would remain victors to the glory of God. Let us use our God-given stubbornness for good and say, "As for me and my house we will serve the Lord". If we resist the devil, he is defeated.

If all mankind has the power of "WON'T", how much more power is ours, being filled with the Holy Spirit, to do what is right and to say to Satan and his works — "WON'T"!

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir,

I write with reference to Mrs. E. E. Lockwood's letter printed in the December 1st issue of the Elim Evangel, concerning Jesus Festivals and Gospel Rock groups. We would be interested to learn why Mrs. Lockwood quoted firstly her age and secondly that she had been a member of Elim for thirteen years. May we suggest that Mrs. Lockwood was afraid that young people reading her letter would think a senior citizen had written the comments and was still trying to convince herself that she was young. Why are people so biased about certain events? Of course people are jumping on the band wagon or "group" wagon, but have we not learned in the past that these come to nothing?

However, there are many Christian groups which are made up of born again, Holy Spirit-filled believers, and the only rock about them is the Rock they stand upon!

Does thirteen years as an Elim member qualify Mrs. Lockwood to down-grade every Jesus Festival and every group? She states that there is no true evidence of conversion or of a real testimony. Surely her letter would have held more sway if Mrs. Lockwood had told us how long she had been saved, and not how long an Elim member.

Yours in our Saviour's Name, J. Williams

 2. Cultivates the friendship of those approved of God (v.6);
 3. Separates himself from the spirit of the age (vv. 3-5)
 4. Refuses to regard iniquity (v.3)
 5. Lives consistently at home (v.2)
 6. Has a praiseful spirit (v.1) —

An Incident

"Blow ye the Trumpet — BLOW!"

IN Poet's Corner in Westminster Abbey a memorial to John Milton, our great poet, reads: "In the year of our Lord Jesus Christ 1737 this bust of the author of Paradise Lost was placed here by William Benson, Esq., one of the auditors of the Imprest to His Majesty King George III, formerly Surveyor-General of Works to His Majesty King George I. Rysback was the statuary who cut it." This was all about, not John Milton, but William Benson! The Memorial was but a device to blow his own trumpet! His descendants are still with us!

A Poem

The Proper Attitude in Prayer

"THE proper way for a man to pray," said Deacon Lemuel Keys,

"The only proper attitude, is down upon his knees."

"No, I should say, the way to pray," said Reverend Doctor Wise,

"Is standing straight, with outstretched arms, and rapturous, upturned eyes".

"It seems to me his hands should be devoutly clasped in front,
With both thumbs pointing toward the ground," said
Reverend Doctor Blunt.

"Last year I fell in Hodkin's well, head first," said Cyrus Brown,

"With both my heels a stickin up, my head was pointing down.

"I made a prayer right then and there, best prayer I ever said.
The prayenest prayer I ever prayed was standing on my head."

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

59. Jacob revives (Genesis 45:25-28)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

JACOB must have been filled with worry and apprehension while his sons were away. His anxiety would increase as they became overdue. He would be mystified when the caravan containing the provisions sent by Joseph approached his home and utterly overwhelmed by the excited cry: "Joseph is alive; he is ruler of Egypt!". He evidently felt at first that it was a cruel trick, but when his sons showed him the gifts sent by Joseph and told him of the words that he had spoken, Jacob's heart was filled with deep peace and joy. All the sorrows of the years were gone, his spirit revived and he began at once to make preparations to go to Joseph.

On the resurrection morning the disciples were thrilled because they saw and knew that Jesus was alive, risen from the dead. This good news has come to us in these last days. We have not seen Him as they did, yet the evidence is conclusive: our lives have been transformed and we have received the gift of eternal life; we know the constant companionship of the Holy Spirit; He answers our prayers and gives us precious gifts from His abundant store, a foretaste of heaven's riches. We are on the way to meet our heavenly "Joseph" and we shall soon see Him face to face. Thank God for the comfort and true hope that the Scriptures give us!

The golden Cord

Through every minute of this day,
Be with me, Lord!
Through every day of all this week,
Be with me Lord!
Through every week of all this year,
Be with me Lord!
Through all the years of all this life,
Be with me Lord!
So shall the days and weeks and years

And all draw on with sweet accord

Time is a Gift from God

We stand once more on the threshold of a shining unblemished year,
Untouched yet by TIME and FRUSTRATION,
Uncloaked by FAILURE and FEAR . . .
How will we use the days of this year
And the time God has placed in our hands,
Will we waste the minutes and squander the hours,
Leaving "no prints behind in time's sands"?
Will we vainly complain that LIFE is SO SWIFT,
That we haven't time to do good,
Our days are too crowded, our hours are too short
To do all the good things we should?
We say we would pray if we just had the time,
And be kind to all those in need,
But we live in a world of "planned progress"
And our national password is SPEED.
God grant us grace as another year starts
To use all the hours of our days,
Not for our own selfish interests
And our own wilful, often-wrong ways.
But teach us to take TIME FOR PRAYING
And to find time for LISTENING TO YOU,
So each day is spent well and wisely
Doing what YOU MOST want us to do.

The Home Call of a Missionary Pioneer,

H. C. Phillips

by J.T. Bradley, Secretary-General

I WRITE about the home-call of yet another dear aged warrior of God and another member of a family that has had much influence on our denomination and also upon the Church of Jesus Christ. Our brother Hubert C. Phillips will not be as well known, apart from reference to him in THE ELIM EVANGEL, to the present generation as he was known to a past generation of Elim in this country. Hubert C. Phillips has spent more than fifty years of his life pioneering for God in the Transvaal. When first he went out to Transvaal circumstances were primitive. During the course of his life he has seen epoch-making changes in South Africa. The home in which he lived in Nelspruit is perhaps a reflection itself of the changes that have taken place, the gradual additions to the small original home reflecting the total change, both in society and in the country where he worked. Hubert C. Phillips and his dear wife were ever sacrificial in their commitment to God. Scores of churches have been founded in the Transvaal as a result of Pastor Phillips's labours as an Elim missionary, and as a result of his pioneering endeavour through Emmanuel Press millions of pieces of literature have gone all over Africa in many African languages.

He was truly a father in God to many scores of churches and many thousands of Africans. His vision was one of indigenous churches that were self-supporting and this vision he fulfilled. God richly blessed his dedication and the result of his labours is plain for all to see in Transvaal.

It is remarkable that our own Missionary Secretary, Pastor Leslie Wigglesworth, should have been in South Africa at the time of Mr. Phillips's home-call, and therefore was able to attend the funeral service. We understand that Pastor Wigglesworth was able to spend some happy hours of fellowship with Mr. Phillips a little while before his home-call. The poignancy of the parting, especially for his loved-ones and for his dear widow, is very acute, yet we remember the Word of God that we do not sorrow as those who have no hope. We extend to Mrs. Phillips and their son our sympathy and the assurance of our prayers at this time.

On his return from South Africa, the Missionary Secretary, Mr. Wigglesworth, will himself pay tribute in a future number of the EVANGEL to our dear brother.

Mr. Phillips has gone to an eternal reward but yet, as we so often say, to behold our dear Lord face to face will be the greatest reward of all.

As we contemplate the life of Pastor H.C. Phillips we are made to realise that for us all the days are short. May we be inspired to address ourselves, as he did, to the most fundamental task of all, the winning of souls for our Lord Jesus Christ.

An open letter to all Crusaders

A very happy New Year! This is to be an important year for us all. 1974 marks the Jubilee of the Elim Crusaders Movement. In October, 1924 a small group gathered in London to launch this great work which has been instrumental in evangelising thousands of young folk and in equipping them to become servants of the Lord in various fields of Christian activity.

The milestone is an opportunity to review the past and to prepare for the future. Fifty years is a long time and the swift advancement of civilisation during this period has left the world breathless. Time is running out and the coming of the Lord is very near. We have priorities that must be considered in the light of the imminence of His return.

The Crusader Movement was commenced to marshal an army of young people to participate in evangelistic activity. The founders did not conceive of a Movement to provide entertainment or mere weekly meetings. It came to give an opportunity to reach the lost with the gospel. I am impressed by a printed letter which was sent to all Crusaders in May, 1929 inviting them to support a great revival and healing campaign in Brixton, London, conducted by Principal George Jeffreys, the Founder of the Elim Pentecostal Church: "The Principal is relying upon the wholehearted support of the London Crusaders throughout this campaign. We trust that you will do your utmost to be present at each of the five services on Whit Sunday and Monday, coming prepared to give your very best in the service of the Lord". The letter was signed by the late E.C.W. Boulton, the first National Crusaders' Secretary which office is now designated National Youth Director. The Crusader Movement was part of a great evangelistic thrust which took the gospel of Christ to the nation. WE WANT TO CONTINUE TO WIN YOUNG PEOPLE FOR GOD IN OUR JUBILEE YEAR.

Jubilee — the fiftieth year among the Jews, which immediately followed the seven weeks of years, or seven times seven years, mentioned in Leviticus 25:10 — began on the tenth day of the seventh month, on the day of solemn atonement (Leviticus 23:27) and was proclaimed through all the nation by the sound of trumpets. This "joyful sound" cancelled all debts, hushed all litigations, released all prisoners, liberated all slaves, and recovered all estates that had been sold and restored them to their owners (Leviticus 25:8). No wonder that Isaiah 35:10 records: "Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound" (of the jubilee trumpets). True freedom comes through the gospel of Christ and we should be true "Jubilarians". We must take every opportunity to experience and to express this freedom. The young people of our generation have their own thoughts, ideas, thought-forms, life-styles, values, standards and these are far removed from the teachings of Jesus Christ. Attitudes of today go under the title of "freedom". Our generation rejects all moral authority; it is anti-authoritarian and imagines that it is free. We possess the real FREEDOM.

Plans have been laid by the National Youth Committee for 1974 which include the following:

1. A special Jubilee Youth magazine.
2. A Jubilee Bible emphasis, including special "Know your Bible" studies, and "Read the Bible in a Year" programme and a national Bible competition — regional and national — for Senior and Intermediate Crusaders. We hope to develop a Crusader Cassette Course to help with programme preparation.
3. The National Youth office is to provide a Youth leaders' file containing Elim Youth Movement facilities, i.e., film-strips; Soul-winners Course, youth programmes, Sunday school and Crusader programmes.
4. "Talent Track" competitions and E.Y.M. recording. Youth groups will be asked to submit tapes and cassettes for the competition. A special disc will be cut for Jubilee year.
5. Jubilee rallies, festivals, banquets, conferences and camps are to be organised within the presbyteries and a concerted effort will be made to contact unsaved young people.
6. Jubilee Missionary outreach. The "Project the Gospel" scheme and Soul-winners Course will play an important role in emphasising missionary work overseas and at home.
7. Youth Commissioners' Seminar.
8. Jubilee Photography competition. You will be asked to submit special photography highlighting youth in action.

These are some of the ideas for Jubilee year. We depend on every Crusader to make the year a special year for God, the Church and their own spiritual life. This could be our last year really to "Go for God". Be sure to support everything that is organised locally and at presbytery and national level.

Yours in the fight for freedom,
Eldin R. Corsie, National Youth Director

Ephesians 4:1-16

"Walk worthy" (v.1).

WE walk as children of the day, illuminated by the Light of the World, walking in newness of life, like the man at the temple gate. We walk by faith, like Abram, into our new inheritance; in communion with Him, like Enoch; in the way of the cross, like Simon the Cyrenian; in awareness of the presence of the resurrected Lord, like those on the Emmaus Road; with Him in the fires, like the Hebrew children; in a miraculous experience, like Peter on the water, our hand in His. The voice from heaven that rebuked Paul as he walked the Damascus road can halt our footsteps when we wander from the true path. Walking is excellent exercise: compare the measure of full stature (v.13), of His gifts (v.7), in every part and joint (v.16).

Tuesday, January 8th

Ephesians 4:17-32

"Grieve not the Holy Spirit" (v.30).

BE aware of the sensitivity of the Spirit. He can be grieved by our coldness, quenched by our hardness, resisted by our stubbornness, despised by our carelessness, rejected by our backslidings, yet His personality is revealed in His ministry to comfort us, to help our infirmities that we may know how to pray, to teach us that we may teach, to guide us that we may lead others. He is our Interpreter of the mind of God, our Intercessor in the will of God, our Instructor in the Word of God. Pentecostal believers can be revived, restored, revolutionised, refreshed. A dove trembles at the sight of a black feather. Be sensitive to the Holy Dove.

Wednesday, January 9th

Ephesians 5:1-20

"Awake thou that sleepest. . . redeeming the time" (vv.14-16).

WE have been aroused from our sleep of death (like Lazarus) and have entered the door to the dawn of eternal day. Sleeping Christians let the Lord down in Gethsemane in the hour of His greatest need — they did not pray. Jonah slept when he strayed from the divine pathway and had to be aroused by the heathen. Samson slept while he lost his power with God. The world will lull us to sleep even with songs of Zion. The alarm of the Spirit will keep us aware of the time in which we live. A living mouse will attract more attention than a dead or sleeping lion. "It is high time to awake out of sleep: for NOW is our salvation nearer" (Romans 13:11).

Thursday, January 10th

Ephesians 5:21-33

"Christ is the Head of the Church" (v.23).

HE is the Lord of the "Ecclesia" (called-out ones). The Church is a Flock; He is the chief Shepherd, good Shepherd and greatest Shepherd. It is an Army; He is the Captain of our salvation. It is a building; He is the Foundation. It is a kingdom of priests; He is the great High Priest. It is a great Treasure; He gave His all to purchase her. The Church is the local assembly; He is the golden Candlestick in the midst. The New Jerusalem is a picture of the complete Church; He is the Light and Sun of that city. Christ loved the Church and gave Himself for it that He might sanctify, cleanse, and present it perfect (vv.25-27).

Friday, January 11th

"CHILDREN" (v.1) — obedience is the keyword in Christian service. "Fathers" (v.4) have a privilege and responsibility to nurture children in spiritual things (we think of spiritual fathers, too). "Servants" (v.5) — in the days of strikes and industrial unrest, let our service be as to the Lord and not unto men (v.7). "Masters" (v.9) — "One is your Master, even Christ". Administration in the managerial department is important. Philemon was a business man who dedicated his house and position to the Kingdom of God. If the Lord has prospered us let us use this power as a ministry to Him: At home or in business do the will of God from the heart.

Ephesians 6:10-24

"The whole armour of God" (v.11).

DAVID was Saul's armour-bearer. He knew every part of the king's equipment and its weaknesses, so he chose the armour of spiritual reinforcement and met Goliath in the name of the Lord. Paul, contemplating through prison bars a Roman soldier's regalia, saw himself clothed with the mighty armour of God from head to foot, with no part unprotected. From donning this God-given equipment, he was later able to say, "I have fought a good fight": battles in the mind, heart, soul. Many frustrations, discouragements, and diversions of our present generation can paralyse efforts unless we wrestle in prayer (v.18). Satan trembles when he sees the weakest saint upon his knees; in this armour we can still shake foundations and turn the world upside down.

Sunday, January 13th

"The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree" (v.12).

THERE are 360 uses for the palm tree. The leaves are used for roofs, couches, baskets, fences, the branches for fibre, ropes, rigging, sandals, etc., the trunk for fuel. Think of the fruit and the sap. Fruitfulness continues even in old age (some palms last for 200 years). Evergreens, they remind us of consistency. "Tamar" ("Palm") is the Bible name for beauty, grace, uprightness. Palms cheered the weary traveller at Elim's wells, a landmark of blessing. The Roman Toga-Palmata was a garment worn by victors, embroidered with palms. May this Sunday see us flourishing in the courts of the Lord!

HOPE by Ron Williams, Pastor of our Rochester Church

"WHILE there is life, there is hope". I frequently encourage people to "hope for the best"; there is nothing unChristian about that. Good hope is better than a bad possession. You may hope one day to be rich. Perhaps you would like to see a loved-one who many years ago left our shores. Maybe you are hoping for a friend who will help you when you are surrounded by problems. Possibly you are just hoping that things in general will improve.

In the Tamil language, there is no word for hope. How sad when people cannot find a way of expressing a facet of life that is so important. There have been occasions when I have hoped for remarkable results and they have happened. Hope signifies a condition that never is, but always is to come. Somebody said: "Great hopes make great men".

Do not be put off by those who tell us that we are wasting our time. Hope is as cheap as despair, often proves to be the best medicine, and it is in the power of everybody to dispense it.

I have seen people hang on to some very slender chances, but in an amazing way they have come through. Knowing what they wanted and seeing a means of getting it, they set body and mind in motion to succeed, and did.

Take heart. You can realise your greatest desires if you have hope, but where there is no hope there will be no endeavour. When Alexander the Great crossed into Asia, he gave away almost all his belongings to his friends. One of the Captains asked him what he had kept for himself. "I keep hope" was the answer.

Edward Mote's great hymn came to him as he was going to work in London. Thinking on the gracious experience of the Christian through the confidence that we have in Christ, the refrain came to his mind: "On Christ the solid rock I stand". With a good foundation we are able to build securely. His hope was built "on nothing less than Jesu's blood and righteousness". In times of darkness, when life seemed a "stormy gale", his hope was like an anchor. Edward Mote went on to say: "When all around my soul gives way, He then is all my hope and stay".

Be sure that you are on good foundations, for the biggest disappointments are not always from building life with inferior materials, but simply by starting wrongly. We can be sure of only one foundation — Jesus Christ. The hymn-writer said that he "dare not trust the sweetest frame"; all he could do was "wholly lean on Jesu's name".

Do not put too much hope in people; at best we are only human with a tendency to failure. Why not at this moment turn your thoughts to Jesus Christ? We can trust the One who gave His life for us. We are told to cast all our care upon Him, for He cares for us. From this moment your life can change; you can find hope in Christ the Saviour. Through the forgiveness of our sins, the strength and promises of God are available. With our hope built on these we can stand erect and face the tempest. Then we can confidently sing:

When He shall come with trumpet sound,
O may I then in Him be found,
Dressed in His righteousness alone,
Faultless to stand before the throne.

Editorial

THE ancient Hebrew prophets were remarkable men by any standards. Naturally speaking they were products of their times and represented the background and upbringing which they received. The outward differences are remarkable—take Amos and Daniel for instance—but the striking power and force of their ministries bore the evidence of the divine hand upon them and the Spirit within them.

When men were largely oblivious of the importance of human relationships, they drew attention to them. Unrighteous and unjust social dealings were pointed out fearlessly and with candour. The veneer of religion was nauseating to them. We have only to recall Micah's strong, almost sarcastic, yet poignant words: "Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousand rivers of oil? shall I give my firstborn for my transgression?" to see this. To have a kind of "official" God, albeit Jehovah Himself, was woefully insufficient. God must be Lord, and particularly He must be Lord of the heart and life of the individual.

Events move rapidly and one cannot tell between the writing of an Editorial and its appearance what might happen, but it seems true that our nation is in dire need. A backslider spoke to me the other day, a young man earning a very good wage, but with little time for the things of God. With a rueful shake of the head he described conditions in the United Kingdom and added, "It tells you about this in the Good Book. It makes you think. It certainly has me". He cannot be alone in these days.

The tragedy of our country is that it seems at so many levels to mock even the veneer of religion. There is a basic hostility to all things spiritual. The pronouncements of some who capture the eye and ear through the media are blasphemous and shocking. There is little wonder that we are in such a sad state.

We need to repent. There is the heart of it. We have been a proud nation, perhaps internationally known for our sense of fair play, or so they say. The prospect of our nation at the moment is anything but a matter of pride, however. We have nothing to present to God to enable us to beseech His mercy. We can but beg His pardon—in both senses—and plead His mercy.

Passages like Joel 2:12-20 have prophetic importance, but we could well apply the spirit of them to our land now.

FUNDAMENTAL BELIEFS OF THE ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH — 1. THE BIBLE: We believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God and that none may add thereto or take away therefrom except at their peril. 2. THE TRINITY: We believe that the Godhead eternally exists in three persons: Father, Son and Holy Ghost and that these three are one God. 3. THE CHURCH: We believe that the Church consists of all persons who have been regenerated by the Holy Ghost and made new creatures in Christ Jesus. 4. THE SAVIOUR: We believe that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God and that through the death and risen power of Christ all who believe can be saved from the penalty and power of sin. 5. THE HEALER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Healer of the body and that all who will walk in obedience to His will can claim Divine Healing for their bodies. 6. THE BAPTISER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Baptiser in the Holy Ghost and that this Baptism with signs following is promised to every believer. 7. THE COMING KING: We believe in the personal and pre-millennial return of our Lord Jesus Christ to receive unto Himself the Church and afterwards to set up His Throne as King. 8. THE FRUIT: We believe that every believer on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour should produce the ninefold fruit of His Spirit: Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. 9. THE GIFTS: We believe that the Church should claim and manifest the nine Gifts of the Holy Spirit: Wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discernment, tongues, interpretation. 10. THE MINISTRY: We believe that God has given some apostles and some prophets and some evangelists and some pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry for the edifying of the Body of Christ. 11. THE FUTURE STATE: We believe in the eternal conscious bliss of all true believers in Christ and also in the eternal conscious punishment of all Christ rejectors. 12. THE ORDINANCES: We believe in the following ordinances: Partaking of bread and wine in memory of our Lord's death, baptism by immersion for believers, the laying on of hands and the anointing of the sick with oil.

Church Reports

SALISBURY

Pastor: G.L.W. Ladlow

THE women's Sunny Hour anniversary attracted a large congregation from various churches who enjoyed the inspiring ministry in word and song of Mrs. D.O. Ward of Bath. At the tea-table a beautifully decorated cake, made in the form of three steps leading up to an open Bible by one of the sisters to commemorate the third anniversary of the Pastor and his wife in Salisbury, was cut by Mrs. Ladlow, who was presented with a set of saucepans.

For our evangelistic week-end nine students came from Elim Bible College and ministered in a coffee bar outreach and in the Sunday services. Three decisions for Christ were registered. Evangelist Gerald Bean came with his talking doll "Gregory", for a special childrens' week-end. On the Sunday night there were over 300 children and adults in the service. The increase in the Sunshine Corner and Junior Crusaders testifies to the value of this effort. At our Church Anniversary services Pastor Peter Smith ministered with great blessing and Ian and Valerie MacInnes showed slides of their work in Guyana.

GREENOCK

Pastor: R. Lighton

IN the last few years we have made evangelistic outreaches among adults, but we felt led to have an outreach among children. We asked Mr. Stanley W. Johnson (Uncle Stan) to lead the crusade. Mr. Johnson gave up four days of his holiday to visit schools near our four Sunday schools. In one area he was refused admission to any of the schools, but he gained admission to the majority of the schools and spoke to no fewer than 823 children ranging from 5-11 years. The Lord supplied musical accomplishment in the form of Douglas Watt, a university student, who assisted Mr. Johnson by playing his guitar. The two young men were very warmly received by pupils and teachers and God's Word was presented both in choruses and Jesus stories. On the first three nights meetings were held in the satellite Sunday schools at Kirk House, Gibbshill, Braeside Tenants Association Hall and Auchmountain Halls and, on the remaining seven evenings in the Church hall. We had good attendances and overall approximately 1,000 children heard the Gospel in modern, dynamic style. On the middle Saturday afternoon of the crusade, a march of witness was led by Greenock Salvation Army Band, and a short meeting was held in Lady Octavia Park. 171 children expressed the desire to ask the Lord Jesus into their hearts. The children were counselled and given appropriate leaflets and a copy of the T.E.V. Mark's Gospel. In each area our Sunday school teachers are visiting the homes of those who decided for the Saviour.

Report by Mr. Petticrew, Sunday Schools Secretary

At our sisterhood rally, 280 ladies from various guilds in the district gathered to share fellowship with us. Our speaker was one of our own young people, Mrs. Lorna Morrison, who gave a sound gospel recipe for living based on 2 Peter 5:8. She also gave a thought-provoking reading entitled, "The Master's Visit". Mrs. Logan, a Salvationist, sang two lovely solos.

The service was ably convened by our Minister's wife. Judging by the comments at the end of the meeting, everyone received a spiritual uplift and blessing.

(Miss) HELEN THOMSON

MARTON, Blackpool

Pastor: R. Clarke

AT our harvest thanksgiving weekend we were privileged to have as our special speaker, Pastor R.B. Chapman. We were delighted with his ministry and by the messages in song by his wife. On the Saturday evening it was a great pleasure to welcome the Good News Chorale from Fleetwood Assembly of God.

At our Pastor's second anniversary weekend on the Saturday a party from Rowley Regis led by our previous minister, Pastor D.W. Cartwright, thrilled us with testimonies in word and song. The service was brought to a climax with an inspired word from Pastor Cartwright. On the Sunday and Monday we were greatly blessed by the ministry of Pastor H.W. Greenway. On the Monday we enjoyed a choir piece given by friends from Jubilee Temple and a duet from Pastor and Mrs. Greenway.

Recently we have had an increase in the primary section of the Sunday School. We have also successfully started a play group in our new extension. It is ably led by Mrs. Hazel Longworth, one of our members. We have recently welcomed eight new members into fellowship. We ask for your prayers that God will continue to pour out His blessing and that we will see many souls added to His kingdom.

JACK BANCROFT

Pastor: R. Smith

AT the twentieth anniversary of our baptistry being opened, the Secretary of the local Congregational Church, one of the first to be baptised, testified of how the Lord is still keeping His promises. Two young mothers, who came to the Lord earlier this year, and a couple who were saved during a campaign by Pastor C.J.E. Kingston two weeks previously, went through the waters of baptism. Pastor Kingston proclaimed the gospel. At least one young girl requested prayer for salvation. This was the first baptismal service conducted by our Pastor we believe. Four people who have recently made decisions for Christ have indicated their desire to be baptised at the next opportunity.

A number of teenagers have been attending the services as a result of the youth club and coffee bar outreach. Several have accepted the Lord Jesus as Saviour.

RUTH TWEEDIE.

HARROGATE

Pastor: D.J. Blake

WE enjoyed a weekend of fellowship and blessing in Harrogate when our Church held a thanksgiving weekend for the closure of the building fund mortgage and for our Minister's second anniversary. At a fellowship tea on the Saturday seventy friends and members were present, including Pastor W. Crawford, a former Minister, and the Field Superintendent, Pastor R.B. Chapman, who spoke at the evening meeting. Everyone enjoyed the singing and the ministry from God's Word.

When ministering in Harrogate some four years ago, Pastor Crawford took a special interest in the removal of the building fund debts and had worked hard to that end. He told us how pleased he was to see the debts removed at last, but reminded us that we were still to give in order to expand.

Pastor Chapman mentioned the splendid effort of the Church in removing the last £1,682 of the debts in the past three years and also the efforts made to improve the building. In the last two years we have spent nearly £500 improving the Church, with a new heating boiler, new lights and new chairs, as well as redecorating the Church; this work has been done by the Minister and Deacons.

As to the faithful ministry of our Pastor, the Church Secretary, Mr. Eric Umpleby, thanked him for his hard work and faithful service on behalf of all the Church.

On the Sunday we continued to enjoy the Lord's blessing and encouragement from the Word of God, when Pastor Chapman preached at the morning service. In the evening service we enjoyed the ministry of Pastor Crawford and the fellowship of his wife and son, Andrew.

We thank God for His many blessings and provisions in the past, and anticipate the future with confidence and joy.

Constant Rejoicing

by S.E. Petts

"Rejoice in the Lord alway" (Philippians 4:4).

WHEN we remember our once lost estate and contemplate what infinite pleasures are stored up in our inheritance through the saving power of our Lord Jesus Christ, our hearts overflow with joy. We feel, as did the wisest of men, that "The winter is past, the rain is over and gone, the flowers appear on the earth, the time of the singing of the birds is come, and the voice of the turtledove is heard in our land". Our joy in Christ is like sunshine sparkling on cascading streams. It is like a field of buttercups gilding the feet of children as they paddle in the dew.

Though we speak our gratitude to God like the joy of a snowdrop in the winter's dusk, as children of the light we would express it as did the Sons of the Morning on the day of Creation. The wine of our rejoicing warms our hearts to service as the Word of God sounds with a clarion call. Thanksgiving sets free our spirits even as pigeons loosed from a basket.

We must pray for audible voices to express our joy in our salvation, the most wonderful of all the mighty works of God the Father through Jesus Christ His Son.

The greatest symphony begins with one note truly expressed. The finest praise commences with one word of joy sincerely uttered.

THE London Crusader Choir and their Founder-Director of Music, Douglas B. Gray, celebrate their forty-fifth anniversary this weekend.

During January, 1929, a band of some seventy enthusiastic Elim Crusaders gathered in the Elim Tabernacle, Clapham, for the inauguration of a group of singers and musicians ready to dedicate their time and talents to “sing forth the honour of His name and to make His praise glorious”. Present at this service were Pastors E.J. Phillips, E.C.W. Boulton and R.E. Darragh, and their founder-leader, D.B. Gray. The original name for this group was “The London Harmony Choir”. Perhaps the lack of harmony in the very early days persuaded the powers of those days to eliminate the suggestion of harmonious results, who knows?

Not even the wildest of imaginations could have conceived forth-five years ago that the formation of such a group of Elim Pentecostal youth was the commencement of an international crusade of such magnitude and powerful projection.

As in all pioneering projects, early days brought problems adding strain and pressures on very youthful leadership. Nevertheless a vision and an unmistakable call had to be obeyed and the Lord’s perfect will has to be followed. Such a long history, now known world-wide, has been signally blessed of God and so many have been won for the Lord Jesus Christ.

In various ways the Choir has been the spearhead in taking the Pentecostal testimony into areas closed to the Pentecostal fellowships of our country. The choir made its first BBC broadcasts in 1944 and has continued to broadcast regularly ever since. More than one hundred broadcasts have been presented over BBC/ITV programmes. In 1934 the Choir began producing gramophone records and has produced sixty and more records for many Christian recording companies in U.S.A., New Zealand, Sweden, and Britain. Perhaps one of the outstanding ministries of the choir is their prison evangelism, which commenced in June, 1933 and has continued without a break ever since. Forty-five prisons and Borstals have been visited, fulfilling well over 1,000 visits “within the walls”. The Choir is proud of its members — fifteen in all — who have left us for full-time service as missionaries. There are, too, several of our ministers and their wives who have served loyally as members of the London Crusader Choir. To so many we owe so much.

Overseas tours have played a great part in providing rich fellowship in the homes of Christian brethren and their families. We have been highly privileged to present music with a message in the Channel Islands (Guernsey and Jersey), Norway, Denmark, Sweden, Eire, Switzerland, France, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Canada, the United States of America, and throughout the whole of the British Isles. We deeply appreciate the loving kindness of all who have opened hearts and homes and thank the Lord for every remembrance of them.

During these forty-five years the Choir’s Director has been supported by a team of officers, conductors, leaders, and members, of the highest spiritual character, whose dedication and consecration could have no parallel. Behind the responsible and demanding leadership of the London Crusader Choir has been the wonderful and sacrificial support throughout these many years of the Conductor’s wife, Mrs. Eva Gray, who has been described by someone as “The Lady who stayed at home”. Without this dedication things would have been so different.

We are humbled at the thought of such a world-wide vocation and offer our praise and rededication to the Lord Jesus for using ordinary folk with such limited ability to serve and to sing for Him.

“Who can estimate the power of song? Its depths are entwined in the very heart-strings of humanity and of the world above. Universal testimony has acclaimed music as the most potent agency for both the expressing and imparting of the strongest emotions of the soul and there is no sphere or circumstance which hath not laid claim to its irresistible influence and charm”.

Hubert C. Phillips — Missionary Pioneer

An appreciation by Leslie Wigglesworth,
Secretary of Elim
Missionary Society

One of the last photographs of Mr. Phillips, taken in his garden before he became ill

JUST a few days before Hubert C. Phillips entered into glory, an unusual Emmanuel Press Board meeting was taking place in Nelspruit. It was different in that the directors were seated around the bed of the co-founder of the Press. Two visitors from Elim Missionary Society were present. The bed was on the verandah of the house which had developed during the forty-seven years that the Phillips had lived there. It overlooks the lovely garden which has been created from virtually nothing to become an oasis in the industrial centre of a growing town. At the bottom of the garden the walls and roof of the Bantu Church, in which Pastor and Mrs Phillips witnessed miracles of saving grace through the years, appeared through the trees like a sentinel over the mission compound. A huge palm tree towers high over house and church. It must have witnessed many a triumphant scene when evangelistic meetings were held in the church or in the garden. Its waving fronds seemingly helped to lift the praises of God's people into the presence of the Lord.

The men around the sick bed were very conscious of the sacredness of their surroundings. The whole place resembled holy ground, as an old prophet lay weak but alert listening to the outlining of proposals for the future expansion of the Emmanuel Press. An interjection of thoughtful advice and guidance came frequently from the evergreen mind of the invalid. That intellect under the guidance of the Holy Spirit had seen a vision nearly fifty years ago of the possibilities of Christian literature produced in the vernaculars of the many peoples of Africa. The vision began to materialise as Hubert Phillips made great use of a little hand press to print tracts, and the Emmanuel Press was born. Now brethren from several countries and representing Pentecostal Societies around the world were considering the potential of modern presses. The vision was being enlarged, still under the amazing control of the Holy Spirit. Brother Hubert Phillips must have remembered the early days of manual production and compared them with the huge output of this present day, which is reaching to the farthest corners of the huge continent of Africa and overseas. Our meeting came to a close and farewells were said. Mrs. Jean Phillips, the sharer of Hubert's vision and creations, was on hand to care for her beloved, as she has been through all the busy years of missionary life.

When Pastor R. B. Chapman and I arrived in South Africa, the petrol shortage had already prompted economies, so we had to fly down to Nelspruit from Johannesburg. Our 'plane was a small ten-seater, which seemed particularly dwarf-like after the great Jumbo aircraft which had carried us from England. The 250 miles were speedily covered, but we were flying at a sufficiently low altitude to discern African kraals and townships in the hills and around the industrial developments. Some years before, Hubert Phillips had taken Pastor Philip Stormont and me by car and on foot to many of the churches in those remote areas and we had seen what God had wrought through the preaching of the African evangelists and teachers who had been influenced by the training of Jean and Hubert Phillips. This was another prolific ministry which was to bear much fruit through the years as churches were established on high and low veld. Our pilot struggled with the contrary air currents which buffeted our tiny aircraft and it was a relief to approach Nelspruit. My soul was stirred as I thought of the work of the pioneers of Elim and the established work founded under the mighty anointing of the Holy Spirit. Satan had attacked and the church had suffered, but the testimony was sure. Hubert Phillips with his beloved Jean was prepared to move out among the flock at any time of night and day. The stay with them was to witness a remarkably busy ministry for the Lord Jesus Christ and to become involved.

Now the soul which laboured so faithfully has entered into rest in the presence of the Lord.

We were already in the isolations of Inyanga North many hundreds of miles from Nelspruit when the news reached us of the passing of our friend. The funeral was just two days away and it was unfortunately impossible for us to join the crowds who shared in the laying to rest of our pioneer missionary. Representing us were our Transvaal

H. C. addresses the annual dinner of Emmanuel Press. He was speaking on his favourite theme Numerical values in Scripture workers. The nearest telephone was fifty-four miles away, petrol was scarce and speed restricted, with a limit of fifty miles per hour severely controlled, so we had very reluctantly to cable our condolences. We were able to meet Sister Phillips a few days later at Johannesburg airport and help her on to a 'plane to Cape Town, where she will stay with her son John and daughter-in-law Lorrain and family.

Now we must remember them in their loss. A long partnership has taken on new dimensions. Somewhere in the realms of glory Hubert will be basking in the love of God and a great day is coming when there will be an eternal reunion in the realms of praise in Emmanuel's land.

"A Servant of God"

THE service sheet for H. C. Phillips' funeral read, 'A Servant of God', a simple, yet true statement, for H. C. Phillips had taken on the true image of a servant. His whole life was at the disposal of his Saviour and Lord.

Just a quick journey around eastern Transvaal would convince anyone of his untiring efforts—counting the churches that he founded, meeting the people that he turned to Christ. Look at the press. His never-ending interest and influence bears witness to the fact that he was a true servant of God. Just a week before his passing we carried him on a camp bed to a press business meeting. His mind constantly thought through problems so that the work might prosper.

There are so many aspects of his life that one could speak of, but put them together and they amount to a wonderful influence on and inspiration to anyone who had the privilege to spend time in his company. He lived Christ, now in death there is GAIN.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Mr. Walker,

Recently, while I was cutting our church lawn, I was approached by two Jehovah's Witnesses. During the conversation I asked them to give me a verse which would prove that Jesus was not God. As I had hoped, they quoted John 1:1, which reads in their translation: "and the Word was a God". I enquired whether they knew any New Testament Greek. They did not. This gave me a great advantage over them, as I had studied this language for three years at University as part of a theology degree.

I pointed out that the Greek word for "God" is "Theos" and that in the New Testament it practically always has the definite article, i.e. Ho Theos — The God. Now, in John 1:1 it appears without the article, i.e. "Theos" — "a god". Hence their translation (see above). But there is a good grammatical reason for this. In New Testament Greek, the complement, i.e. that which completes the sense of a sentence usually drops the Article, and is usually placed before the verb. So, in the sentence, "The Word was God", "God" is the complement. Therefore, it stands before the verb ("was") and drops its article (HO), and the sentence thus reads in the original — "Theos en Ho Logos" (N.B.: Theos, not HO THEOS). Therefore, it is perfectly reasonable and correct to understand the Greek to mean "The Word was the God".

The two Witnesses promised to take this point back to their congregation and bring me their answer. I assured them that there is none! I am still waiting for their reply, though I have seen them on four occasions.

I trust that this letter will be of help to others in dealing with this sect.

Yours sincerely,

Peter D. Brake, B.A.

60. The divine Assurance (Genesis 46:1-7)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

WITHOUT doubt Jacob wanted to go at once to Egypt to be with Joseph. His circumstances — especially the famine — pointed in the same direction. Above everything, Jacob wanted to honour the Lord and feared to miss His will, so he went to Beer-Sheba, the well where the Lord had made a covenant with his grandfather, Abraham, and where Jacob's father, Isaac, had lived. There Jacob sacrificed to the Lord and asked for guidance. The Lord told him not to fear, but to go down to Egypt where He would make him a great nation. Thus the Lord confirmed the rightness of Jacob's desires and the indications of his circumstances, so he took his journey with a happy, contented mind.

The most important matter for us, too, is the will of God. Our natural desires may lead us in certain directions and our circumstances may confirm them, but the most important question is still: "Is this what the Lord wants?". We must turn again to the place of sacrifice and covenant — Calvary — and there place our desires on the altar, willing for His will. He will surely guide and direct us in the right paths so that we will go on our way strong and assured. The Lord has said: "In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths" (Proverbs 3:6).

"Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in Him; and He shall bring it to pass" (Psalm 37:5).

The New Commandment

by Brian J. Hayes, Pastor of our Edinburgh Church

ONE of the greatest commandments given by our Lord is "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another" (John 13:34). This command establishes the basis of our relationship with others who are true disciples of Christ. So important did Christ know this to be that He repeated it (John 15:12,17), and gives further teaching on the subject through John in his First Epistle.

The trouble with commands is that we talk much about them, but frequently we fail to carry them out. The Old Testament reminds us: "To obey is better than sacrifice", while the New Testament states: "But be ye doers of the word and not hearers only".

The nature of this love is embodied in Christ: "as I have loved you". This standard is humanly impossible of attainment, but can be divinely achieved in union with Christ. Shortly after pronouncing these words "as I have loved you", Christ was to demonstrate the depth and extremity of His love for us by His death on Calvary. Thus He was referring to Himself as the supreme Example to all disciples (John 15: 13: 1 John 3:16). Calvary must have a practical out-working in our lives. If we have been to Calvary, then our love for all Christ's disciples should be motivated by Calvary. The fact that God has loved us so much should promote our love towards each other (1 John 4:11,12); love should be a manifestation of our salvation (1 John 3:10; 4:7).

The purpose of our love is declared in John 13:35: "By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples". We do not prove that we are His disciples so much by the points of doctrine which we hold, but "By this". By this one quality our discipleship is to be declared to the world. It is insufficient to be saved and to know God's Word and to practise the doctrine of the Word. Undergirding, permeating, motivating every fundamental truth that is dear to us should be the love of 1 Corinthians 13, the love of Christ. Unfortunately, not everyone who sings, "And they'll know we are Christians by our love" shows the type of love about which we are thinking. This is not the shallow love of which we see so much, not a love which flows freely from us until someone disagrees with us or cuts across our ideas, but Calvary love, Christ's love.

Such love is unselfish, devoid of pride and self-exaltation. It shows itself in love-motivated actions, for the Scripture declares, "By love serve one another". It is no good talking about loving one another if we do not serve one another both practically and spiritually. Of this practical manner the bible says, "But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in Him?" (1 John 3:17). Of the spiritual side we are told: "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honour preferring one another" (Romans 12: 10) and "Consider one another to provoke unto love and good works" (Hebrews 10:24). We should see that our actions are always helpful and add to the growth of Christ in others. We should be willing to help those who have failed or sinned, as God enables, by humbly pointing them back to the way of victory and peace.

Christ taught that an unloving spirit towards our brother hinders our fellowship with God (Matthew 5: 23,24). The Pharisees were quite happy if a person conformed to the outward rites of religion regardless of the condition of the heart, but Christ taught otherwise. When there were differences between brothers and sisters in Christ, offerings could not be accepted. It was the believer's duty first to go and be reconciled. Our worship, our offering of thanksgiving, will not be accepted however well performed externally until we are at peace with those whom we have injured and who have injured us. The emphasis is on the innocent party to make reconciliation — "and there rememberest that THY BROTHER HATH OUGHT AGAINST THEE". It is real love when we can take the initiative, instead of in pride waiting to be approached. If we seek to worship and serve God while at variance with a brother or sister in the Lord, then we are hypocritical worshippers and must meet with God's displeasure. God is not deceived and will not be mocked by those who think that, so long as their outward appearance or worship is right, then God will be pleased. It is the attitude of the heart that matters (1 John 4:20,21).

The other important practical matter which Jesus taught is that an unloving spirit towards a brother is dangerous. "Therefore" in Matthew 5:23 refers to the necessity of reconciliation in view of the dangers expressed in vv. 21,22. It is not so much the actual words which we say, but the feeling and motive behind them that counts and that is noticed by God even if not by men. We do not have to say these actual words in these verses to be guilty of the same unloving spirit. "Angry... without cause" is a violation of the sixth commandment (cited in v.21), because the Bible says, "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer", because the offender has within him a feeling that would lead him to commit murder if it was fully carried out. Such a person is "in danger of the judgment", the lowest form of court.

"Raca" means "stupid" or "shallow brain", and has the idea of speaking contemptuously. This is again breaking the spirit of the sixth commandment and such an offender is in "danger of the council" - the Sanhedrin (the Jewish "high court").

"Thou fool" denotes an idolater and a person guilty of great crimes. The sentence is "shall be in danger of hell fire", i.e. Gehenna, referring to the Valley of Hinnom. This Valley was formally devoted to the horrible worship of Molech. Josiah desecrated it, when it then became a place for the burial of the dead, executions, and rubbish. Therefore, in order to keep it at all times pure, fires had to be kept burning continually. The extreme loathsomeness, filth, corruption, and putrid fires made it one of the most appalling objects with which a Jew was acquainted. It was called "The Gehenna of fire" and was the image which our Saviour employed to denote the future punishment of the wicked. We might paraphrase these verses: "He who hates his brother without cause is guilty of a violation of the sixth commandment and will be punished with the severity similar to that inflicted by a court of judgment. He who allows his passions to transport him to still greater measure and who makes a brother the object of derision and contempt exposes himself to a still more severe punishment corresponding to that which the Sanhedrin could inflict. But he who shall load his brother with odious appellations and abusive language will incur the severest punishment, represented by being burned alive in the valley of Himmon.

Thus we are presented with a tremendous standard in the commandment of Christ to love one another, a very practical reason for keeping that commandment. These standards can be achieved only as the love, beauty and holiness of Jesus are seen in us.

FIGHT EVIL

WITH A WILL!

Do not leave the distribution of your estate to chance. Here are some reasons why you should make a will:

- 1. It prevents misunderstanding over your intentions about your estate.
- 2. It provides opportunity for you to continue to exercise Christian stewardship.
- 3. It helps to avoid heavy expenses, which can sometimes drain away valuable assets.
- 4. It gives you opportunity to designate who shall benefit from your possessions.

You can show your gratitude for blessings received and also continue the fight against evil by making a gift to the Elim work in your will.

The following wording can be incorporated in a will or codicil:

I bequeath to the Elim Pentecostal Church, of 117 St. George's Road, Cheltenham, Glos, the sum of £ free of duty for the general purpose of its work, and I declare that the receipt of the Secretary-General for the time being shall be a good discharge for the said legacy.

Is it not better to know that your possessions will be used for the Lord's work rather than be spent by those who have never honoured or revered His name? D.3006

The Doctrine of the Trinity

2. Is Jesus God's Son?

by Charles J. E. Kingston

UNITARIANS, Jehovah's Witnesses and unconverted Jews, all deny the deity of Jesus, as do many others who are not Christians.

John Sherrill tells us that, when challenged by Catherine Marshall Le Sourd: "Do you believe Jesus was God?", he could not say "yes" as he had so many reservations. Driving home afterwards he turned to his wife, Tib, and said: "I'm going to make the leap of faith. I believe that Christ was God".

Later, in hospital he met Christ. Suddenly awakened by a light which had a centre of awareness, awed but not frightened, he recognised and spoke to Him.

Was Jesus God, as the Bible claims? Was He God's Son from eternity or did He only become so at His birth at Bethlehem?

Firstly, was Jesus God?

God, in the beginning, was not alone. He always had Reason, or Wisdom which expressed Itself in the Word. To understand this more easily let us think what takes place within ourselves, as Tertullian suggests. We are made in the likeness of God and so have reason; when we reason within ourselves we speak in our mind and then utter our mind in a word. The Bible speaks of Wisdom as an actual person: "The Lord possessed me in the beginning of His way. . . I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning. . . I was by Him, as one brought up with Him: and I was daily His delight" (Proverbs 8:22-31). The apostle Paul calls Christ, "the wisdom of God" (1 Corinthians 1:24). When we say that Jesus Christ was the wisdom of God, however, we do not mean that He had no personal existence apart from God. The wisdom of God is revealed as the Word of God. Thus John says that Jesus, the Word, was with God and was God. John is using "the Word" to explain what Jesus was before He became man. As the Word He was the expression of God's thought. He always was from the beginning: He was "face to face" with God; He was God (John 1:1-3). A word is alive: it is "Impossible to conceive a more vivid image for self-communication or a spiritual expression for generation from one's own womb. John called the Son, the Word, without further qualification, just simply, the WORD. He therefore made it clear that the only Begotten issued from a spiritual generation." (Van der Meer).

Thus the Son is derived from no other source than the substance of the Father. He is "the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father" (John 1:18). He was "in the form of God"; He is "the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature"; God has "spoken unto us by His Son, whom He hath appointed heir of all things, by whom He also made the world"; He is "the express image (impressed character) of His person (substance)" (Philippians 2:6; 2 Corinthians 4:4; Colossians 1:16; Hebrews 1:1-3).

We can better understand the expression "image of the invisible God" if we visualise a statue so great as to fill the whole world. On account of its immensity, it would be imperceptible to anyone on earth. Suppose that another small statue were made similar in every detail, in form and material except in its immensity, so that this one could be seen and felt by all. Those who saw the small statue could understand something of the immense one.

In such a way, the Son of God, within the narrow compass of a human body, could reveal the invisible greatness of God, the Father. Thus Jesus could say: "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father" (John 14:9). He could say that He did nothing apart from the Father's will; that His whole authority was derived from the Father; that He was sent by the Father (John 5:19,37; 10:25).

1. Jesus was born of a virgin, bodily.

He was born, not by natural generation, but by the supernatural intervention of the Holy Spirit. Matthew's account, paraphrased, would read like this: "This is how Jesus was born. Mary, His mother, was found to be pregnant before the wedding day and Joseph was ashamed and thought of cancelling the proposed marriage until he was told by an angel that the Child was conceived of the Holy Spirit."

David Pawson (How much of God is Jesus?) comments on the remote possibility that a virgin could produce a live birth by a process in which the female ovum divides spontaneously like a cancerous cell, but, it if does so, the female egg can only produce a girl baby, never a boy, and Jesus was a boy, born of a virgin. "God had to create within Mary's womb an X chromosome, normally only found in the male, that this might fertilise the egg and produce a little male baby. . . It must have been God's unique act".

Luke, who was a doctor, goes into great detail. Mary herself must have told him the facts of the angel's visit and of her consent to become the human channel for the birth of Jesus (Luke 1:26-38).

The virgin birth of Jesus is important since only so could Jesus be both God and man. For our sins to be atoned for, Jesus had to be a perfect man to die for us and He had to be God for His death to be a sufficient sacrifice for the sins of many.

2. Jesus was a true man, physically.

He became tired, He slept, He ate, He prayed, He went to worship in His Father's house, yet, after spending months with Him, no one would say: "God ate fish today; God was tired and sat on a well; God fell asleep in the boat today". He was demonstrably human. It was after His resurrection that Thomas could hail Him as "My Lord and my God". As Paul puts it, Jesus was "declared to be the Son of God. . . by the resurrection from the dead" (Romans 1:4).

3. Jesus was more than man, spiritually.

This can be proved by what He did and said: changing water into wine, feeding thousands from a few small loaves and fishes, walking on the water, stilling the tempest, healing the maimed and diseased, raising the dead.

Jesus plainly asserted His deity and so the Jewish leaders understood Him. He said: "I AM". In the Greek text this is emphasized: "I, I AM". Sometimes He added something to this phrase. "I, I am the door"; "I, I am the way"; "I, I am the resurrection and the life"; "I, I am the light of the world". The Jewish leaders reacted sharply when Jesus said: "Before Abraham was, I, I am". They recognised this as a claim to God's name, Jehovah, given to Moses when he asked who spoke to him (Exodus 3:13,14). Jesus claimed pre-existence and the Jews kicked loose the cobbles at their feet to throw at Him. Jesus did not begin His existence at Bethlehem; He was the eternal "I AM" (John 8:58,59).

Later, when He stood before the Sanhedrin court, the high priest adjured Him to say if He were "the Christ, the Son of God". Compelled by the "voice of adjuration" (Leviticus 5:1) Jesus replied: "I, I AM". This was recognised as a claim to deity and was the basis of the charge of blasphemy which brought His death (Matthew 26:63; Mark 14:62).

The writer to the Hebrews, quoting an Old Testament prophecy, sheds light on the God-man relationship of Jesus: "Abodyhast Thou prepared Me. . . Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of Me,) to do Thy will, O God" (Hebrews 10:5,7). Here, the Eternal Word is speaking to God, the Father; there is a "Thou-and-I" relationship which antedated in time the birth of the body of Jesus, prepared in Mary's womb, to be the human habitation of the Divine Word. Yet when the Word "became flesh", His deity was not abandoned or reduced. He did not, as God, simply clothe Himself with a human body. The Body, itself, by reason of the miraculous conception became caught up, so to speak, in the Word. He became "the man Christ Jesus" (1 Timothy 2:5). Moreover, "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself" (2 Corinthians 5:19), so that Jesus could say, "I and My Father are one" and "The Father is in Me and I in Him" (John 10:30,38).

4. Jesus was recognised as God's Son by His disciples.

For three years, twelve men lived with Jesus; they watched Him, listened to His teaching until they could say: "Thou hast the words of eternal life and we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God" (John 6:68,69).

Jesus was a real man, but He was also God. Some have over-stressed His deity. Then He ceases to speak to our condition; His temptations, sorrows, sufferings, have no meaning for us. Some have over-stressed His humanity; then His death is no more than a martyr's and has no power to atone for our sins. The mystery of godliness is that God was manifest in the flesh (1 Timothy 3:16).

Secondly, was Jesus God's Son from eternity?

After God had, in the Old Testament, testified to the unity of His Being, Jesus revealed that God was a Trinity.

1. Jesus constantly referred to God, the Creator, as His Father.

He referred to God as "My Father which is in heaven". The Jews sought to kill Him because He said "that God was His Father, making Himself equal with God" (John 5:18). He prayed to His Father. He never prayed to God as "Our Father" (though He taught us to pray so), but as "My Father". He claimed to have had the glory with His Father before the world was (John 17:5). Jesus could not have called God "Father" unless God had a Son. In the New Testament there are more than 150 instances in which Jesus refers to God as either His Father or the Father of believers.

For instance, when Jesus was twelve years of age He was taken by Mary and Joseph, with others from Nazareth, to Jerusalem for the Passover. At thirteen

Pomp and Circumstance

*"The Lord reigneth, He is clothed with majesty"

by H. Burton-Haynes

THERE is no country in the world where pagentry is more moving or rooted in antiquity or royal tradition than Britain as seen at our great State occasions, like the marriage of Princess Anne and Captain Mark Phillips in Westminster Abbey. Behind the pomp and circumstance, there are simple, dignified features which reach back into the dim times of Roman imperialism.

A link in the chain of royal lineage can be seen in the picturesque village of Cockington, Torquay, where King Alfred in disguise sought refuge from the Danes in a neats-foot cottage, a swineherd's humble dwelling (in Scots' phraseology, but and ben), a two-roomed cottage. Here, it is said he forgot to keep an eye on the cakes being baked on the stone hearth.

Alfred studied the Word of God and it was he who feared the laws of our country in the first, parliamentary democracy of our land.

That neatsfoot cottage bridges the transverse rivers of English, Scottish and Welsh history, for our beloved Queen is Queen Elizabeth II of Gt. Britain and the Commonwealth. Our system of government is based on King Alfred's law — the freedom of the individual. Alfred defended the rights of the British subject. Simply expressed: "You cannot enter the neatsfoot cottage without knocking first on the door and waiting to be invited in".

The history of our country, being earthly and human, is often besmirched by the misbehaviour of its monarchs. Many spring immediately to our attention and a thoughtful visit to Madame Tussaud's will aid the memory!

How richly blessed we are and how highly favoured to have our Queen and her family, who have endeared themselves to all hearts by bringing to their royal office strong family ties and the common touch which makes us feel that they belong to us. Protocol has never dimmed the Queen's warmth and affection. Wherever the members of the royal family travel they manage always to inject a personal note of optimism and charm.

We have seen how the Throne is rooted in the rich soil of democratic freedom rising from the Word of God as proclaimed by King Alfred in the ninth century, but above democracy is the law of theocracy, the reign and rule of our Lord Jesus Christ, the glorious King of eternity. Who would dare to dispute His crown rights? To come under His sway, every subject must freely and personally receive Him. He knocks and waits for admission: "Behold, I stand at the door and knock". To win this allegiance He laid aside the regalia of His eternal majesty, wrapped Himself in the lowly garments of humanity, assumed the degradation of a fallen creation by stepping into its ancestry through Abraham and Adam (see Matthew and Luke's genealogy of the Messiah) thus completely identifying Himself with every sinner, died upon the cross to put away sin and rose to the highest place that heaven affords.

Jesus said that the pomp of earthly royalty is as threadbare as Solomon's royal apparel, when it is closely examined. The circumstance is as ephemeral as the morning mist before the rising sun, but the glory of the King of kings is substantial and enduring. He leads a great procession: "He is bringing many sons unto glory".

Those of the past who envisaged world conquest failed; their dominion crumbled like dust and the wind of time swept it away for ever. Everyone of them conquered by sin and death and were bound to fail and perish. Christ alone has been appointed by divine decree as the universal Heir (Hebrews 1:1-3). His universal sovereignty has been attested by the triumphant resurrection wherein he has conquered every foe. The arrogant Hitler, his jackboot on the neck of prostrate France, looked across the English Channel and said in mock sorrow: "Fate has 'decreed' that I should end the British Empire". The blasphemous schizophrenic dictator was unaware of the decree: "Thy throne is established of old: Thou art from everlasting". The establishment of His throne is the ground and the pledge of the establishment of the world as His kingdom.

*Beyond the starry host on high,
Beyond the visible realm of space,
There shines a rainbow-circled throne,
Jesus, my glorious King is there.*

*Yes, there for the universe He reigns
And all His Calvary merit pleads,
And wields the sceptre of His might O'er all the sons of Adam's race.*

Words and drawing
by Sheila Price

TAKE a look at the pencil above. How do you suppose it began?

Once it was just part of a plank of rough wood stacked away in the corner of a timber yard. Before that the plank was part of a tree growing tall in the middle of the forest. Many years before that the tree was but a seed planted by a forester.

This world had a beginning, too. It did not suddenly appear. Like the pencil, it could not make itself. Like all things, it needed a maker, someone to design and plan it, someone to fashion it and arrange things in order. The Maker of the world was God.

He planned the world to be a bright, happy place in which to live, so, at the beginning of Creation, He gave His first gift to the world - LIGHT.

The second thing God gave to the world was LOVE, for He wanted it to be a friendly place, where men might find joy and peace, so He placed fresh green mountains above blue seas and set the sun and the moon in the sky, surrounding them with millions of stars.

His third gift was LIFE. He placed fishes in the streams, birds in the treetops, animals on the ground — creatures of all different shapes and sizes and colours, each with its own special purpose that fitted into His great and wonderful design, and all created with the same tender, loving care. The smallest leaf is as perfect in its design as the greatest tree.

The last thing that God gave to the world was His greatest creation of all — MAN. He made man in His own image and gave him a soul, something that He did not give to the other creatures.

When we ask Him to come into our hearts, there is another beginning, the beginning of a new, wonderful life. He saves our souls from the darkness of sin and we walk in His light, live in His love and receive life everlasting.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

The New Year

WHO first thought of the New Year? I don't really know, but I know what the Old Testament says about the New Year to the people of Israel. God said that the sixth month was to become the first month, in other words, a new year. God was going to wipe out the past and give His people a new start. This is just what God does in the work of salvation. He wipes out the past with its failure and sin and gives us new lives to live.

So now we have a new year. During this year we shall all have birthdays and so be older. I trust that we shall all be wiser. Thinking of being wiser, may the failures of the past not discourage us, but spur us on to attempt greater things for God. It is amazing that we do not forget our failures, though other people do. There are times when they come flooding back into our minds. I would not a bit surprised that at the back of such an experience is the Devil himself trying to hinder us from doing things for God. Perhaps we have failed in our prayer lives? Maybe we have not received the answers to prayer that we had hoped for.

Thousands, possibly millions, of Christians will be praying during the World-wide Week of Prayer during the first week of January, 1974. Let us join them. Don't make it just a week of prayer, however; make it a year of prayer. You could work out a plan to pray for certain topics day by day. It is astonishing what God will do when we pray. We will receive and it will also make us better men and women.

Make 1974 a year of prayer!

(often anticipated by one year), every Jewish boy comes of age and is taken to God. He then becomes a son of the Law. Going up to the Feast, Jesus would have walked, as a child, with His mother and the other women of the party. Edersheim suggests that Mary probably told Jesus that Joseph was not His true father as they journeyed. After coming of age a boy would walk with the men of the party. Probably Mary thought that He was with Joseph and Joseph thought that He was still with the women. It was not until the first stop for the night that it was discovered that Jesus was not with them, so they returned to Jerusalem to look for Him and found Him in the Temple. Mary said, reproachfully: "Thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing", but Jesus replied: "I must be about My Father's business" (Luke 2:41-49). Jesus was saying: "I know that I am not Joseph's son, but the Son of My Father who is in Heaven".

2. Jesus claimed to be the Son of God.

He said, "No man knoweth the Son, but the Father". He prayed: "Glorify Thy Son, that Thy Son also may glorify Thee". The Jewish leaders recognised that Jesus had claimed sonship when they taunted Him on the cross, saying, "He trusted in God. . . for He said, I am the Son of God" (Matthew 11:27; John 17:1; Matthew 27:43).

Jesus did not teach that, because He was the Messiah, therefore He was the Son of God; He taught that He is the Son of God in an absolute sense and because He is the Son of God He is the real Messiah. Primarily, He is the eternal and only-begotten Son of the Father in heaven.

3. The Bible declares the eternal sonship of Christ.

"The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us". So He was in-existence as the Word before His physical birth into this world. He is called "the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father". So there was a loving relationship between the Father and the Son before Jesus was born. He is the "image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature. . . and He is before all things". So Christ was the Son of God before His incarnation as Jesus and before the creation of angels and men (John 1:14,18; Colossians 1:15,17). Hebrews 1:2 informs us that God has spoken to us "by His Son. . . by whom also He made the worlds". So Christ was God's Son before creation began.

Yet we must not think of God begetting the Son as in any way corresponding to the manner in which by natural generation the seed of those who beget and the womb in which it is formed brings a child into the world. As Origen suggests; "There must needs be some exceptional process, worthy of God, to which we can find no comparison. . . how the Unbegotten God becomes the Father of the only-begotten Son".

To conclude in the words of R. P. C. Hanson: "Christ as God is the heart that beats within the Christian Church and within the individual Christian's innermost being. We cannot and dare not ask that heart to stop beating".

Meet Joash

JOASH was the supervisor or keeper of the cellars of oil during the reign of King David. We are told of his position in 1 Chronicles 27:28. He certainly had a very responsible post, for oil from the olive berry was an important export and, strangely enough, to Egypt, among other Middle East countries. It was a commodity vital to the life of the Nation of Israel, for it was a pure, nourishing source of food and was used for medicinal purposes and for the anointing of the body after a bath. Under the Levitical law it was to be used in the preparation of the meat offerings and as part of the first fruit offerings. Tithes of oil were required and olive oil was expressly ordered for light. It was necessary when the consecration of the priests took place, in the daily sacrifice and when lepers were purified.

"Joash" means "Jehovah hath aided" and he certainly needed God's help in his task of storing and supervising the fair distribution and sale of oil.

There has been so much said and written about oil of a different sort since the world shortage of this commodity that we may feel heartily sick of the subject. Oil has its uses and its misuses, too. The oil supply which Joash controlled was a source of healthy nourishment and light, but the oil of today is a mixed blessing. It may be vital to twentieth century living and industry, but it can also be a dangerous source of fire and of pollution. At the moment of writing, oil is being withheld as a deliberate act of political blackmail.

There are well over 200 references to oil in the Bible. Its abundance is always a sign of prosperity and of God's blessing. The use of oil in everyday life and on ceremonial occasions makes fascinating reading. Recall the two outstanding miracles concerning the supply of oil to two needy widows in the Books of Kings. Best of all, the Bible teaches that oil is used in reference to many spiritual benefits which flow lavishly from the Holy Spirit. His anointing, the imparting of the "oil of gladness", the continuous supply of "fresh oil", all indicate our dependence on His power. We are constantly reminded of the need to conserve oil and to use it wisely. As responsible citizens we should. In our use of heavenly oil, as citizens of God's kingdom, we should be modern counterparts of Joash. A steady intake of the oil of the Holy Spirit and a constant, profitable use of the Spirit's power are the right set-up for every believer.

The task of Joash was said to be the supervision of the cellars where the oil was stored. His was a task performed away from the public eye down under ground in Jerusalem, unseen by the majority of the people whom he served. If he had failed, however, the consequences would have been disastrous. Unless Joash kept a constant store of oil, the work of the house of God would come to a standstill, for the priests would have been unable to carry on their ministry and the sacred candalabra would have ceased to illuminate the holy place. Down below in the cellars he did his work; it was not spectacular, but it was essential. The hidden prayer-life of the Christian maintains in secret the oil supply — the rich resources of the Holy Spirit — by which alone the ministry and witness of the Church can be effective.

Visitors were being shown round the great Metropolitan Tabernacle by C.H. Spurgeon. They asked to see the power house which supplied the heating to the auditorium. It is said that Spurgeon took them to the basement and opened a door into a room where a company of people were in fervent prayer. Pointing inside he said, "Here is the power house that maintains the right temperature in our church".

"There is . . . oil in the dwelling of the wise; but a foolish man spendeth it up" (Proverbs 21:20). Have you an adequate supply of spiritual oil and are you using it wisely?

Can you say no?

by Peter J. Hill, Pastor of our Basildon Church

CONDITIONING to all kinds of pressures is causing bitter problems in every avenue of our society.

Life is full of choices, as always, but the issues no longer appear to be clear-cut. They seem to be clouded, but, whatever the outcome, they affect our pattern of life, sometimes for too many sad years. There are decision times for us all, concerning a multitude of matters — decisions regarding marriage, careers, friends, activities, involvements in dubious habits, Christian surrender.

The problem of right choices in adverse conditions is not new. It existed 3,500 years ago in Egypt. Moses had a choice to make. Brought up in the palace, he had enjoyed the best in life. He might even have become the first Jewish Pharaoh! So much lay in his grasp if he had decided to use his position: money, girls, status, position, political fame. What more could be desired than a blank ticket to greatness?

While he was grateful for the training, he didn't feel, in all conscience, that he could carry it through. He was man enough to face facts, to acknowledge God, to choose right regardless of the consequences.

He became the politician who resigned over race relations! "By faith Moses refused" (Hebrews 11:24). He had to choose between serving God and thus helping his people, or serving Egypt in persecuting the Jews. "Refused" is a tremendous word; it is adamant, final, it smacks of courage and inspired determination.

The choice paid dividends, however, for to appear in the "hall of heroes" of Hebrews 11 a man had to be very worthy of mention. Moses occupies more space than anyone else!

Moses refused the glory of sin in Egypt. To be "with it" in that land would have meant being totally involved in society's sins. He was not prepared for that. He became a man of God by his own decision.

God does not thrust His greatness on anyone who is unwilling to bear it. The refusal by Moses was the turning-point in his life. He could have appeared in the annals of history, but he chose to be recorded in heaven.

Moses saw that the pleasures of sin were only temporary, but that the marks were indelible. Sinful delight is always followed by discord. Sinful excitement will always be pursued by exasperation. Freedom to sin always turns into bondage to it.

We must be positive. Having refused, something must fill the place of what was rejected. "He chose the affliction of the people of God". Thus revealed is the confidence that Moses had in God. God honoured him for his faithfulness.

Moses prepared himself to be identified with God's own and to suffer if necessary: "He esteemed the reproach of Christ". Through his courage there is a Jewish race today. He brought them out. He stood in the place of leadership and conquered the enemy. The writer to the Hebrews compares him with Christ. Throughout his life he displayed intrepidity and modesty in his actions. Among his leading characteristics are zeal, wisdom, benevolence, and practical godliness.

Deuteronomy 34:10 describes him uniquely as "the man whom the Lord knew face to face". His vision was God, as expressed in this fitting epitaph. Let us go for God and set the nation free!

"Evil triumphs when good men do nothing".

BOOK REVIEW

House of Secrets, by Kim Simmons, published by Victory Press, price 40p, postage and packing 7p extra. THIS is a book which most girls will enjoy reading. It is easy to read and full of action. It may be very similar to hoards of books of this type, but never-the-less it is enjoyable.

When holiday plans fall through Nicola decides to go to her cousin determined not to spend another holiday at school. The queer, big, old house where Fran lives, holds many secrets and surprises which Nicola accidentally helps to solve with the aid of Cherry the cat who mysteriously disappears. Nicola finds out much while at Cloudshill Manor — about the house, its tenants and herself, not least that some people really do believe in God and that Mr. Filder's picture of "Christ and the Children" was also calling her. She begins to experience the happiness which seemed to hold so many people in the house secure and at the end is able to say, "Thank You for letting me know You are real — and alive — and with us all the time".

Monday, January 14th

"Thy throne is established" (v.2).

THE greatest earthly throne, Solomon's, is symbolic of power, riches, authority. The twelve golden lions at the side of the throne would impress the visitor: the wisdom coming from the throne would inspire. "A greater than Solomon is here". The thrones of Egypt, with their fabulous riches, and the throne of Babylon, with its dominating power, have fallen in the grave of history. "Thy throne, O God, is for ever". Like Isaiah, let us see the Lord this day seated upon His throne, high and lifted up. The death of a failing, earthly king turned the prophet's gaze to the everlasting Throne. Let us come boldly to the Throne of Grace. Worship should precede petitions.

Psalm 96:1-13

"Sing unto the Lord a new song" (v.1).

THIS psalm retains the theme: "The Lord reigneth". We indeed have a new song to sing. Moses' new song of redemption was sung on the shores of the Red Sea. In Old Testament times songs were sung on the battlefield and foes were scattered. Songs were composed to celebrate David's victories. A new song in Philippi brought great revival and a divine disturbance in the city. The new song for all the redeemed — the Song of the Lamb — is filling the courts of heaven. The sacrifice of a song of praise will lift your spirit and bring glory to the King.

Daniel 1:1-21

"Daniel purposed in his heart" (v.8).

SCIENTIFIC skill, intellectual ability, and the prospect of academic success, did not stifle the fine principles and purpose of this student and his friends. This student group's exploits would never have been recorded, had it not been for their purpose, prayer, and proving in these early days of challenge.

"God gave them" (v.17). Our talents are God-given and we must appropriate their worth in the light of His kingdom. We will never be impoverished by letting the right priorities rule our lives.

"Fairer and fatter" (v.15): spiritual progress can be accompanied by success and prosperity if we commit our problems to Him daily — with our praises!

Daniel 2:1-24

"Daniel answered with counsel and wisdom" (v.14).

IN an impossible situation, whatever were the threats of the enemy, the emergency prayer meeting (vv.17, 18) solved the problem. Daniel asked God to reveal secrets known only to Him. Four men withstood heathen millions. Many high-ranking Babylonians were under the king's condemnation, needing deliverance. "Bring me in before the king" said Daniel (v. 24). After an audience with the King of kings we fear no earthly monarch. The wisdom of the sorcerers, astrologers and magicians was no match for divine revelation. Millions today consult the occult and the signs of the zodiac rather than the Word of God.

"Behold a great image" (v.31).

THE deterioration in the quality from head to foot in this image reminds us of the degradation and fallen nature of man: gold, silver, brass, iron, and finally back to the earth, clay. What is fashioned in man's image goes the way of man; what is in Christ's image remains. The king was more interested in the image than in the interpretation. We are more interested in the prophetic outcome of the dream and the stone that became a mountain and filled the whole earth (v.44). Christ's kingdom will never be destroyed.

"Fall down and worship" (v.5).

IT is hard to be one of the minority today, what with the Common Market, strong unions, business mergers, even ecclesiastical unions. Daniel was away on business, so the three friends could not be dependent on their leader, but on the God who is able. Pastors, evangelists, teachers in the Church can help us, but our faith must rest in Him who never fails. The music of the world will always have its "Top Ten" of popularity, but our music is in the heart. Heavenly harmony is vital to Christians. "We will not worship . . . the golden image" (v.18). "Our God is able" (v. 17). He is able to save, keep, satisfy, justify, deliver.

Sunday, January 20th

Daniel 3:19-30

"The form of the fourth is like unto the Son of God" (v.25).

BETTER was the company of Christ than even that of the prophet Daniel. No doubt he was praying elsewhere. "They saw no man save Jesus only". Even the king saw Him — and "Kings shall fall down before Him". This was no angel, but the presence of the King. If we walk in the light with Him, He will walk in the fires with us.

They stepped from the furnace unharmed by the flames; only their bonds were gone. What a great reversal took place when the king changed his laws to suit them (v.29). The Lord can move thrones and kingdoms for His purposes. "When thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee" (Isaiah 43:2).

The Power of the Love of God

Romans 5:8

by Frank Lavender

WE must first consider the power of man and the power of sin so that, by contrasting these with the love of God, we shall appreciate more fully the wonder of His love to man.

If all the readers of THE ELIM EVANGEL were asked: "What do you consider to be the greatest power exercised by man?", we would have a great variety of answers. A short time ago, some may have said: "The mighty dollar!", but the reputation of the dollar has become tarnished lately, so we can write this one off. Some would say that man's greatest power is in weapons of war capable of wiping out humanity. Others would opt for the exciting (or stupid, depending on one's outlook) conquest of space. To the observant mind, the insidious power of anarchy wielded by people dedicated to the overthrow of our civilisation would qualify.

Yet the power of man is as nothing compared to the destructive power of sin. What a terrible catalogue of human sorrow has been produced by sin! Sin is causing the suffering of Ulster and of many other places in the world. It is wrecking the lives of hundreds of our young people by means of drugs and drink. It is destroying thousands of homes every year and filling men, women and children with misery. Sin is slaying an unbelievable number of unborn babies and, by encouraging lust, is promoting social disease on an unprecedented scale. It is rapidly destroying the very earth on which we live. It is killing, injuring, robbing and crushing men and women, cutting them off from friendship with the living God. It was responsible for the death of the only sinless Man who ever walked this earth.

Consider now the power of the love of God. It planned and made open the way of salvation from sin. It took the very wickedness that man did to the Lord Jesus and used it to bless men. God's love not only takes away sin, it deals a death blow to the power of sin over men and brings friendship with God. It gives peace, joy and blessing to believers, reconciles people, unites homes, cares for the helpless and destroys the enmity and inhumanity of man toward man. The love of God in Christ brings us abundant life now and eternal life in the world to come.

The two most powerful forces in the world today are sin and the love of God. Every one of us is under the sway of one or the other. The Bible declares that by nature we are all sinners and, therefore, we are under the power of sin. Yet the same Book shows that, if we put our trust in the Lord Jesus Christ, He sets us free from sin so that we are instead brought under the blessed power of the love of God.

Have you ever consciously turned from sin and accepted the love of God revealed in the Lord Jesus Christ?

If you have, are you allowing the love of God to work through your life to reach other lives in order to save and bless them?

If you have not, will you put your trust in the Lord Jesus Christ now and receive Him as your Saviour?

WE are both pleased and sorry to print the report from J.K. McGillivray on page 3. The evident note of thanksgiving and optimism is cheering and challenging. The reference to the verse in Habakkuk is apt and pointed. On the other hand we are sad at the deprivation which the work in Taiwan (Formosa) has suffered.

When you contemplate the end of the Book of Habakkuk against the background of the whole book, you are faced with a real problem to the human mind. The prophet could not understand God's using an unworthy, pagan, Gentile people to chastise His own chosen, covenant people. He was prepared to wait and to watch until an answer to his query came. Here was no fly-by-night approach, no promise-box titivating of superficial faith. He was ready to spend time and trouble. Amazingly to the natural concept of things, God gave no direct reply. There was no detailed account of the divine plan, the step by step unfolding of the purpose of the Lord. Instead, Habakkuk received many wonderful revelations, among them the three outstanding fundamentals of faith: "The just shall live by his faith"; "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea"; and "But the Lord is in His holy temple: let all the earth keep silence before Him".

Trials and hardships are facing our nation. Older people are worrying about the spectre of the 'thirties. Old ghosts of massive unemployment seem to be walking again. Others feel that our situation is but an evidence of political combat. Whatever the rights and wrongs, it seems probable that, as always in such situations, the innocent will suffer. The old and the poor may well be put at risk. As we pray for our nation — and most of all for God's forgiveness and for His gracious mercy in outpouring the Holy Spirit — may our demeanour reflect our confidence in God. He is on the Throne. He does have a purpose. He will have His way.

"Lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh" (Luke 21:28).

"Although . . . Yet"

by J. K. McGillivray (Taiwan)

"Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be on the vines: . . . Yet will I rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation" (Habakkuk 3:17-19).

WE had just finished the washing-up in the kitchen and were putting away the dishes, when the front door-bell rang — a very ordinary event at any time of the day — but this time it rang more insistently. Standing in the semi-darkness was the kindergarten bus-driver's wife and a Norwegian missionary who lives in Ilan. It was not hard to detect the crisis which had brought them. In tears, with her baby in her arms, this young mother gasped out the story: "The kindergarten bus is in flames, burning, up on the mountain road from Taipei. . .".

Hurriedly I took the Cortina out and sped off along the familiar road between rice-fields, past the shops of Chiao Hsi, then the eighteen turns and hair-pin bends up to the boundary line between this and Taipei County. A little over a mile away, I rounded a corner and came across a fire engine and firemen still hosing down the steaming microbus, which by now had become a charred shell. The tyres had burned completely and the body had slumped down on to the brake drums. No glass remained in the windows and nothing inside that could burn had not been burned up. At the rear, the engine block was garlanded with molten pipes and fittings around the carburettor.

Ch'ao-pao, the driver, told me that he had noticed a light through the rear-view mirror, which he thought was the headlights of a vehicle trying to overtake, but a second look showed that the "light" was a tongue of flame outside the rear window. Quickly stopping the car, he ran to the rear with a cotton quilt to smother the flames. At that moment, the gas tank caught fire and exploded, enveloping the whole back end in flames. His wife and baby were asleep in the rear seat and he immediately hurried to the door and pulled them out. In a flash, the whole interior became a fiery inferno. .

Drivers of trucks coming on the scene from both directions stopped to give help, but there was no water nearby and the only extinguishers they could put their hands on were clods of grass! But the fire was out of control with an intense heat which blocked the road. A Norwegian missionary came on the scene just as it started and volunteered to take Chao-pao's wife to Ilan to tell us and to call the Fire Department at the same time. This resulted in the call at our front door.

Gradually the pathos of this tragedy broke in on our minds. The microbus, which had just been repaired, was a totally irrevocable loss; the insurance company had refused to give us more than third party insurance coverage, since the vehicle was just over the ten-year limit. But we could also say: "Although the VW microbus is destroyed beyond any recovery, and we cannot claim any insurance compensation, and we will have to collect and deliver more than sixty children four times a day with the Cortina. . . Yet will we rejoice that this did not happen while in the city, nor while we were transporting these lovable lively youngsters who are hearing the Gospel in our 'Eden Kindergarten'. The Lord is our strength, and He will provide another more recent model". Hallelujah! Please pray that this need will soon be met.

North-East and Tyne-Tees Presbyteries House Party

THE fourth house party of these combined Presbyteries was held at Douglas House, Scarborough. The theme for the weekend was "Money, Matings, Meetings, and Movements". Pastor Keith Lannon chaired the meetings, ably assisted and constantly interrupted by Pastors Eric Carter and Adrian Hawkes. We learned much, both as individuals and as members of churches. As well as discussions on the chosen subjects there were a film, a discussion on methods of outreach, and an informal service, after which two people were baptised in the Holy Spirit.

Although the numbers were small, only about twenty-five attending plus visitors on the Saturday from the Scarborough and Leeds churches, we enjoyed close friendship and fellowship, and throughout the weekend the presence of the Lord was very real.

We would like to thank the Pastors for their teaching, Scarborough Church for the wonderful Sunday morning service we shared with them, and the staff of Douglas House for making our stay so enjoyable.

EALING

Pastor: F.F.L. Frost

THE valedictory service of Pastor and Mrs. David Mills was held at our Ealing Church, prior to their returning to Ghana, the land of their call. We were glad to have this privilege, for David Mills is a former Crusader Secretary of the Ealing Church. We were pleased to welcome also Pastor L. Wigglesworth (Missionary Secretary, Pastor F.H. Coleman and Mrs. Sally Prentice (Madras, India). The meeting was convened by Pastor F.F. Frost and Pastor Coleman opened in prayer. Pastor Wigglesworth introduced Mrs. Prentice, who explained that she was returning to India to conduct a campaign with her husband in Dehri-on-Sone, Bihar.

After preliminary remarks regarding Ghana by Pastor Wigglesworth, Pastor and Mrs. Mills in turn, with evident joy at the prospect of their return to Ghana, spoke of the great revival taking place there and of the zeal of the newly-converted in witnessing to the surrounding districts (even in the adjoining countries!) and of the establishment of new churches in Ghana. When they left Ghana last April, the number of churches there was about 1,250; now it was 1,250 plus, the plus representing the churches opened during their furlough. The great need now was to penetrate the Islam North with the gospel. Pastor Mills mentioned the foundation of the work in Ghana by Pastor and Mrs. James McKeown thirty-six years ago, when the average life of a missionary there was six months. Mrs. Mills told of the work done by the women in the churches in Ghana. On behalf of the Intermediate Crusaders Miss Margaret Fleckney presented Mrs. Mills with a blanket to take back with her. We praise God for what He is doing in Ghana and will continue to support Pastor and Mrs. Mills in prayer.

A touching incident marked the close of the service when Pastor Frost dedicated to the Lord Pastor and Mrs. Mills' fourth daughter, Margaret Grace.

The recent five-day series of meetings by Pastor Felix Lloyd-Smith proved to be a great uplift to all.

It was with great regret to us that Mr. R.S. Garrard felt it necessary to retire from the diaconate after forty-three years' service as Treasurer of the Church ever since its inception. The District Superintendent, Pastor Frost, and the diaconate have unanimously conferred on him the honour of an Elder. We say thank you, Mr. Garrard, and are grateful to you for all your services to the Church, so loyal and faithful through the years.

WORDS fail to tell what a marvellous week we had recently. It started with the film "His Land". Then for four evenings we had a series of lectures on Christ's Second Coming and the events that will follow. The first evening was about how we must avoid certain teachings because they do not keep to Christ's revelations. The second evening was about the Rapture and the Wedding Feast. The third evening was about the Millennium. Finally, Armagedon and the New Heaven and the New Earth occupied us. My heart and mind were almost overwhelmed by the details. Pastor G. Fearn, who gave the lecture was bombarded with questions. Everyone was keyed up with interest. The place became alive. It set me on fire to win souls for God. I told everyone in my company the next day about Jesus' Second Coming.

MABEL CLAPTON

PONTLOTTYN

Pastor: M. Richards

WE rejoice in the blessing of our God during our special weekend of meetings. We were much blessed by the ministry and fellowship of Pastor and Mrs. Squire of our Mountain Ash Church on the Saturday. On the Sunday we rejoiced to see Danny Richards and family. He faithfully served the Lord as leader of our Church for six years.

Brother Richards gave a word on "The Bread of Life". Solos and testimonies were given in both services.

(Mrs.) G. SPACEY

TORQUAY

AS Pastor and Mrs. H. Quy prepare to leave Torquay and return to Essex, we review the three and half years that they have been with us and with thankful hearts we can say that the Lord has been good to us.

Sixteen new members have joined us, souls have been saved and bodies healed, and the spiritual lives of the people enriched.

We also enjoy fellowship with Pastor and Mrs. Hilliard, and Pastor and Mrs. Burton-Haynes who have retired to the West Country.

Looking back we say "The Lord be praised", looking forward we pray that God will enlarge our opportunities for Christian witness and help us to be a power for good in our community.

May the Lord bless and use our Brother and Sister Quy for His glory.

L. CHAMBERLAIN

CANNING TOWN, London

Pastor: J.C. Ritter

EARLIER in 1973 we had a Children's campaign conducted by Pastor Derek Green. The results were quite outstanding. Whereas before we had only two babies and two children in our meetings, we now find ourselves with a regular sixty children at our Sunshine Corner on Wednesday nights and an average of thirty children attend our newly-founded Sunday school.

With the nights becoming dark so early, we found that younger children stopped coming to Sunshine Corner, but the Lord is keeping the numbers up by sending along some fine young teens.

At our carol service members of our Sunday school portrayed the Nativity scene. Jean Evans sang Len Magee's, "The Nativity". The service was well received by the children's parents and God is certainly supplying the needs of our Church.

SUE RITTER

CLACTON-ON-SEA

Pastor: P.K.G. Rose

WE are pleased to report continued blessing on our services, with a desire in young and old alike for a deeper experience of God's Holy Spirit in their lives. Recently five new members were welcomed into our fellowship, for which we praise God. One sad note was when our Secretary, Mr. C.G. Armstrong, announced his retirement after seventeen years of loyal service to the Church. At the Sunday evening service, our Pastor presented Mr. Armstrong with a Parker writing set. Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong were converted under the ministry of Pastor F.F. Frost, whose granddaughter, Lois Nation, presented Mrs. Armstrong with a lovely bouquet of flowers.

The Sisterhood held their annual Christmas tea when, after a wonderful tea, a most enjoyable time was had by all.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Mr. Walker,

I WOULD like to thank you for your untiring work as Editor of our ELIM EVANGEL. We all await our periodical with interest. I write to say how very much I have been blessed and challenged by the final EVANGEL of 1973. The photographs of three of our late ministers, featured in our Field Superintendent's review, together with the "Late News" flash concerning the homecall of our Veteran missionary, Hubert C. Phillips, led me to thank God for men whose personality and ministry have influenced me much. God bless their dear ones at this time.

As I read those encouraging reports from here and there, I rejoiced that, despite the tenor of the times, God is still working, and I am greatly encouraged to continue in the work of the Lord.

I would like especially to say that the contribution from the pen of our Secretary-General, Pastor J.T. Bradley, has been a tremendous challenge to me. Here is an article that we could well keep by us for 1974 and, when zeal burns low, read it through. I have no doubt that it will continue to stir our zeal. If I may say it, I believe that this is what God is saying to ministers and members of the Elim Movement at this late hour of time. If I can pick out just one of the many helpful phrases, it is: "The spread of truth has always been by dedicated, fired-up individuals; people with vision, people with passion, people with a love for Jesus, a love for people and a fear of judgment". Thank you, Pastor Bradley, for such a challenge.

Yours sincerely,

W.J. Maybin

The Doctrine of the Trinity

3. Is the Holy Spirit a Person?

by Charles J. E. Kingston

THE Holy Spirit is the forgotten member of the Godhead, yet each member of the Trinity has His part in man's redemption. The Father loves mankind and gave His Son to redeem them; the Son loves and dies for their salvation; the Holy Spirit loves them and fills them with love for God and man. John Sherrill ("They speak with other Tongues") tells how, after his baptism in the Spirit, "Bible reading moved into a new dimension. I discovered an interesting thing; you find in the Bible those Persons of the Godhead with whom you have had an encounter. For years I 'saw' only the Father in the Scriptures. Then after the hospital experience I found the Son. And now it was the Holy Spirit". Jesus, Emmanuel, is God-with-us; the Holy Spirit is God-in-us. Is not this the explanation of our Lord's words in John 14:17: "Ye know Him (the Spirit of Truth); for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you". The disciples "knew" the Holy Spirit by seeing the evidence of His power working through Jesus Who was "with" them. The Holy Spirit allots to each one something of God's fulness. Often those who experience the power of the Spirit are overwhelmed. D.L. Moody thus describes his baptism in the Spirit: "I cannot describe it; it is almost too sacred an experience to name. . . I can only say that God revealed Himself to me and I had such an experience of His love and I had to ask Him to stay His hand. I would not go back where I was before that blessed experience if you should give me all the world". He added: "I was all the time carrying water; now I have a river that carries me."

The Early Church fathers recognised the Holy Spirit as divine love and called Him the "kiss of the Father and the Son".

1. The Holy Spirit is a Person

He is not a mere quality of God (such as divine influence or energy), but is truly and properly God. Wrong thinking about Him robs Him of the love and confidence that are His due. Added to this, if He be regarded as only the impersonal power of God, our thought will tend to be how to get hold of the Spirit and use it, instead of how can the Holy Spirit get hold of me and use me? All Christians have the Spirit of Christ (Romans 8:9), but He does not always have them, which is the secret of the Spirit-filled life.

The attributes of personality are ascribed to the Holy Spirit.

The personal pronouns are used of Him.

Jesus, referring to Him, said: "I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you for ever" (John 14:16). Jesus recognised the Holy Spirit was a separate person from Himself, that He was a Person in his own right.

He speaks.

Speech is a mark of a person. God is not like the dumb idols of the pagans; He has spoken through the prophets, apostles, through His Son (Hebrews 1:1,2) and through the Holy Spirit. Thus when filled with the Spirit He must speak. On that first Pentecostal day they spoke with other tongues. Thank God, He is still speaking today. Just as a Christian is guided by the "still small voice", which does not originate in his own imagination, but is indeed the voice of the living God, so in like manner do the syllables or sounds of the glossolalia (speaking in tongues) enter the mind and wait to be spoken. As these are spoken other sounds appear. Speaking as the Spirit gives utterance one learns instant awareness of, and obedience to, the Holy Spirit. Peter had learned this awareness as he shows when he told the apostles: "The Spirit bade me go". A mark of the child of God is the leading by the Holy Spirit (Acts 11:12; Romans 8:14).

He knows.

God's ways are so far above ours that only the Holy Spirit can reveal these to us. "The things of God knoweth no man but the Spirit of God" (1 Corinthians 2:11). Jesus promised that the Holy Spirit would guide us into all truth because He knows the Truth.

He loves.

Paul speaks of the "love of the Spirit" and Scripture says that He "sheds the love of God abroad in our hearts" (Romans 15:30; 5:5). When Shirley, Pat Boone's wife, was filled with the Spirit, she "was overcome by the sense of the presence of the Lord and an overwhelming feeling of love. . . I felt myself immersed in love. . . It was beautiful". Miss Anne Isaacs, a missionary to Ethiopia, said that when God poured on her the Holy Spirit, "It has been wonderful to see how I began to love those I had just tolerated before". Ken Nesbitt, a 'bus driver in Toronto, told how he sought the baptism in the Spirit. The pastor, Laurie Price, said: "This is a free gift from God. Thank Him!" Ken said, "Thank you, Jesus!" and he fell down under the power of God and began to speak in a heavenly language. The joy of the Lord flooded his soul. Asked what this had done for him, he replied: "It has given me compassion for the souls of men".

One cannot grieve an impersonal force, but a personal friend can be grieved. If we drive away the Spirit of God by sin or carelessness, He is grieved and will withdraw Himself until we woo Him back by repentance and forgiveness. The Holy Spirit is God and God is never rude; He will never force Himself on anyone. He longs to be loved, to be desired by us. If we wish to be kept filled with the Spirit, we must "court" His presence by prayer and praise.

2. The Holy Spirit is the third Person of the Godhead
The attributes of deity are ascribed to Him. He is conjoined with the Father and the Son in the ordinance of water baptism. Said Jesus: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptising them in the name (singular) of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost" (Matthew 28:10), thus emphasizing the tri-unity of the Godhead. Again, Paul, giving the apostolic benediction says: "The grace of the Lord Jesus, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all. Amen" (2 Corinthians 13:14).

The Holy Spirit proceeds from both the Father and the Son.

Scripture calls Him the Spirit of both. "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father" (Galatians 4:6). God gives the Holy Spirit in answer to prayer (Luke 11:13), whereas it was Jesus who "shed forth this (the promise of the Holy Ghost), which ye now see and hear" (Acts 2:33). Thus Jesus is the Baptiser. As Augustine said: "How great a God He must be who gives God"!

He is called the Eternal Spirit (Hebrews 9:14).

He was with God from the beginning. He brooded over the elemental chaos in the beginning (Genesis 1:2). Later, in time, He strove against the sin of the antediluvians; He moved upon prophets, psalmists, kings, writers and workmen to do the jobs that God called them to do. Today, He convicts of sin, righteousness and judgment. Indeed, He is the Viceregent of God in the world (2 Peter 1:21; Exodus 31:3; Numbers 11:29; 2 Samuel 23:2; John 16:8-10).

He is omnipresent.

The psalmist asks: "Whither shall I go from Thy Spirit? Or whither shall I flee from Thy presence?" (Psalm 139:7). Neither heaven nor hell nor the farthest parts of the earth can hide us from Him. Jonah tried and found that God was still pursuing him across the sea.

He has omniscience.

"The Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God". The glorious things that God has prepared for us are revealed through the Spirit (1 Corinthians 2:9-11).

Creation is ascribed to Him.

"The Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters" (Genesis 1:2). The Hebrew word means to brood over young ones and is "figuratively used of the Spirit of God, who brooded over the shapeless mass of the earth, cherishing and vivifying" (Genecius). Elihu states: "The Spirit of God hath made me" and the Psalmist declares that the animals and man himself have their being by His creative power: "Thou sendest forth Thy Spirit, they are created" (Job 33:4; Psalm 104:30).

3. The Office of the Holy Spirit

Each of the divine Persons in the Trinity has His own particular office in relation to man's redemption.

The Holy Spirit convicts of sin, righteousness and judgment.

David Pawson tells how he went down a mine. Each person had a miner's helmet with a light fixed to it. When they were deep in the mine, the leader told them to put out their lights. They did so. "Now put your hand in front of your face. Can you see it?" he asked. No one could in that deep darkness. The Bible says that we sinners are in spiritual darkness. The "god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them" (2 Corinthians 4:4). The Holy Spirit, who is God, shines the light of conviction into our minds and then we see our lost condition, especially our sin of unbelief in Jesus.

The Holy Spirit reveals Jesus as Saviour.

Some years ago my wife and I travelled across America as passengers in another person's car. It was early spring and the frost was beginning to thaw out the dirt roads (since concreted) and they were a quagmire. Bugged down to the axle, we could not move until a farmer with a team of horses pulled us out (at a price). As sinners we are bogged down in the mire of our sins, but the Holy Spirit comes to reveal the Saviour who by His death on the cross has atoned for our sins and delivers us from their power.

The Holy Spirit regenerates the sinner (John 3:5-7).

He takes the truth of Christ's atoning death and applies it with such power that the sinner becomes a new creation, "being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth

After twenty years

TWENTY years ago last May, i.e. in May, 1953, I collapsed three times on a Saturday morning. I remember coming round twice but the third time would have been fatal had not my wife, on hearing my fall, rushed into the room. She saw me lying on the floor and thought that I was already dead. She offered up an urgent prayer for help and was told by a voice within to put water on my face. This brought me back to consciousness. With a gasp, I rose to my feet, not to fall again.

The doctor, a Christian, diagnosed the trouble as a coronary thrombosis. He sent me to hospital for a month. During the first days, I was considered to be on the danger list, but I was sent home after a month with instructions to take the greatest care. Angina Pectoris set in in one of its worse forms and my heart was in serious trouble, the doctor saying that I could have recurring attacks which might prove fatal unless the greatest care was taken. It meant that I had to be confined to my bed again.

While lying in bed, reading portions of God's Word, such as John 14: "Let not your heart be troubled", I said that mine was! My neighbours who came to see me said that no doctor could give me a new heart, but I knew Someone who could — my Lord! Turning to the Old Testament I read Jeremiah 17:14: "Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved". Over and over I read these words and I believed that they applied to me and that the Lord would raise me up again to full activity. On this assurance I got up from my bed and went downstairs.

Soon, with permission, I walked down the garden path. At the gate I met one of my neighbours, who was astonished that I had been allowed to have this sickness. I answered that it was a test of my faith. Another neighbour at the gate asked why I did not do what he knew another man had done. I asked what this was and he said that his friend had seen a healer at Brighton who performed some sort of mystic operation. After paying over five pounds, he was now back at work as a lorry driver. I replied that I was trusting God to make me well and suggested that he should both watch to see who lasted the longest!

I was next allowed to walk distances, increasing them as days went by and within weeks was permitted to return to light work. My work was railway engineering maintenance, which meant going distances to carry out operations. Having men under my control I could pick and choose what activity I did.

As weeks passed by, I had the assurance that I could carry on increasing activity without pain or discomfort. Within three years I was required to carry out an operation to remove a metal structure sixty feet high. None of my men felt confident enough to go to that height and start to dismember the structure. By the help of the Lord and believing that my healing was real, I climbed the structure and, with the apparatus passed up to me, I commenced the work and having got to within twenty feet of the ground I was relieved by one of my men, who completed the job. My men told me to my face that I had made a wonderful recovery, for they had all written me off as finished.

The man who had had a so-called healing and who had gone back to work was able to carry on for two to three years, then, one morning as he got into his lorry cab, he collapsed and died.

This causes my neighbours to recognise that there is something in the testimony that I have to give. I say that there is Someone in it. I thank God for His goodness to me in making it possible for to have the health and strength that I enjoy. Though I am now seventy-six years of age, I enjoy my Christian life and I value any calls to serve my Lord. I give Him the glory and the praise.

Letter to the Editor

IN the November 24th, 1973, edition of THE ELIM EVANGEL we published the words and music of a new Christmas song composed in September by Miss Cheryl Drower. Some information about Cheryl and her conversion will be of interest to EVANGEL readers.

Cheryl lives in Aberdare, Glam., Wales, and is a student in graphic design at Kingston Polytechnic. When home on vacation she worships at our Aberdare Church. She was saved on December 17th, 1972 at a rally conducted by Denis Clark in Wimbledon Town Hall, London. Previously she had been an atheist. Her spiritual progress has been remarkable. She has been baptised in the Holy Spirit. She uses her considerable musical talent for The Lord. The song we published thrilled the members of our Birkenhead Church when we visited them last September.

Cheryl's conversion was the climax to a period of bewilderment caused by the conversion two months earlier of her twin sister, Meryl. Meryl, who also worships at our Aberdare Church during vacations, is an Associate of the Royal College of Music, having won all the prizes that that College has to offer. She was recently described in our local newspaper as "Wales' brightest singing prospect". She too is baptised in the Holy Spirit.

Our Aberdare Church finds that to have fellowship with Cheryl and Meryl is a real privilege. Their conversion has renewed our faith in the grace of God in the 1970s.

Bravery

Words by Archie A. Biddle
Drawing by John Gregory

IN Portsmouth where I live, the Royal Marines have a magnificent place where all their records and achievements are on display. I was especially attracted to the photographs, citations and medals of those men who have received the highest British honour, the Victoria Cross. Most were men in the lower ranks and all showed exceptional bravery, especially under fire. I said to myself as I read about them and looked at their portraits – “Now they were REAL men”.

There are brave men and women in all walks of life who will never win the V.C. or even have their names on some famous plaque, or in the newspaper. Let us remind ourselves of some of them.

What about the doctors and nurses who work among those poor people who have leprosy? What about those firemen who go through fire and smoke to rescue people trapped in blazing buildings? What about all those missionaries who work among warlike, primitive peoples? What about all those people who are in great pain and yet bear it with a smile? I knew a boy who was a spastic. He was unable to walk or move at all and had to be carried everywhere he went, but he loved Jesus and had a most infectious smile.

I think that the bravest of all are those who have certain standards of conduct and who stick to them, even when they are being ridiculed and laughed at. There are the Christian boys and girls who are brave enough not to use bad language among their school pals, who will not cheat in exams, who are honest and upright.

Bravery is essential to being a Christian. You really have to be something and somebody to follow Jesus. Any old fish can go downstream, but it takes a really live, strong one to fight the current and go upstream. Perhaps you wonder sometimes if it is really worthwhile to be different from the others for it often means that you have to pay a high price for being good. Remember what Jesus said in Matthew 5:11,12.

The bravest person who ever lived was Jesus. Don't be fooled by pictures and songs which make it appear that He was just a sloppy goody-goody. He was a fine man of great character and courage. The place where Jesus started to preach was Galilee, where Herod, the dictator of that place, had cruelly executed John the Baptist. Did Jesus stop preaching there and run away to safety? Of course not; He was not afraid of Herod. He continued preaching as though nothing had happened. How brave and calm He was before the high priest and Pilate! How brave He was to go to Calvary to be crucified and to rise again and face those who had rejected Him! He did all these to save us from sin, wickedness and hell. He did it also to give us the same courage to be brave when the Devil attacks us and others laugh at us.

and abideth for ever" (1 Peter 1:23).
The Holy Spirit endues the believer with power from on high (Luke 24:49; Acts 1:8).
Having saved us from our sins, God intends us to be baptised in the Holy Spirit. The practice of the apostles was to get the new converts baptised in water and empowered by the Holy Spirit as soon as possible after their conversion. When He comes, it is always to give; He is called the "gift of the Holy Ghost" (Acts 2:38).

DAVID CLARKE was born in a little Welsh village in the vale of Neath, South Wales, on January 25th, 1918. He attended a Wesleyan Methodist Chapel until he was 19. At this time of his life he came into contact with the Elim Pentecostal Church, Neath, and was converted under the ministry of Pastor Farrow. A year later he was baptised in the Holy Ghost, speaking with other tongues. In 1941 he entered the Elim ministry and served for a probation period under John Woodhead. He enjoyed working among the forces of His Majesty King George VI along with the work of the local church, and saw many come to Christ. He did some campaign work for Elim at Bransdon, Suffolk, and had brief pastorates at Worcester and Morriston. In 1944 he went into the Assemblies of God and laboured at Newton Abbot for 15½ years. He has been at Swindon nearly 14 years. During both pastorates he has seen much of the hand of God at work in the building up of the church. He has a wife and five children, all of whom are saved. Four are grown up and married. He thanks God for the lovely fellowship between both our fellowships at Swindon where they have united prayer and convention meetings.

Revolution, Revival, Rapture

by David Clarke

WE believe that the stage is being set for revolution in our country, indeed in many countries, countries which up to this time have enjoyed a comparatively peaceful existence. Someone asked me recently if I believed that the Church of God would see AntiChrist emerge — the Man of Sin, the Lawless One, as foretold in 2 Thessalonians 2. My reply was that already we are seeing what are the footprints of the Man of Sin wherever we care to look. We may not, at present, be able to identify the person or personality, but the obvious signs are there, make no mistake about it. At this present time two-thirds of the world is under the influence and direction of red communism, yet we are encouraged when we read that there are Russians who still believe in God fifty years after He was officially made redundant! These fighting communists are disturbed to find some known militants taking some interest and engaging themselves in religious activity against all that they have been taught, which shows that there is in every heart a place which only the true God can fill and satisfy (Romans 1).

Nevertheless, we must face what is taking place, what could be a revolution any day. There are influences at work which are dedicated to adopt and practise measures to overthrow all forms of proper government (which has existed for generations) and reject those things which make for true peace and which hold society together as we know it. Pastor Wright, a Baptist minister at Rochdale, wrote in his book The Ten Commandments: "Lack of recognition of the fountain of Law is bad for any people. The absence of veneration for government is ominous. . . Law is a terror to evil-doers. . . but today the tendency is to escape the terror by abolishing the Law and men speak lightly of the 'repeal of laws' which offend them; legislate to make or call wrong right is well nigh a popular demand". There is, we believe, a real threat here to our civilization in the Western Hemisphere, indeed, Lord Butler (one time Home Secretary in a Conservative government wrote, "In such a society as we have, whose wealth is greatly increased, which has now what we call 'social security' and with the means of unlimited technological progress, it is with horror that we register that crime has not been banished, nor has moral progress been assured. This is no sudden crisis, but a deep seated disorder in society. . . The roots of crime lie deep in society and the ways whereby they are nourished are almost beyond government reach". In the present industrial unrest in our land it is good for us to call to mind the comments of a blind lady, genius in so many ways, Helen Keller, who wrote: "Every Sunday my heart cries out for the large number who amid laborious days and nights, heavy with anxiety, have no inner refreshment. . . no matter what advantages the worker may win it is imperative for them to enter more fully into the 'treasures of the spirit' if they are to keep their own souls strong and the nation's ideals undimmed". Material poverty can and must be abolished, but there will always be the 'poor in spirit' who need peace to sweeten their daily routine, aspirations to enrich a narrow environment, a beacon to illumine their darkness, between this life and eternity.

Now we come to a more hopeful sign, that of REVIVAL, which may well take place any day. For those who are Pentecostal especially, there are wonderful reports coming in from all over the world. There are in Peru more Pentecostal people than other non-Pentecostal groups combined. Ten per cent of the 10,000,000 Chileans are of Pentecostal persuasion. The Pentecostal movement is the largest, strongest evangelical force in South America, stretching from the Great Island of the land of Fire (Terra del-Fuego) down towards the South Pole and from the peaceful Pacific over the snow-covered Andes to the plains and beaches of the Atlantic coast . . . millions of Spirit-filled believers rejoice in a living Saviour. In Brazil, we read of 12,000,000 evangelical Christians, half of whom are Pentecostal. God is moving by His Spirit over all the earth.

In Israel in eight days God had brought revival to His people (2 Chronicles 29:1,3). The king and his ministers responded to the movings of the Spirit and there followed a cleansing of the House of God, the repairing of those things which had fallen into sad decay, the restoration of the feast and the sacrifice of the passover with correct procedures so that "the king rejoiced" (v.36) and the "song of the Lord began". The people too rejoiced for that "God had prepared the people. . . and the thing was done suddenly". Matthew Henry says "This change which God had wrought in their minds did very much to expedite and facilitate the work" and the people were willing in the day of His power (Psalm 110). God called upon the "sons of Levi and that they be not now negligent", a necessary word when revival is at the doors. They were to attend wholly to their instructions and to carry them out as directed, and God would see to the rest.

There is the promise of revival and it can take place at any time. God chooses to send it and it must be ours to fulfil our part in prayer and penitence and a change of heart. Read Hosea 6 and see!

*It is coming, we believe it,
Thou dost hear and answer prayer.
It is coming, we shall see it,
Thine Almighty arm made bare..*

Any day now will come the RAPTURE. Let us not fall into the temptation of the evil servant of Matthew 24:48 who said in his heart, "My Lord delayeth His coming" and began to smite his fellows and to resort to worldliness, self-indulgence, and practices which his lord would reject when he came. His lord came upon him unawares. Avoid the temptation of that evil servant to seek to make clearance of books or break habits and associations overnight. "Jesus may come today" we sing and there is nothing in the Bible that says that He will not. "In an hour that you think not. . . I will come". The danger is that when He comes He should find you sleeping (see 1 Corinthians 11): "for which cause many sleep". What an awakening is coming!

An English businessman's work carried him to South Wales. He stayed in a small cottage not far from a large steel works. At these works there were mighty hammers which went on hammering all day and all night. The people took little notice, but it was a trial for this man. He could not sleep. One night the hammers stopped. All went silent. In no time the street was filled with people crying out and asking what was wrong. All the months and years that the hammering went on, nobody took any notice; they just went on as though the hammers did not exist. What a description of what has been going on at the preaching of the gospel of Christ. People have become so used to preachers and preaching so that, as in Ezekiel, It is all to them a lovely song. They are at first troubled and uncomfortable, but through the months and the days which follow they are by no means aroused and they mean to stay that way. There will come a day or night when Christ will come and the saints of God will be translated to heaven. Divine judgment will break on the Christ-rejecting world. Those who have probably slept in Church for years will awake, but it will be too late. The Church will no longer be here and the restrainer (the Holy Spirit) will have removed His gracious influence. This world will be a place unfit even for beasts to live in, for evil and the devilish propensities of the unregenerate, now held back to a degree, will be unleashed on this world. God will have to terminate the whole evil by a powerful stroke from heaven.

There is a word which appears in Chester Cathedral: "When I was a child, time dragged. When I became a man, time ran. When I older grew, time flew". One day the question will be asked — "Will Christ have saved my soul then"? What will the answer be? What will the answer be? What will you do with Jesus? What shall the answer be? How will you, sinner. . . or friend. . . or believer. . . meet Him that day?

61. Joseph meets Israel (Genesis 46:28-34)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

WHAT a wonderful day it must have been for Israel and his son Joseph! They had been separated for many years and the thought of reunion must have seemed impossible to Israel and hopeless to Joseph, yet in the mercy and providence of God they were reunited. What thoughts must have filled their hearts when they embraced each other! Their emotions would have been too deeply stirred to allow for many words, but what rapturous joy they must have known when they met at last. All the sorrow and heartache of the years would have been washed away as their tears of gladness flowed. The Covenant name "Israel" is used in this passage, not "Jacob" — undoubtedly a testimony to the faithfulness of God and a declaration of the heavenly nobility of the patriarch who stood before Joseph.

The reunion of Israel and Joseph was unexpected, but we know that we will take part in a glorious reunion, for, when the Lord Jesus returns, the loved-ones in Christ who have been parted by death will meet again. What a great day when this separation is over! Even more thrilling, we will meet our heavenly "Israel"; we shall see our Saviour face to face. Joseph had so lived for the Lord in Egypt that his father was not ashamed of him. The hope of meeting our Lord at His coming should inspire us in our living. We should so live that neither He nor we will be ashamed when He returns (1 John 2:28-3:3).

Old and unwanted

by A. S. F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

I REMEMBER reading of a son who was carrying his old father on his back; he was taking him to the work-house. He needed a rest and sat the old man down on a large stone. The father began to cry. "Don't cry father", said the son, "it's not going to be so bad. I will be coming to see you". "I am not crying", said the old man, "because you are taking me to the work-house. I am crying because years ago I sat my old father down on this very stone and it broke his heart going into the work-house". He was old and unwanted.

When I was a young man and a very young Christian, I remember an old lady in a Salisbury work-house. Her son was the Town Clerk. She had taken in washing and almost killed herself in order to give him, her only son, a good education. I remember the day when her son came into that work-house ward and the old lady crying to him, "Take me home", calling him by name. He replied, "Mother, there is no room in our house for you". She died of a broken heart; she was old and unwanted.

The Bible has much to say about old age and among the many Scriptures we are told to reverence the old. The proof of Christianity is not what we say, but what we do. "Honour thy father and thy mother" (Exodus 20:12). This is the first of the ten commandments with promise (Ephesians 6:2).

We are living in a day when tens of thousands of old people are unwanted and forgotten.

An old man in Hastings said to me, "Sir, I have lived too long. All my friends have forgotten me and no one ever comes to see me".

Mother and father in the flesh can be unwanted, but the greater sin is not to give reverence to our spiritual fathers until they are dead. There are many elders who have given forty years of their lives in the service of their Lord and they are considered to be too old at sixty and are unwanted.

Paul, writing to Timothy, said: "Rebuke not an elder, but intreat him as a father" (1 Timothy 5:1). The Greek word here means "an elderly person", but in v.17, the office, regardless of age, is indicated: "The elders who conduct their office well are worthy of double honour" (Berkeley). Surely it is not honour to be unwanted. God, down through the ages, has used men of all ages; no-one is too old. I wonder what would be thought of children who showed their father and mother that, now that they are old, they are unwanted? There are many firms where men are too old and are unwanted at forty. How spiritual could a church or movement be that could say this to its servants, for no other reason than, "You are too old; you are unwanted"? "The elders who do good work as leaders should be considered worthy of receiving double pay, especially those who work hard at preaching and teaching" (Good News).

Paul said "I was made a minister" (Ephesians 3:7); "Whereof I am made a minister (Colossians 1:25); to Timothy, "I was ordained (appointed) a preacher". God had committed "a dispensation of the gospel" unto him. The Greek word means: "an administration, a stewardship". If God has given, then how dare men take away? God-given gifts are unwanted by some and again the only reason is age.

God will open doors of service to unwanted men, whatever their age. William Booth and Gipsy Smith were not acceptable to the Methodist Church. Ernest Luff of Frinton-on-Sea was old and retired when God used him to open the Bible depot and about six homes for old people.

If I am writing to anyone who feels old and unwanted by children, church or friends, remember that God loves you and will never leave you. If you trust Him, He will still use you.

WE welcome the plan begun on New Year's Day for forty million Methodists throughout the world to study a book specially prepared for them on the person of Christ in the modern world. Professor William Barclay of Glasgow University, a minister of the Church of Scotland, is the author. He is recognised as an outstanding scholar and writer. Based on Luke's Gospel the aim is to attempt to discover the personality of Jesus Christ and to make an assessment of the impact of Christianity today.

Bishop Gerald Ensley, of the U.S.A., chairman of World Methodist Evangelism, says that "evangelism is becoming respectable again. The call for repentance is being heard throughout the world". Methodism will emphasise evangelism throughout 1974, we are told. How will Methodists like Lord Soper fit in? Indeed, how will William Barclay's book fit in, for although many are indebted for much in this noted scholar's writings, he cannot be described as an Evangelical, nor would he describe himself thus, certainly not as a fundamentalist evangelical, nor a conservative evangelical — the title that appears to so many who politely differentiate between Evangelicals.

Evangelism is becoming "respectable again" and forty million Methodists should now make it even more so. "Respectable" can be a rather ambiguous term. I wonder if Bishop Ensley would subscribe to some early features that created Methodism? In the first written Life of the Rev. John Wesley appears the following: "The mother of John Wesley now began to attend his ministry. She had been somewhat prejudiced against her sons by reports of their 'errors' and 'extravagancies', but was convinced upon hearing them that they spoke 'according to the oracles of God'. The extraordinary manner in which some people were affected under Mr. Wesley's preaching, as well as that of his coadjutors, now created much discussion, and to many gave great offence. Some were seized with trembling, under a painful conviction of sin; others sunk down and uttered loud and piercing cries; and others fell into a kind of agony". Would such be acclaimed by Methodists or other historic churches as respectable evangelism?

Despite my observations and reservations relative to the fore-going, there is a word here for Pentecostals also. In our witness there can be a growing tendency in our frowning against "error" or "extravagance" to foster a fawning for "respectability".

An Outline

The Anatomy of the Redeemed

Reading: 1 Corinthians 12

HOW different is the new man from the old (Ephesians 4:22, 24). Thinking anatomically we have:

1. A new Mind for BELIEVING (Romans 12:7), affectionate (Matthew 22:37), humble (Philippians 2:5), and sound (2 Timothy 1:7);
2. New Eyes for PERCEIVING (Ephesians 1:18 — "Inward eye", NEB);
3. New Ears for HEARING (Romans 10:17);
4. A new Voice for PROCLAIMING (Romans 10:9);
5. A new Heart for LOVING (Ezekiel 36:26), pure (1 Peter 1:22), true (Hebrews 10:22); tender (Ephesians 4:32), and enlarged (Psalm 119:32; 2 Corinthians 6:11);
6. New Hands for SERVING (Ecclesiastes 9:10), compassionate, identifying (Mark 16:18);
7. New Knees for PRAYING (Ephesians 3:14; Hebrews 12:12);
8. New Feet for WITNESSING — the only part of the believer's anatomy upon which God apostrophises — "How beautiful are the feet" (Isaiah 52:7; Luke 1:79; Ephesians 6:15)!

One asked Josiah Royce, as he sat in his study at Harvard University, "What is your definition of a Christian?". The great philosopher replied, "I don't know how to define a Christian-but wait," he added, looking out of his window; "there goes Phillips Brooks." There was a rich, vital person, not to be understood apart from the influence of Christ in his life: a definition on two legs!

A Quotation

The best Bible College

Luke 10:39

DR. Harry Ironside of Chicago once visited the aged missionary Alexander Fraser and listened enthralled as one truth after another was opened up from God's Word. At last Ironside could restrain himself no longer. "Where did you learn all these things?" he exclaimed. "On my knees on the mud floor of a little sod cottage in the North of Ireland." Fraser replied "There, with my Bible open before me, I used to kneel for hours at a time and ask the Spirit of God to reveal Christ to my soul and to open the Word to my heart. He taught me more on my knees on that mud floor than I could ever have learned in all the colleges and seminaries of the world."

Beauty

by S. E. Petts

"Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow" (Matthew 6:28).

EACH season of the year brings its own natural beauty. The crocuses with their varied hues herald the spring, quickly followed by nodding daffodils and bluebells, prolific beneath the tall, naked trees. Spring opens into summer with gardens ablaze with innumerable, brightly-coloured flowers contrasting with smooth, emerald green lawns. The glorious shades of the autumn foliage and the manifold bounty of harvest-time give way to the unblemished snow of winter and the red-breasted robin who sings his anvil song. The decorative, evergreen, conifer trees in their majestic forms remind us that God is still at work and that death in nature is not the end, but the beginning of a new, fuller life.

Every season of life has its own beauty, if we have but eyes to see it; the breath-taking wonder of birth, the innocence and purity of early youth, the abundant life in maturity and strength and the peace and composure of old age as it meets eternity with a smile that is born of faith in an ever-loving God.

Margaret M. Ladlow's page

visited him in prison and suggested that he might try to write something for the Lord. Here is the little article that he handed to me on his release, hoping that I might use it on my page:

The dying Thief

I would like you all to know, my brothers and sisters, that, as I write of the dying thief I possibly know the workings of his mind better than some. I think that he was the type of man who did not care for anyone's feelings; he would plunder and rob all men whether they be rich or poor for he was a greedy man.

WITH a radiant face the little elderly man stood facing the young people in our coffee bar and sang triumphantly of that Calvary love that had won his heart. It was hard to believe that thirty-nine years of his life had been spent behind prison bars. As a lad of thirteen he had started out on a life of crime. During those long years in and out of jail he had developed a chip on his shoulder against the law and all authority. In his heart was a great hatred of the police. Seven years ago the miracle happened; he discovered the wonderful love of Jesus. That love not only brought to him the joy of sins forgiven, but also transformed his whole life. He told with joy how that hatred had been removed and now here he was accompanying the members of the Wiltshire Branch of the Christian Police Association in their service of witness. Such is the power of His redeeming, transforming love that an "old lag" can now count "coppers" among his best friends!

During the early part of his life he was probably sent to prison, where he became bitter against society. He loved money more than anything else in the world. One day he was arrested again, possibly caught robbing a Roman soldier, for which the sentence was death. He was brought in front of the Roman governor and sentenced to death by crucifixion. He carried his cross to Calvary, where his comrade in crime was also being nailed to a cross. As things usually happened, there was also a third man being nailed to a cross and His name was Jesus who some said was King of the Jews, so he cursed Him.

Peter is only a young man in his early twenties, but already he has experienced life inside several English prisons and discovered that "the way of the transgressor is hard". He was on "the run", having skipped his bail. For several months he was seemingly able to escape the notice of the police and earn his living in honest employment and attend the services at the church. The Holy Spirit was striving with him however, and he was having an inward conflict which he knew must sooner or later be resolved. The day came when, after listening to the stirring preaching of Pastor T.W. Walker during his Presidential year, he decided to yield to the pleadings of the Spirit. Peter discovered that wonderful love of Jesus, too, and at his request my husband accompanied him to the local police station where he gave himself up, stating to the detective that now he was a Christian he was determined to face the consequences of his guilt and to start life anew. He received a three-year sentence.

He looked at Jesus and cried out, "If you be the Son of God get down off your cross". He listened to the crowd cursing and mocking Him and to his surprise Jesus looked down at them with love in His eyes and said, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do". Somehow I feel that when he heard this he groped around in his memory and then recalled how the priest had taught him as a child from Isaiah: "He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him and by his stripes we are healed. . . Thou shalt make His soul an offering for sin". Perhaps this was the Messiah. Turning to his companion, he said, "Don't you fear God, seeing you are in the same condemnation?". He believed that Jesus was sinless: "This Man has done no wrong" he said and, looking at Jesus, he asked, "Lord, remember me when you come to Your kingdom". Jesus looked at him, again with love in his eyes and said, "This day thou shalt be with Me in paradise".

During his stay in prison he has taken a Bible correspondence course and now is released on parole with a keen desire to serve the Lord. Pastor Walker

I know what it is like to be a dying thief. I was one until I discovered His love and yielded to Him as my Lord asking Him to come into my life. Have you asked Him into yours?. Remember that the wages of sin is death (Romans 6:23).

Prophet of the Watchtower, by F.A. Tatford. Published by Prophetic Witness Publishing House, price 55p, postage and packing 4p extra.

THIS is another in the excellent series by this well-known and beloved Bible expositor. It deals with Habakkuk's Prophecy under such headings as: Canonicity, Author, Date, Contents, Background, The Prophet's Complaint, The Instrument of Judgment, The Divine Reply, The Taunt Song, The Theophany and The Victory of Faith. As an introduction to this deeply challenging Book, it is first class.

T.W. Walker

Bible Characters and Doctrines, Volumes 9 and 10. Published by Scripture Union, price 35p each, postage and packing 6p each extra.

THE popular Bible Study Books published by Scripture Union are found on the shelves of most ministers and Christian workers. Here we have a complimentary series, equally helpful and thought-provoking, covering Bible characters and doctrinal studies.

Each volume covers daily studies for three months which are numbered but undated. The appropriate Scriptures are classified clearly and questions are set at the end of each section to promote further study.

The character studies in these two volumes (as in all the series), are from the pen of Dr. E.M. Blaiklock and are helpful in the extreme. They deal with individuals and types from Mary the mother of our Lord through to the Gadarenes, and from Jairus to the blind leaders of the blind. His choice of language is simple, but superb.

The doctrinal studies are of very considerable interest, and in Volume 9 "The Word of Christ" is covered by Prof. R.A. Finlayson. He occupies the chair of Systematic Theology in the Free Church College, Edinburgh, so it is not surprising that he brings to his work the scholarship and devotion evident in his other published works. In Volume 10, Rev. William L. Lane, Th.D., Harvard, sets forth the great theme of "Righteousness in Christ" in a pleasing and equally scholarly fashion.

I have much pleasure in recommending these volumes to those who seek to "show themselves approved unto God... rightly dividing the Word of truth".

I TOOK a walk down town. My Friend came with me. We met all sorts of people. Most of them were very nice. Many wanted to talk; a few didn't. They all seemed quite happy and they were all busy doing their own particular thing.

My Friend and I met each other some years ago. Since then we've never been apart. I try to introduce Him to as many folk as possible. From time to time we go out looking for people; they're not too hard to find. I expect you've got some living in your town! Anyway, let's get back to the streets!

Bill was dark, good-looking, as handsome as the well known stranger. He had seen the light. No kidding — he really had. With his third, psychic eye in the middle of his forehead (apparently we've all got one, but as yet I've not found mine), he had seen the light. I told him about my Friend who was the true Light and he told me about his friend who was only fifteen but who had a white Rolls-Royce to drive around in. He said that his friend was the lord of the universe and lived in India, but I said that he couldn't be because my Friend was the Lord of the universe and He lived with me.

Then Nancy came scuttling by — platform shoes, cropped hair, bangled ears, cosmetic black eyes. I'm sure you've met her. She lives in your town. She's the one who's always late for her date and she really hasn't got time to talk now. . . and anyway, her friend is six foot tall with fantastic muscles and would do his nut if she kept him waiting. Poor Nancy, I don't suppose she'll ever meet my Friend. She's too busy having a good time.

Bob knew all about my Friend. Through his beery breath, he explained to me that my Friend was an astronaut who had come to live on this planet a long time ago. He knew all about it because he's seen it in a Sunday newspaper. It was difficult to talk properly with Bob as he insisted that the street was going round in circles. When I assured him that it wasn't, he got a bit nasty, said some very rude words and shambled off into "The Devil's Arms". I don't think he's going to meet my Friend either.

I wasn't too sure about the next lot of people whom we met. They were dressed in black leather gear. All they talked about was beer, birds and bikes. Actually when we really got talking to them they seemed quite friendly. They said that they'd like to come along to our place one day and I must admit that I wondered what some of my other friends would think if that happened. There was the lovely new carpet we'd all saved up for, and where on earth would they put their bikes, and what would Mr. O.S.O. Holy think about them. . . ? But then my Friend whispered to me not to worry but to leave it to Him and He would sort all that out. We parted quite good friends. They were off to the seaside for a rave-up and we went on to meet some more folks.

It was getting a bit nippy now so we popped in for coffee at a place called the "Dive-In". Other folk had dived in as well that night and the place was jammed with bodies. It was very dark, very hot and very noisy. The fragrance of joss sticks filled the place. A couple of posters on the wall said "Keep off the Grass (Cannabis)", but judging from the stoned-out expression on many faces, lots of the kids hadn't! My Friend and I had a chat and He said to me that people loved the darkness more than the light, and I knew what He meant. Above the noise and the sensuality of the place there was a black atmosphere that you could almost feel. We didn't manage to talk to anybody here, but we did leave our telephone number on some of the tables for people to call us. Nobody did.

It was dark outside by now. She didn't say very much. We did most of the talking. She was 16 or 17, had been quite pretty but now her face was scabbed and marked, and twitched from time to time. She said that she was in a fix, or it could have been that she needed a fix. She didn't think that my Friend could help her as we couldn't really understand her problem. She had a friend, she explained, who gave her all she needed, and she needed it a lot — every few hours in fact. She would do anything at all for her friend as long as he kept coming up with what she needed. She really was lost. My Friend explained that His main work in life was looking for lost people. She didn't believe Him. She went off into the night to meet her friend. We never saw her again.

So it went on. People of all sorts and sizes with all sorts of problems. Just a few of them seem interested in my Friend — and He's got all the answers. I sometimes wonder if it's worth it. Then I remember the time when someone introduced me to my Friend and I'm ashamed that I don't go out with Him more often.

"Flourishing in my palace" (v.4).

THE palace of affluence can be dangerous, yet it can be the palace of glorious opportunity, as Nehemiah found when he made request for the things of the Kingdom, or the palace of witness, as when Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan, showed his allegiance to the real king who was suffering rejection (2 Samuel 19:24).

"Daniel came in" (v.8) "at the last" when the astrologers and soothsayers had proved inadequate to meet the king's need; God's anointed servant realised that this palace of affluence must become the palace of divine inspiration. It is important to be "in season, out of season". Daniel was fully aware that his ministry was for such a time as that and his influential position must be used to declare God's sovereignty (v.17).

Tuesday, January 22nd

Daniel 4:19-27

"It is thou, O king" (v.22).

IT was not easy for Daniel to give the interpretation of the coming humiliation of this great monarch "Hew the tree down" (v.23) indicated drastic treatment, but humility is the prerequisite for divine blessing. We are cut to size by the mighty Sword of the Spirit! Golden images attract more attention than the stump of a tree, but the "stump was alive". This vision was for one person, whereas the first vision was for nations and posterity. "Thou art the man" was the word that Nathan gave to David when David had interpreted the situation for someone else (2 Samuel 12:7). Let us apply the Word of God to our own hearts.

Wednesday, January 23rd

Daniel 4:28-37

"While the word was in the king's mouth. . . a voice from heaven" (v.31).

"GREAT Babylon which I have built. . . my power, my majesty" — Nebuchadnezzar attributed his greatness and prosperity to himself. "The voice from heaven" reaffirmed the voice of the prophet. What we say in the Spirit need never be retracted. "The same hour was the thing fulfilled" (v.33). As predicted, the axe of the Lord fell swiftly and this king of kings was reduced to less than the least of any of his subjects. "Now I praise and honour and extol the God of heaven" (v.37). The repentant, regenerated king became a vessel of honour in the sight of the Lord. Veneer can soon be stripped off.

Thursday, January 24th

Daniel 5:1-16

"A man's hand. . . wrote over against the candlestick" (v.5).

THE new king Belshazzar had not learned the lessons of his predecessors. The new generation had ignored the Word of the Lord. The living God was supplanted by gods of gold and silver. The writing was indeed upon the palace wall! Jesus wrote upon the Temple floor, but what He wrote is not recorded, but that they went out one by one convicted. When the hand of God writes on tables of stone, His law is revealed; when He writes on the wall, His judgments are revealed; when He writes on Temple floor, His foreknowledge is revealed. Daniel was brought in, this "man of an excellent spirit" (v.12). Interpreter and dissolver of doubts, his influence was recognised in the hour of need. This was the third time that Daniel was singled out to be God's mouth-piece in the palace.

Friday, January 25th

Daniel 5:17-31

"Let thy gifts be to thyself" (v.17).

DANIEL would not be enriched by the gold of Babylon. He was more concerned with delivering the message. Promotion in this kingdom was unimportant as it was inferior to the kingdom which he represented. "God hath numbered thy kingdom and finished it": Already the golden head of Babylon (indicated in the first vision) was about to fall. Isaiah 45:1-4 was being fulfilled and the great Cyrus was already waiting to take Babylon, as God ordained. Gates or bars of iron would not stop Him. "That night was the king slain" and the Medes and the Persians were soon in possession.

"Windows. . . open toward Jerusalem" (v.10).

HIS prayers were directed heavenward, but his windows were facing the holy city as a constant reminder that the promise of a return would soon be a reality. Habitual prayer was not broken by a man-made thirty-day restriction. Daniel's untarnished testimony, excellent spirit, holy living, and faithful character were observed by his enemies, their secret revealed by the open window. They attacked his prayer power. The secret of his power if ours, too. However fully engaged in spiritual activity we are, this vital exercise must never be relaxed.

Sunday, January 27th

Daniel 6:14-28

"He laboured till the going down of sun to deliver him" (v.14).

ALL the king's schemes to solve the problem failed. The desperate situation called for decisive, determined by Michael W. Carr, B.Sc.

"That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work" (Colossians 1:10).

To Please

Acceptance. TO walk worthy presupposes a worthiness to walk. We are "accepted in the Beloved", exclusive of any further work. "It is of faith that it might be by grace". Our condition was as "children of wrath", but now we are sons of God. The rebellion that estranged us from fellowship with God has been buried in the grave of grace. He who is worthy has enabled us by His merit to tramp the highway of life with a new nobility. We no longer hide amid the forest of empty forms, like Adam, but cling to the victorious message of a crimson tree. Like Enoch we can now walk with God in a disordered world. He has brought us nigh by sovereign love and we look up to Him as a five-year-old looks up to his father. We have the right to put our hand in His.

Attitude. Our motive for walking is to please God. "As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in Him", not as men-pleasers coveting the praise of vain crowds, but in the silent sweetness of sanctified hearts as we commune with God. "The just shall live by faith", for that is how we received Christ and that is how we walk. "He that cometh to God must believe that He is (God) and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him". If we walk in an attitude other than faith, then we shall not please Him. "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin" and self-satisfied good works are not acceptable in the gospel of free grace. The anguish of Calvary influences the manner of our walk.

*One thing I know, I cannot say Him nay.
One thing I do, I press toward my Lord.*

Daily devotion is not in conformity to duty, but in solemn joy as our understanding breaks open the greatness of His glory. We cannot fathom the love that makes Him ours, but through grace we accept the riches that He bestows.

To Prosper

Approval. Not only are we walking, but also working. Producing is a divine principle. We cannot walk empty-handed into God's presence and meet His approval, except at salvation. "We are His workmanship (or poem) created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them".

Worthiness is fruit bearing, not works for works' sake, for that could be a ministry to our pride and a condescension to our vanity. We must love the Lord our God with all our hearts and all our strength. The one emerges from the other and results in deeds of kindness. Barrenness is alien to God's nature. He brought forth creation, adorned space with life and inbuilt a vital law of reproduction, which has stretched into the spiritual realm. Let us pray that the substance of our testimony will be "For they rest from their labours, and their works do follow them".

Abiding: To dwell in Him means to draw upon an inexhaustible supply of vine power. "He that abideth in Me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit, for without Me ye can do nothing". Sole dependence for our souls' delight and rich production in divine strength are the natural evidence of living in Christ. Nothing less satisfies a dying world. We are classified by our fruit. The fig tree failed, but its root remained. It could grow again!

action, for legally he was the only one with the privilege to pray. The king spent the night fasting (v.18). No food, no music, no sleep, no company would suffice yet he had company, for Daniel meanwhile was praying in the lions' den. The king rose early and went in haste to the den (v.19). The stone with his seal on it (compare Christ's sepulchre) did not prevent the voice of faith shouting to Daniel "Is thy God able?". Roman or Babylonian seals could not entomb the major prophet or the mighty Saviour. The morning marked a new day for Darius and Daniel.

Let us rejoice in the delivering and resurrection authority of our glorious Lord.

Editorial

NO-ONE can yet judge how petrol shortages will affect the churches.

Experience would tend to show that so far different parts of the country have been restricted in varying ways, with London and the South-East so far most severely handicapped, or so it would appear.

It seems likely, however, that many people will find their motoring harder to support because of the cost of petrol. While the price in the United Kingdom is less than that in other European countries, none the less we will have to reconcile ourselves to much dearer running costs even if more supplies become available. It is possible, one would suppose, that rationing will be by price as much as anything, certainly if the gloomy forecasts of prices of £1 per gallon by next Christmas come true.

As North Sea oil is expensive to recover, even the hope of having our own off-shore oil wells will not do much to reduce prices, indeed experts are currently expressing what amounts almost to relief that world oil prices have increased so much that more of the North Sea oil has become economical as to surveying, prospecting and recovery costs.

These matters should concern us because of their impact on the churches. Now is the time when we should be much in prayer for guidance. Many of our assemblies are supported regularly by people who live at some distance from their places of worship. A common complaint throughout the country is that public transport on Sundays leaves much to be desired. Many friends could not possibly walk the distances involved. No doubt other forms of transport can be adopted in some cases, like cycling or using scooters or small motor-cycles, but there will certainly be difficulties.

Will the situation afford us evangelistic opportunities, however? Are there places where a number of people travel from areas where branch churches could be commenced?

Presbytery committees and church sessions will no doubt give much thought and prayer to these things. Now is the time for boldness and for understanding.

Thank you very much to the many who have commented on our new front cover design. You will be interested to know that our Elim Publications Board are indebted to Mr. H. E. Price, a member of our Sparkbrook Church in Birmingham and a commercial artist, who freely gave of his services in devising and producing the new design.

Two solos, "The King of love my Shepherd is" and "He could have called ten thousand Angels", were sung by our new Pastor. A challenging address on Christian love, was given by Pastor K. John Marriott (Knottingley). Greetings were extended to the new minister by Rev. D.E. Roberts, Superintendent Minister of the Methodist Circuit in Sowerby Bridge. STIRCHLEY, Birmingham

Pastor: J.B. Coleman

IN the past, the Elim Pentecostal Church in Stirchley has had to hold its meetings in the houses of members of the congregation, but now, after years of hard saving, the Church has a home of its own at last.

When Stirchley Institute was put up for sale by Cadbury-Schweppes, the Church's Minister, John Coleman, put in an offer which was accepted.

Recently, the Institute has been used only for dancing classes, and as a result it was in none too clean a state when the Church took it over. The mammoth task of spring-cleaning began recently and when we went along there was a hive of activity as walls and floors were thoroughly scrubbed.

Church services will be held in the old ballroom.

It is hoped that this will be possible as soon as the heating has been altered. Rooms will be set aside for the Bible study group, youth meetings and Sunday school meetings.

The Institute was built by Richard Cadbury and his brother and was officially opened on May 14, 1892. In those days it was near to Bournville Station, and was built to accommodate a Friends' Meeting House, a coffee house and classrooms for children.

The happy band which forms the Elim Pentecostal Church are an enthusiastic and hard-working "lot", and it is because of them that Pastor Coleman fully expects to have moved into the Institute before the year is out.

The congregation of Stirchley Elim Pentecostal Church have found a home at long last, after sharing various places of worship with other religious communities for more than two years. The congregation have purchased the well-known Stirchley Institute which in recent years has been used on a reducing scale. The Elim Pentecostal Church members intend to breathe the new life into the building when they convert it into a Church and Community Centre.

The Minister, John Coleman, said, "Our teams of volunteers will clean the place from top to toe then it will be painted and various internal alterations carried out".

Before finding this home of their own the congregation met every week in each others' homes, or on premises loaned to them for the occasion by other religious denominations in the area, but always at the back of their minds was the important factor that they wished to have their own church.

John Coleman was born in Stirchley and entered the Ministry in 1955. His first assignment was to the pastorate of Jerusalem Chapel in Merthyr Tydfil: since then he has served in the Potteries, in Caerphilly and has taught Religious Education in Secondary Schools. He has held positions of responsibility such as Missionary Secretary for the Welsh Presbytery, founder member of the North Staffordshire Evangelistic Fellowship and committee member of the Inter-Schools Christian Fellowship. He is now leader of the Stirchley Elim Pentecostal Church with a major project to deal with. If his enthusiasm is anything to go by he will along with his congregation soon have his church in being.

WE gathered on the forecourt of our new church building on Saturday morning, December 22nd, to sing carols. Some of our young people gave out invitations to passers-by to come to Christmas services in the new Church.

With a great sense of gratitude and praise we held our first Breaking of Bread service in the Stirchley Institute on the following morning. For a long time we had prayed for a building of our own and we feel that it is a real miracle that the Lord should provide us with such a wonderful place. We were pleased to have so many at the evening carol service, including members of our Sunday school and their parents. Bible readings and musical items were provided by different members. On Christmas morning we had a wonderful service in which several families provided items.

Members and friends are still busy decorating and preparing the building for our official opening service which, we hope, will be some time in March. We are looking forward to this very much and praise the Lord that He has done more than we could ask or think.

Gleanings The Death of Christ
 by S. E. Petts

"It is as high as heaven. . . deeper than hell. . . the measure thereof is longer than the earth, and broader than the sea" (Job 11:8,9).

ZOPHAR, a friend of Job, thus describes God's character. It perfectly fits the death of Christ. Can anyone tell the fulness of its meaning or the limit of its scope?

It is as high as heaven, for it reveals the extreme penalty for sin.

It is longer than the earth and broader than the sea, because it was for all the world with no exception.

The Light of the World hung on the cross bearing the darkness of sin. All time radiates from it. All that went before the cross pointed to that awful yet blessed event. Since then all history has been greatly affected for good or ill by acceptance or rejection of that sacrifice. Nations and empires that have ignored it have declined and fallen and the chosen people themselves were scattered over the whole world through their refusal to accept Christ's death as their means of salvation.

Many millions have, however, found joy, peace and blessed hope in the shadow of that cross. You cannot assess its value, for it is unbounded, nor can you judge it, for it judges you.

Just gaze in wonder and adoration. Christ's death shows the extent of God's love for you and for me.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

62. Jacob and Pharaoh (Genesis 47:7-10)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

THERE is something very challenging in this account of the meeting of Jacob and Pharaoh. Pharaoh was the mightiest ruler in the area. During the time of famine the kings of many nations had sought his favour. Jacob would seem to be a poor and insignificant man by comparison, yet he possessed something which Pharaoh did not have. He knew the Lord. His blessing was upon Jacob. Jacob came before Pharaoh in the simple dignity of his divine calling and he pronounced a blessing upon Egypt's lord. We notice, too, that Pharaoh treated Jacob with the deepest respect and deference.

Many wealthy, powerful people in the world today command the respect of all their associates. Compared with them we would be counted as insignificant paupers, yet we possess something which most of the world's great men do not have. We have a personal relationship with the Lord of glory. We are His children and He calls us to be His representatives in this evil age. We ought not, therefore, to be overawed in the presence of men, however great they may be, for we have something to give which all their power and money cannot buy. Let us live in close harmony and fellowship with our mighty God and heavenly Father. Then we will be able to take the dignity and blessing of His presence with us wherever we go.

Warn to win

by Leon C. Quest

*"We have also a more sure word of prophecy"
(2 Peter 1:19)*

SURELY Simon Peter was referring to the Bible, to the Old Testament as he knew it. He wrote, "Take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts". It is the habit, unfortunately, of many Christians today to undervalue the Old Testament prophecies and the teaching of the Major and Minor Prophets. Many people think that Old Testament prophecy, from Genesis to Malachi, had to do with Israel only.

We must remember that all Scriptural prophetic utterances were God-breathed. Simon Peter makes it clear that he had studied the prophetic Word, including the Major and Minor Prophets. In his sermon on the Day of Pentecost, he quoted from Joel 2:28-32 and Psalm 16. In his Letter (2 Peter 3:13) he quotes from Isaiah 65:17: "Nevertheless we, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness". These, of course, are yet to come, as mentioned in Revelation 21:1-5.

Simon Peter, as he calls himself in his writings, believed the words of the prophets, as being not only for their day and generation, for they also breathed eternal truths. These writers, as prophetic evangelists, spoke of the past, the present and the future.

Some forty years ago I read Ezekiel 37: the vision and prophecy concerning Israel as pictured in the valley of dry bones. Now, in 1974, it has happened. God by His Breath (His eternal Spirit), as we read "The Breath of God", has brought some 3,000,000 Jews from the four corners of the earth to their own land, Israel.

Even the parable of the two sticks has been fulfilled. I came across a book in my study which was written in 1933 by E.H. Mosley. I quote from it: "For 2,500 years Israel has been without a flag, without a king and queen, and no rallying centre, nor national centre, and no national organisation". Now, in 1974, she has a flag, a prime minister (she has had three), a government of 120 members, an army, a rallying centre, a capital city, Jerusalem. Much more, she is a member of the United Nations. They will have no king, however, until their Messiah comes as King of kings and Lord of lords (Zechariah 13 and 14).

Apart from the prophecies concerning Jesus Christ, the Messiah, and His coming to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself (Hebrews 9:26), to be the Saviour of the world, God spoke to His people Israel through the prophets concerning their waywardness for some 400 years. He warned them that, unless they repented of their sins, invasion and captivity would surely take place, and they did according to the words of the prophets.

After King Solomon, who was king over Israel, the twelve tribes, like his father King David, Israel, because of sin, was divided into two kingdoms — unequal parts indeed: the northern kingdom with ten tribes and the southern kingdom with two tribes, Judah and Benjamin. The northern kingdom existed for some 260 years under nineteen kings, from Jeroboam to Hoshea, all of whom were idolaters. Prophets such as Jonah, Amos, Hosea, and Micah, were raised up by God and prophesied concerning Israel's sins, captivity and restoration, warning them to bring them back to God. As for the kingdom of Judah, the southern kingdom, with Jerusalem as its capital, the prophets associated with them for a period of some 400 years were Isaiah, Jeremiah, Joel, Zephaniah, Micah, Nahum and Habakkuk. Even when Israel was in captivity God raised up prophets like Ezekiel and Daniel who prophesied where they were, in captivity. When there was a partial restoration, led by Ezra and Nehemiah, the Lord God sent prophets like Haggai and Zechariah (Ezra 5:1; 6:14) to encourage the people to build and to finish the work according to the commandments of the God of Israel. This "prophetic evangelism" warned the people of the folly and results of sin to win them back to their God.

We often say, and rightly so, "For God so loved the world", as spoken by Jesus Christ, but God still loves His people Israel. As a Father He saw their prodigal ways, this backslidden nation so far off. Here is just one scripture (Jeremiah 31:3): "I have loved thee with an everlasting love: therefore with lovingkindness have I drawn thee". The prophets were foretellers of God to the people of that day and generation, preaching, making known, the heart and mind of God concerning judgment that would follow according to the Law of Moses as taught in Deuteronomy 5:26. It happened; captivity came. Recall those heart-rending, heart-searching words of Jesus, as He overlooked the Holy City, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathered her chickens under her wings and ye would not!". Jesus Christ, God's Son, was re-echoing the voices of the prophets and the yearning language of God, like the words of Hosea (14:4): "I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely: for Mine anger is turned away from him". God warned His people to win them back to Him. He will win them; restoration is taking place and reconciliation will take place.

All the New Testament writers acknowledge the Old Testament prophets and their writings. All the New Testament writers prophesied things to come. Jesus Christ Himself spoke of the signs of His coming again (Matthew 24; Mark 13; Luke 21). We are told by Jesus to look up, to lift up our heads, to watch and pray. A sincere attitude towards the second advent of Jesus Christ is most important. We must not only preach about it as one of our fundamental truths; attitude is most important. The Apostle Paul wrote to Timothy about the "signs of the times" (2 Timothy 3) and by careful study one can find some thirty characteristics of wicked people, summing it all up in those words, "Ever learning, but never coming to the knowledge of the truth". One is brought right up to date by James in his Epistle (5:1-8), where the heaping up of riches is mentioned as a sign of the last days, when the rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer. Simon Peter reminds us of the scoffers and the mockers concerning Christ's coming and of the glorious ultimate of the new heavens and the new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. He uses the word "BUT" three times (2 Peter 3:7-10) to call our attention to the certainty of His coming, but he also demands of us to warn and to win people to Christ and to save them from judgment to come.

The prophets and apostles were evangelists in their days. Let us proclaim the prophetic word faithfully, telling all: "HE IS COMING", having in mind the last promise in the Bible and the last prayer (Revelation 22:20): "Surely I come quickly. Amen, Even so, come, Lord Jesus".

"Fall fresh on me"

by W. J. Maybin, Pastor of our Southampton Church

MY wife is not a speaker; her voice is seldom heard in public. At devotions in the home recently she prayed. Among other petitions, it being Sunday morning, she made request of the Lord that familiar things might that day take on a new meaning for us. I was so struck with this simple prayer that, although I had a word prepared for the Communion service, I abandoned the idea and gave an extemporaneous word built around that prayer request. Hence this article, with prayer that a wider audience may benefit from it.

Familiarity breeds contempt in many departments of our lives: domestic, social or religious. Our lives are bedevilled by taking things for granted in our home lives, in our social lives and in our church lives. We need to enforce that simple request that in our Christian experience familiar things might take on new meaning. Let us look at some of those familiar things which can, indeed must, take on new meaning for us if we are to get more out of our church attendance.

1. Prayer needs to take on a new meaning

Examination of our prayer life, be it on the personal or corporate level, may well bring us to the place where we will ask God to revitalise it. Perhaps we are conscious that our personal prayer ministry and that within the local church need re-examination. Is it not a tragedy that many who claim membership in our churches today never pray together as families and are conspicuous by their absence from the weekly prayer meetings?

Turn to Luke 11:1 and you will discover that it was while listening to their Master at prayer that the disciples asked, "Lord, teach us to pray". A real consciousness of the Master's ability in this ministry made them feel so poverty-stricken in this field. If we could have heard Him pray, if we could realise the amount of time that He gave to prayer, it would revolutionise our private and public prayer ministries. We would take on a new lease of life spiritually and our churches would begin to feel the benefit.

2. Fellowship needs to take on a new meaning

Fellowship is a sweet by-product of Christianity, fellowship with God and Christ and with each other (1 John 1:3, 7), but how little we appreciate this by-product. This can be seen by our failure to avail ourselves of fellowship within the assembly, or by the absence of desire to participate in the act of fellowship, whatever the nature of the service. Spectatorism has taken the place of participation.

Turning to the familiar story of the two on the road to Emmaus (Luke 24), we note that fellowship was enhanced and enriched by the presence of the risen Lord, albeit at the time that presence was not recognised. They confessed afterwards, "Did not our heart burn within us, as He talked with us by the way?" (v.32).

We need to realise His presence more and more as we meet for fellowship. I heard a Canadian minister say recently, "It is possible to come to the House of God and fail to meet with the God of the House". What a difference it would make in every service if we could but realise and practise that Presence! Church-going would be lifted out of the realm of mere duty to become a delight. The poet's words would become a realisation:

And Thou, O Lord, art there,
Thy chosen flock to greet.

3. Bible study needs to take on a new meaning

Returning to that Emmaus road scene we cannot fail to see that, although those travellers were acquainted with the Old Testament Scriptures relative to what had transpired in Jerusalem during those crucial days, they failed to connect them with recent events. They were returning home with their faith shattered and their hope gone. The presence of the "Stranger", however, lifted belief in the Scriptures out of the realm of mere literary appreciation to its becoming a living Word. Jesus took those Old Testament prophecies relative to Himself and made them live. He became the central theme of the Old Testament.

Has our study of the Bible become dull and uninteresting? Then we need to be awakened to the fact that the author of that Book is as real today as when He journeyed with Cleopas and his companion. He can make the Book live and darkness will become light. When you attend church and listen to the public exposition of the Word, can you not get beyond mere sermon-tasting? Then you need to grasp afresh that the message is more important than the messenger. Go to the preaching service with the prayer of that old hymn, "Beyond the sacred page I seek Thee, Lord", and the Holy Spirit will touch your eyes with great effect. As a preacher I have something to learn from "the Prince of Preachers" in this Lucan incident, i.e. that my ministry should be Bible-based, that it should always focus on Jesus Christ, and then it will emancipate people from depression and add new meaning to life and living.

4. The Communion Service needs to take on a new meaning

Jesus was known to them in the breaking of the bread. It might have been by some common gesture, or perhaps by a glimpse of those nail-scarred hands. Whatever it was, realization was theirs in that act.

The incident sounds sacramental, by reference to the Lord's Supper, but this was an ordinary meal. If He was known at an ordinary meal in a simple home, the lesser in this case must include the greater, indeed His presence at the Communion table can hallow the meal table in all our homes.

How tragic that we can approach the memorial feast with but little concept of what we do, thus missing the blessings that can be ours in touching and handling things unseen. The sweetest service of the week should be the Breaking of Bread service. Anticipate your next participation in this "service of services" in the mood of the late Dr. H. Bonar:

*Here would I feed upon the Bread of God;
Here drink with Thee the royal Wine of Heaven;
Here would I lay aside each earthly load,
Here taste afresh the calm of sin forgiven.*

First Impressions of a Mission Station

by Mary Fisher, Elim missionary teacher in Rhodesia

"ELIM Mission - Staff", said the sign as I finally bounced my way into the place which was to be my new home. Still rather shaken and tired, I scrambled out of the pickup truck to be met and welcomed. Those roads! - they are single-track, winding up and down on surfaces which vary between thick sand, like that you'd find on the beach, and granite rocks complete with potholes. Oh for tarmac, say I!

I spent my first few weeks in the guest house, being introduced to a perplexing variety of strange, wonderful insects. Beetles, spiders and flies - I never knew that there were so many different kinds. I've given names to some of them, like the mint-humbug bee, the grey-haired grandfather beetle and the clock-work fly.

Now that I'm in my own house, I've discovered Reginald, the little lizard who, I suspect, lives behind the bookcase. He and I have come to a mutual agreement. He can live in my house, provided he eats the insect population there.

Not long after I arrived, I was taken to see the tanks that hold our water after it has been piped down from the mountain stream that everyone calls a river. I discovered that they not only provide us with water, but they also provide the local insects with a free swimming pool for their enjoyment. That was when I decided to boil my drinking water.

The mission is very neatly laid out with little paths that go in all directions. They are lined with stones painted white - rather like rows of teeth. When I arrived, the grass was dead and yellow. Now that the rains have come, in no time at all the ground has been painted green and the trees red and green, too. What was black and white is now glorious technicolour - and not before time. The Lord answered prayer again concerning the rain.

Sometimes the mission bears a close resemblance to a farmyard. Cattle, goats and chickens abound, and in winter are allowed by their owners to roam in search of food. I thought the little calves, kids and chicks so sweet, and having animals around rather quaint until I discovered a large cow solemnly eating the one and only flower growing in front of my house. Now I shout and clap and chase them off with stones as everyone else does.

Here the women carry their babies tied on their backs and their loads on their heads. With an incredible sense of balance, they carry all manner of weird and wonderful objects - pots of water, bags of grain, bundles of sticks - even shopping bags.

In the church and in the school the singing is a joy to hear. The harmony has a quality all of its own.

Greetings are very important and polite. You must "good morning" everybody and "have you slept?" them at length.

At the end of the church service the congregation sing a hymn as they walk out and shake hands by the door. I stood by the door and shook hands (Shona fashion) with the unending line. Imagine my astonishment when I turned to find that they had all lined up alongside me and as they moved along the line everyone shook everyone else's hand! I am still trying to imagine what would happen if the same thing was done in the churches in Britain - a singing congregation lining up from the front door of the church down the street to shake hands would be quite something!

I used to think that missionaries were a race apart, but the ones I've met so far have all been as human as I am, which is one reason why I've settled in so well.

The Doctrine of the Trinity

4. Is God a Trinity?

by Charles J. E. Kingston

WHAT is the doctrine of the Trinity? It teaches that God is One, but that He reveals Himself through three Persons, who are of the same substance or essence. The only terms which can be applied to distinguish the three Persons of the Trinity are those which denote their mutual relationship: Father, Son and Holy Spirit. "The divine Persons operate outwardly only as three-in-one, though we ascribe a particular work to each of them". As to the inner life of the Trinity, Scripture is almost completely silent. The "mystery of godliness" will not be fully revealed until we know as we are known in the life to come.

We use the expression "three persons" not to suggest any difference in essence. In the Trinity there is absolute equality; the Father is not greater than the Son, nor are the Father and the Son greater than the Holy Spirit. As Augustine puts it: "Any image of that kind, greater in its three parts than in anyone of them, less in one than in two, must be unhesitatingly rejected, even as we reject everything that is material (in the Godhead). Even in the world of spirit, nothing that is changeable must be taken for God".

Again, we must not think of the Trinity as if it were, so to speak, a three-headed person; nor must we think of them as three separate gods. The three Persons of the Trinity are inseparable and indivisible; their unity is more than just a moral one. Only when we consider love—and Scripture says that God is love—does light begin to break. The Trinity consists in the Lover, God the Father; the Beloved, God the Son; and Love Himself, God the Holy Spirit. Or, to change the figure, there is the Speaker and His Word (the Father and His Son), proceeding to Love, common to Both, the Holy Spirit, who is the Gift of Both.

Because of the human mind's difficulty in understanding how three can be one, heretical explanations, which are really over-simplifications of the mystery, have been propounded. Unitarianism, the teaching that God alone is divine, that Jesus was no more than a good man, and that the Holy Spirit is no more than a good influence, is one attempt. The "Jesus only", or "Oneness" doctrine, which teaches that there is only one Person in the Godhead, which is Jesus, is another. Those who oppose the doctrine of the Trinity manifestly have to set aside many plain statements of the Bible, which should be interpreted in their obvious meaning. Usually, because such opposers have adopted the principle that the doctrine of the Trinity (or Tri-unity) of God is unreasonable to human minds, any Scripture which is favourable to the Trinitarian view is to be rejected.

Yet we have in nature some hints to the understanding of this mystery. As noted in a previous article, light, which appears to us to be clearly white, is yet made up of the seven colours of the spectrum, of which three are primary from which all the others can be made. Yet there is only one light, composed of the three primary colours, each of which has its own value and place in the spectrum and without which light would not be white. Put them together and light has the colour of none, but is purely white.

1. The Old Testament speaks of the Trinity of the Godhead

Throughout the Bible the idea of a Trinity is prominent. Three times in the early chapters of Genesis, the word "Us" is used of the Deity, implying a plurality in the Godhead (Genesis 1:26; 3:22; 11:7). Remarkably, too, the words that every devout Jew is supposed to repeat daily: "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God (Elohim) is one Lord" (Deuteronomy 6:4) contains clear intimation of the doctrine of the Trinity. The word, "Elchim", is plural and is actually translated "gods" in Genesis 3:5 where Satan tempted Eve by saying: "Ye shall be as gods". The Jewish commentators say concerning this word: "There are three degrees in the mystery of Elohim". These degrees they call persons and say that they are all one and cannot be separated (quoted by Finney).

Further, the Hebrew word used for "one Lord" is "echad", which Gesenius's Hebrew Lexicon says comes from a root which means to unite, to join oneself together. Thus it is used of a man and his wife, "they shall be one (echad) flesh" (Genesis 2:24).

The corresponding Greek word for one, "Heis", is also sometimes used as a compound unity. Thus Jesus prays: "That they (believers) may be one, as We are one" (John 17:22). Since God's people can only be a compound unity, our Lord suggests that in the same way He and His Father, together with the Holy Spirit, are a compound unity.

God (Elohim) creates by means of the Word and the Spirit (Genesis 1:1-3).

We can say that creation is from the Father, through the Son, and by the Holy Spirit. It was the Father who planned creation; He said: "Let us make man". The Son spoke the Word of creation, for "without Him was not anything made that was made" (John 1:3). It was the Spirit of God who produced creation; He "moved upon the face of the waters". (Genesis 1:2). There is revealed a threefold centre of activity. The splitting of the atom proved that seeming material things are really composed of and held together by minute charges of electricity. Perhaps this suggests how the moving energy of the Spirit operated in the creation of the universe.

More than one Lord is mentioned in Scripture.

In Psalm 45:6, 7 God is addressed by God. "Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever", which promise Hebrews 1:8,9 applies to Jesus, the Son; but the next verse states: "therefore God, Thy God hath anointed Thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows". Here God, the Father, anoints God the Son to be King (v.1) and to reign.

In Psalm 2:7 God, the Father, says: "Thou art My Son, this day have I begotten Thee", a passage cited three times in the New Testament and applied to Jesus (Acts 13:11; Hebrews 1:5; 5:5);

Isaiah prophesied that Jehovah God would smite His servant, Messiah, and would lay on Him the iniquity of us all. Philip explained to the Ethiopian eunuch that the prophet was speaking of Christ and "preached unto him Jesus", whom we have already seen is God, the Son (Acts 8:35 with Isaiah 53:4,6,10).

On a number of occasions it is stated that the Lord appeared to people. Since "no man hath seen God (the Father) at any time", nor indeed can do so, for God said to Moses "there shall no man see Me and live" (John 1:18; Exodus 33:20), these appearances (or theophanies, as they are called) were of the Son of God. After Adam and Eve had sinned, "they heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden in the cool of the day". The Jewish commentators say that Adam heard the Word of the Lord, that it was the Voice which was walking.

While the Trinity has been inherent in the Self-revelation of God to man, there has been a progressive unfolding of this truth. In the Old Testament there is revealed God as Creator, to whom man is finally responsible for his acts; in the Gospels, the Son is revealed as the Saviour, who has paid the penalty for our sins; in the rest of the New Testament the Holy Spirit is revealed as the in-dwelling power to enable us to live a life pleasing to God.

2. The New Testament speaks of the Trinity of the Godhead.

Coming now to the New Testament the Trinity is seen as co-operating together in man's redemption.

John the Baptist's witness

John's preaching called for repentance toward God, faith in the coming Messiah, and a baptism with the Holy Spirit of which his baptism in water was the symbol (Matthew 3:11). At the baptism of Jesus the Trinity all had a part. The Son, Jesus, was baptised by John in Jordan; the Father, speaking from heaven, said: "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased"; and the Spirit descended upon Jesus (Matthew 3:16, 17).

To suggest that Jesus was responsible for that voice is to do violence to the plain meaning of language. In such a case He would be bearing witness to Himself by a feat of ventriloquism (which is the art of uttering sounds in such a manner that the voice appears to come from some other source than the speaker). This would make Jesus to be acting falsely and with a desire to deceive, whereas He claimed to be the Truth. Peter, referring to another occasion (Matthew 17:5), says "There came such a voice to Him from the excellent glory, This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with Him in the holy mount" (2 Peter 1:17, 18).

Jesus Himself taught the Trinity of the Godhead.

He taught that there was a distinction between His Father and Himself; He claimed that the Father loved Him, the Son; that He was sent by the living Father; that He was commanded by His Father; that His sheep (believers) were given to Him by His Father. He prayed to His Father and His Father answered with a voice from heaven (John 6:57; 10:18, 29; 12:28; 12:27, 28). He claimed that His Sonship was not merely from David (as taught by the scribes), but from a source which made Him David's Lord and that it had been so at the very time that David uttered the words (Psalm 110:1; Matthew 22:42-46). He indicated both His Deity and His pre-existence. He spoke of the Holy Spirit as being "Another Comforter" and stated that He would send Him from the Father (John 15:26). The Baptismal formula teaches the Trinity (Matthew 28:19).

In these post-resurrection words of Jesus, He gives clear teaching on the Trinity of the Godhead. Believers are to be baptised into (the Greek word is "eis", which implies the putting on of the threefold name) the name

The Devil and Demons

by Alexander B. Tee, Pastor of our Southport Church

It is always important to give a balanced presentation of Bible truth. Extremists cause excitement by being dramatic, but usually in the end the situation becomes very unfortunate. Divine healing is the sacred inheritance of the Church. We must present it in a way that will do it the utmost credit. Some teach that almost all sickness is the work of demons. They tell us that there are cancer demons, influenza demons, cold demons, and a host of others. Some activities by people who claim to have a demon-deliverance ministry are alarming.

We do well to get a clear understanding of what the devil and demons really are in order to get an intelligent grasp of how they set about their wicked work. Demons are spirits. The Devil is a spirit. The Third Person in the Trinity is God the Holy Spirit. John 4:24 tells us that God is a spirit. The angels are said to be ministering spirits (Hebrews 1:14). Within every one of us there is both a soul and a spirit.

What is a Spirit?

A spirit is a person, or a character. Others prefer the term "being". A person has personality and a character is known by his or her characteristics. A "being" is capable of being good or bad, loving or wicked. God is a spirit, but we are told by the same writer that God is love (1 John 4:8). We believe in a literal God who has characteristics and personality; the Bible also teaches that there is a literal Devil who has characteristics and personality. The same can be said for demons. Paul spoke to a real being when he said, "I command thee in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her. And he came out the same hour" (Acts 16:18). No one can read the story of the man in Gadara (Mark 5:1-15) and say that the Bible does not teach that there are literal demons. They may not have bodies, but they have ability, and so has the Devil.

A spirit must not be thought of in terms of size or shape, for it is neither physical nor material. The Bible suggests that there were 2,000 in the man in Gadara, yet Solomon said that the heaven of heavens could not contain God, let alone the wonderful temple that he had just built. A spirit, therefore, has no size.

The Bible speaks of unclean spirits, and of a spirit of infirmity in one place and of a spirit of divination in another. Principalities, powers and other spiritual beings are mentioned in Ephesians 6:12. "The spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience" is said to be "the prince of the power of the air" in the same Epistle (Ephesians 2:2). This spirit of disobedience, rebellion and revolt is certainly at work in our benighted world today. In these last days there are evil spirits at work on a gigantic scale and they are evidenced in a number of diabolical ways. Who is behind this horrid upsurge of immorality in all its lurid forms? Who is whipping on our society towards the precipice of disruption? Some of these evil forces crouch at the back of our circumstances ready to attack our peace while others attack our purity. There are other evil forces which try to damage both our happiness and our health.

A careful study of Satan's strategy shows how cunning are his tactics. One great philosopher said, "Control the mind and you control the man". This is where Satan concentrates his forces. The greatest battle-field on earth is the mind of man. Satan's methods are clever, but his motives are cruel. He seeks to blind the minds of men: "The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not" (2 Corinthians 4:4). If you divert the attention of someone who is driving a car, you might show him something very attractive, but it might cost the driver his life. You have blinded him to more important things and at terrible cost.

The vision of getting things can so fill our minds that unwittingly it becomes an obsession. As a result, homes, children, marriages and our nerves suffer. All too often a chain reaction is set off. The god of this world uses such seemingly innocent bait to get the hook where he wants it. A simple but subtle attack on the mind of Eve set off a very far-reaching catastrophe. The apple of affluence has still a shining skin, but alas there is more to it than its polished surface. The serpent is the promoter of society's rat-race and the stakes are the souls of men. Satan can blind us and he is doing it to the most intelligent of people.

Stage two of his tactics reveals that once he obsesses the minds of people with getting things, he will go on to get them oppressed, forsook pressures and problems arise. These result in nervous tension, agitation and frustration, all of which spring from the mind. Hundreds of people are suffering from oppression and depression. Satan has capitalised on situations and circumstances to get a grip on them by feeding their minds. They are down in spirit, under a binding force from which they cannot free themselves. The Bible speaks of people who are oppressed by the Devil (Acts 10:38). Satan not only blinds people, he also binds people. "This woman whom Satan hath bound" is the language of Luke 13:16. This had a physical effect on this poor victim. She was bound by a "spirit of infirmity". Young's concordance points out that the word "infirmity" in the Greek means "weakness". Weakness and exhaustion often arise from molesting circumstances on which the devil is quick to capitalise. This woman had been so weakened that she could not even stand up straight. A host of physical side-effects follow for those who have allowed their minds to become oppressed, agitated and frustrated: heart attacks and ulcers head a long list. Why cannot thinking people see the ultimate of pursuing this pressurized pace of life? Alas, evil forces are at work, but so many well educated people do not even believe that there is a satanic enemy involved. They may be brilliant, but if they are blind it is easy to lead them over the precipice.

Oppression and depression are not to be confused with demon possession, however. People who are demon-possessed are dominated by them. At their will these evil spirits can drive them on to do terrible things. It is thrilling to know that no born-again child of God can be demon-possessed. Our bodies are the temples of the Holy Spirit and God the Holy Spirit could not tolerate a shared tenancy with either the devil or any demon. The blood of Jesus Christ is a protective spiritual force. The devil will attack us, but he can NEVER enter a blood-washed soul.

The blood of Jesus is one of our WONDERFUL WEAPONS against Satanic power. Paul says: "Our weapons are not carnal but mighty" (2 Corinthians 10:4). John writes: "They overcame him (the Devil) by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony" (Revelation 12:11). Evil spirits flee when we claim the protective power of the blood of Jesus. When we give our testimony to the saving, keeping and delivering power of Jesus, Satan's forces suffer defeat. Audible fervent prayer is another powerful weapon. Yet another is the shield of faith which can quench the fiery darts of the wicked one (Ephesians 6:18). That we are encouraged to "fight the good fight of faith" suggests that there is an enemy in the arena. A living faith will not only defend us, it will also bring us right through to victory. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Faith is therefore an overcoming force.

The Word of God is another tremendous weapon against the Devil and demons. "The word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two edged sword" (Hebrews 4:12). The Word of God is much more than cold print on paper. "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life" (John 6:63). We do well to resist the Devil by using the sword of the Spirit which is the Word of God (Ephesians 6:17).

Strike another blow by singing aloud, "There is power, power, wonder-working power, in the blood of the Lamb". Sing it fervently and praise the Lord. Sooner than you think a glorious sense of victory will sweep over your soul. In praising the Lord for the power that is in the blood, you will know release in the Spirit which is spiritual, supernatural and glorious. There is dynamic power in the beautiful name of Jesus. Ask the man at the Beautiful gate if he thinks that there is power in the name of Jesus! "Jesus the name high over all in hell or earth or sky; Angels and men before it fall, and devils fear and fly".

"Resist the Devil and he will flee from you".

From T. H. Stevenson

OVER many years I have found Alastair Cooke's weekly "Letter from America" broadcast to be of interest. So often he seems to mirror not only the American scene, but also, strangely enough, the British scene.

You also may have heard his talk on the absorbing fact that three words predominate thought and talk in the U.S.A. today: energy, economy and truth. Regarding energy, emphasis was laid on the phenomenon that the country with the vastest resources has been among the first to suffer from this turn of events. Many Arabs still use camels for transport and commerce, but the Arabic countries sit upon oil and seem to have decided that they can slow down the other nations or even cause a standstill. The strong economy of America is affected, like elsewhere, but Alastair Cooke seemed most concerned that "truth is fallen in the street" or more so in high places. It was all solemn and I found it easy to apply to our homeland. Indeed, only three days later, Mr. Heath set up the new, important Department of Energy under Lord Carrington.

My train of thought was, however, not only about these particularly important words so relevant today, but also concerning the simple fact of the importance of words always, illustrated so easily by the reminder that Alastair Cooke has been talking to us weekly since the second world war years. People may decry, "Nothing but words, words, words", but words are nevertheless still very important as evidenced by the annual record-breaking output of new books, despite the competition of television and radio.

It could be interesting to think of the three words dealt with by Alastair Cooke by relating them to the Church of Christ at this time, but I must confine myself to the fact that nothing is more important to the Church than this very subject of words, though we can note the threefold aspect of the matter. Firstly, Christ is the eternal Word and was made the Word incarnate (John 1:1,14). "His name is called the Word of God" (Revelation 19:13). There is secondly the Bible, the written Word of God, inspired by the Holy Spirit. This Word is to be read and to be preached, and the preacher is not instructed to preach about the Word or from the Word, his mandate is to "preach the Word". How much this must be noted by preachers and hearers today, when many will "not hear sound doctrine". The written Word concerns Christ the living Word. There is also the spoken Word, not only concerning preachers, but also every believer. Our lives speak as Paul reminds us: "Ye are our epistles known and read of all men". We may be dumb at times, but people are not so dumb always. We must speak with our lips as well as by our lives. However inadequate you may feel, your words are telling, so let the spoken word, like God's written Word, ever speak of Christ the Word.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

IN these days of so-called liberation, so many of the little courtesies of life are sadly disappearing. One of these is showing one's gratitude for what has been said or done.

It is said of the late, great Dr. Dinsdale T. Young, a popular preacher for many years at the Central Hall, Westminster, London, that he had a pile of post cards in his vestry at the Hall. If someone had done something for him or had played some part in one of the services, he would take a card and write a few words of thanks.

A particular soloist once thrilled and inspired him by her singing. Immediately after, he wrote a post card to her on which he expressed his thanks for the help that she had been to him and without doubt to all who were in the service that night. How she valued that post card!

When did you thank your Pastor for that sermon which was such a help to you? A word of thanks would bless him, too.

So often we pray for things and God graciously answers. How often we take those answers for granted and fail to thank the Lord. Hundreds received post cards from the Doctor at Westminster and they were thrilled to get them. We may send God a "post card" of thanks and He will appreciate it. If you praise God for answered prayer, it will not make God "feel good" and provoke Him to answer you next time you pray. God does not work like this. He does not have favourites. He sends the rain upon the just and the unjust. Thanks will make you feel better. They will bring you into the spirit of prayer and faith, so that you will ask God largely. He loves to answer in a large way.

Try a little praise with your prayers and see the difference it will make!

The unwanted Baby

AFRICA still holds a very special place in my heart. I have wonderful memories of its dear people, particularly the mothers and children. So it is with real pleasure that I bring to you this contribution from Mrs. Dorothy Bull, our missionary in Tanzania:

The Unwanted Baby

THE man halted abruptly. What kind of animal was that, crying like a baby? He moved towards the thicket and, parting the bushes, stared in astonishment. There was a newborn infant, unclothed and unwashed, protesting at abandonment! Africans usually love their babies wholeheartedly. Parents seek witchcraft from the start to protect the little one. Big sister fondles the child. Elder uncle has special responsibility towards the little one. Everyone is happy, but with this tiny infant, the shame of an unmarried mother would have lowered her bride price, so disposal had been agreed upon. Soon the hyenas would arrive. The infant's blood would not be on their hands, relatives agreed; they had not killed it.

The passer-by had pity. Gathering the defenceless little one up, he trudged to the village. His wife had a baby of her own and could suckle the tiny stranger as they walked the ten miles to the local policeman. Justice took its course when the baby's mother was found. The infant was reared in an orphanage.

Some time before, also in the bush, another baby boy was motherless, his mother having died when he was born. Unable to thrive on the flour and water that his grandmother gave him, he was taken more dead than alive to the missionary. It was found that he had polio; one leg was crippled. As years passed, he was taught to use a brace and could eventually even climb steps. Often left behind by more robust children, he became like the missionary's shadow, always near her! Finally, he went to the Salvation Army boarding school. When he returned for holiday, he was radiant, and had a new confidence. He was able to cope now with other children and was wanted by them. It made all the difference.

Have you known what it feels like to be unwanted, not needed, bereaved, buffeted? Desolate millions have trodden that bitter road, not least among them the Saviour. Joseph the Nazarene carpenter had to face the problem of an unwanted baby. At first, he thought that Mary had been unfaithful. His love for her struggled with the thought of what to do about it. Should he put her away secretly? God's messenger showed him the way: "The Babe is the Saviour of mankind; love Him as your own". They might have borne ridicule and insults for years ahead. Most of the world hated Jesus then and still does today. He bore the penalty of the sin of others. Often, we find ourselves afflicted by the cruelty of others; "If they hated Me, they will hate you also" says the Scripture. Then is the time for faith, patience and grace to work in us. Reserves of strength are at hand from the comforting Holy Spirit. If you know not the Giver, it is because he waits to be born in your own heart. The day you accept the Saviour as your own, you will know the content, fulfilment and salvation that He brings. May He not be cast off, unwanted, in your home like the first infant in this article, but King of your life instead.

BLACK woman, woman of Africa, O my mother, I am thinking of you. . .

O Daman, O my mother, you who bore me upon your back, who gave me suck, you who watched over my first faltering steps, you who were the first to open my eyes to the wonders of earth, I am thinking of you. . .

Woman of the fields, woman of the rivers, woman of the great river banks, O you, my mother, I am thinking of you. . .

O you, Daman, O my mother, you who dried my tears, you who filled my heart with laughter, you who patiently bore with all my many moods, how I should love to be beside you once again, to be a little child beside you!

Woman of great simplicity, woman of great resignation, O my mother, I am thinking of you. . .

Black woman, woman of Africa, O my mother, let me thank you; thank you for all that you have done for me, your son, who, though so far away, is still so close to you.

(the Greek word is singular, "onoma", setting forth the unity of the Godhead) of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost.

The Epistles declare the Trinity of the Godhead.

We can no more make the "one Spirit", "one Lord" and "one God and Father" all to mean the same Person, any more than we can make the "one body", "one hope", "one faith" all to mean the same thing (Ephesians 4:4-6)..

1 Corinthians 12:3-6 gives the various offices of the Trinity. It is the Spirit who gives the gifts (listed in vv.8-10); it is the Lord Jesus who appoints our ministry (see Ephesians 4:11, 12); it is the Father who works in all. Alford comments: "Thus we have God the Father, the first Source and Operator of all spiritual influences in all: God the Son, the Ordainer in His Church of all ministries by which the influence may be legitimately brought out for edification: God the Holy Ghost, dwelling and working in the Church, and effectuating in each man such measure of His gifts as He sees fit".

1 Peter 1:2 shows how glorious is the threefold work of the Trinity on our behalf! Christian believers are "elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ".

In conclusion I quote from the Elim Fundamentals: The Trinity. We believe that the Godhead eternally exists in three Persons, Father, Son and Holy Ghost and that these three are one God.

Daniel Webster was once asked: "How can you reconcile the doctrine of the Trinity with reason?". The statesman replied: "Do you understand the arithmetic of heaven?". To say that the doctrine of the Trinity is unreasonable to our human minds is to say that God cannot be greater than our finite minds can conceive of and would make Him to be as small as the creatures He created (Romans 1:25). The fly which alights on the ocean liner cannot comprehend the power that drives it across the seas, nor can a tea-cup contain that ocean. How less can our finite minds comprehend the infinite God! The doctrine of the Trinity stretches our minds and heightens our conception of the nature of God.

How to convene a service

by Laurence E. Lambert, Pastor of our Blackpool (Waterloo Road) Church and a member of the Elim Youth Committee

Realise your need

WHEN one has to speak, it rightly drives one to one's knees, but convening seems less important, so we are apt to pray only just before the service commences. Convening a service is VERY important and one needs to be very much in prayer about the whole thing. A convener should have about him the very atmosphere of the throne of God.

Commence on Time

God is always punctual; so should His servants be. However many are in the meeting, commence right on time. Because people are guilty of late arrival, don't pander to their weakness by delaying the start. If they miss some of the meeting, it is their loss.

Choose your hymns well beforehand

It is nice sometimes to ask for a favourite hymn, but don't rely on this for the whole service. One problem is that it's often the same one or two folk who are ready with numbers and so the very freedom becomes ritualistic. To see a convener frantically sorting out hymns either just before the service or while other items are taking place is not glorifying to God. Hymns and items should be carefully, prayerfully chosen.

Avoid Vulgarities

In our informal type of worship some young folk, in order to make a meeting lively, or to sense a kind of freedom in themselves, can fall into the trap of being less than dignified. Phrases like "Sing up, you lot" or "You look a miserable crowd" or "Give your face a joy ride" do not really sound nice. We must think of the impression made on folk who are not used to our services. Always seek to glorify the Master.

Enunciate clearly

It is not without note that it says of Jesus: "HE OPENED HIS MOUTH and taught them". When introducing an item or giving the number of a hymn, speak clearly. Always repeat the number of the hymn at least twice. Many are sure to miss it the first time. We do not normally have hymn numbers placed at the front of the church, so if people don't hear there is a buzz of noise as various ones ask their neighbours for the number.

Do not Duplicate

If you are convening, convene; leave the preaching to the preacher. Nothing is so wearying as listening to a little sermon between every hymn, sometimes between every verse. Some pastors are guilty of this fault. Much time is wasted in our meetings by several sermonettes before the proper message. This can spoil it for the speaker, as the people are tired before the Word is declared. There is also a growing habit for people who sing solos to feel that they must speak about their piece for a few minutes before they sing. Leave the preaching to the preacher.

Adopt the right Mood for the Meeting

One does not approach a Communion service with a big smile and a cheery hymn. The very atmosphere of a service can be set by the convener. If it's a gospel gathering, approach it with a positive, radiant demeanour. If it is a devotional meeting, approach it with suitable conduct.

Pay attention to whoever is taking part

Good platform manners are essential. Keep your eyes on whoever else is taking part. Do not gaze at the floor in apparent boredom. Do not try to catch the eyes of someone special to you in the congregation. Look at the speaker, even if they are not the most interesting person whom you have ever heard. Attend so that, if people look at you, they will be transferred in their attention to the person at the front. Watch out for photographs in the EVANGEL. Look at the person preaching or singing, but notice the background platform party. Their eyes should always be on the participant!

Be led by the Spirit

Remember that the Lord can lead you in your home as you prepare for the service, just as much as in the meeting itself. There are times, however, when the Spirit of God falls on a meeting in a special way and the convener can either make or mar the whole thing. Do not be afraid to let a meeting go. We sometimes try to keep too much of a hand on the working of God. We become afraid of excesses, but more meetings die of spiritual straight-jackets than of excessive liberty. The right chorus, an informal time of prayer or praise, can bring great blessing.

Keep the Meeting moving

We have all suffered from the two minute testimony that's gone on for twenty minutes, from the first of perhaps three speakers who keep saying, "lastly" and "very briefly", but who makes it last. Conveners must be firm, but diplomatic. Give a clear lead without dominating. Never let a meeting drag. Sometimes a touch of humour can help to dispel the gloom after some folk have gone on and on.

Scripture Union Portions

Notes by A. Anstey

"Daniel had a dream" (v.1)

DANIEL was not a young man now. Dreams and visions are not always reserved for early years. Daniel the veteran had progressed from student days; he was now entrusted with visions of great content: four winds, four beasts (vv.2,3), all thrones cast down, (v.9), the beast slain (v.11) and the Son of Man in the clouds of heaven (v.13). What divine revelation to a mere man, what intricate detail and unfolding of the centuries of future history, what a feast for the prophetic student to revel in, yet he saw the Lord with "thousand thousands" before Him (v.10). Empires, dominions, thrones and complicated plans of men are cast aside in view of "The Kingdom which shall never be destroyed" (v.14).

Tuesday, January 29th

Daniel 7:15-28

"Visions... troubled me" (v.15).

EVEN Daniel was astounded. A lifetime's experience of wisdom and administrative responsibilities still left him totally bewildered to understand the true interpretation of his vision. "The saints possessed the kingdom" (v.22). We do not understand all the value of our inheritance, what God desires to do in us and in the kingdoms of this earth, but we will possess and appropriate things freely given to us of God "until that which is perfect is come". Then that which is temporal and transient will pass away, but we shall live with Him in the eternal years. Daniel saw the Ancient of Days on the throne.

Wednesday, January 30th

Daniel 8:1-27

"He touched me" (v.18).

THIS was the touch of Gabriel who had received the divine commission to unfold the interpretation to the prophet. After this touch Daniel stood upright. The touch of an Old Testament priest was reassuring to a leper who had been cleansed. The touch of the anointed prophet Elisha proved life-giving (2 Kings 4:34). When the Lord touches us we are made perfectly whole, spirit, soul and body. "Sick certain days" (v.27), Daniel certainly needed the strength of the Almighty. The knowledge imparted to him would have overwhelmed him, but for the presence of the Lord. Human frailty can be lost in heavenly sufficiency.

Daniel 9:1-19

"I understood by books" (v.2).

DANIEL was still a student in his ageing years and was thrilled to discover that he had arrived at the time for the fulfilment of the prophecy of Jeremiah for the seventy years captivity was at hand.

"My confessions" (v.4) — the shortcomings of saint and nation were linked in a prayer beseeching the Lord to make His face shine once more on them and on the sanctuary (v.17). His face will one day outshine them all. The prophet longed for the glory of God to shine once more in the sanctuary in Jerusalem and for full restitution of former blessings. The burden of the nation was evident as he confessed his own and their sin.

Friday, February 1st

Daniel 9:20-27

"Greatly beloved" (v.23).

HIS early academic life, his rise to fame in Babylon and his status as a prophet of the Lord entrusted with the mysteries of the times to come, did not prevent him from being a lovable man, respected by the world, loved by the people of God and by the Lord. "Seventy weeks are determined" (v.24). As surely as the seventy years in captivity, so these prophetic statements — spanning the years and involving the restoration of Jerusalem, the coming and cutting off of the great Messiah (v.25), even until the ultimate manifestation of all things — all must be fulfilled. Daniel loved the Word of God, lived by its principles and was fully involved in the things of God's kingdom.

"His eyes as lamps of fire" (v.6).

LIKE John on Patmos, Daniel saw the Lord after three weeks of fasting and waiting before God (v.2). Though he had company, it was Daniel alone who received the vision of the Almighty (v.7) and he was strengthened (v.18) and exhorted to be strong in the spiritual onslaught. His exhausted spirit received a new invigorating touch from on high, enabling him to rise once more. In this first year of Darius (11:1) each new phase of his life seemed to be bringing him new spiritual experiences, while focusing his eyes on the King. If we live daily in the light of His presence we shall be adequately equipped to meet every circumstance of our lives.

Sunday, February 3rd

Daniel 11:2-19

"A mighty king (v.3).

MIGHTY kings fall, but the Almighty never fails. The description of those who will reign could have filled Daniel's time and study, but he was thrilled to belong to an everlasting kingdom. The kings of the south (v.5) and the north (v.9) seem to be limited by their titles; the extremity of their domain is geographically restricted. We are involved in the realm where the King has no limitations. His kingdoms stretch from shore to shore, from galaxy to galaxy (v.19). "He shall not be found" becomes the lot of all earthly monarchs, for death is their ultimate end. Our Monarch lives and reigns for ever in the power of an endless life. "Because I live, ye shall live also".

CHILDREN'S CORNER

Grandmother's Pearls

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

CAN you say this tongue-twister? "What noise annoys an oyster? A noisy noise annoys an oyster".

I do not know if this is so, but there is something which annoys an oyster very much, as Brian and Carol discovered when they visited their grandmother.

"I do like your necklace, grandmother," Carol said. "Is it made of real pearls?"

"Oh no, dear. These are imitation pearls. Real ones are very expensive, and quite rare, too".

"Where do pearls come from?" Brian asked.

"From oysters," grandmother replied.

"Oysters? What are they, grandmother?"

"An oyster is a type of shellfish, children, and it forms a pearl in a most remarkable way."

"Do tell us, grandmother!"

"Well, children, the oyster has a very tender body and sometimes, when it swims around in the sea, a small piece of stone, or grit, finds its way inside the oyster. This grit, with its sharp, rough edges, irritates the oyster's body. It hurts so much that the oyster, in order to prevent itself from being injured, produces a fluid with which it covers the grit. This fluid sets into a hard, smooth ball with no jagged edges and this is a pearl. So you see, children, the oyster must first suffer pain before it can produce a precious pearl. So precious are pearls, that divers risk their lives in search of them, and collectors sell much of their possessions in order to be able to purchase and own them."

"Would you like to own a real pearl, grandmother?"

"Oh, but I have one, children! I have Jesus! He is the Pearl of greatest price because He is so very precious to me. To have Jesus as Friend is the most precious thing in the world. Just as the oyster through its pain brings forth a beautiful pearl, so Jesus, through His pain and suffering on the cross of Calvary, brings us the most wonderful and precious gift of salvation".

*"I've found the Pearl of greatest price,
My heart doth sing for joy."*

Do you know this hymn, children? Do you know Jesus as your Saviour?

SOMEONE wisely said, "Nothing succeeds like successors".

In our planning for the work of God our view must be wide and deep. We are as those who have eternity in their hearts. The short term outlook can stultify. We need to keep in mind not only the commencement of a work, but also its continuation. Many spiritual enterprises have failed, either because the initial enthusiasm was no more than enthusiasm, or because no account was taken of the need to perpetuate the work after those who started it were no longer able to continue it. Spiritual sons and grandsons are not only a blessing; they are essential.

These thoughts moved me as I read 2 Samuel 7 and compared 1 Kings 5. The former is a deeply moving chapter. David's zeal for the House of God is proverbial, yet his desire and offer to construct a permanent structure were indirectly refused in that he was told by the Lord that his son would fulfil his dreams, not himself. It is amazing to read later how the king set himself to get everything ready. He spared nothing and, while Solomon gets the credit for the temple, which even has his name applied to it, David more than paved the way. Truly, Solomon was faithful to a divine call, but 1 Kings 5 clearly shows that his father's desire was the original, motivating factor.

Unfortunately it is too easy for us to feel hurt, offended, unwanted when it looks as if someone else is going to carry out the work which we felt that we were going to do. Frustration is one of the hardest trials to bear. When someone younger, less experienced, or (as we feel) less worthy takes over to pursue the goal that we had set ourselves, it can be still harder to bear.

But who is Paul? Who is Apollos? Who are Priscilla and Aquila? After all are we not all bond slaves of God? It is His to lift up and to lay low. It is His to promote and to demote. It is His to choose and to refuse.

How do you measure spiritual success any way? Will not the Bema Seat reveal that some who have been prominent here will be unnoticed in that day and some who have prayed and given behind the scenes will be rewarded "publicly", so to speak?

"There's a work for Jesus not but you can do". True, but we are also "labourers together", and HIS is the glory.

FUNDAMENTAL BELIEFS OF THE ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH — 1. THE BIBLE: We believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God and that none may add thereto or take away therefrom except at their peril. 2. THE TRINITY: We believe that the Godhead eternally exists in three persons. Father, Son and Holy Ghost and that these three are one God. 3. THE CHURCH: We believe that the Church consists of all persons who have been regenerated by the Holy Ghost and made new creatures in Christ Jesus. 4. THE SAVIOUR: We believe that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God and that through the death and risen power of Christ all who believe can be saved from the penalty and power of sin. 5. THE HEALER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Healer of the body and that all who will walk in obedience to His will can claim Divine Healing for their bodies. 6. THE BAPTISER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Baptiser in the Holy Ghost and that this Baptism with signs following is promised to every believer. 7. THE COMING KING: We believe in the personal and pre-millennial return of our Lord Jesus Christ to receive unto Himself the Church and afterwards to set up His Throne as King. 8. THE FRUIT: We believe that every believer on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour should produce the ninefold fruit of His Spirit: Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. 9. THE GIFTS: We believe that the Church should claim and manifest the nine Gifts of the Holy Spirit: Wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discernment, tongues, interpretation. 10. THE MINISTRY: We believe that God has given some apostles and some prophets and some evangelists and some pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry for the edifying of the Body of Christ. 11. THE FUTURE STATE: We believe in the eternal conscious bliss of all true believers in Christ and also in the eternal conscious punishment of all Christ rejectors. 12. THE ORDINANCES: We believe in the following ordinances: Partaking of bread and wine in memory of our Lord's death, baptism by immersion for believers, the laying on of hands and the anointing of the sick with oil.

TWO special carol services were held at Elim Pentecostal Church, Balmoral Road, Keynsham. The first featured the King's Messengers, an evangelistic group made up of a group of local businessmen. They include Richard Douglas, a company director and artist who painted a Christmas scene in oils during the service. It was then given away to the person bringing most visitors to the service.

The second carol service saw the debut of Elim's new Crusade Choir.

The children of Elim's Sunday School and Sunshine Corner distributed between 70 and 80 Christmas food parcels to elderly people at The Hawthorns while singing carols. It is the sixth successive year they have done this.

Elim was once again responsible for organising the traditional open air carol service on the forecourt of Keynsham Town Hall, led by Pastor Des Morton and church members. A Hammond electronic organ accompanied the singing.

Crusade at Dehri-on-Sone, India

IN March last year, while in Madras, we discussed the possibility of holding a campaign in Dehri later in the year and Pastors Henry Joseph and John Prentice expressed their willingness to come and help us. The weeks and months slipped by, dates were suggested and plans were made, and finally it was decided that meetings would be held on December 3rd–9th. We sought and received permission to hold the campaign on some ground in the centre of the town and arrangements for a tent, lighting and loudspeakers went ahead. These things are, I suppose, commonplace at home, but it was our first campaign ever, so for us everything was new. Many leaflets were printed, hymn sheets too, and a choir, made up of older Sunday school scholars and young people, spent many hours practising the gospel hymns that they were to sing each evening. A day or two before the campaign was due to begin, we heard that there was a rail strike. Trains were running hours late and others were cancelled. As our speakers and guests would all be travelling by train, we prayed much. Meanwhile some of our local Christians went out on the streets with a loudspeaker advertising the meetings and distributing leaflets, while others fixed up banners in the bazaar for all to see.

The great day arrived, but all our visitors did not! Pastors Henry Joseph and John Prentice were seven hours late, and Pastor Sylvester, who was not only a speaker but our interpreter too, didn't get here at all. This really did create a problem as our one local Christian who would have been able and willing to interpret had to go away on business for his firm. This was the position when the meeting was due to begin — the choir was singing and the speaker was on the platform. Then, just as we were really wondering what to do, in walked the man who should have been miles away on business. He found on arrival at the station that his train had been cancelled. God had answered prayer once again. This brother acted as interpreter throughout the week, as Mr. Sylvester was unable to be with us due to the illness of his wife.

Many from all walks of life attended the meetings. Some came only once or twice, while others were seen regularly. All heard about the One who could meet their every need. During the last three meetings, testimonies were given by Pastor William from Rihand, our own pastor (Samuel Johnson) and Augustine Jebakumar. Although many were undoubtedly very interested, including a doctor and one or two more who called at the church house, we cannot say that any definite decisions were made. During the week following the campaign, three of those who had been contacted bought New Testaments, so we must pray on.

Souls are not easily won in this corner of God's vineyard, but still we believe that in due season we shall reap if we faint not.

School

Words: A. A. Biddle

Drawing: John Gregory

MOST boys and girls whom I have met appear on the surface to dislike going to school. I say on the surface, because deep down they really love it!

Thinking of this attitude I am reminded of a missionary who visited a school and gave a talk to the scholars. He said: "In my part of Africa there are miles and miles of country without a school". Then he asked this question: "Now will someone tell me why we ought to save our money and give it to the missionary society?". A bright lad replied: "So that they can pay our fares to your part of Africa"!

Well, now, I am sure that that boy would not like to grow up unable to read or write. Really it was a bit of fun to reply as he did. I have never met a grown-up who did not say that they would work harder at school if only they could be young again. Value your schooldays and work hard and eventually you will go places. There is a Scripture which says: "And that ye study. . .and to work. . .that ye may walk honestly and that ye may have lack of nothing".

There is another story that is connected with school which I want to tell you. There was a boy outside a school who looked so unhappy and bewildered that a man asked him what was the matter. The boy told him that he wanted to get into the school, so the man took him to the boys' entrance. To the man's surprise, the boy said that it was not the one he wanted, so the man took him to the girls' entrance, but again the boy shook his head. The man was puzzled and asked: "If you are not a boy or a girl, what are you?". The boy replied, "A mixed infant".

I wonder if you are a bit mixed up yourself? In 1 Corinthians 14:10 we read: "There are. . .so many kinds of voices in the world, and none of them is without signification". When you go to school so many things are said to you which leave you puzzled and mixed up. How did our world begin? How did man arrive on this earth? Some say one thing and others say another, and you are left to decide. Then, of course, you will certainly be mixed up in that battle which goes on inside us all between right and wrong. There are many things in which you will be all mixed up unless you can get the right answers.

In the Bible God speaks to us and He has all the right answers to all the problems of life, both past, present and future. Read your Bible regularly and believe what it says and you will be surprised how often your questions will be answered. No longer will you be all mixed up inside, but you will be sure and confident in your everyday life.

Food for thought. "Going to church doesn't make you a Christian any more than going into a garage makes you a car".

If you can fix in their right order these mixed-up letters, you will see what JESUS says that you have to do to become a Christian.

The Master's Hand

by S. E. Petts

"One is your Master, even Christ" (Matthew 23:38)

THE more we study music, the more easily we pick out the raucous from the melodious, or recognise in a phrase or two the work of a great master. The more we study art, the greater will be our ability to distinguish the work of an old master. The more we study architecture, the greater will be our appreciation of the beauty, symmetry and balance formed by the master-mind behind it all.

The medium also has an effect. The more suited the instrument, the paint, the stone, is to the work, the better will be the final product. In the hands of a master, however, even mediocre things can be transformed into objects of great beauty and worth. Cheap paint in the hands of a Leonardo da Vinci can become a priceless masterpiece. It is the master's hand that makes the difference.

We may be poor material for the making of a saint, but if we are willing to submit completely to the Master Architect — who planned and effected the whole of creation and redemption — to make of us what He will, then we will be whole, perfect, gloriously fit to grace the ivory palace of His eternal kingdom. We should call no man master. Only Christ is worthy of this title for only He creates and redeems. Only He is able to make, and to make holy, a spiritual masterpiece from sinful clay.

Helping or Hindering

by A. S. F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

THE Bible has much to say about hindrances. Paul said, "But Satan hath hindered me". Church members do one of two things; they help or they hinder. It has always been Satan's job to hinder the great work of Christ's Church. This he will do either from without or from within; either by using one of his own — an unsaved one — or one of us who name the name of Christ.

Have you ever asked yourself these questions? How useful is my minister? What is he able to do? Could he do more? What more can I do to help him?

Find out before God how you can be more helpful.

Here are ways through which any minister's usefulness could be limited.

1. It could be limited by church members neglecting his ministry. This would grieve and depress him, and fill his mind with the most torturing anxiety. If only church members would realise that this very action of neglecting the means of grace is another way of telling the world that in their opinion their minister is not worth hearing. I am sure that they would be seen more often in the House of God during the week. How can the ungodly attach importance to those who profess to "love the habitation of God's house, and the place where His honour dwelleth" when they spend so little time there? There is no better way of keeping others from hearing your minister than by neglecting his ministry yourself.

2. Another way to limit your minister's usefulness is to fail to pray for him. One thing that every godly minister desires above everything else is that his people should pray for him. Paul says: "Now I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake and for the love of the Spirit, that ye strive together with me in your prayers to God for me" (Romans 15:30). Why did he thus beseech them? "That I may be delivered from them that do not believe in Judea; and that my service which I have for Jerusalem may be accepted of the saints" (Romans 15:31). Ephesians 6:18,19; 1 Thessalonians 3:1, reveal the value that Paul placed on the prayers of God's people for him and his work.

Do you pray for your minister? May God give to every minister praying people, a people who will carry his needs before God in the secret place with deep, intense earnestness. Deprive him of the prayers which his office claims and you will paralyse his right arm and rob him of success.

3. Never to speak in his favour will also hinder. In the presence of others many church members never admire or commend their minister as one who should be loved, not for what he is, but for his work's sake. "Well, what did you think of that?". "Not much, he is too straight. . . he is not straight enough. . . too long — not long enough. . . too humorous — not humorous enough". If this sort of conversation is before the family, it will eradicate from their minds, not only the message, but any feeling of respect for that minister. More serious still, it will confirm the belief of the outsider that a profession of religion is only hypocrisy and that going to church is not, after all, a serious business, but just an amusement. How true it is that people believe what they see rather than what they hear (James 1:22).

4. Your minister's usefulness will be limited if your daily life contradicts all that he stands for and preaches. How many there are who stand in contrast with the truth that is preached. Others are afraid to let their friends know that their minister exerts any influence upon them. If he preaches separation, they are as worldly as possible. If he teaches love and humility, they assume all the airs and pride of the worldling. Whatever he preaches they never practise.

These are the last days and the Devil is working overtime to hinder God's work. The Church needs powerful ministers, but so often the minister and the extension of Christ's kingdom are hindered by the inconsistency of church members. Remember that the success of a minister, under God, is dependent on the church. It is high time for the Church to awake, but the Church will awake only as individuals awake.

Let us ask ourselves the question: How far have I limited the success of the ministry?

What answers can you give to the following questions? —

Have you frequently neglected the ministry?

Do you pray earnestly and in faith for your minister?

Have you found fault with his ministry and lowered him in public estimation?

Are you contradicting his preaching by your way of living?

What greater sin could we commit than to hinder God's work? The blood of souls would be upon us and God would be angry with us.

May God give more helpers to His servants!

Talking Point

by Eldin R. Corsie, National Youth Director

NOT so long ago, we were treated to a spate of political conferences, which were intended to help the man in the street to assess the intentions of his country's rulers. The policies of the political parties are crystalised in the conference hall. Sadly, the verbosity of politicians so often prevents their policies from getting through. The meat of the subject is often lost in the mash of asides, innuendos, cynical claptrap and vote-baiting, all of which leave the hearers a little weary. "Come to the point", one is tempted to cry, yet talking appears to be the dreary job of the politician – words, words, endless words. The summoning of conferences and invitations to talk can be a defence against the facing of unpalatable truth.

What would happen if the power of speech was suddenly taken away from us? B.B.C. radio would cease to exist, but television would take on a far more dramatic form. Those poor, expressionless newscasters would have to think again. A silent world. . . the mind boggles! The telephone hanging silently in the hall is a prospect the writer relishes. Endless negotiations, committees, conferences, councils, dialogues, debates, discussions, talk-ins, teach-ins would cease and the world would suddenly begin to act, for remember, when one has talked for hours, nothing has been done. The problem lies in theorising and failing to get on with the business. Someone has remarked that, "The church is 'punch drunk' with talk".

Talk we must, however. Perhaps there is wisdom in the statement of Somerset Maugham that "considering how foolishly people act and how pleasantly they prattle, perhaps it would be better for the world if they talked more and did less", a sentiment shared by the immortal Sir Winston Churchill who remarked that "jaw, jaw is better than war, war". Yet one misplaced word can arouse a political fracas. On the other hand, human words can be so unreliable. One has sympathy with the statement made at a certain borough council meeting that "a verbal agreement is not worth the paper it is written on".

The most succinct yet impressive talker was Jesus Christ. His words were recorded for generations to study and practise. The edifice of the Christian faith rests upon the foundation of what Jesus said. He is described by the Apostle John as "the Word", the verbalisation of God. Jesus came to exegete the person of God. In expressing the mystery of God's Person, He talked in terms that the ordinary man could understand. His teachings were pictorially illustrated from the land, the sea, the air. He borrowed from contemporary life to give His words that important relevance. So much talking from platforms and pulpits is shrouded in an aura of theological and philosophical mystery. The cleric drones on answering the question no one is asking. Our Lord's words were related to life. He did not say anything that he had not first lived out.

Talking is the best method of communication and some of us are just not communicating. Let us speak clearly, effectively, relevantly, but let us never forget that what we say must reflect what we are.

The Price was paid

O Saviour Lord, I give my voice to thee
To speak and sing wherever I may be
To tell poor sinners of a cross of shame
And tell them that Christ died, but rose again.
The price was paid, that all men might go free
And live with Him in Heaven eternally.

O Saviour Lord, I give my hands to thee
To do the work that Thou hast planned for me.
Point to the Lamb who for my sin was slain
And from my heart cleansed every guilty stain.
The price was paid, that all men might go free
And live with Him in Heaven eternally.

O Saviour Lord, I give myself to Thee,
My will resigned to Thy clear will for me,
No other way can bring me joy or peace,
No other way, except all strivings cease.
Christ paid the price, that all men might go free
And live with Him in Heaven eternally.

O sinner, friend, will you not heed His call?
Give Him your heart, your hands, your voice, your all.

Remember He upon a cross of shame
Bore all your sin and now salvation claim.
The price was paid, that all men might go free
And live with Him in Heaven eternally.

The Missing 380

by Robert H. Elliott, Pastor of our Penzance Church

GREAT events of history are for ever connected with the numbers of people engaged in the achievement and the event is recalled by the numerical figure, so it becomes synonymous and absorbs its very name. We recall battles, like Balaclava which is renowned for the 600. In Scripture Gideon is remembered by his 300. Divinely eloquent with grace and blessing we mention "the twelve", "the seventy", "the one hundred and twenty" and the "five hundred", and with what outpouring of grace, privilege and victory as we travel the road again, as our minds tour the inexhaustible mine of the riches of truth and glory, more than would exhaust the capacity or energy of pen during this terrestrial life.

In that last number — "the five hundred" — we find another hidden number, which reveals that group who never entered into the full blessing. Although they have taken their leave of us and have journeyed into the unseen world their descendants remain.

The 380 were part of the 500 and were personally visited and invited by the risen Lord to the outpouring of the Holy Spirit at Jerusalem.

We read that on a certain mountain, by His own appointment, He appeared to them and spoke face to face with the assembly of 500. Every one of the gathering looked on the same face, heard the same voice, and received the same invitation. Praise God for the divine impartiality of the gospel, for God in all His love and goodness blesses the whosoever.

Unfortunately, it was only the smaller proportion who accepted the invitation, for only 120 journeyed to Zion and faithfully waited for the glory and the fire of the outpouring of the promised blessing of the baptism in the Holy Spirit. Three hundred did not even go to avail themselves of this great, glorious anointing of God. We are astonished by their behaviour, yet on every hand we see similar conduct to-day. The larger body of Christendom holds back from the effort to receive God's best.

When there is the moving of God towards a renewal of blessing on His people, we praise Him for the 120, but how often are we so very conscious of the solid block of the undying descendants of the 380. The Word has gone forth, and like a double-edged Sword has divided the 500. The smaller group go to Jerusalem to get the blessing, while the greater number decide to carry on as before and are totally unmoved.

The 380 were unwilling to put forth any special effort to get the blessing of the Baptism in the Spirit. We have no doubt that there was much to keep the 380 at home, as there would be no doubt for the 120, but the 120 were more interested in their souls' welfare than in their daily business around them. They craved for salvation and God-likeness rather than bags and sacks and so they went up to Jerusalem and tarried for ten days until they received the outpouring of the Spirit.

The 380 did not want to be put to such effort and sacrifice, yet no doubt they would not have objected to receiving the blessing if only it could have been received in their way and in their time, without any inconvenience to them. Would not Abana and Pharpar do as well as Jordan? Anyway, who would look after the shop or office? Prudence was against their going.

Truly we know the tribe, with their solid, sad, stance of immobility. They clearly have no intention of "going to Jerusalem"!

Honour and glory can be forfeited by unfaithfulness at a critical time. The first gathering and outpouring of the Holy Spirit at Jerusalem must in the nature of things have been more than the subsequent outpourings. The full blessing of Pentecost had as yet not been outpoured so this gathering required more faith, courage and expectancy than any that followed. To this company alone was given the visible sign of tongues of fire upon their heads.

The 380 could have gone up to Jerusalem and enjoyed the peculiar hour in which God ordained to manifest His power upon those who lived in expectancy. Like the 120, they would have been visibly crowned by the mighty hand of God's outpouring.

"The glorious company of 500" would then have been the term for the initial outpouring of the Spirit at Pentecost. How much more would have been the amazement of the onlookers if they had been shaken by 500 Holy Ghost thunderbolts instead of 120? The upper room failed to draw the 380 from their shops and dishes, so they missed the glory of their lifetime.

Men still copy this example and follow in the footsteps of those laggards and delinquents and to this day they still miss their "mount of transfiguration" and the outpourings of God. Like the inhabitants of Jerusalem of old, they know not the time of their visitation.

Another Letter from the President

My dear friends,

ONCE again it is my privilege to send greetings to the Elim family at home and abroad. My travels during the last few months have made me realise how warm and strong are the ties of fellowship that exist amongst us. Some of the most blessed fellowship that I have enjoyed has been in some of our small assemblies where perhaps a handful of people have been faithfully praying and working together, sometimes amid great difficulties, not only to preserve their own existence, but also extend the kingdom of God.

I write this at the turn of the year with, but four months of ministry as President left to me. During the last few days I have been reading and listening to what experienced men of the world have to say about our present situation politically and economically. Almost unanimously the verdict is sombre, the hopes are few. The long term consequences of the energy crisis and the seemingly unavoidable worsening of industrial unrest together with rising costs and the extremely volatile situation in the Middle East combine to create a mood close to despair. A full-page advert in many newspapers has suggested that our industrial problems are the result of a deliberate policy to undermine our society by Communist infiltration. Whether that can be proved or not, it was significant to listen to the B.B.C.'s "The World This Weekend" on the last Sunday of 1973 and hear a serious discussion on the possibility that 1974 would see the collapse of Western civilisation.

Many may feel that this present mood of pessimism is an undue reaction to the problems of our day and age and that human ingenuity will once again prove its ability to find new answers. On the other hand, it cannot be denied that 1974 dawned on a terribly confused world. In America the long finger of suspicion still points accusingly at the President; in Europe ominous cracks appear in the imposing structure of unity through the Common Market; in Russia Alexander Solzhenitsyn, like a voice crying in the wilderness, laments the deaths of millions of human beings caught in the relentless machinery of a modern political system; in the so-called "Third World" death is welcomed as the final release from the shivering agony of starvation.

mine. Forgive me if I have dealt at some length with the world's problems, but I believe it is vital that we Christians are aware of and keenly sensitive to the heartbreak of our world. We are living in a world where men's hearts are failing them because of the things that are coming upon the earth and, while we do not share their despair — because we know that God is still on the throne and our blessed Lord is coming again soon — it is vital that we look with understanding and compassion upon the realities of our day.

I heard the other day of a lady who said, "I don't want to listen to the news on the radio any more; it is too depressing." Now that is a very understandable remark, but, for a Christian, a very mistaken one. It reveals on the one hand a failure to believe in the sovereignty of God. However depressing the news may sound from the human point of view, the believer knows that God has not lost control of the situation and that sooner or later He will take the decisive action which will bring the whole of history to a glorious climax. This is implicit in the doctrine of the Second Coming of Christ. On the other hand, such a remark reveals an unwillingness to face the challenge of the need of men and women. Sometimes, indeed, the need seems almost overwhelming in its immensity and complexity, but we cannot shut our eyes to it or run away from it. It is there calling to us, beseeching us, imploring us. The Lord Jesus calls to us, too: "Lift up your eyes and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest" (John 4:35).

It was interesting to note in a recent letter from "our man in Jerusalem", Pastor L.V.D. Tiller, that in Israel people are talking about the recent war as the "War of the Day of Judgment". I don't know exactly what construction is being put on that out there, but it certainly seems in keeping with the almost universal feeling that history is reaching a crucial moment. I don't know about you, but certainly the events of the last few weeks and months have made me feel increasingly that the coming of the Lord draweth nigh and that the end of all things is at hand. Think of it! We may be the last generation of Christians living on the face of the earth before the Second Coming! You may be the last Christian to be seen and heard in your class at school, your office, your factory, the last Christian whom your neighbours will meet before the Lord comes. Every generation has only a limited time in which to hear the gospel, but our generation may have its life-span suddenly interrupted by the last trumpet! This fact should add the note of urgency to our concern for the world. Like the Lord Jesus we must say: "I must work the works of Him that sent me while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work" (John 9:4).

How, then, should we react to such a situation as ours? What should we be doing as a Movement, as local churches, as individual believers? Let me say here, that what we do as a Movement will depend largely upon what we do as local churches, because it is here that we are truly in touch with people, and what we do as local churches will depend largely upon what we are and do as individual believers. YOU in your local setting, working and witnessing together with your fellow-believers in the local assembly, are far more effective and important than all the schemes and projects dreamed up in some committee room far removed from the local situation. What the world needs is not clever ideas, but compassionate Christians.

Friends, we claim to be Pentecostal people. One of our former slogans was: "Elim is a movement, not a monument". Fine words, but, dear Elim people at home and abroad, unless we open ourselves to the actual moving of the Holy Spirit, unless we are Pentecostal by actual experience as well as in name, we shall become a monument. We can only justify our existence as Pentecostal churches as we are open to and dominated by the life of the Spirit.

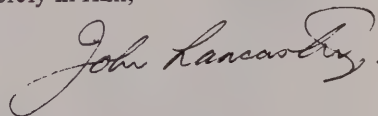

This means that every one of us — pastors, deacons, church officers, youth workers, outreach workers, members — and somewhere that includes YOU — faces his situation honestly. It means that I say to myself: "I am one of the last Christians on a dying planet. I am living in the twilight of civilisation. If I don't pray, no-one else will. If I don't seek to reach men with the Gospel, no-one else will. But I cannot, I cannot, pray and speak and work effectively unless I am filled with the Holy Spirit. My church will be nothing more than a cosy club for the converted unless I and the others are Spirit-filled believers, unless we open our hearts and minds to the Word of God and obey and proclaim that Word in the power and demonstration of the Spirit". Then it means that we come — you and I, pastors and people — alone with God in our own homes and together with God in our church prayer meetings, and we begin to seek His face in earnest, humble, believing and persistent prayer that He will fill us with the Holy Spirit, that the love of God will be shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit, that the Word of God will dwell in us richly, that the wisdom of God will direct us and the power of God enable us to live effectively in these momentous days.

My dear Elim friends, let us not be content to live on our reputation as a Pentecostal movement and let us not be content with an experience that happened many years or months ago. Let us get back to our New Testaments and study them, not merely for new sermons, but for an authoritative word from the Lord as to how we are to conduct our personal lives and run our churches. Let us be men and women who know and obey the Word of the Lord. Let us, at the beginning of every new day, expose our whole being to the Holy Ghost — mind, emotion and will being consciously yielded to Him — so that we become in a vital, practical way the instruments of His grace. If we would all do this, what might be the outcome?

God bless you,

Yours sincerely in Him,

God of the Valleys

by Evelyn E. Green

"Thus saith the LORD, Because the Syrians have said, The LORD is God of the hills, but He is not God of the valleys, therefore will I deliver all this great multitude into thine hand, and ye shall know that I am the LORD" (1 Kings 20:28).

AHAB, King of Israel, under the hand of God had won a mighty victory over his foe, the powerful king of Syria, who, with his confederates and their massed armies, had advanced on Ahab's realm to conquer it. The king of Israel, following a message from God by the mouth of His servant the prophet, had confidently confronted the enemy: "Ahab went out, and slew the Syrians with a great slaughter". The king of Syria retired from the fray. That, Ahab may have thought, was the end of the matter, but it was not.

When, flushed with victory, Ahab might reasonably have felt himself safe, at liberty to relax his vigilance and to enjoy his triumph, even then the enemy was planning the re-forming of his decimated armed forces in preparation for yet another attack on the king of Israel.

Believer-warriors are engaged in the good fight of faith. They can never afford complacency or carelessness. In these days we hear little of the spiritual warfare that rages between the Church of Christ and the powers of darkness. Believers can be more occupied with their heavenly armour than with the hellish antagonism directed by the enemy of souls against the blood-bought children of God. Well might the hymn-writer say

*Christian, seek not yet repose;
Hear thy guardian angel say,
Thou art in the midst of foes;
Watch and pray.*

*Principalities and powers,
Mustering their unseen array,
Wait for thy unguarded hours;
Watch and pray.*

The prophet of God came to Ahab and warned him: "Go, strengthen thyself, and mark and see what thou doest, for at the return of the year, the king of Syria will come up against thee".

Ahab was warned of the coming conflict and he was also bidden, in modern parlance, to watch his step. He was to take care that no behaviour on his part — foolish, over-confident or down-right iniquitous — should put him out of touch with the almighty power of God and thus render him vulnerable when the forthcoming attack took place.

If we are unsparingly honest with ourselves, we must confess that some wondrous victories through the good hand of God upon us have been followed by crushing, unnecessary defeat, not because the Lord subsequently failed us, but because we failed humbly to maintain the necessary vigilance.

Ahab was a surpassingly wicked man, therefore he was not a particularly teachable man, but even he was wise enough, on this occasion at least, to accept the divine instruction given to him by the prophet.

Meanwhile, in his court, the king of Syria's servants were weighing up the character of the God of Israel and the secret of Israel's latest great victory. They told their king that Israel had triumphed because the Lord was God of the hills.

Had these Syrians stopped there, their assessment would not have been wrong: it would have been a part of the truth, an incomplete picture, but not erroneous. They then went on to make a massive mistake, however, one which was to prove disastrous. They went on: "But He is not God of the valleys. Let us fight against them in the plain" (vv.23, 28).

How did they arrive at this fantastic, false conclusion? Did they not know anything of Israel's military history and the glorious workings of the Lord on her behalf?

They must have known how that the Lord had made David and his armies victorious over Israel's enemies, the Philistines, in the Valley of Rephaim, smiting them from Geba in the east unto Gaza in the west (2 Samuel 5:17-25); and how that the Lord prospered Abishai, David's nephew, so that in the Valley of Salt David's armies slew 18,000 of the foe, subsequently establishing garrisons in Edom and bringing the Edomites into subjection unto David (1 Chronicles 18:11-14); and that memorable occasion, when David, the erstwhile shepherd-boy, in the Valley of Elah made his debut as Jehovah's warrior-king-to-be, when with one smooth pebble expertly slung, David smote Israel's arch-enemy, the Philistine giant, Goliath, after which the armies of Israel, victoriously pursuing the Philistines, drove the remnants of their demoralized forces right over into their own territory (1 Samuel 17:19-54).

Wild inaccuracies of judgment like this of the Syrians are not confined to the enemies of the Lord; not only do the wicked mistakenly reckon God to be like themselves. Unfortunately God's own children are sometimes guilty of a reprehensible misinterpretation of the words, works and nature of their God and Saviour.

Consider how little Christ's disciples understood His nature and mission. Despite His promise to rise again from the dead on the third day and His command to them to meet Him in Galilee, they remained in hiding in Jerusalem long after Joseph had laid the body of Jesus in his own, new tomb, whither early on the third day certain of the women disciples repaired with the intention of anointing His dead body!

They had seen Him walk on the tempest-tossed sea and raise the dead to life again, but they did not reckon that, having gone down into the valley of death, He could and would emerge in triumph therefrom on the third day. They did not — not then — believe that He who came from above was God also of the valleys.

Let us not fall into their error. In our valleys of trial and temptation, let us reckon that He is Lord also of them, and is able to make us sharers in His victory.

At the return of the year the armies of Ahab went out against the foe. On the battlefield the Israelites were a pitifully small company, "like two little flocks of kids", wholly inadequate to combat the Syrians who "filled the country". As Israel, so seemingly vulnerable and helpless, confronted the enemy, however, a man of God brought good tidings to the king of Israel that the Lord had said that, because the Syrians imagined the Lord to be God only of the hills and not God of the valleys, the Lord would deliver all this great multitude of the Syrians into Israel's hand.

See how timely was the Lord's word of encouragement and how majestic the scope of His operation — "all this great multitude"! In the face of such great odds against them, in an utterly hopeless situation, Israel enjoyed a resounding victory. Thus the Lord showed His people and their foes that, be the scene of conflict hill or valley, land, sea or air, there He is King.

"Thus saith the LORD" occurs a number of times in this story and this is what mattered then. It still matters today. Other voices were heard having their say, but it was His glorious voice that counted.

He proved again what He could do in the valley.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Sir,

May I comment on the letter from J. Williams and E. Bounds which appeared in the EVANGEL dated January 5th. I thought that it was an ungracious way to write to a sister.

Generally speaking, the means through which God draws souls to Jesus and revives His work is through the preached word, prayer, and dedication of his people (Romans 10:17; 1 Corinthians 1:21). Music in general is not an adequate vehicle for certain basic gospel truths. When did you last hear a solo on the sinfulness of sin, Satan and his forces, and God's judgment? Are converts from Jesus Festivals, etc., settling in our churches? I say this because the environment of a Jesus Festival is very different from that of an Elim Church. The Jesus people in general do not settle in churches.

Yours etc.,

D. Worsfold

An Outline

The Communion Service

(1 Corinthians 10:16,17, 23-32)

1. It commemorates the greatest event in the history of the world — the Crucifixion of Jesus Christ.
2. It is a proclamation by the Church and by each believer, of that great fact. "Ye do shew forth (proclaim)".
3. It is a Feast and a Fellowship (5:7), not a sacrifice or a spectacle (like the mass), but a participation and an appropriation, "the communion of the body".
4. It provides a unique opportunity for worship, gathered together "in His name", an especial "presence".
5. It is a constant reminder of the Second Coming of Jesus Christ: "This do . . . till He come".
6. In the light of all the foregoing it is an occasion for self-examination (11:28). Turn your critical faculties inward at least once a week. "Let us keep the feast with sincerity" (5:8).

Don't keep it to Yourself

(Mark 5:19)

LUIGI Tarisio was found dead one morning, in his own home. He had scarcely one comfort or luxury, but stored in his attic were 246 valuable violins. The very best of them, fashioned by a master craftsman, was hidden in the bottom drawer of a rickety old chest — an exquisite 147-years-old Stradivarius! Tarisio obviously cherished his instruments greatly, but his love for them withheld from the world the beautiful music that they might have produced. "'Tis music in the sinner's ears". Then tell it!

An Incident

Procrastination

DR. John Mott held a special mission to the students at Edinburgh University. A student sought an interview with him. At the end of it he said, "Well, Dr. Mott, I will certainly think seriously about what you have said". With his great knowledge of men, instantly spotting the young man's weakness, he flashed the retort, "Young man, you had better think to a conclusion — and quickly!"

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

63. The Wisdom of Joseph (Genesis 47:23-26)

by F. Lavender

WE may be tempted to think that all Joseph had to do was to deal out the corn to the hungry people but we must remember that it was Pharaoh's money that had bought in the corn during the years of plenty. Joseph, therefore, had to look after Pharaoh's interests as well as those of the people and, above everything else and beyond every other duty, he had to do what was honourable before God. So Joseph sold the corn for money, then bought cattle and land of the people, finally buying the service of the whole population of Egypt; in return he made sure that everyone had sufficient food. Then, compassionately, though Joseph had bought all that the people possessed, he allowed them to keep four-fifths for themselves. Pharaoh had a fair return for the money that he had spent, the people were not hard pressed, and the Lord was honoured in all the decisions made by Joseph.

Our responsibilities are similar to those of Joseph. We have a duty to our employers and to our dependents, but also to others around us — our workmates and neighbours — yet our supreme task is to honour our heavenly Master in what we do. Our daily work must be done honestly and dependably, while our dealings with others must always reveal our Christian character so that our Lord will be honoured in our everyday lives. Being a Christian is not a part time or a week-end affair. We face many perplexing problems as we try to do right, but we can depend on our Lord to give us wisdom to know what honours Him.

The 380, by their failure, brought oblivion upon themselves as individuals. We know their number, but not a single name from this missing company has ever reached us. How many of the 120 have gone down in history as men and women who "moved mountains"?

He who determines to have and to enjoy the upper room experience, cost what it may, and who allows nothing to come between his soul and God, has parted company for ever from the sluggardly 380 and joined the ranks of the glorious company of the 120. These folk live in expectancy and see God honour His Word. They live in the presence of a wonder-working God, who is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that they ask or think. They claim the promise of a Pentecostal outpouring of God and live in the knowledge of the truth that "greater things than these shall ye do, if ye keep My commandments".

"No greater joy"

JOHN the Apostle was an old man when he penned his Third Letter. In the Amplified Bible he is given the title "the elderly Elder", yet despite old age and persecution he could write of his joy in learning of the steadfastness of Gaius, his son in the faith. One of his consolations was expressed plainly in 3 John 4: "I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth".

I believe that a like joy — a present reward and recompense — is given to all believers who win others for Jesus or who have cared for the newly converted. One of the glorious compensations for the blood, sweat and tears of the ministry is to return to the scenes of one's former pastorates and to discover many dear people faithfully serving the Lord who were won for Christ during one's years of service in their churches. We had just such a precious bonus of joy when we visited Guernsey in the Channel Isles last August and Motherwell in Scotland at the New Year Convention of 1974.

To meet again one-time Sunday school scholars whom one led to Christ and to see them now grown up and fully integrated into the life of the church and eagerly following the Lord, is such a joy. To discover young people, once in Crusaders and needing loving care and encouragement, now in positions of responsibility and in turn nurturing others, is cause for real satisfaction. What an encouragement it was to greet a whole family there in Motherwell, seven strong, all saved and in the church, the direct result of a Sunday school outreach, the warm fellowship of the Sisterhood and pastoral concern. Every renewal of fellowship which gives proof of one's spiritual children's walking in the truth is very rewarding.

From further afield I received at Christmas a heart-warming letter and a beautiful Scriptural greetings card from a Ghanaian schoolgirl. My eyes filled with tears of joy as I read her letter. In imagination I was transported back to the sunshine and colour of West Africa to the Sunday morning Bible class and the companionship of this vivacious, responsive thirteen-year-old. She and her twin brother decided to live for Christ. Now, almost four years later, in spite of temptations, Alexandra Abrokwa is walking in the truth and attending Scripture Union, and has not forgotten one who in a small way helped her on the Gospel Highway.

Sometimes, unexpectedly, out of the blue, the Lord gives additional evidence of the results of faithful witnessing. After my husband spoke at Elim's open-air witness in Trafalgar Square on Easter Monday last year, a gentleman came up to him and shook his hand. It transpired that, in 1934 in the early days of my husband's full-time service in the Elim ministry, he had led this brother, then a lad of thirteen years of age, to faith in Christ as his Saviour. Now he too is in full-time service for the Lord; what a joy to discover such fruit after the passage of almost forty years! It was all the more delightful because that night, recalled now by this man, when the two of them knelt together in the vestry of the Brighton Church had long been forgotten by my husband.

Thinking over these things I remembered those early days of my Christian life, when as a teenager I used to enjoy singing with real fervour:

It pays to serve Jesus,
I speak from my heart,
He'll always be with us,
If we do our part;
There's naught in this wide world
Can pleasure afford
There's peace and contentment
In serving the Lord.

Now, after so many years, I can sing them with greater conviction out of a full experience.

How to speak at Crusaders

by Laurence E. Lambert, Pastor of our Blackpool (Waterloo Road) Church and a member of the Elim Youth Committee

BE WILLING. Moses tried to get out of speaking for God. So did Jeremiah and others in the Bible. Sometimes we fail in this too. When asked to speak at Crusaders, consider it both a compliment and a privilege. If you do your best, that is all that matters. Most of our training in speaking came through the Crusader meeting. You really can do ALL things through Christ who will strengthen you.

BE PRAYERFUL. "What wilt Thou?" is a good question with which to commence preparation. It's important to speak to God about men before you speak to men about God. A message prayed down is always more effective than one "got up". Without Jesus we can do nothing effective in His service. So first of all pray for the right message, for help in delivery, for everything to be in His will.

BE WORKMANLIKE. "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth". Having prayed, we must now do our part. God never encourages laziness. Put something into the message; you always get something out of it. Do not quote a text like "Open thy mouth and I will fill it" out of context, otherwise it becomes a pretext. Jesus was thirty years preparing and three years ministering. I think that this is about the right ration — ten minutes of preparation for every minute you speak.

BE SCRIPTURAL. "Preach the Word" is a fine injunction. Sometimes in striving for novelty at Crusader services, all kinds of trivia are brought in, things like the titles of the latest top ten records. These are utterly useless. Bible-based Crusader meetings will make for strong Christians. There is all the variety one needs in the hundreds of themes in God's Word.

BE HONEST. "Thou shalt not steal" is, of course, a Commandment. One can borrow ideas — of course one can, otherwise why do we read? Even an outline can help enormously. But do not take someone else's message and give it as your own. A young curate was guilty of this. He read his sermons and he used the labours of many others until one day he was reading someone else's sermon as his own. With great gusto the pink-faced novice said, "When I was Bishop of —". That cured his plagiarism.

People who preach the longest usually prepare the least. If there are other speakers at the service, do not monopolise the time. Remember that the human mind flags after about twenty minutes of listening. Brevity is the soul of wit and is also helpful in sermonising. Recall what happened when Paul went on too long.

BE YOURSELF. I have met quite a number of smaller Arthur Blessitts recently. I used to meet a lot of little Billy Grahams. I'm told at one time there were many George Jeffreys. I have even met a few P.S. Brewsters. God has made only one you (perhaps that's just as well!), but He does not intend you to ape anybody else. Nothing is so ludicrous as David trying to fight Goliath in Saul's armour, like a little boy in his grandad's overcoat. No, David was himself and he won a great victory. So however marvellous your pastor is, or however impressive your youth leader, be natural. Be yourself.

CULTIVATE SPEAKING YOUR MESSAGE. Make notes, write out all your message if you must, but when you speak look the congregation in the eye. It helps communication enormously. If one is looking down all the time, one loses the sense of contact. Try also not to look at the side walls or at the ceiling. Do not preach at the people, but speak to them. This will come with practice. If you read to start with, try to develop from there. Try preaching your message through in your bedroom, or out on the mountain. "Sheep may safely graze".

GLORIFY CHRIST. One speaks not that people might say what a good speaker one is, but that people might say how wonderful Jesus is. In all your speaking, speak of Him. Whatever part of the Bible you use, come quickly to Christ. People are always blessed when one speaks of Christ. I get bored to tears when speakers are always referring to themselves, their experiences, their escapades. There is a suggestive Scripture: "The Holy Spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet glorified".

BE STEADFAST. If all goes well, praise the Lord. If things seem hard, do not get discouraged. Sometimes you feel as if you have toiled all night and caught nothing. Do not get depressed, if you have done your best, worked hard, prayed hard, leave the results to God. Sometimes if one feels one has failed one wants to crawl away somewhere and die... but get up, go on. God will yet bless you.

The Family Altar

Scripture Union Portions

Monday, February 4th

"He . . . shall speak marvellous things against the God of gods" (v.36).

LIKE Goliath, this powerful king was not afraid to ridicule and blaspheme the name of the most High, magnifying himself above all and every god, disregarding the God of his fathers (v.37). Do not be perturbed by many scientific statements boldly put out as undeniable facts, nor by the materialistic thinking of multitudes in our day. Remember that people who know their God do exploits (v.32). Like Daniel, nothing will seem impossible to us as we put our implicit trust in the all-sufficient, mighty King of kings. The palace and the king came to an end (v.45). "Change and decay in all around I see, O Thou who changest not, abide with me".

Tuesday, February 5th

Daniel 12:1-13

"Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake" (v.2).

THE book (v.1) records the names of the delivered ones. The glorious resurrection, when we rise in His likeness, transformed in a moment of time, will then be a reality and the wise will shine in His brightness (v.3). Speed and transportation involve much of our business world (v.4). New records of production, new forms of travel, even to planets, are the themes of the day. Knowledge increases in the world, but not wisdom. Daniel had the assurance that he would stand in his lot (v.13) in the end time and that what his Lord had permitted him to scan in the days of time he would view in timeless days.

Wednesday, February 6th

Psalm 98:1-9

"He hath done marvellous things" (v.1).

HIS right hand, holy arm, victory and salvation, openly revealed in the sight of heathen (v.2) are something to sing about. This psalm gives a universal call to "sing unto the Lord" — not only the instrumentalists of the house of the Lord, but all creation (v.4), all the world (v.7) and the expanse of the oceans are to swell His praise. This psalm, one of the six liturgical anthems, maintains the theme "The Lord reigneth" (v.9). "He cometh to judge the earth with righteousness". A glorious hope for the redeemed, but a solemn warning to the unregenerate. Make His praise glorious!

Thursday, February 7th

Psalm 99:1-9

"He sitteth between the cherubims" (v.1).

THE glory, majesty and holiness of the Lord centred on the Ark, the transcendent God dwelling among His people and today dwelling in our hearts (2 Corinthians 4:6). Moses, Aaron and Samuel (v.6) "called upon the Lord", an incentive and a challenge to the believer. Compare the shepherd and mediatorial ministry of Moses, the high priestly ministry of Aaron (who had over eighty years of slave experience first so that he could understand the feelings of the people whom he represented), then the outstanding priestly and prophetic ministry of Samuel, whose intercession for Israel was so effectual. God answered them (v.8). We too, can rise in our priestly ministry as instruments in His hand.

Friday, February 8th

Psalm 100:1-5

"Serve the Lord with gladness" (v.2).

THIS short, comprehensive psalm infuses the spirit of joyfulness into our praise and service for God, service with a song, with a smile, with satisfaction! "The sheep of His pasture" (v.3) recalls the Shepherd. The long list of those who held this ministry in Scripture, with all their attributes and great achievements only gives a glimpse of our great Shepherd! All the superlatives available to the human tongue fail to portray His goodness. "Enter His gates with praise" (v.4). Gratitude disperses grumbling. Praise over-rides petty pride. Thanksgiving expressed with sincerity contributes blessing.

Saturday, February 9th

Luke 3:1-14

"The Word of God came unto John" (v.2).

CAESAR, Pilate, Herod, Annas and Caiaphas (vv. 1,2) all missed the blessing of God, but John received a mighty anointing and a message for Israel. "Prepare ye the way of the Lord" (v.4). It is sad to hear of people singing these words in modern rock musicals without their appropriating the spiritual challenge that these words contain. No obstacle (v.5) can withstand the Lord's Word. The pure, unadulterated preaching of the Word is still effectual. The banks of Jordan became a pulpit and dynamic preaching produced a people prepared for the way of the Lord.

Sunday, February 10th

Luke 3:15-23

"He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost" (v.16).

JOHN'S baptism was but a step to the Pentecostal fullness promised to all believers. The charismatic outpouring today reminds us that the divine guarantee has not been withdrawn. "I am not worthy" (v. 16). This self-assessment removes all possibility of boasting and reproves spiritual pride. Aim for the latchet of His shoe then maybe a crown will follow. The Holy Ghost descended (v.22) like a dove upon Him; how perfect the symbol, how perfect the Vessel! The sight of the dove to John and the sound of the voice from heaven gave him the authority to declare Jesus Christ as the Son of God and the Lamb of God. The priests of old stepped into Jordan to prepare the way for Canaan, but now the true High Priest, in humiliation and obedience, stepped into the water to make the way into the Holiest for us.

The Church in the Valley

by Michael W. Carr, B.Sc.

COLOSSE sat like a tattered tramp hunched beside the Wolf stream that flowed through the Lycus valley. Its greatness dwindling, its glory fading, that once-important city of Phrygia was now just a legend. Badly frayed at the edges, it was soon to disappear from the face of history, but God had there a "little flock". Its minister was with Paul in prison. In his absence, the assembly was under attack from false teachers. A small down-town church racked by doctrinal division and without a shepherd was in grave peril of being submerged in gross error and of losing its taste for truth.

A hairy crossbreed was barking loudly at their heels. Judaism and Gnosticism had joined forces in a unity of evil to snarl at the purity of "The Way". Who would care for them? Why go there when the twin sisters of commercial excellence Laodicea and Hierapolis sat adjacent? Go where the big chance was amid the crowded pomp and noisy ostentation of the large town. Why bury oneself in a struggling church with a limited future?

That was a test for a man of mettle and Epaphras was that man. He was up to and beyond such a challenge. Though he was confined in Rome, he was within the Colossian ecclesia when kneeling at the mercy seat. Separated by geography but not by grace, he prayed for them as a fervent, righteous man and the intercession moved Paul's pen.

It is suggested that Epaphras was saved in Ephesus under the ministry of Paul and returned home to Colosse to preach in familiar surroundings. The important thing is that, like Legion, we are often told to go home and tell what great things have been done. It may not be glamorous, but it is necessary. Jerusalem must come first, because its need is immediate and its situation is delicate. Jesus said, "A prophet is not without honour, save in his own country", but He still preached there! Though the isolation of irksome insignificance is a cross to many, it is an experience that tends to maturity.

Judaism had fenced the gospel simplicity with works and Gnosticism had philosophised away the divinity of Christ. Paul had warned: "Beware of dogs", an apt description of those "evil workers". Their fangs bit hard into the meritorious garments of righteousness. Free grace aroused their fury.

The Colossian church began well. It started with Jesus. "Worshipping God the Spirit and rejoicing in Christ Jesus" and having "no confidence in the flesh", new life sprang up like spring flowers, but ere the sun began to shine the cool breeze of legalism shrivelled their joy and blackened their peace. Jesus may be good and great, but he was not all, said these wicked men, subtle but very sinful. It was no longer Jesus only, but Jesus plus. Religiosity clamped its steel fingers round the windpipe of pure faith and tried to choke life from the gospel. Gasping for the clear air of freedom these confused Christians groaned under its strong grip.

History shows that nearly all doctrinal error starts at or about Jesus Christ. "Christianity is Christ" said one great Anglican; he could not have improved that statement. We stand complete in Him: we need none other, for the Saviour has done it all. He has taken sin down into the depths of forgiveness and placed us on His merit by mercy. All we did was to call and He "flew to our relief", swift and strong in His deliverance of our situation.

Paul said to this church that he was an "apostle of Jesus Christ", not a representative of a denomination. His commission came from heaven as he lay in the dust. He could not see Christ except with the eye of faith, for he was blinded by revelation, but that fact never left him. Christ filled his whole vision and compelled his affection. It was not faith and works, but faith THAT works, as God's living power shimmered through every cell. His credentials, constraint and confession originated from and continued in Jesus Christ. Paul could hold aloft a catalogue of privations and a list of happenings that would make most hearts quake, but, as his deeds of danger and works of witness multiplied, his simple faith made Jesus everything. He glorified in nothing save the cross as a symbol of the crucified.

Early Christianity would have no one "save Jesus only" and, when Colosse began to live in "the traditions of men" and "the rudiments of the world", Paul pointed to their fault by pointing out Christ. "For it pleased the Father that in Him should all fulness dwell". Christ stands supreme. Learn that, for time can weave a falsehood about the gospel like a silken cobweb so that having begun in the Spirit we finish in the flesh. Leave Jesus uncluttered and lift Him higher, for He is the beginning, the ending and all that stretches between. All other things change and decay, but He is eternity.

THE front cover picture of our January 19th edition has provoked encouraging response. I must share with you one item. From a retired minister came £5 towards the replacement of the lost VW Microbus in Taiwan. This minister augments his pension with some part-time work. A regular order produces a cheque three times a year for a sum a little less than £5. A visit had to be made to the customer and the cheque was sent much sooner than usual, so that it lay side by side with the EVANGEL picture of the burnt-out VW. The retired minister immediately felt led to make the amount up to £5 and to send it to me for our Elim Missionary Society towards a new 'bus.
You will not be surprised to learn that a new order from a fresh source came to this brother very soon after he had sent his gift! Such veterans of the faith are an example to us all.

THE Director of the National Council on Alcoholism has issued a very worrying report. He says, "We must treat alcohol with a new respect", adding that alcohol is the "new" drug which is hooking teenage children. Think of these shattering figures: 56% of Britain's ex-prisoners are heavy drinkers and 89% thought that drink played a part in their crime; 42% of all murder defendants had some alcohol in their bodies when they committed their offence; from 1965 to 1972 convictions for drunkenness in the under-eighteen age group rose from 1,907 to 3,604, in the eighteen to twenty-one group from 8,809 to 11,258, and in the twenty-one to thirty group from 16,787 to 20,345. Surely the need for Christians to be total abstainers and to be seen to be total abstainers was never greater. The burden of example is based on the law of love; it imposes weighty obligations.

IN common with other magazines, we are having to raise our price. As from our next issue, the EVANGEL will cost 6p per copy. Escalating costs, especially regarding paper, have forced this on us. We have held our price for two years, but the rise in price is inescapable. We will appreciate your help and co-operation in maintaining and increasing our circulation.

FUNDAMENTAL BELIEFS OF THE ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH — 1. THE BIBLE: We believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God and that none may add thereto or take away therefrom except at their peril. 2. THE TRINITY: We believe that the Godhead eternally exists in three persons: Father, Son and Holy Ghost and that these three are one God. 3. THE CHURCH: We believe that the Church consists of all persons who have been regenerated by the Holy Ghost and made new creatures in Christ Jesus. 4. THE SAVIOUR: We believe that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God and that through the death and risen power of Christ all who believe can be saved from the penalty and power of sin. 5. THE HEALER:
We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Healer of the body and that all who will walk in obedience to His will can claim Divine Healing for their bodies. 6. THE BAPTISER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Baptiser in the Holy Ghost and that this Baptism with signs following is promised to every believer. 7.
THE COMING KING: We believe in the personal and pre-millennial return of our Lord Jesus Christ to receive unto Himself the Church and afterwards to set up His Throne as King. 8. THE FRUIT: We believe that every believer on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour should produce the ninefold fruit of His Spirit: Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. 9. THE GIFTS: We believe that the Church should claim and manifest the nine Gifts of the Holy Spirit: Wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discernment, tongues, interpretation. 10. THE MINISTRY: We believe that God has given some apostles and some prophets and some evangelists and some pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry for the edifying of the Body of Christ. 11. THE FUTURE STATE:
We believe in the eternal conscious bliss of all true believers in Christ and also in the eternal conscious punishment of all Christ rejectors. 12. THE ORDINANCES: We believe in the following ordinances: Partaking of bread and wine in memory of our Lord's death, baptism by immersion for believers, the laying on of hands and the anointing of the sick with oil.

A Vision Fulfilled

"Thou shalt know also that thy seed shall be great, and thy offspring as the grass of the earth. Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in in his season" (Job 5:25, 26).

NELSPRUIT in the late 1920s did not merit a mark on many maps. A small village of corrugated iron shops widely spaced about a lonely railway halt, a few mudbrick houses and a post office were its entire complement. Ragged thornbush and lush maroela trees dotted the slopes of the granite outcroppings and the few existing roads wandered seemingly at will as dusty tracks that were still rutted by ox-drawn farm wagons.

Just over the brow of the hill, in the grasslands beyond the railway line, Hubert Phillips and his wife, Jean, their minds still fresh with memories of their labours at the Elim church in Letchworth, set up home in a small, one-roomed mud and wattle hut. The stage was set for one of the most prolific missionary ministries in the Transvaal and the foundations were laid for what was to be one of the giants of Christian literature evangelism in Southern Africa—Emmanuel Press.

Their second home was slightly more ambitious, with a concrete floor, glass-paned windows, and several rooms. In this second home, the name "Emmanuel" was given to the small group of Elim missionaries and others who worked with Hubert and Jean Phillips. Today this building houses the Elim Assembly, a congregation of Indian and Coloured believers.

Their third and final home at Nelspruit became a rallying place for many of the early evangelical missionaries and believers, while the Pentecostal fellowship that came to be called "Assemblies of God" (of South Africa) held its early annual conferences in this home.

by Ronald A. Gull

In the meantime, their second home had become the Nelspruit birthplace of the infant Emmanuel Press, until a more suitable building was erected alongside the dirt track that led to Nelspruit. That same grassy track is now one of the main streets of the town that later enveloped the mission plot. The large African church that was built on the Mission housed a fast-growing congregation, while daily visits to the nearby kraals, the compounds of the infant citrus estates, and the rowdy shanty towns that grew up around the gold and asbestos mines, gave birth to many smaller congregations. A Sunday school for European children of the town became an established tradition long before sectarian churches were in existence. Many prosperous businessmen of the Lowveld today were Sunday school scholars of those early years.

From those early formative times, through the rapid growth of the 'forties, and the gradual handover of leadership to the growing African church in the 'fifties and 'sixties, Hubert and Jean Phillips pursued their vision, a vision of mind and heart that they passed on with lively enthusiasm to countless others. At the crowded funeral service, the well-known evangelist, Nicholas Bhengu, among many others, paid personal tribute to the influence of Hubert Phillips' life and vision.

His legal mind, like that of his brother, E.J., gave wise counsel to the early formulators of church government, both African and European, and he often had more pies than fingers! His sound knowledge of the Word of God was given ample scope in the African Bible School that flourished in the thirties and forties. His planning ability and engineering experience were sought by municipal planners in the early days and to the very end of his life his advice was gratefully sought with respect to the vision for an enlarged home for Emmanuel Press. So very recently, with glasses on his forehead in typical gesture, he pored over drawings with us, his comments and observations alive and constructive as ever.

Just prior to his passing from the earthly scene, he cried out with unusual strength, "It's finished, it's finished, it's finished!" and like a shock of corn he came in, in the season of the Lord's choice. We laid his frail body to rest in the land that he loved, while his offspring, both people and projects, will live on to the glory of God and the inspiration of men.

Helping towards a very Happy Christmas. Nelspruit children's meeting Christmas 1973.

Anne Stephenson and Mrs. J. Peel presenting prizes at the Barberton Sunday School Anniversary.

Transvaal, South Africa

CHRISTMAS and the New year bring with them similar activities in many different parts of the world. The Eastern Transvaal in South Africa certainly seems to have plenty of such activity.

Anne Stephenson has a number of children's works in the area and the pictures show the annual prize-giving at Barberton (famous for its gold mining). The children left us in no doubt that we were welcome and then went on to tell us a lovely story with a good message, "The three Trees". A Canadian Missionary, Pastor R. Peel, spoke and his wife and Anne Stephenson presented the prizes.

Father Christmas arrived late at Maureen Butcher's meeting in Nelspruit, but the children didn't seem to mind. In addition to the normal attendance prizes he had a lovely sack of beautifully made toys, sent from the Coventry Junior Crusaders. Well done, Coventry, — the children here thought that they were great!

A very clear WELCOME. Barberton Sunday School Anniversary 1973.

India Challenge

BECAUSE of our campaign, I got rather behind with my other work. School prize-day loomed ahead and, although ours is quite a small school, this is a big day for both parents and children, and it means quite a lot of work for all concerned. It is, too, the last day of the school year. Then, of course, there was Christmas, and it was an exceptionally happy one, even though the communal meal that we have had recently on Christmas Day was omitted because of soaring food prices. On Christmas Eve, twenty-one carollers arrived on our doorstep and stayed for some time in our home before moving on. It was 5 a.m. when they sang their last carol, and the party was considerably smaller by that time. Christmas and New Year's Day services followed. Both were very well attended, happy occasions when a number of our children and young people took part. The service that I shall not soon forget was the Watch Night service. Only eleven of us gathered, but it was a great time of blessing. Then, on New Year's Day evening, two young men from Hindu families who came to know the Lord a few months ago, were filled with the Holy Spirit, speaking in other tongues. This was indeed a wonderful New Year gift for them.

Our evangelist, Augustine Jebakumar, left on January 3rd for Bhabua, a town about forty miles from here with a population of about 50,000 and no Christian church at all. A campaign was planned there, the speaker being a Pentecostal pastor from Delhi who has been much used of God in North India and who broadcasts twice weekly. Augustine, who took full responsibility for this campaign (including financial), went ahead to prepare the ground. Bhabua is noted for its wickedness and he is, humanly speaking, alone.

ONE of our photographs shows part of the Sunday school at their rehearsal for the Nativity scenes which were interspersed with readings, carols and a message from David Scott, our Church Leader, on Sunday, 23rd December.

From the "Coming Events" column readers saw that there was a series of Bible studies on "The Priesthood of Israel". This ended just before Christmas, Mr. Scott took the series and we sat in wonder under his ministry as we saw our blessed Lord depicted through the series. The model, complete with robes, etc., which, as you will see, is very lifelike, was made by his wife, Mrs. Pauline Scott.

Tyne-Tees Presbytery

ALMOST 100 young and not so young people attended the second Tyne-Tees Christmas banquet held at our Newcastle Church. The event was a resounding success, combining an excellent meal and a time of fellowship. Following the meal, Paul Nugent, from our Stockton Church, having explained that he was singing for his supper, gave a good selection of carols both modern and traditional to remind us of the real meaning of Christmas. Pastor David G. Holmes from our Sunderland Church then led choruses on the organ and Pastor Godfrey Fearn (Darlington) showed the hidden meaning in the word "Banquet".

On behalf of everyone present thanks go to Pastor Adrian Hawkes for organising the event, to Pastor David G. Woodfield for the use of the church and particularly to the ladies of our Newcastle church for preparing the excellent meal.

OUR first anniversary in the new church building was well attended when Mr. C.W. Smith from Swindon brought us a memory of the opening ceremony by the television coverage he had taken on that day. It was much enjoyed. During these twelve months the Lord has indeed blessed us by bringing many to himself, including male and female nurses from the local hospitals. They are growing in grace and knowledge of the Word of God. They are involved in the work of the Assembly. We also have a team of students from London Bible College in fellowship with us. They are engaged in door to door work and visitation in hospital and old people's home visitation with our own young people. We are also having many strangers coming in week by week.

The Field Superintendent's Notes

by R. B. Chapman

MY notes on this occasion relate to fields far removed from our island home, in fact something like 7,000 miles away, because our Missionary Secretary and I were delegated to attend to certain urgent matters of business in Africa.

IN SEARCH OF THE SUN. African summer, scorching sunshine, escape from British winter with its rain and frost may all have flitted through our minds, but these were not to be. We rarely saw the sun. Black clouds rolled overhead as furious winds tore through the trees; the rain descended incessantly. We were thanked for bringing English weather with us! — Our hosts were delighted, because they needed the rain and rejoiced to see it. They long for the latter rain, too, and our prayer is that God will grant it soon.

IN PERIL ON THE ROAD. The aforementioned weather clearly had played havoc with some of the roads, especially those of lesser importance. On the first Sunday morning, we visited one of the school-churches associated with the Penhalonga station. We arrived there safely. All went well at the service. We bade the friends farewell and boarded the Mazda pick-up for the return journey. During the service there had been heavy rain and we had not travelled far before the wheels were spinning round aimlessly in the mud like a humming top. This called for the exit of the Missionary Secretary and Chairman, leaving the missionary to manipulate the controls! Soon the mud was over our ankles and up our calves, but our two man-power thrust was completely ineffectual. Fortunately, some of the Africans from the meeting came along. We hailed them and ready hands, feet and shoulders joined in the push. The vehicle was extricated eventually and moved on its way, leaving the worthy members of the delegation to paddle along on foot until they finally caught up with the Mazda, which by then had reached firmer foundations. This was not motorway travel, but missionary touring! Another hazard was the speed limit, rigorously enforced at eighty kilometres (fifty m.p.h.). The authorities were ruthless and the penalty for exceeding the limit could be up to £1,000. Cars were impounded until fines were paid. Vacations were ruined as travellers were caught and holiday money was swallowed up in paying the penalties. The police had the habit of checking the time a car passed a certain point. Perhaps leaving a town many miles further on, the driver would be stopped because his average speed had exceeded the limit over a measured mile. We travelled carefully in spite of the fact that the distances covered ran into thousands of miles and the long, unwinding roads, stretching like endless ribbons, were very tempting when journeying in high-powered cars. We had no penalties to pay. It is worthwhile not to yield to perilous temptation at all times.

IN DANGER WITH THE RIVERS. The visit to Inyanga North had come to an end. I joined the missionary family in the VW bound for Salisbury. The early part of the journey was pretty rough going, tough on the suspension, testing for the driver, but normal for the missionaries. Further on, the road surface improved and became rather like corrugated iron, but other hazards lay ahead. We approached a river; the shallow bridge was clearly awash. What should we do — drive on and risk it? Water billowed up, especially on the near side; shouts came from the rear seat as water flooded across the floor. However, we were safely over. Not many miles on, we had to cross another river in similar, but slightly worse, condition. We risked it again and made it despite the spray and a further intake at the rear. On we went, quite delighted with our progress, until we rounded a bend in the road. There we found ourselves confronted by a river that was in full spate; it was virtually a torrent. The waters swept right over the bridge, enveloping the parapets on either side. On the far side of the river there was a stationary 'bus and some cars. Soon other vehicles, including a 'bus, drew up behind us. None was prepared to venture across because of the fast-flowing current. We waited and waited. Twigs were placed in the mud to see if there was any sign of recession, but the river seemed still to rise. Then gradually there appeared to be a slow subsiding, so we waited longer. We suggested that the 'bus driver, in his high vehicle, should venture across, but he would not risk the danger. Eventually, with a prayer on our lips, the missionary, the only white driver present, slipped the gears in and took the plunge. He made it and this gave the African drivers courage to do the same. Missionaries have always formed the vanguard.

ON TOP OF THE MOUNTAIN. As we flew over Kenya, our pilot announced very kindly that he would fly us right round the snow-capped peak of the great Kilimanjaro (19,340 feet). We were so close that we could look quite clearly into the vast, famous crater. It was a great sight, massive, dominant, and the things of earth seemed so small and insignificant. When we rise on the pinions of faith, the things of the world do seem strangely dim and inconsequential. Despite the radiant sunshine that surrounded the summit, the snow still persisted. This reminded us that, in spite of the radiant Sun of Righteousness, which beams from Calvary, it is sad and mysterious that multitudes still remain frozen in the snows of sin and selfishness.

THE MASTERY OF THE SNAKE. As we drove towards Rhodesia, we looked out of the car window and saw something quite unusual to visitors like ourselves. On the verge, quite close to the road, was a large hawk shaking a big snake (a mamba, I was informed), just as a dog would shake a rat. We look for the time when that old serpent, the devil, is similarly mastered by the winged visitant from heaven and consigned to his infamous domain. Also we are reminded that it was with the enduement of the Spirit, who descended in bird-like form, that our Lord put the enemy to flight in the hour of His great temptation. By the same empowerment, we too can share in glorious victory and see the subtle arch-enemy taking his retreat.

GROWING FAMILIES. Just over three years ago, I was last in Rhodesia and I remember arriving at the Inyanga Station at 2.30 a.m. just as Doctor Brien, in his dressing gown, was leaving to go down to the maternity block. That morning, a baby girl was born to the wife of one of the evangelists. The baby was later named Grace. I saw the tiny babe and mother that morning and met the mother again this visit as she helped in the dispensary work. I learned, not only that Grace is growing well, but that she now has a little brother, too. During that same visit I was asked at Penhalonga Church to dedicate Patricia Chipó (meaning "a gift"), the baby daughter of one of the school teachers. This time I met Patricia as a bright, wide-eyed piccaninny, who also has a little baby brother. So the families grow. May the spiritual family grow as well, not just in number but also in stature.

MARCHING FORWARD IN RHODESIA. The rough seven mile or so journey from Inyanga North Reserve to Kambudsi was well rewarded by the sight of the new church building and national pastor's home which have been completed recently and without cost to the mission funds. This is a splendid achievement and truly a forward step in the establishment of the Christian testimony. A large company of women gathered that Saturday morning for service in the church prior to receiving medical attention at the clinic for themselves or their children. Later that day we took a more comfortable, shorter ride from the mission station to Bandi where the new church was practically completed and ready for opening early in the New Year, a further forward step and another Elim Church.

THE BIG SWITCH-OFF. At home here we know something about the inconvenience of the switch-off, when homes, streets, churches, offices and industry are all affected. We were sitting in conference with the Field Leader in the guest house. It was approaching midnight when we heard a vehicle coming up the drive. Yes, that would be the Doctors returning from Salisbury; we would see them in the morning. Almost immediately the lights went out! Doctor, undoubtedly thinking that the generator had been left on for his arrival, had switched off the current! We were left in total darkness and our deliberations came to an abrupt end. Without the light of the gospel all are left in darkness; they are switched off, if you like. May God help each one of us to keep the light burning so that otherwise impenetrable darkness may be dispelled.

Gleanings

The blessings of the Dew by S. E. Petts

"I will be as the dew unto Israel" (Hosea 14:5).

PLANTS receive heat from the sun during the day and radiate it back into the cooler air of evening. They continue to do this until they become colder than the atmosphere around them. Then the water-vapour in the air condenses on the cooler plants which thus receives a large proportion of dew. This feeds them and keeps them alive when the soil is dry.

In Scripture dew often stands for the refreshing work of the Holy Spirit on the arid, barren hearts of men. God says here to Israel, "I will come to the lifeless and the fruitless and affect them as the dew when it falls on the parched and profitless earth. I will bring deadness to life and sterility to fertility".

It is also true for the Church today, the present Israel of God. We can slake our thirst for spiritual things with the dew of the Holy Spirit to make our lives lovely like Christ's and productive in the power of the Holy Spirit, even as the dew feeds the plants and gives blossom and fruit. If our spiritual lives are flagging and our energies for Christ are waning, we can look up to God and expect the refreshing, energising power of the Spirit.

Plants cannot understand the manner of the formation of the dew, they just accept it. So must we receive the Holy Spirit in faith, even though we cannot comprehend Him.

Three commands

by Fred Dodds

THERE are three commands to carry out before or until the Lord returns: HOLD FAST, OCCUPY, and DO THIS.

A command is a military term. The closer we are to the Lord, the more we realise that the world is at war with us and that we are at war with worldly things. The state of the world, with its temptations and its subtle attractions, recalls the command in Revelation 3:11, where our Captain tells us: "I am coming soon, hold fast". He thus underlines our Christian principles and what we possess in Christ, for He warns, "Let no one rob you of your crown".

The second command is in Luke 19:13: "occupy till I come". A man of noble birth went on a long journey abroad to be appointed king and then return. Before going away he called ten of his servants and gave them the equivalent of one pound each and told them to occupy until He returned, i.e. to do business until he returned. One servant kept his wrapped up in a napkin. He kept his responsibility to himself and was properly rebuked. This is a pointer for us today, for all Scripture is given for our learning. We must not wrap up the glorious gospel message and hide it. As we think and pray for communist lands, we count our many blessings in this favoured land of Britain; all the more reason why we should count our obligations, "name them one by one and it will surprise you what the Lord wants done". Before His soon return, we should the more tell out or give out to profit, what the Lord has given to us.

In 1 Corinthians 11:26, we are told to do this until He comes. "This cup speaks of the new covenant sealed by My blood. Whenever you drink of it, you do this as a memorial to Me, for every time you eat of this bread and drink of this cup, you proclaim your Lord's death — until I come".

"Moreover it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful" (1 Corinthians 4:2).

The greatest Treasure (Matthew 6:19-21)

by Sheila Price

DO you know the story of King Midas?

He was a selfish, greedy man who longed to be the most rich, powerful king in the world. He wished for the power to turn all that he touched into gold. This power was granted to him. "Now I will be the richest king in all the land!" he cried. "I will be famous! People will envy me and come from far and wide to gaze on my wealth!"

King Midas could not wait to use his power. He charged through his palace touching everything he passed — chairs, tables, mirrors, ornaments — and instantly they changed to gold. He ran through his gardens and touched flowers, hedges, gates and trees and saw them all change to gold before His eyes. He had never been so happy!

Soon his happiness turned to sorrow and despair, however. He was unable to wash his hands and face because the soap turned to gold at his touch. He was unable to eat or drink because the food and water turned to gold even before he got it to his lips. King Midas, dirty and untidy, hungry and utterly miserable, shuffled about his palace, hating the very sight of all the gold before him.

When his beautiful daughter came into his room, he ran to welcome her — and the moment he touched her she changed into a golden statue! This was the last straw for King Midas. He hated himself and his selfish way of life. He longed to rid himself of the terrible power. It had brought him nothing but sorrow and despair. His greed had made him the saddest man in all the land.

The Prodigal Son discovered that riches do not bring happiness. So, too, did Solomon, the richest man of all. The older Solomon grew, the more proud he became. He searched in vain for friendship and peace of mind, but his wealth gave him nothing but trouble and sorrow.

How wonderful it is to have a treasure that brings lasting happiness! The greatest treasure that we can possess is salvation — the wonderful assurance of sins forgiven, a heart washed whiter than snow, and a life committed and dedicated to doing the will of our Heavenly Father.

What men think by Hugh Sawyer

"My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways My ways, saith the Lord" (Isaiah 55:8).

FROM times immemorial, liberators have come and gone, and are practically forgotten in this age of modern turmoil. The events of yesterday are dimmed by the amazing exploits of today and the world is astounded at what man can do. Unceasingly the search after knowledge forges ahead.

The answer to every man's problem and need is recorded in God's inspired Word, but many of the zealous in their haste by-pass it to their ultimate loss. "Seek and ye shall find", said Jesus, who was and is the greatest Liberator of all time and throughout eternity. The brilliant achievements of man fade into insignificance when compared to the miracles of the Lord Jesus.

The name of the liberating Christ has been proclaimed throughout the universe for nearly 2,000 years. He came and died for the sins of the world and by His sacrifice He overcame death and hell and offers a free pardon to all who will accept. This gracious offer still remains unheeded by the unrepentant majority of mankind.

We are warned that this state of apostasy will prevail when our Lord's return is imminent. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he", is a proverbial truth. The thoughts of men concerning Jesus are as contrary as the four winds. While not seeking to judge others, we must not turn a deaf ear to adverse criticism and different opinions. We must in Christian love endeavour to bring to them gospel truth, the grim realisation that all have sinned, that in the eyes of God our righteousness is as filthy rags, and that the penalty of sin is death, not the physical death which comes to all men, but the eternal death with severance from a loving God for ever.

God reads the hearts of all men. He knows their every thought and has an answer befitting the occasion. The boastful, worldly man, proudly declaring that by his own efforts he has achieved success and self-security, is now beholden to no man, and that henceforth he can live a life of luxurious ease, is about to enter a fool's paradise. Concerning such, God said, "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee, then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God".

Ask another, "What do you think of Jesus?". In a couldn't-care-less manner he will reply, "I've heard of Him; I would say that He was a figment of the imagination, a myth". Blissfully he goes on his way, ignorant that God had declared concerning him, "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God".

The worldly scholar will readily admit that he was aware that there had been such a person as Jesus, but he will suggest that He was a martyred philosopher who died so long ago and that there were many others like him throughout the years, so what does it matter today? It matters much that this same Jesus still challenges the world today with His victorious cry, "I am He that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore".

We are taught that the tongue is oftentimes an unruly, untamable evil and can defile the whole body. The thoughtless man, a slave to a profane tongue, who carelessly uses the name of God as figure of speech, with no thought of blasphemy in his mind, nevertheless is guilty of it. Scripture specifically declares, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord in vain".

"Religion is not for me; a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush", dogmatically states the seeker of fame and fortune. To him materialism is all that matters.

As spiritual things are spiritually discerned, the natural mind of man cannot accept or confess the name of Jesus. Neither can he understand the fulness of redemption or the eternal joy of everlasting life.

When he does accept in true repentance, the power of the Spirit enables him to forsake his former worldly ways; all things become new.

He is a changed creature, born again in Jesus Christ and has become a child of God and an heir of salvation.

Let the Public know

by Alistair Forrest

A member of our Cardiff Church who works on "South Wales Echo"

JUDGING by the world's standards, Christians get up to some really strange things. We have nothing to hide, so why not let the whole world know, or at any rate our own particular corner of it?

Many people would be surprised at what material local newspapers, weekly or daily, are prepared to print. After all, local news is their life-blood, and few editors are prejudiced against news of what evangelical Christians are doing.

All you have to do is to write or telephone with details, and in no time at all you have communicated with probably thousands of people free of charge, maybe information about a special meeting, or perhaps something bigger such as a healing miracle.

Doing this is not guaranteed to bring revival overnight to your area, but you never know the good that it might do. Most other religious sects are making as much as they can out of the local media — and many of them are heretical in their beliefs — so why should not we who love the Lord and believe His Word with simple faith do the same and more?

There are some essential points which may make all the difference as to whether your story is used or not.

Telephone. Call the newspaper and ask to speak to the news' editor or his deputy. Tell him what you are telephoning about, with as many facts as possible. He will probably transfer you to a reporter who will write the story. It is important that you tell him everything you can about the matter, because every story relies on facts pure and simple.

Handouts. These are a better way of telling a newspaper what is going on, providing you write clearly in good English. Leave no room for misunderstanding and you will not be misquoted. At the top type the name of your church or organisation. If you wish, you can put a heading, but this will not be used as a headline as that depends on type-size and "count" and is done by the sub-editor. Type clearly in double-spacing on one side of the paper only leaving a good margin, and if you use more than one sheet number each one. If possible, use some direct quotes using inverted commas. Everyone referred to should be mentioned with full name and address. If you quote statistics they must be carefully checked and sources must be quoted. General newspaper practice is that numbers one to nine are written in words, thereafter in figures. At the bottom of your handout type your full name, address and telephone number. Send your report to the news editor.

Photographs. These help a story no end, but most papers have their own photographic staff. If you have a photograph, however, send it with your handout. Black and white pictures are preferred; colour photographs are often not accepted. Try to send an original photograph; a group of lifeless-looking people sitting and staring at the camera is not much help.

Make it quite clear whether or not you want the photographs returned to you.

Get to know one of the reporting staff. This is a good idea if you want regular publicity.

What makes a story? Most papers carry a daily diary column dealing with coming events and any special meeting may make such a column. Larger campaigns will run to a few paragraphs. It is best to let the paper decide what is of interest, so tell them everything. Tell the local television or radio company as well.

The song-writer puts it thus:

*Everybody seems to have a cause for which to speak, Loudly from the roof-tops they proclaim the thing they seek;
Often for a needless cause and often to deceive, Should not we who know the Lord declare what we believe?*

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

I HEARD this testimony recently and I thought that I should share it with you.

The lady who gave the testimony quite recently became an old-age pensioner and was given a one-bedroomed flat for elderly persons. The flat has a small balcony on which was fixed a flower box. It needed some stones to be placed at the bottom of the box, over which there was to be some sand, and finally earth. Remembering that where she attended an Elim Pentecostal Church there were some major road works in progress she thought that surely there would be some stones and sand. So, armed with a plastic box, she went to the Women's Meeting hoping to see some stones and sand. There was none to be seen.

When she returned from her mission empty-handed and disappointed, she prayed about the matter. Her Heavenly Father knew she needed these things and He would supply. Next morning, when she got up from her bed, she went to the window and pulled away the curtains, looking across the street. She could hardly believe her eyes, for there were two piles of stones and sand. Hastily dressing, she crossed over the road, and made enquiries about the piles. How had they come to be there? To whom did they belong? No-one could give her an answer. She returned to her flat, had breakfast and once again went out enquiring who owned the stones and sand for she was, of course, going to ask permission to take some. Once again she returned to her flat. Waiting awhile she went out again. No-one knew anything about the stones and sand. So she took a few stones and a little sand and these were soon in the bottom of her window box. An hour or so passed and on looking out of the window she found that the stones and the sand had gone. Her Heavenly Father had met her need and I am sure that her planting will produce wonderful results.

This is a simple story and humorous, but it shows a simple faith in God who loves to be called our Heavenly Father. He was willing to meet the need of an elderly citizen.

Have you a need? Great or small, God can and will meet it, if you ask Him.

Getting Up

by Adrian L. Hawkes, Pastor of our Grangetown (Teesside) Church

HOW did you feel when you got out of bed this morning? Are you one of those who start the day with a bounce? I'm afraid that I'm the sort who gets a headache listening to breakfast cereals. The springy, bouncy sort of person is almost too much for me first thing in the morning; perhaps I have too many late nights!

I'm wondering just how you look at your day. . . all that time to be spent at work — or working. Even at home you'll have to work, won't you? Do you see it as a grind? Do you spend most of the day wishing that it was over? I suppose that we all get that sort of day sometimes. Does your day just revolve around the time you call your own?

There's one wonderful thing about a day: there's no rich and no poor when it comes to time. You can't buy more minutes and none is credited with less. We all have the same amount — twenty four hours either to spend wisely or to waste. The chance to make the minutes count or to fritter them away. . . every new day we are given than chance again.

There's a song that the young people in my church sing: "This is the day, this is the day, that the Lord has made, that the Lord has made. We will rejoice, we will rejoice, and be glad in it, and be glad in it". I think that you can see what the song is getting at.

Here is a fresh day, like an unwritten sheet of paper, clean and nice for you and me to put our print on. How will it look at the end, I wonder?

Though I'm not one of the best starters first thing in the morning, I have found that mentally to give the day to God is a great asset. I just say: "Here it is Lord, a whole new day. I want to use it for you". Even when things go wrong or when I do something stupid (which is quite often), still there is that underlying assurance that it's His day, that I have sincerely given it to God, and that because I love Him, He is making all things work together for my ultimate good. There's a problem here, however. I often hear people say, "Oh well, all things work out for good," but they're getting only half the facts of Paul the Apostle's words, for it's really his saying. What he actually said was, "All things work together for good to those who love God", and there is the problem. Before we can give the day to God, we must give ourselves to Him. How do we give ourselves to God? It is by making God the most important Person whom you know, and to make Him important we must know who He is.

Who is He? He's the Creator of people like you and me, the Designer of the universe. Most important, though, He is the One who became a human being in Christ and so He therefore really understands where we are. I said earlier about the day, "Give it to Him". We actually have to give Him our lives. That means that we are willing to allow God to change us, to redirect us, to have overall control over us. When you give God a day, what you should be doing is giving Him your whole life. Say to Him, "Here I am, what do you want me to do? I really want you to tell me how to live each day for you". Only when you've given Him yourself — with your problems and your shortcomings and your sins, and your advantages and even your talents — only then can you give Him your days. When you do, you will find that they have become really profitable, good days.

From T. H. Stevenson

IT made interesting reading, the experiment carried out by psychologists with forty theological students of America's famous Princeton University. Desirous of finding out why so many Americans do not "get involved" when seeing others in trouble they sent the students on a route taking them past a "coughing victim" apparently in need of immediate help. Sixty per cent of the budding preachers did not bother to stop. As part of the experiment some students were told to hurry to their appointment in another laboratory. Some were told to get there soon, and the rest that there was no hurry. Of the forty per cent who stopped to help the "sick man" two-thirds were of this last group. The psychologists Drs. J. Darley and B. Batson concluded that for some students the "emergency" seemed to have posed a "conflict" between helping the man and getting to their appointment. Therefore "conflict rather than callousness", would explain their failure to stop. I can only take space to ask, "What really do you think you would have done?" Other things could be considered: indifference; native British reserve etc. These were students training for the ministry, and ironically some had just passed after having prepared talks on the parable of the Good Samaritan, and were making their way to tape the talks in the laboratory. Mention of the parable causes me to confess that in over forty years ministry I rarely preached directly upon them. Perhaps a good excuse would be the difficulty of emulating the Master who told them. The chief reason was a feeling that my predecessors must have done so. By my mistake I would encourage younger ministers to make good use of the familiar Scriptures as they now seem less familiar, and changing congregations are possibly increasingly less familiar with the Bible. This appears so when the preacher announces his scripture reading. Perhaps I was put off also by the interpretations of parables I had heard and read, especially of every detail, without Scripture to verify such, and even building doctrine upon such. Perhaps Dean Trench's Notes on the Parables are about the most notable on the subject and is right in observing that to the simple significance of some of Christ's parables we trace with the early Fathers and the Reformers a deeper meaning. However, we may go too deep when Trench agrees with the Fathers such as Crysostom, that the wine is the blood of Passion and the oil the anointing of the Holy Spirit. Yet how far can we judge we may go? My memory is vividly clear of the numerous times I heard the founder of Elim, George Jeffreys, preach the FOURSQUARE GOSPEL from this parable with wonderful results in truly revival services. The burning desire to proclaim the message seemed to make it easy to detect it! If the points were stretched it was only to reach the hearts of the masses, and this was accomplished, giving at least one example where one could contend that the end justified the means.

64. Jacob remembers (Genesis 48:1-4)

by F. Lavender

A MESSENGER brought word to Joseph that Jacob was drawing near to the close of his life, so Joseph took his sons to see his father. As he talked with Joseph, Jacob returned in his mind to the night when he was at Luz. He was then a lonely, sad young man running away from his home for fear of his brother, yet in his loneliness he met Almighty God and the barren, desert place became Bethel, the House of God. He left Bethel with the promise of God ringing in his ears, the promise which he had since seen so amazingly fulfilled in his own family. He learned the infinitely precious lesson that God was not limited to place and time, but is present everywhere: "Surely the Lord is in this place and I did not know!"

Memory can be a very precious gift of God. We are enabled to recall the most joyful events. We also remember how we were distressed and troubled because of our sin; perhaps we were trying to run away from God and from the conviction of sin. Then, suddenly, we were brought face to face with the Lord and we began to see the beauty and to experience the power of Christ crucified. Our sin was cleansed, our lives were transformed, so that that day remains as our most precious memory. Like Jacob, we learned that the Lord is an ever-present Friend and that we are able to live day by day in the joy of His constant presence.

"As becometh holiness"

IT is not often that I write exclusively for women, but, prompted by a letter from one of Elim's veterans I feel impelled to bring to my readers this dear sister's plea for a new consecration in 1974. I quote from her letter: "Solemnly, I admit I am asking you, dear one, to express on your page, something that cuts very deeply, I feel, into the lives of the great majority of our Elim sisters, both young and alas the older group as well. Can we as women of God follow the trends of this corrupt age and feel that we can walk hand in hand with Him and be agreed?"

I think we should all be willing and humble enough to measure our lives by the standards of the Bible. Certainly the trends of this age appear to lead steadily downwards and it isn't always easy to withstand the pressures of opinion, fashion and the media. Therefore it will do us all good to restate the guidelines of Scripture. In one grand sweep, allegiance to the world is dismissed and we are commanded to prove that God's will is always best. I appreciate the rendering in the Amplified Bible of Romans 12:2: "Do not be conformed to this world — this age, fashioned after and adopted to its external, superficial customs. But be transformed (changed) by the (entire) renewal of your mind — by its new ideals and its new attitude".

In view of this verse we cannot, we dare not, slavishly follow the ways and fashions of this world. Even in the choice of clothes we should be careful and modest. The world of fashion lays such undue emphasis on sexiness and the glorification of the human body that its designs are not always becoming or suitable for a true Christian. Perhaps my conception of Biblical characters is too traditional and narrow, but for the life of me I cannot imagine the holy women of old with bare midriffs, embarrassingly short skirts and revealing necklines. The unisex garments trouble me also, for they seem to be the unwholesome product of women's lib, carried to extremes and I deplore the consequent lack of femininity when this mode of dress is worn.

The Mosaic law in all its detail is not binding on New Testament believers, but the Almighty God in His wisdom must have had a valid reason for the ruling of Deuteronomy 22:5: "The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth to the man, neither shall the man put on a woman's garment: for all that do so are an abomination to the Lord". If nothing else it is a warning against the perversions and outrageous dictates of fashions today. Praise be to God, the Bible is positive as well as negative in its precepts and 1 Peter 3:1-5 is relevant today. We women have no need to emulate all the latest fashions, for outward adornment does not impress the Lord. Instead we must put on that beautiful ornament Peter suggests, as the Amplified Bible puts it: "The unfading charm of a gentle and peaceful spirit which is very precious in the sight of God". So there it is, we must not conform in any way to this corrupt world.

C.T. Studd wrote concerning his decision to marry Priscilla Stewart:

"She said I wrote to her; I say she spoke to me, I do not say with her eyes, nor with her tongue — she was keeping that in reserve — she spoke with her acts. I did not marry her for her pretty face; I married her for her handsome actions towards the Lord Jesus Christ and those He sent her to save. In fact, I can well remember the afternoon when I was sitting, talking to a missionary in Taiyuen and he twitted me on being engaged to the prettiest girl in all Shanghai. Now that, I tell you in all truth, was an absolute shock to me, for certainly I had never thought of her pretty face. In fact, until this day I verily believe that of all God's many good gifts, the least of all is good looks".

The Sound of Music

by David G. Woodfield

ONE of the lessons which I have learned in life is that tastes in musical appreciation are as varied as the well known fifty-seven varieties of food! What is ecstasy to one person can be agony to another. My kind of music is not necessarily your kind! Perhaps "Come Together" is your scene, or maybe the rock sound of The Sheep or Larry Norman? Possibly Len Magee is your ideal or perhaps Cliff? One thing is for sure: your taste is probably different from mine!

Many young people are far more familiar with the Top Ten than they are with God's Top Ten. While Gary is still glittering and the Stones are still rolling, it is also true that all that glitters is not gold and you can only roll downhill. By the way, God's Top Ten can be found in Exodus 20.

Music can calm the mind, melt the eyes to tears, call back memories ("They're playing our tune"), create an atmosphere, stir the heart to courage. You may hate the bagpipes, but the Scots Guards will gladly march into combat behind the skirl of the pipes. Music arouses the emotions. It can bring out the best or the worst in people.

In the realm of communication, music is a powerful medium. The protest songs of recent years give evidence of this. Bob Dylan, for instance, is revered among the alternative society as a song-writer and singer who clearly expresses their feelings and beliefs. The explosion of the guitar on to the sixties' musical scene has provided an easy, popular means of communication. So has the transistor radio. After all, it's a bit difficult to sling a piano over your shoulder!

Christian music is a tremendous avenue for communicating Christ to people, but it is primarily a vehicle for praise and worship. It is said of Dr. Edwin Orr that when he first heard the Gospel song, "How Great Thou Art", he was so thrilled in his soul that he was unable to sleep and spent the night in prayer and praise. Pentecostal young people know how close heaven can seem when an anointed song or chorus lifts us up into the very presence of God.

The Elim Movement has always been associated with singing and music. Our choruses span the globe. Since 1929, the London Crusader Choir has consistently witnessed to thousands of people. Just recently the young people's choir of The City Temple, Bristol, have released an excellent record of their kind of music. Most of our churches have choirs and musical groups.

All this brings me to the point of this article. In this year of Crusader Jubilee, the National Youth Committee are sponsoring a "Talent Track Project". If your Crusaders have a singing group, a choir, a folk singer, an instrumental group, etc., then we want to hear from you. The idea is that you get together and record either on tape or cassette your kind of music and send in your entries by March 31st, 1974. The best overall contribution will earn for your Crusader Group a cassette tape-recorder. Runners-up will receive record tokens.

Successful entrants will be included on a special "Jubilee Youth Year Record" to be released by the Youth Committee in time for the General Conference in May, 1974.

Ask your Pastor for more details of this project or contact the writer of this article.

Hurry, we want to get you taped!

"From Jordan" (v.1).

WHEN Elisha, watched by the sons of the prophets, stepped from Jordan, it was a moment of miraculous demonstration (2 Kings 2:15). The parting of the waters at the touch of the mantle was ample proof of his double portion of the Holy Ghost, confirming the authority of the new prophet. Jesus, however, being full of the Holy Ghost, immediately faced forty days and nights of conflict with the enemy, covering every facet of temptation that we know: the lust of the flesh (that the stones be made bread); the lust of the eyes (all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them, vv. 5,6); the pride of life (to make a public demonstration from the Temple and prove that He had power over angels). The threefold answers from the mighty Son of God were chosen from the inspired Word of God: "It is written". The living Word is adequate to meet every situation.

Tuesday, February 12th

Luke 4:16-30

"As His custom was" (v.16).

THE Lord was faithful in synagogue attendance and in public reading of the Word of God. The dramatic moment of prophetic fulfilment had been preceded by consistent daily living, working, praying and witnessing. "The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me" (v.18). Samson said the same thing in moments of contact with the Almighty. David triumphed under the same anointing. Aaron experienced the special priestly anointing. Samson the saviour of Israel, David the king, Aaron the priest, all failed, but Jesus Christ came through the manifold fires of temptation unscathed, and went forth to deliver, heal and satisfy all who called on Him (v.30). The Nazarenes thrust Him out of their city to cast Him headlong over the brow of the hill. The enemy does not leave us for long. The baptism in the Spirit does not make us immune from temptation or trial.

Wednesday, February 13th

"His word was with power (authority)" (v.32).

THE written Word has power to penetrate, to burst forth like a seed. The spoken Word is powerful to the listening ear. The living Word, the Logos from heaven, was with heavenly authority and demanded obedience, like the breath of the living God. Demons acknowledged His authority (v.34). What Jesus did in the synagogue (v.33) He was also able to do in the home (v.38) and in open places, even at the close of day (v.40), when multitudes received deliverance and healing. When the sun of natural day was setting and losing power, the Sun of Righteousness indeed arose with healing in His wings (v.42). The desert place of quiet rest and meditation proved a necessity ere He went forth in His great outreach ministry to the needy of His day. We cannot talk to men about God until we have talked to God about men.

Thursday, February 14th

Luke 5:1-16

"He stood by the lake" (v.1).

THERE were many empty boats, but one became a pulpit for the Master (v.3). We must thrust out a little from land and listen to His promises before we thrust out in faith into the deep at His command. Despair is transformed to delight by His bountiful provision. It was a blessing that they had washed and prepared their nets (v.2) in anticipation of a better catch! The Lord always gives abundantly, as witness the overflowing boats, with enough and to spare for their neighbours (v.7). The glorious task of bringing in the blessings and reaping the harvest of the sea, demonstrated the authority of the Master. It was quickly followed by a united response to forsake all and follow Him (v.11). Fishing with men was good fellowship, but fishing for men was an excellent ministry. After the miraculous manifestation (v.15), once more came strategic withdrawal for prayer (v.16).

Friday, February 15th

"He saw their faith" (v.20).

THEY believed the power of God was present to heal (v.17). Their faith stirred to action, they brought the man sick of palsy, realising their personal responsibility, undeterred by hindering crowds or closed doors. Their friend's desperate need called for unorthodox methods. Breaking up the tiling, disturbing the meeting (which we all would have criticised), did not deter them or the Master from meeting this man's need. Power to forgive sins (vv.21-24) took priority over power to heal (v.17). The sick bed was no burden now; the man carried it aloft as personal testimony as he walked off in triumph, bringing glory to Jesus and satisfaction to the four friends. The cost of a few tiles and a few apologies to the house owner was trivial compared with the amazing transformation of the paralytic. A day full of criticism ended with an evening full of praise (v.26).

Saturday, February 16th

Luke 5:27-39

"A publican, named Levi" (v.27).

HIS priestly name did not fit his profession. We have a higher name to live up to than did Levi. Our daily testimony should commend that lovely name. Levi

Jesus is coming!

by A. R. Thomas, Pastor of our Hanley Church

THE true Church cannot forget the Second Advent, for the Lord's return is the only way to right the world. If I did not believe that Jesus would come again I would have no hope of this.

I would have to provide ethics for NOW and not ETERNITY. Jesus spoke with such solemn authority about His return that His disciples asked: "When and what shall be the sign of Thy coming?"

In reply Jesus made it clear that we can discern the times (Matthew 24 and Luke 21). Here are a few of the signs:

INCREASED KNOWLEDGE. We live in a time of knowledge explosion. One half of Man's knowledge has been gained in the last fifteen years. Research centres turn out 60,000,000 pages of technical information yearly. Ninety per cent of all scientists who ever lived are living today.

THE REBIRTH OF A NATION. Before His crucifixion Jesus predicted the destruction of Jerusalem and the captivity and dispersal of Israel into all nations and their return to their own land (Luke 21, 24). Israel was reborn in 1948, a modern miracle. The people had retained identity without a land. Says the psalmist: "When the Lord shall build up Zion, He shall appear in His glory".

WIDESPREAD REVIVAL. "It shall come to pass . . . that I will pour out My Spirit upon all flesh". An amazing outpouring of the Spirit is the religious phenomenon of our times, overleaping all denominational lines. There are new discoveries. Spirit-led young people have turned from materialism, war, drugs and empty philosophy, back to God, back to a living, spiritual change.

MORAL PERVERSION. Jesus predicted that the last days before His coming would be marked by the moral corruptions of Sodom and Gomorrah (Luke 17, 28 and 29). The sin of ancient Sodom is indicated in the word "sodomy" — homosexuality with its accompanying perversions. Rebellion against God's rule means that Christ's return is at hand.

WORLD EVANGELISATION. "The gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world, then shall the end come" (Matthew 24:14). The Scriptures have gone out in 1,400 languages. No major language in the world is without the gospel of God.

Spiritual campaigns have attracted thousands and young people declare that Jesus is ALIVE. In Korea,

New Zealand and in South America there are revivals and moves to God.

In less than ten minutes the Far East Broadcasting Corporation radio signals have travelled round the world seventy times through sixteen transmitters and in thirty-six languages and dialects, broadcasting to 1,700,000,000 people.

Films, television, telephones, radios are all new tools for proclaiming the Good News.

What hope has the world without Christ? He must return. These are just a few of the signs of His near return.

Why not ask Him to make you ready for when He comes or calls?

was affluent as he sat at the receipt of custom, but the sting of conscience and the look of disdain from his own people as he extracted more than the due tax from them made his seat uneasy. "Follow Me" — what a short sermon, but what possibilities and what a name! Levi left all and followed Him (v.28). Many leave all to follow some idea or powerful personality, but to leave all for Jesus is the greatest calling that anyone could have. Levi's great feast (v.29) was public testimony to his friends and recognition that from that day forward he did not serve under the Roman Eagle, but under the Lamb of God. Matthew (Levi) now took up his pen for God. What a mighty work he wrought in proclaiming Christ the King.

Sunday, February 17th

"Sabbath" (v.1)

THE cornfields would remind them of the promised harvest. The petty Pharisaical criticism concerning the eating of handfuls of corn was answered by the Lord. David broke the law in eating shewbread, but he reclaimed the sword of Goliath (1 Samuel 21:9) and removed the cloth of ceremony to use the sword in battle of the Lord.

What a tragedy when our right hand is powerless, even if we are in the House of God on the Lord's Day. The man stood up to identify himself with the call of Christ, then came the miracle — his hand was made whole as the other! Let us put our right hand in the hand of the One who is at the right hand of God. His hand can bless, comfort, uplift, strengthen and heal.

"THERE will be no power problems provided the weather is not too severe", said the Chairman of the Central Electricity Generating Board just before Christmas. "We will get all the Christmas mail there on time", said the Chairman of the G.P.O. at about the same time. Alas for human promises, we all know what actually happened, due, to be fair, to influences and actions beyond the control of the two corporations mentioned.

Since Christmas we have been faced with so many problems, like the oil, coal, electricity and transport difficulties. The whole mood seems to have changed with bewildering rapidity. Governmental promises that we were going to experience continual "You've never had it so good" emerged thick and fast. Now we are being rallied around the famous Dunkirk spirit, tighten your belts for the old country, lads.

It's all very worrying to the natural mind. Older people especially see the ogre of the 'thirties appearing again and one newspaper found a Tory M.P. who was born in Jarrow to write about his past history and urge us to avoid the conditions which produced all that the very word "Jarrow" raises in the minds of older folk.

When you add the Northern Ireland situation, you really do make for unease. Mr. Faulkner's pronouncements must deeply worry many in the Province.

What should the Christian's attitude be? First and foremost he should be concerned about the souls of men. Winning men for Christ is our priority. All that is involved in reaching the lost should occupy us and dominate our thinking.

We should also be examples of faith, courage and hope. Our future is the "glorious liberty of the children of God", for "we are saved by hope" (Romans 8:21,24).

We should also be on the side of righteousness, justice, honour, purity, peace and love. How the individual Christian applies these is up to his individual discipline and discipleship.

We have to give account, however, and we must care.

FUNDAMENTAL BELIEFS OF THE ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH — 1. THE BIBLE: We believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God and that none may add thereto or take away therefrom except at their peril. 2. THE TRINITY: We believe that the Godhead eternally exists in three persons: Father, Son and Holy Ghost and that these three are one God. 3. THE CHURCH: We believe that the Church consists of all persons who have been regenerated by the Holy Ghost and made new creatures in Christ Jesus. 4. THE SAVIOUR: We believe that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God and that through the death and risen power of Christ all who believe can be saved from the penalty and power of sin. 5. THE HEALER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Healer of the body and that all who will walk in obedience to His will can claim Divine Healing for their bodies. 6. THE BAPTISER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Baptiser in the Holy Ghost and that this Baptism with signs following is promised to every believer. 7. THE COMING KING: We believe in the personal and pre-millennial return of our Lord Jesus Christ to receive unto Himself the Church and afterwards to set up His Throne as King. 8. THE FRUIT: We believe that every believer on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour should produce the ninefold fruit of His Spirit: Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. 9. THE GIFTS: We believe that the Church should claim and manifest the nine Gifts of the Holy Spirit: Wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discernment, tongues, interpretation. 10. THE MINISTRY: We believe that God has given some apostles and some prophets and some evangelists and some pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry for the edifying of the Body of Christ. 11. THE FUTURE STATE: We believe in the eternal conscious bliss of all true believers in Christ and also in the eternal conscious punishment of all Christ rejectors. 12. THE ORDINANCES: We believe in the following ordinances: Partaking of bread and wine in memory of our Lord's death, baptism by immersion for believers, the laying on of hands and the anointing of the sick with oil.

Guyana
Ian MacInnes reports

AT Christmas 1973, 738 books and Bibles were given to Sunday school scholars who had good attendance at the various centres. It was a mammoth task sorting these out making sure that the books were suitable to age and size and not duplicated in cases of large families.

Our photo shows John MacInnes sorting the books and Gladys assisting in sticking in some of the presentation labels. It is a great pleasure to see many boys and girls proudly walking to Sunday school carrying their new Bibles. Pray that as they come week by week they will get to know its Author.

Another picture shows a young teenager at Dennis Street receiving his Bible at the presentation. This was preceded by a special Christmas programme by scholars and young people, which was well received and drew many outsiders. The gentleman making the presentation is Bro. Romao who is "only 82 years young" as he puts it. He is active and preaches regularly.

You also see a photograph of five young men singing to the glory of God at their Christmas programme. Most of these are converted Hindus.

EVESHAM

Pastor: J.R. Brown

WE look back over the past year and thank God for His blessing upon our work. The saints have been drawn together by the love of Jesus and our faith in Him has deepened. We have had our first water baptismal service and have paid visits to other churches to take part in testimony song and various other items.

We formed a small choir some months ago under the leadership of our church secretary and pianist, John A. Weir, and God has blessed their ministry for Him. On the Friday before Christmas we visited Long Lartin Prison, Evesham, to take part in a carol service. The prison chaplain expressed his appreciation of our offer of help in the work among the prisoners. One of the prisoners has since contacted us and asked for more information on Pentecost. The chaplain has asked that we go to the prison to take two more services with our Pastor as preacher on the first Sundays in March and April. We praise God for this opening for outreach and trust God for His anointing on all our work for Him.

Because thou hast heard, O my soul,
The sound of the trumpet, the alarm of war,
Destruction upon destruction is cried;

They are wise to do evil, but to do good they have no

by H. W. Greenway

AT times of national crisis men often reflect both on the historical scenes of years gone by or on apocalyptic visions of future days. The former can have a traumatic effect when history is related to the contemporary events, for as one has written, "History reveals a graveyard of the nations that have gone down to death through their own moral rottenness. Egypt, Babylon, and Rome are memorable examples of this".

No-one will deny that the world's perilous attempt to retain its balance on the precipice of disaster has had the human race trembling for its future security. The days in which we live are correlated to descriptions given in the Bible regarding our own generation and the work of the Holy Spirit. Peter declared on the Day of Pentecost, "And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God. I will pour out My Spirit upon all flesh: And your sons and your daughters shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams" (Acts 2:17). Dreams and visions, history and prophecy — old men want to talk about the past, while young men want to forge ahead into the future, always with the idea that their own ideals will shape a better world. It comes to pass therefore that among the irritating personalities who ruffle the placid conscience, none is so unpopular as the prophet of doom, be he a writer of Old Moore's Almanack or a sabre-rattling revolutionary with a hamper full of coloured shirts! These are the "doomwatchers" of the twentieth century, and with that epithet we shrug our shoulders, consoling ourselves that the little gesture of indifference will save us from impending disaster.

There have been people in every society who have made gloomy predictions about the future and who have been lampooned in their own particular age for their fearful predictions. Prophets who hold out false hopes are often applauded for their perception; prophets with a burden and a divine revelation are more often cast into dungeons. The school of the prophets of Baal who lured their wicked ruler by unanimous but incorrect forecasts of the results of battle (1 Kings 22) are not altogether disbanded. Indeed the simpletons of the village fair are still willing to cross with silver the palm of any pretending gypsy in order to get some indication of future prosperity, but a "Jeremiah" is looked at askance by our gay, do-your-own-thing generation. We note with interest that even the epithet "Jeremiah" has now given place to the language of the TV screen, and we have changed our terminology to a fictional "doomwatcher", which no doubt brings our words into line with modern thought, but in no way discounts the strident warnings that we hear from time to time. Even our announcers have a hang-dog expression as they read the latest miserable news items.

Few people could have realised that, within a matter of two or three days, the whole world pattern of history could have been changed by the deliberate action of a group of desert sheiks, yet this is exactly what did happen. The whole of western civilisation has been licking its wounds since the announcement was made that oil supplies were to be cut down. Even Britain, Sir Michael Clapham, President of the Confederation of British Industry warns us, is on the edge of a precipice, with mass unemployment and further devaluation of the pound waiting at the bottom. Sir Frederick Catherwood, former Director of the National Economic Development Council, forecasts 1½ million unemployed by this month. The Arabs have declared economic warfare and the world is shaken to its foundations. Precious little comfort can be found in the epicurean philosophy, "Let us eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow we die", for the dying part is the dark unknown.

For many years now, some Bible students have been pointing to certain prophecies that describe fearful days at the end of the dispensation in which we live, but their word has gone unheeded by the masses at large. All around are signs that fulfil predictions, some made hundreds and some made thousands of years ago, signs of deep significance because they are coming to their focal point within the very near future. If ever there was a time to incorporate within our gospel a warning note, it is in this crisis period through which we are passing, for, within but a few days, we were plunged from the bright lights of an affluent society into the twilight gloom of despondency. We need at the present hour to incorporate in our message the doomwatchers' warning of the drift to Armageddon.

The financial, economic, social, and moral collapse around us is but the prelude to universal conflict and divine retribution. A squeamish age may have turned its back on the principle of divine judgment, but it cannot close its eyes to the outworking of the scriptural decree that "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he reap". Soothing words of empty optimism are no panacea for our present ills. The time has come for all men to face the message of the Almighty. We cannot evade the consequences of our sins any more than could Adam who hid himself, or Ahab who disguised himself, or Judas who repented when it was too late, or Zedekiah King of Judah who tried to muzzle God's prophet by casting him into prison. Little wonder that prophets of the Old Testament often referred to the "burden of the Lord" pressing so heavily upon them. As seers they observed coming catastrophes with a concern that scarred deep into the conscience. "I am in derision daily", cries Jeremiah, "every one mocketh me. For since I spake, I cried out, I cried violence and spoil; Because the word of the Lord was made a reproach unto me, and a derision daily. Then I said, I will not make mention of Him, nor speak any more in His name. But His word was in mine heart as a burning fire shut up in my bones, And I was weary with forbearing, and I could not stay". Jeremiah's tears were no soda fountain of delight; bitter as Marah they flowed from deep emotional tides of grief as he sensed the period of his people nearing the vortex of impending tribulation. To deliver such a frightening message does not win the accolade of approval in a world devoted to its own annihilation. People prefer to hear the platitudes of the popular preacher, soothing words that lull the conscience. As long as spectators are able to watch from the side-lines the fiction-like drama of the age, they enjoy the thrill of the uncommitted, but real history has a more vital lesson to teach, frightful in its agonising portent.

During the intertestamental period of Jewish history, when God's people were subjected to intense pressures from Hellenistic forces, a number of writings known as "apocalypses" appeared. This literature possessed the same essential features as the Book of Revelation. The word "apocalypse" means the unveiling or revelation. Hugh Anderson writes of this growth of predictive utterances: "Apocalyptic contemplates world history as a struggle of warring forces, God and Satan, truth and error, light and darkness. God's contention with man and man's contention with sin, evil and death are projected on to a universal or cosmic canvas. So, in a world gripped by evil powers and principalities, God is pictured as about to intervene at last, to judge the wicked and to save His own faithful people".

The teaching of the second advent which gained ground among evangelicals some years ago suffered a setback during the period of affluence through which we passed, when we were told that "we never had it so good". Moreover, so much confusion developed owing to foolish interpretations of prophecy and the arguments of the various schools of thought, that many Bible students were discouraged from declaring what they had discovered in the Word of God regarding the last days of the dispensation of grace. But the rapidly changing pattern of world history, with events making clear again the statements in God's Word, point to the serious end of the age as it is envisaged in the vivid eschatology of the New Testament. Many signs within recent years and even months bring the dramatic climax near enough for us to feel the rumblings of universal destruction. Cynical though the world may be of this doctrine, its innuendos cannot erase the cold hard facts of a world gravitating to its own doom. Our very uncertainty and insecurity are evidences of the direction in which we are going: we are on a steep incline, descending in ever-accelerating pace towards an explosive consummation. Like the prodigal son of old, we have been guilty not only of squandering our finances, but also our morals, and we are coming at last to discover the high cost of low living. Our most valuable assets of honesty and good character have been scattered in a mad gallop on the road to hell.

An alert Church must give warning to its intemperate contemporaries that self-indulgence leads to boredom, and boredom is the progenitor of self-destroying devices. A recent article in a magazine reminds us that "while the Soviet Union is developing still larger nuclear weapons, some Western scientists are wrestling with another problem: How small can you make a nuclear bomb?" (Daily Telegraph Magazine). To which a well-known American comedian ironically commented: "The army has invented an atomic hand grenade. The only trouble is, a soldier can throw it twenty-five yards, but it makes a fifty yard crater"!

We ask ourselves, can a world that has lost its sense of decency and self-respect long survive against the dark satanic forces at present evident among us? Blasphemous contempt is the general attitude toward Christian morality. Mrs. Mary Whitehouse recently fled from the first public showing of the most revolting flim that she had ever seen. She said that she nearly passed out while watching the film, and added, "Anyone who gives a film like that a certificate for general distribution has had their sense of judgment totally corrupted". Another social worker, Mr. E. Shackleton, described a film showing at a London cinema as "a record of obscenities", and adds of some of the scenes, "Oen was. . .so gross and performed in such a way that 'very few human eyes have ever been called upon to look at it'". Nor is the BBC free from guilt in its dissemination of vulgarity and filth. Sir Gilbert Longden, M.P. for South-West Hertfordshire, told the Commons' standing committee dealing with the Cinematograph and Indecent Displays Bill, that he had heard of a recent play on BBC 1 in which a certain swear word was used forty times in addition to twenty-eight other offensive remarks.

The national and international problems grow apace in a society totally given up to the worship of Mammon. Money is the dominating feature of all discussions between nations and between management and labour, and all advantages are meanwhile lost in the very devaluation of the commodity men are fighting for. Israel's conflict with her neighbours has split the world into two camps, and, with America at one stage putting her nuclear forces at the alert, almost had the whole world engaged in a final death struggle.

It is the duty of the Christian Church so to present Christ that men will have no difficulty in finding the way of life, to declare His mercy so freely available to the vilest of sinners, and to reveal His love as the all-embracing fold into which faltering men can find forgiveness. But the final rejection of the divine appeal has serious consequences. The Christ of the Cross is also the Horseman of Revelation 19, who appears crowned with many crowns. "His name is called the Word of God . . . And out of His mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it He should smite the nations: and He shall rule them with a rod of iron: and He treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God".

We cannot be indifferent to the peril of our generation. We must not hesitate to declare the whole counsel of God. When Paul preached before Felix he "reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come" and Felix trembled. Dr. J.S. Stewart reminds us, "At every point in history where the Church of Christ has been carried on some wave of revival back to reality and self-consecration, thousands of men and women have discovered Paul, and have thrilled again to the music of his message."

Our voice must be heard with passion and compassion; for "The wicked are like the troubled sea, When it cannot rest, Whose waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace saith my God, to the wicked. CRY ALOUD, SPARE NOT, LIFT UP THY VOICE LIKE A TRUMPET, And shew My people their transgression" (Isaiah 57:20, 21; 58:1). "Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, That it cannot save; Neither His ear heavy, that it cannot hear" (Isaiah 59:1).

Stumbling block or Stepping-Stone?

by S. E. Petts

"No man put a stumbling block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way" (Romans 14:13).

IT is said of a master sculptor that he saw an angel in a rough-hewn block of stone that had been discarded by others as useless. The result of his perception and industry was a masterpiece.

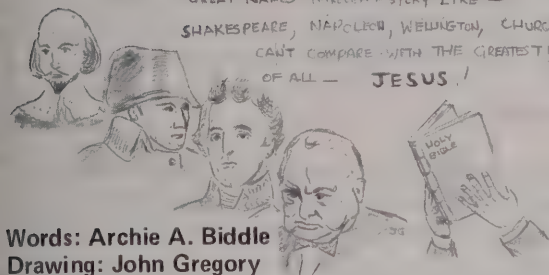

In one sense we are all sculptors. We are given a life to work on, to hew and to fashion into something worthwhile. Few may create a work of art, but we all have the opportunity to make a stepping-stone rather than a stumbling-block. God has made it clear that we are our brother's keeper, that it is our responsibility to lead him aright, not to cause him to fall. Our every word and action affect our neighbour for good or ill, to a greater or lesser degree. Every blow on the stone makes it more of a stepping-stone or more like a stumbling-block. The greater the impact the more effective it is for good or bad. The direction is all-important. We must get this right if our influence on others is to be to their benefit. If our eyes and intentions are upward and Godward our work will be helpful. The downward, selfward look will lead others astray; our lives will be stumbling-blocks.

The usual end of a stumbling-block is its removal from its place. So it will be with us unless our lives help others to climb towards God.

Heaven, by definition, can contain no stumbling-block.

Names

GREAT NAMES THROUGH HISTORY LIKE —
SHAKESPEARE, NAPOLÉON, WELLINGTON, CHURCHILL, CAN'T COMPARE WITH THE GREATEST NAME OF ALL — JESUS!

Words: Archie A. Biddle
Drawing: John Gregory

NAMES are important if only because they fit us for a life-time. We really are stuck with them. This is one reason why I feel sorry for some boys and girls whose parents gave them names which are so unusual that they will be made fun of for as long as they live. I read the other day about a BOY being called NORMA. I dread to think of what will be said to that boy when he goes to school and eventually goes to work! There are famous names like Shakespeare, Nelson, Wordsworth and Churchill. There are infamous names like Hitler, Quisling and Stalin. I have noticed that people will call their dogs Nero or Caesar, but no-one calls either dog or son Judas. This is most significant. The most popular names even in our day are David and Paul for boys and Mary and Elizabeth for girls. I do not need to remind you that they are Bible names.

Have you ever stopped to think of the name, "JESUS"? It is on the lips of more people today than ever before. We are told that when Jesus was born in Bethlehem, Jesus was quite a common name for boys, but no-one in our country calls his son by that name in our day. It is specially kept for HIM.

We always connect a name with what a person is or has done, or both. Think of it. One who was born nearly 2,000 years ago in a small town in a small, occupied country, is known today and is loved by millions of people of every nationality throughout the world. What is more, the most popular day of the year, Christmas Day, is the day when His birth is remembered and brings much joy all over the world.

The Bible tells us that He came to our world with a heart full of love. He lived in such a way that He is the greatest example of how to live and He died on the cross, yet, three days after, He rose again to save us from our sins and to set us free from their power. His name means "SAVIOUR" and He lives today to be just this for all who will ask Him to be so. Have you done it? If not then why not do it right now?

* * *

Here is a test of your knowledge of the names of some great people. I give you their Christian names and a clue and I want you to add their surnames:

- John, the tinker, author of a best-seller;
- John, the Scottish Reformer;
- John, the blind poet;
- John, the great evangelist;
- John, the forerunner;
- John, the great missionary.

Please write and let me know how many you have thought of.

Lord Elgin's Crime

by Basil Laws, (Cardiff)

FOR perfection of line and positions of loveliness, the Greek temples are unrivalled among all the monuments of men. When the Parthenon stood in its pristine glory, it was the pride of Greece and one of the principal centres of worship. Perfectly proportioned and superbly sited on the great natural rock platform of the Acropolis, all the glories of Greek architecture and the genius of her greatest artist, Pheidias, were devoted to ensure that the dwelling-place of the deity enshrined within was a delight to behold. With the passage of the years much of the former glory of the Parthenon has departed, human hands more than the rude hands of wind and weather playing a principal part in its defacement and decline.

The Elgin Marbles

In 1801, Lord Elgin, the British Ambassador to Turkey, brought a large part of the sculptural decorations of the Parthenon home to England. His action has been the occasion of considerable controversy and has called forth criticism and condemnation from the Greeks. The cry, "Give back the Elgin Marbles", is one which we have heard in our own day. Many Greeks consider Elgin a worthy companion to Herodotus, notorious for his destruction by fire of the famous Artemis temple in Ephesus.

Lord Elgin, who was intensely interested in art, was distressed and disturbed by Turkish disfigurement and destruction of Greek works of art, Greece at that time being part of the Turkish Empire. It was typical of Turkish contempt for these choice objects of art that priceless pieces of sculpture by Pheidias were pounded into mortar for outworks and outhouses or used for target practice by Turkish troops.

In company with England, Italy, France, and Denmark made their collections from the cultural treasures of the Parthenon. These were inevitably accompanied by glaring inconsistencies and incongruities. One of the marble maidens is divided between museums at the Acropolis and Lyons. The head of the Archaic Greek horseman lies at the Louvre, while the torso rests with other remains at the Acropolis in Athens. With such fretful features fresh in mind, Renan framed his famous Prayer on the Acropolis: "May we hasten, may we come in droves. What a wonderful day when all the cities that have taken pieces from your temple — Venice, Paris, London, Copenhagen — make good their plunder and form holy processions to carry back the fragments they possess and say, 'Forgive us, goddess. It was to save them from the evil spirits of the night', and rebuild your walls to the music of flutes".

Following his encounter with the Epicureans at the Areopagus in Athens, Paul possessed no brief to linger long in this centre of classical culture. After planting the Church in Corinth, his next major missionary assignment lay in Ephesus. This splendid city was the sinister centre in Asia Minor for the esoteric mysteries and occult sciences of oriental origin.

The apostle was no connoisseur of the fine arts as was Lord Elgin, nor did his interest lie in things rationalistic and rhetorical like Renan. As a "wise master-builder" his delight and duty lay in building and beautifying the temple of the Lord (1 Corinthians 3: 10). To this end he planned precisely, prayed passionately, and pioneered persistently, that in every principal province and populous part of Proconsular Asia, "holy processions" of happy people would return to rebuild the ruins of the habitation of the Most High.

This temple — her foundations fashioned in the aeons of eternity and with wondrous walls as clear as crystal — possesses such symmetry of form and significance of feature that the finest work of Pheidias on the fabulous Parthenon pales into insignificance before it, as the flickering candle fades before the flaming sun. As Dr. Handley Moule finely comments: "And the everlasting Father will perfectly reveal Himself to all the watchers of all the regions of the eternal world, not anyhow, but thus — in His glorified Church, in the Race, the Nature, once wrecked and ruined, but rebuilt into this splendour by His grace. In the Church of the Firstborn, in the Bride, the Lamb's Wife, the blessed Universe shall see for ever God present, God resident. A transfigured Creation shall be His temple-courts; a beautified human Church shall be His sanctuary".

With eager expectation Ernest Renan anticipated the eventual return of the matchless marbles to this marvellous monument made by human hands — the Parthenon of Athens — sacred shrine of the presence of Athene. Paul's preoccupation was not with cold dead marble, but with living, marbles carefully chosen and supremely sculptured by the Saviour's own hands to comprise a spiritual sanctuary for God in Christ. "Its result is to be not only a vast collection of chiselled marbles, but those marbles, each faultless in itself, constructed into a Temple, with its courts, and towers, and Holy Place" (Dr. H.C.G. Moule). These words by this famous divine furnish an appropriate commentary on J.B. Phillips' translation of Ephesians 2:21: "In Him, each separate piece of building, properly fitting into its neighbour, grows together into a temple consecrated to the Lord".

Another, entirely different, temple confronted Christ's apostle in Asia. Boldly basking in brilliant beauty at the head of the harbour, the temple of Diana was one of the seven wonders of the ancient world. It was 425 feet long, and 220 feet wide, with 127 columns (each one of them the gift of a king) standing sixty feet high. Luxuriously appointed and lavishly adorned, it differed from the Parthenon and Propylaea of Athens in its oriental opulence. National pride in this Ephesian edifice was such that, when Alexander the Great promised a fabulous fortune for the privilege of having his name inscribed on its portals, his gesture was politely declined.

When the Ephesians were searching for suitable stone for their sacred shrine, one of the rams of the shepherd Pixodorus broke off a piece of pure white marble from a projection on Mount Prion. With great joy he ran to his fellow-citizens to announce his dramatic discovery and was received with rapture by them. His name was changed to Evangelus ("giver of glad-tidings"), and divine honours were heaped upon him.

An epic Ministry

It was as an evangelist — the bearer of the glad tidings of the Gospel — that Paul entered Ephesus to exercise an effective ministry for his Master. Unlike the priests of Artemis, Paul the apostle did not minister in the splendours of a temple, but in "the school of Tyrannus" (Acts 19:9). Concerning these "daily discussions in the lecture-hall of Tyrannus", Professor F.F. Bruce points out: "The 'western text' adds 'from the fifth to the tenth hour', the midday recess when Tyrannus himself did not use his lecture-room". In the measured moments of this mundane meeting-place, all the acquired wealth and accumulated wisdom of Paul's learning were willingly poured forth in his exposition of the Word to the Ephesians.

Scripture is silent on the syllabus of this "school", but there seems little doubt that his teaching in the Epistle to the Ephesians elucidates and enucleates the doctrines that Paul had previously delivered to them. It was to the Ephesians, above all other churches, that he wrote freely and fully on truths on which he had hardly touched upon before. Chrysostom comments: "This Epistle is full to the brim of thoughts and doctrines sublime and momentous. For the things which scarcely anywhere else he utters, these he here makes manifest". These early Ephesian converts were privileged above many in enjoying the personal presence of this prince of preachers and doyen among divines for so prolonged a period as two years (Acts 19:10).

Paul had previously sought to enter Asia, but his attempted advance had at that time "been forbidden by the Holy Spirit" (Acts 16:6, Weymouth). Obedient as he was to divine direction, the initial frustration of his prior purpose was later to lead to one of infinite fulfilment. Paul's prolonged ministry in Ephesus had been preceded by and prepared for by the apostolic labours of Apollos, who was "mighty in the Scriptures" (Acts 18:24). When, at long last, Paul exclaimed concerning Ephesus, "A great and effectual door is opened unto me", he had been providentially prepared for the paramount part that he was to play in his commanding, crucial position as champion of Christ's cause in this cosmopolitan city. As Sir William Ramsay remarks, Paul was now superbly equipped by reason of solid experience and spiritual excellence to exploit the onerous opportunities of the open door at Ephesus: "All the resources of civilization, all the opportunities of life, were employed by him with ever-increasing skill and ever-widening experience to further his aims. . . During the latter part of his career it is evident in such cities as Ephesus and Troas it was no longer the local circumstances which moulded him, but he who employed the local circumstances for the advantage of his work. He used the opportunities of nature, the 'open door' with the genius of a great administrator".

Beneath the sophisticated surface of the city of Ephesus seethed a cauldron of pagan perversions. Dr. Campbell Morgan points out that it was in Ephesus that Paul became acutely aware of "the forces of the underworld of evil" which confront Christianity. To the Ephesians Paul wrote: "Ours is not a conflict with mere flesh and blood, but with the despotisms, the empires, the forces that control and govern this dark world — the spiritual hosts of evil arrayed against us in the heavenly warfare" (Ephesians 6:12, Weymouth). At Ephesus, the evils of paganism were present in all their preponderating power and familiar forms — charms, chicanery, craft, cruelty, covetousness and corruption — but, amid all the evils which dominated Ephesus another element was introduced, viz. the dynamic energy of the divine evangel before whose presence the powers of darkness fled in disarray and disorder — "So mightily grew the Word of the Lord, and prevailed" (Acts 19:20).

One of the principal objectives of Paul's ministry to the Ephesians was, in Renan's resounding words, "to save them from the evil spirits of the night". In

by T. Gordon Hills, Pastor of our High Wycombe Church

PRESENT-DAY members of Pentecostal Churches are as perplexed today concerning the glossolalia proceeding from the tongues of certain individuals and groups, as was the multitude who listened to those early disciples on the day of Pentecost and who enquired, "What meaneth this?". On the day of Pentecost the phenomenon was that people from different nations heard God glorified in their own languages by untutored, Spirit-baptised Christians, who were united in faith and doctrine. What a contrast to our own confused contemporary scene, where people who are divided on major fundamentals are attracting our attention by reason of their unusual utterances. From a platform of almost total disunity an alarming call is going forth from these Neo-Pentecostals, urging Christians to loosen their grasp of "divisive" doctrine and to express love by uniting under the canopy of an experience. It is hardly strange, therefore, that in this peculiar situation many "orthodox" Pentecostals are asking, "What meaneth this?". They are just as confused by what is occurring as were those visitors to Jerusalem centuries ago.

In our earnest desire to understand what is taking place, we who have been richly blessed by our heavenly Father must be careful not to manifest that bitter and jealous spirit of the elder brother (Luke 15:29, 30). How great indeed would be our sin if we sought to restrict the divine purposes. We rejoice in that God in mercy reaches out to all the world to save the lost and to pour out His Spirit upon all flesh. We thank God for every evidence of His work in bringing multitudes to realise that our Lord Jesus is the Baptiser in the Holy Spirit. Let it be said, too, that we are concerned that, while many believers in other fellowships are entering into their new-found liberty, so many traditional Pentecostals are content merely to affirm their now somewhat historic beliefs in the Holy Spirit. What a tragedy if we were left with only a name! God is under no special obligation to move among us because we grace our church buildings with a particular title. We must not denigrate the work of God among others, but we do need to exercise caution so that we are not influenced away from our sure foundations by others who are filled with exuberance and zeal.

Recently I listened to one itinerant charismatic preacher, who addressed a gathering of pastors and church leaders. As he amplified this trend of putting an undue emphasis upon the baptism in the Holy Spirit in relation to all the Counsel of God, we were informed about a Conference which he attended in an American city, with others engaged in a ministry similar to his own. The Conference was arranged because it was recognised that many of these charismatic preachers were visiting the same churches, but there was no uniformity in their teaching. The object was not that they should examine the Scripture in order that they might arrive at the truth, which all would communicate, but that they might understand their differences in order that they would not contradict one another! It was hardly surprising, therefore, to hear that he believed that "water baptism was not a symbol, as the majority of evangelicals teach; it is a life-changing experience". Nor was one amazed to hear that this particular "Protestant" (?) minister, who had joined in a public act of celebrating the mass with a catholic priest, firmly believed that he partook of the actual body and blood of Christ in communion. One was very disturbed to note that his theology met with no serious reaction from the assembled company. Could it be that our present generation is more interested in being entertained by listening to rare events rather than being concerned for truth? "What meaneth this?"

On the other side of the theological gulf (?), a charismatic Jesuit who, (to express it in his own words) is "involved in the catholic charismatic renewal at Loyola University in New Orleans" has written a guide to other charismatics in his own communion in what is most certainly pre-renewal theology. One thing we may be sure of and that is that Donald Gelpi, S.J. is not working hard to endear himself to us Pentecostals, whom he describes as an "anti-intellectual, hyper-emotional religious movement". This catholic Pentecostal warns his readers: "We must not allow the theological lacunae in the thinking of the Protestants we pray with to lead us into isolating Scripture as the only source of revelation. Nor must we be led into fundamentalistic interpretations of sacred texts". "Any signs and wonders which undermine faith in Him (Jesus), in the Church which He founded, in its sacramental system, or in its hierarchy cannot proceed from Him and from His Holy Spirit". It would seem very clear that, whatever kind of experience this son of the counter-reformation movement has had, it is certainly not going to alter his adherence to the doctrines which our Protestant forefathers stood so solidly against. One wonders at times who is being influenced the most by these current events. But let the last word be with Donald Gelpi, who, when commenting on a discussion he had with a colleague who was not in sympathy with his charismatic beliefs, wrote: "But to give the good priest due credit, he was sensitive to the serious incompatibilities which exist between classical Pentecostalism and sacramental piety". I wonder if we are as sensitive to the differences of truth and error and just as determined to maintain our stand!

BOOK REVIEWS

Christ in Bangladesh, by James and Marti Hefley. Published by Coverdale House Publishers Ltd., price 45p, postage and packing 8p extra.

RELIGIOUS riots, political tensions, famine and floods, all have been experienced by the people of the densely-populated areas of East Pakistan, now known as Bangladesh. What happened during the invasion by the West Pakistan armies in the Spring of 1971 by far exceeded anything that this land had endured before. Amid the holocaust of terror, agony, death and destruction, missionaries assisted by Bengali Christians remained at their posts although advised by their government embassies to leave. How in Christ's name they succoured the dying, fed the hungry, brought new life and hope to millions is told graphically in this book. How they suffered and were delivered from death and destruction on many occasions is also related. It is worthy of a place on your missionary bookshelf. It is informative and challenging!

David C. Lewis

The laughing Horses, by J.B. Donovan, a Kingfisher paperback. Published by Scripture Union, price 45p, postage and packing 7p extra.

SET in a remote village this Bill Speed detective story has plenty of action and mystery to suit boys in their middle teens. The Detective Inspector is confronted with problems of integrity (personal and otherwise) while gathering evidence to convict a man of master-minding prison escapes. Bill Speed seeks to show the criminal the error of his code of conduct as well as trying to convict him. The Christian message of this book would have made more impact if more direct, simple language had been used when speaking of the difference Christ makes.

All the Messianic Prophecies of the Bible, by Herbert Lockyer, published by Pickering & Inglis Ltd., price £3.20, postage and packing 27p extra.

THIS book is a welcome addition to Dr. Herbert Lockyer's comprehensive "All" series on Bible themes. He handles his theme with sympathy and understanding; his love both of his theme and of his Lord comes through. The book is expository, devotional and hortatory as well as immensely informative. The mass of references and comment will delight the reader who seeks to know the Bible and the Lord of the Bible. Young converts will find it to be a first class introduction to the Bible's prophecies of our Lord's First and Second Advents. It will be found to be an eminently readable book and its comprehensiveness is impressive.

J.T. Bradley

Prophet of the Myrtle Grove, by F.A. Tatford, published by Henry E. Walter Ltd., price £1.25, postage and packing 10p extra.

F.A. TATFORD takes his stand as he refers to the authenticity of Zechariah. The division of the book and the analysis are sensible and logical. References to other Scriptures and frequent comparisons elucidate statements, as does his vast knowledge of dates and references to them. I like the gracious way in which he deals with theories raised by modernistic teaching and pointedly refers to Scriptural revelations that give light on controversial aspects of prophecy. The writer does not merely reveal the cold facts of prophecy, but the warmth of spiritual application and interpretation of the Word.

This is not a book that can be read lightly. It needs to be studied carefully. I recommend it to those who are interested in delving into prophecy regarding Israel, especially in the light of world events today.

Points for Preachers

by J. Alexander Wright

An Outline

"Manifold"

("Many-hued": Dr. G. Campbell Morgan)

1. Manifold Works (Psalms 104:24). As the rainbow includes all the primary colours, so the gorgeous variety of nature, crowned by the creation of man in His image, mirrors the glory of God (Psalms 19).

2. Manifold Temptations (1 Peter 1:16). Interesting how men attach the idea of colour to abstract qualities. The yellow of cowardice, white of fear, pink of shame, scarlet of guilt, red of anger, purple of indignation, green of envy, black of hatred, and grey of despair.

3. Manifold Grace (1 Peter 4:10). 'O the Grace of God is boundless'. There is grace to match every hue of trial.

4. Manifold Wisdom (Ephesians 3:10). (lit. 'many manifold'). 'The many-sided wisdom of God in all its infinite variety'. AMP. What a theme for a preacher, v.9.

An Incident

When the Infidel commended the Preacher

WHEN the great Dr. Joseph Parker of the City Temple, London, went to his first pastorate in Banbury at twenty-four years of age, the outstanding secularist lecturer, G.J. Holyoake, came to the town to address a gathering. He invited questions and discussion to follow. Challenged by the young Parker, he in turn asked him, "What did Providence for the martyr Stephen when he was being stoned to death?". "How to answer I did not know", said Parker, "for the case seemed wholly against a Divine Providence. As things are commonly interpreted it was perfectly clear that Providence took no part in the protection of Stephen. How then could I reply to my acute and eloquent opponent? I frankly say that I followed the example of Nehemiah and "prayed to the God of heaven". The answer was not mine. In my heart of hearts I believe that in the same hour I was told by the Holy Spirit what to say, and it was this: "In that moment of suffering helplessness God enabled Stephen to pray, 'Lord, lay not this sin to their charge'. That's what the Almighty did for Stephen".

Again and again during these forty years I have looked at that reply and I endorse it now as the sublimest answer that God Himself gave to the superficial and impious criticism of unbelieving men.

The answer had an electrical effect on the audience and in a large degree settled the issue of the debate. Mr. Holyoake was most courteous. He advised some of his followers to hear me preach, with the result that some of them became members of the church of which I was the pastor.

65. Jacob prophesies (Genesis 48:13-22)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

WHEN Joseph took his two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, to see his dying father, it must have been at Jacob's wish, for it was concerned with Jacob's vision of future events. Jacob first made a definite, solemn claim that the two boys should be regarded as his own sons, and then foretold their prominence in the tribes of Israel. In his look into the future, however, Jacob revealed that Ephraim the younger son would take precedence over Manasseh. This is exactly what happened. Jacob's words were not the result of natural wisdom, but were a divine revelation to him. Jacob was not responsible for Ephraim being given pre-eminence; the choice was the Lord's. Jacob merely declared His Word.

The prophets were not a type of superhuman being, but were simply quite ordinary people who lived in close touch with the Lord (James 5:17). They neither made history nor shaped the future by their words. Jesus is the Lord of history (Hebrews 1:2: "through whom He made the ages", Young, Weymouth); the prophets only spoke His words (1 Peter 1:10-12).

In our day, the Lord still speaks His Word, makes known His will and declares His purposes so that individuals, churches and nations can know what is right and what honours Him. Such revelations will be declared by those who love His Word, know the leading of His Spirit, obey Him implicitly and honour Him more than they fear men.

Out of the Depths

"THE crew of the stricken timber ship Prosperity would have lived if they had stayed with the vessel after her engines broke down in mountainous seas. Instead they abandoned ship and yesterday sixteen bodies were found floating in the sea. 'If they'd stayed aboard we could have picked them off from there this morning,' said Mr. Guy Blampied, president of the R.N.L.I. Guernsey Branch". I read this news item on the morning of January 18th and my mind went back to my summer holiday and to the then peaceful, sunlit bay on Guernsey's west coast. Now it was the grave of a 2,000 ton Cypriot ship, broken in two on a cruel reef. I reflected on the pleasant afternoon that my husband and I spent watching the colourful exhibits at the Battle of Flowers spectacular and on the pride shown and the applause given to a splendid model of Guernsey's newest life-boat effecting a dramatic rescue.

The Arun, built by William Osborne Ltd. at Littlehampton on the banks of the river from which she takes her name, is the very latest type of life-boat for the R.N.L.I. and cost £78,000. She is self-righting. Within hours of her arrival in Guernsey in October, 1972, she dashed off to rescue the crew of a French fishing craft wedged firmly on a notorious group of rocks twenty-five miles south of the island and filling with water. How tragic that those from the Prosperity who perished, did so because they trusted in its inadequate life-boat instead of relying on the efficient services of the purpose built Arun, already geared to effect a rescue.

Many sincerely religious people rely on their own efforts and escape-mechanism to take them safely through the hazards of life and death. Thoughtful, conscientious people work out what they hope will be a satisfactory code of conduct for this life and beyond, yet they ignore the authority of the Expert with all His knowledge and experience. He said to Israel, "I, even I am the Lord; and beside Me there is no Saviour" (Isaiah 43:11). In these days when so many lives are facing shipwreck and others cling to only a flimsy hope of heaven, can we have security in life's stormy seas? The Bible makes it abundantly clear that through faith in Him alone, we can.

In Psalm 130 the writer gives a graphic pen picture of his deliverance from his troubles when he says that he cried to the Lord out of the "depths". Such an expression is often used to describe the sea, so that I do not think I am stretching the point when I suggest that here is the thought of a man in danger of sinking in the boisterous sea of life, crying out for help. When the sense of guilt overwhelmed his soul, the psalmist did not try to justify himself or earn merit with God, but cried, "There is forgiveness with Thee". To God alone he looked for deliverance; what a wise man! Yet how loathe many folk are to trust God entirely for the saving of their souls and blessed security both in this life and the next. My theology and my logic may be simple, but I know that they bring results and many a storm-tossed soul has found refuge when, in desperation, the words of Charles Wesley's immortal hymn have become an earnest prayer: "Jesus, Lover of my soul, Let me to Thy bosom fly, While the nearer waters roll, While the tempest still is high".

If you will pray this prayer, or use the words of Psalm 130, God will answer you and your experience will be akin to that described in this little poem.

*Adrift on the waters, so dark and so cold,
Afar from the beautiful city of gold,
A vessel is sinking, for heavy the gale,
The cable is broken, and tattered each sail.*

*O, I was a sinner alone on the sea!
But love's blessed signals were floating for me;
Tho' thunders were rolling and billows at strife,
Lo, Jesus was calling, "Escape for thy life".*

*I stepped in the life-boat provided for me
And Jesus my Pilot, my Captain will be;
His bosom my refuge; my haven of rest,
I'm rescued from shipwreck, so happy and blest.*

this city of magic and mystery, mighty miracles were manifested by the hands of Paul. "People even carried away towels or aprons he had used, and at their touch sick folk were freed from their diseases and evil spirits came out of them" (Acts 19:12, Moffatt). As the machinations of Satan were met and mastered by the Spirit, "many of those who had practised magic brought their books together and burned them in the presence of everyone" (Acts 19:19, TEV).

An eventful Meeting

As the Ephesians embraced the evangel in "the explosive power of a new affection", many other inhabitants of the city were incensed. After the address by Demetrius, the demagogue to the craftsmen of the city, Paul and his companions were charged with sacrilege — Lord Elgin's crime! Only with much difficulty was "the city clerk able to calm the crowd" and restore some semblance of order to the riotous assembly (Acts 19:35, TEV). Paul's meetings were invariably interesting, but this Ephesian "meeting" was even more eventual than most!

Sir William Ramsay points out that the "Asiarchs of Asia", who were kindly disposed towards him, were instrumental in saving him from the savagery of the mob (Acts 19:31, RV margin). He writes: "The Asiarchs, all men of the highest standing, representing the educated pagan world, had taken a lively interest in saving him from danger: they were, as a rule, men who had held other municipal priesthoods before attaining the supreme priestly office, and it was one of the strangely ironical facts of the whole situation that the priests should help the man who was most bent on destroying their ritual".

Paul had one great interest in common with Lord Elgin — a love of beauty — but, while Lord Elgin centred his interest on objects of physical beauty, Paul concentrated his gaze on and consecrated his genius to the promotion and perfecting of spiritual beauty. Henry Ward Beecher observed that, as Paul travelled through the cities and countries of Europe and Asia, he was oblivious to the many beautiful objects of art which confronted him continually "and never by a line referred to any one of them". Dr. Joseph Parker puts it a little differently: "There was no scenery to Paul; there was no geography; there was nothing but lost humanity and the Redeeming Cross of Christ". In one sentence, this prince of the pulpit sums up the singular purpose and supreme passion which marked and motivated the mighty ministry of this master missionary to myriads of mankind.

EVALUATE THE PURPOSE. EVERY service should have a specific purpose. Is it Bible knowledge? Is it challenge? Is it evangelistic? Seek to be clear in your mind as to the motive for the meeting. It must be more than just filling up a programme or providing spiritual entertainment. What will be its effect in eternal values?

GIVE PLENTY OF TIME TO PARTICIPANTS. Those taking part in your programme should know at least two weeks beforehand, preferably longer. If they are only asked on Sunday to speak on the following Wednesday, it will mean their missing the prayer meeting in order to prepare. It is fair and right to plan well in advance.

BRING IN LESSER KNOWN PERSONALITIES. There is a great danger that we fall into the trap of using the same ones all the time. It is easy to have a filing system, so that one knows at a glance what each person has done over previous months. It is surprising what latent talent one has among the Crusaders. It adds variety, provides involvement, creates interest and encourages people when they are given something to do for Jesus.

SEEK FROM THE OUTSET THE SPIRIT'S ANOINTING. Jesus said, "The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me, for He hath anointed Me". When you plan your programme, seek His guidance. When you have your programme, seek His blessing. When your programme is concluded, give Him the glory.

REALISE PART OF A SERIES. Do not try to cover everything in one meeting. Here is the value of having a programme planned out for at least three months in advance. Seek to cover the various aspects of the Christian life in the general programme. If one tries to cover everything in one programme, one ends by doing justice to nothing. So have a committee under the chairmanship of the Pastor and plan well ahead.

INTRODUCE A NEW ITEM. Variety is the spice of life and a nice new idea will prove beneficial to all. There are many books with many suggestions. You might like to think up some new approaches yourself. This avoids monotony, gives zest, and awakens interest. There are many types of quizzes and other ideas which stimulate participation. Visit your Bible bookshop, get a catalogue, and try something new. A rut is as bad as a grave.

CHECK THE DAY BEFORE THAT THE MAIN PARTICIPANTS ARE COMING. A service can fall flat if the main speaker doesn't turn up; it might be illness or it might be nerves, but check thoroughly beforehand. If you discover that someone will be missing, you can be ready to introduce something in his place. If someone is feeling nervous, encourage them and assure them of your prayers and help.

CONSIDER THE AGE GROUPS WHO WILL LISTEN. Most Crusader fellowships cover a fairly wide age range. See that there is something for all in your programme. You should aim to be not too simple or light so that the older ones feel that it is a waste of time, not too heavy and intellectual so that the younger teens lose interest.

MAKE SURE IT IS BIBLE-BASED. The whole programme, whether musical, speaking or quizzes, should be centred around the Word of God. Never try to replace God's Word with gimmicks. God always honours His Word. We can be assured of His help if we base our whole programme around and on the Scriptures.

SHOW APPRECIATION TO THOSE WHO HAVE TAKEN PART. Thank the ones who have made contributions to the service. Encourage those who have taken part for the first time. Some are afraid of praising others in case the recipients get swollen heads. More people die of broken hearts than swollen heads. A few sincere words of appreciation can encourage folk in the way.

"Into a mountain to pray" (v.12).

JESUS spent the whole night on the mountain top in prayer as He sought heavenly confirmation of the men whom He would choose. Did He spend one hour praying over each one? These twelve men, with their varying personalities, would soon become the leaders of His Church. He knew that most would be martyred for love of their Lord.

Christ has chosen us to be His ambassadors to our generation. We serve under His banner, His name, His authority. The world would have scorned the Lord's choice and would have chosen men of high rank or educational achievement. We are not chosen because of our natural talents, but according to His wisdom, grace and purpose. Note the rewards of the blessed (vv.20-23). Yours are the kingdom, the joy, the riches, finally the reward in His presence. When the king calls home His ambassadors they will be like Him.

Tuesday, February 19th

"Give, and it shall be given unto you" (v.38).

THIS refers not only to cash, but to love for our enemies, to blessing those who curse us. Give time to pray for those who spitefully use us, turn the other cheek, go the other mile, give the other coat (vv.27-37). Give out mercy, forgiveness. Christ gave all that He had for love of the Church. Abraham gave in principle to Melchizedek. Mary gave her box of ointment as an act of worship and gratitude. The widow gave all in secret and in faith, and left no reserves. Zacchaeus gave with the new joy of salvation. Barnabas gave for the whole Church of God. Do not give ignorantly, without enquiry as to purpose, impulsively, when momentarily stirred by emotion, calculatingly, hoping for return profits, sparingly, or grudgingly, but cheerfully, bountifully, graciously and sacrificially unto HIM, offering the sacrifice of praise from our lips. Then we shall receive good measure, pressed down, shaken together, and running over (v.38) from our abundant Lord.

Wednesday, February 20th

"The mote that is in thine eye" (v.42).

WE are more concerned with casting out the sawdust in our brother's eye, than removing the plank from our own. Spurgeon gave this advice: "When you hear an ill report of anyone, halve it, then quarter it, then say nothing about the rest". Our vision must be unimpaired by any 'foreign body'; then we shall see clearly to view our brethren. Good vision will mean the right focus on the most important things of the day. The perpendicular aperture in the eye of a cat meets the need for the upward look to birds in trees and of the quick downward look for mice in fields. The rabbit and hare have eyes well set back with horizontal slots for quick glances behind and panoramic views of the plain or field. The Lord of the Churches (Revelation 3:18) suggests that we use heavenly eye-salve to anoint our eyes and then like Abraham we shall look upward to the stars of promise and around to the sands of the seashore, and find them all numberless as the blessings which we receive from the God of all grace.

Thursday, February 21st

Luke 7:1-10

"He entered into Capernaum" (v.1).

CAPERNAUM'S inhabitants received great condemnation from Christ for their unbelief, despite His mighty wonders in their midst. Called "His own city" (Matthew 9:1), today the ruins of this once strong city bear witness to the prophetic word of the Master who warned of its doom. "A certain centurion" (v.2) – it took an outsider to demonstrate his love for a mere servant and to send the elders of the Jews to Jesus requesting healing for his sick servant. The centurion had shown his love for the Jewish nation by building a synagogue, yet he counted himself unworthy to meet Christ or that the Lord should enter his house. "Say in a word, and my servant shall be healed" (v.7). Jesus marvelled (v.9) at such faith in His Word; He had not found its equal in all Israel. Prayer and request by proxy proved implicit faith in the Lord's power to accomplish anything by His spoken word according to His Will. The healing of the servant (v.19) was not a postscript, but an expected outcome of faith in Him.

Friday, February 22nd

"The gate of the city" (v.12).

THE interrupted funeral at the city gates was a dynamic demonstration that Christ was the resurrection and the life. The gates of death had opened to this only son of a widow. Now the city gates were opened to show sympathy and respect as the crowds paid homage. Elijah met a widow at the city gates. Her cottage had seen a daily miracle as the handful of meal in a barrel and a little oil in a cruse were replenished for the needs of the day, but a greater than Elijah was here (v.16). God visited His people. Many rejoiced in such miracles, (who more than the widow's son now restored to life?) but John the Baptist had a problem as he sat chained in prison. He received a direct answer to his question

The Minister and His Books

by A. S. F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

GOOD books are of greater value than bank notes. We thank God for the Bible, the Book of books.

Father's Will. A very godly old man was walking to the house of God with his Bible in his hand. He was met by a friend who greeted him with, "Good morning!". "Ah, good morning", he replied. "I am just reading my father's will as I walk along". "Well, what has he left you?", said his friend. "Why, he has bequeathed me a hundredfold more in this life and in the world to come life everlasting", was the answer. This beautiful reply was the means of comforting his Christian friend who was at the time in sorrowful circumstances.

It is good to remember for what purpose we were born. Look at life right through to its end and consider, when the end comes, in what you will put your trust. Bishop Watson writes, "Not in bubble or worldly variety; it will be broken. Not in worldly pleasures; they will be gone. Not in great connections; they cannot save you. Not in wealth; you cannot take it with you. Not in rank; in the grave there is no distinction. Not in the recollection of a life spent in the giddy conformity to the silly fashions of a thoughtless and wicked generation. But in that of a life spent soberly, righteously and godly in this present world".

It's not like the old days. It was Alheine who wrote, "Do not despise present blessings because they seem to be inferior to those of the past, or those you hope to receive in the future, which you may never enjoy. True humility is to despise one's self, to despise no-one, and to care little about being despised".

"Humility is the greatest, the most essential beauty of all created beings. To be conscious of our littleness and to delight and triumph in that God makes us what we are, is indeed not only beauty, but also the bliss of creatures," so writes Howells.

I remind you of the words of Chrysostom; I believe they are words of great wisdom: "Those who live on the smiles of their fellow-men will often go supperless to bed, but he who lives on the smiles of his God will always have a rich repast".

There are many who cleave to the Lord in adversity, but who forget Him in prosperity. If we were half as earnest in trying to win souls as Satan is in seeking to destroy them, we should oftener succeed.

Holy Scripture is a garden and also a paradise; it abounds in flowers which not only yield fragrance, but which also bear fruit for the nourishing of the soul.

to Jesus (v.20). He cast out demons, healed plagues, restored sight to the blind. John was content to fulfil his own words: "He must increase, I must decrease".

Saturday, February 23rd

Luke 7:24-35

"There is not a greater prophet" (v.28).

THE greatest tribute paid to John was this wonderful recognition from Jesus that John had fulfilled the ministry of the last prophet of the dispensation of the law. This burning, shining light was illuminated by the truth and convicted his hearers. No soft tongue, no soft raiment was his; he was full of the Holy Spirit from childhood until he was brutally martyred for preaching the truth. This son of a priest, with his Elijah-like ministry, fought a good fight and witnessed a good confession. Herod was to prove that to behead a preacher of the gospel did not silence his message, for he was haunted by this action for the rest of his life. The converts of John became the disciples of Jesus and lived to proclaim John's message more fully.

Sunday, February 24th

"I have somewhat to say unto thee" (v.40).

SIMON the Pharisee was rebuked for what he did not do; no water for the Master's feet, no official welcome, no oil on His head, no kiss of affection, no place of honour at the feast. Simon's thoughts were occupied with criticising the sinner woman who did more than he should have done. Recall the beach gathering when Simon Peter had a special sermonette from the resurrected Lord: "Lovest thou Me?". Job gave all chapter 31 to a personal inquisition as to the possibility of sin in his life in any sphere. Paul esteemed himself less than the least of saints, least of the apostles and chiefest of sinners. It is better to rebuke ourselves than to come under divine scrutiny to be reproved by the Lord of glory.

A brother beloved, Pastor W.J. Hilliard, called home.

by James T. Bradley, Secretary-General

PASTOR Hilliard, called home to be with the Lord during the night of Monday-Tuesday, February 4th-5th, had served his Lord in our beloved Elim work for forty-six years. Ministers and members alike will give thanks to God for him and for every remembrance of him. Churches which he so faithfully pastored throughout the British Isles testify to his pastoral care. When Pastor Hilliard was appointed to a church it was known that it would be well cared for. No considerations of personal comfort, gain, position, applause or ambition ever came between him and the people he was appointed to minister to, or were allowed to stand in the way of his fulfilling to the utmost his call to the ministry.

Pastor Hilliard was a man who was conscious of the responsibility the Divine call brought, and all he was and had were dedicated to its fulfilment. He was testified to everywhere as a faithful visitor, not sparing himself in the carrying out of this important pastoral duty. He was a true shepherd who cared not for himself, but only for his people.

With Pastor Hilliard in charge of a church we knew it would be wisely guided, problems would be handled tactfully, and solved with a minimum of disturbance. He was a man easy to approach, who got on well with people and one with whom people got on well; and he passed the true test of pastoral oversight in that he enabled people to get on with each other.

The confidence reposed in him was reflected in his appointments: Belfast (Melbourne Street), Sheffield, Swansea, Bradford, York, Springbourne, Greenock, Halifax, Ipswich and then, following his retirement, Kirkintilloch.

His colleagues also showed their confidence in him by electing him District Superintendent three times, in Scotland, the North East Presbytery, and the Bournemouth and District Presbytery. The Conference also acknowledged its regard for him when they made him President in 1963.

He was a man of prayer, modest, self-effacing, retiring, gracious; one who did not look for plaudits in this life — but we believe he is now receiving them in the life above.

In his later years our brother became physically unfit, but in spite of much pain and weakness he, with real courage, overcame his sufferings and continued with his pastoral work even after his retirement; we could not help but admire the courage which he showed, a true outworking of what William J. Hilliard really was.

As a movement we thank God for his presence among us. Churches will revere his memory and thank God for his gracious ministry; ministers will thank God that he was sent among us as an example for us to follow.

The prayers and sympathies of all our readers will go out for his dear widow who was so faithful a helpmeet to her husband in all his work, and to their son Stephen and their daughter Anna and her husband. May God bless and keep them in His love and care.

Face to face, oh blissful moment!

Face to face — to see and know!

*Face to face with my Redeemer,
Jesus Christ who loves me so.*

The hymn, of which this is a verse, was sung at the funeral service, truly expresses his and our eternal hope.

COLWYN BAY

Pastor: D.C. Lewis

THE church was full to capacity for our carol service, many parents being present for the first time (see front cover) and most of the Sunday school scholars taking part. At the end of the service we had the great joy of seeing eight souls accept Jesus as their Saviour, two adults and six scholars, one coming from a Mormon home. Just after Christmas we held our annual party; a very enjoyable time was had by all, Father Christmas making a belated but very welcome appearance. We give thanks to God for the blessings of the past year and make our motto: "More and More in 1974 for Christ".

DARLINGTON

Pastor: G.J. Fearn

OCTOBER, 1973 saw the formation of a play group at our Church after much prayer and exercise of faith. It has proved to be immensely successful. Recently we obtained chairs and other items free of charge from the education authorities. The play group children took part in the children's Christmas display and their singing of carols was much appreciated. This had the effect of bringing their parents to church. We are sure that the Lord will greatly bless this effort.

We had a most inspiring visit from Mrs. Carol Horner, telling in a most effective way of the Lord's healing and keeping power. The church was quite full and everyone enjoyed the simple but very powerful message. A divine healing service was held and a number went forward to be anointed and prayed for. The writer had been troubled for years with rheumatoid arthritis in the right foot, receiving no benefit from six months' treatment, but, after anointing and prayer he was completely healed and has had no trouble since. The Lord be praised!

Young people from our church went to Marrick Priory, Swaledale, Yorkshire for a weekend retreat. The weekend consisted of seminars led by Pastor David Rivers of Richmond Assembly of God Church. He gave four inspiring addresses. Prayer meetings and epilogues were conducted by the young people. Time was given for a certain amount of recreation. All who attended received much blessing and were brought nearer to the Lord. During the weekend one young man made a decision for Christ. The weekend ended with the question, "When can we go again?" At our Sunday evening service, several young people told of their experiences and praised God for His blessings.

PASTOR L.E. Lambert was with us for the opening of our New Year Convention. From the outset his ministry gave us a much-needed uplift in these days of trouble and set a pattern that was maintained throughout. About 125 gathered for our watchnight service. After the customary break for tea as we entered the new year, we enjoyed a relaxed, lively time of fellowship which proved that there are so many ways of praising the Lord. At 2.30 a.m. not all would admit to being tired, but the arrival of the bus to take us home brought things to a close.

That evening, before returning home, Pastor Lambert shared the pulpit with our second speaker, Pastor J.H. Dick, who joined us for the remaining three days of the convention. His messages of challenge and encouragement were welcomed among his many friends in this, his home church.

A young man found salvation in the dying minutes of the old year. We were all enriched by the ministry in song and word and we renewed friendships that made us glad to be of the one family. God's gifts of salvation and the baptism in the Holy Spirit visited our church. All in all these were days of blessedness to be remembered and we thank God for them.

THE distribution of food parcels to local elderly folk and people in need has become an accepted part of the Christmas activities of our Junior Church and youth work.

In October the children begin bringing items of food to Junior Church. These include such things as tea, sugar, tinned soup, fruit, vegetables and Christmas puddings. These are made up into parcels two weeks before Christmas. This year over 250 items were given and twenty-five parcels were sent out. On the Sunday before Christmas the children went out in groups with their teachers delivering parcels, singing a carol and praying in each home before leaving.

They came back with heart-warming stories which make us realise what a wonderful opportunity this ministry is for spreading the love of Jesus. One group of children and their teacher came back after finding an elderly lady ill in bed. The teacher had told her how Jesus could heal her and together with the children he prayed around the bedside. Another lady, in bed with a broken ankle, was overcome by the kindness shown to her and promised to come to the church as soon as she is able.

One elderly person wrote to the Junior Church children: "I want to thank you for your visit and parcel of good things. I appreciate it very much. Your card was so nice and you all looked so happy. I have not had a visit like that before and the little prayer did me good".

There is so much selfishness and greed in our modern world that we feel it is good for our children to be actively involved in a ministry such as this, not only to be doing good works, but to be doing them in the name of Jesus, and as a means of showing people by caring about them that Jesus cares so much more.

Pastor: A.O. Johnson

WE rejoice in the blessing of God during our Pastor's first anniversary weekend, under the ministry of Pastors R.C. Stacey and P.N. MacInnes.

Looking back over the year we have seen souls coming to know Christ as Saviour and the saints fed on the finest wheat under the ministry of our Pastor. We give thanks and praise to our Lord for all that He has done.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA

Pastor: A. Nicolson

THE business meeting was preceded by a fellowship dinner. The Secretary (Mr. D. Davenport) gave a report illustrated by colour slides. He told of God's goodness and blessing through another year. Mr. Durston, a member of many years standing, was presented with an outsize birthday card signed by all the members and a cake to celebrate his ninetieth birthday. "God is good", was his testimony.

A buffet supper welcomed Miss Catherine Picken home from Rhodesia. It provided a good opportunity for members, especially new ones, to meet and to talk with her in an informal atmosphere. The evening concluded with slides showing the work among the scholars of the Emmanuel Secondary School and in the Sunday School at Katatene. On the following Sunday Miss Picken addressed our Sunday school and gave out their Christmas gifts. She also spoke at the Sisterhood and the Crusader youth clubs during her stay. Miss Picken's visit was brief, as she came largely to see her aged mother and she is already back in Inyanga.

A tape and carol ministry organised by Mr. H. Hylton (Church Treasurer) was much appreciated during the Christmas season by the many elderly and shut-ins. Thank God for the variety of ministries He sees fit to use.

SHEFFIELD

Pastor: A. Brooks

OUR brethren's weekend coincided with the commencement of the fuel crisis. The meetings were very well attended. The singing, testimonies, convening and preaching were all under the anointing of the Holy Spirit.

Later seven people were baptised in water. Pastor Brooks spoke on baptism. The congregation was thrilled when our Pastor made an appeal for others to come forward to go through the waters and two ladies responded, making nine people baptised that night. Each candidate gave a clear testimony of salvation.

On the first Sunday in December ten new members received the right hand of fellowship after giving words of testimony and a further six on the first Sunday in January. Several more people have made applications.

Mention must be made of our two carol services. The boys and girls of our central Sunday school recited, read the Scriptures and sang carols. There was a great response from members, friends and parents. In the evening the children repeated some of their items and the church was packed to capacity. On the following Sunday the Crusaders took part and again the church was comfortably full. Pastor Brooks preached on "The Star and the Wise men". The watchnight service was a meeting never to be forgotten. The Holy Spirit was there in great power and testimonies of healing and of blessings received were given. A good crowd assembled and we concluded with a ring of prayer.

We are thrilled to report that no meeting has been cancelled during the present crisis and the good numbers have been maintained.

We are able to report that strangers are coming and being saved. "The end is not yet, praise the Lord".

ROCHESTER

Pastor: R. Williams

AS I look back over the past year, I can call to mind many memorable events that have taken place in the Rochester Church. First comes the opening of the Junior Church building on June 2nd last. The opening and dedication were performed by John C. Smyth, Administration Secretary. Later in that month two new members were received into fellowship. On December 5th at our annual general meeting, eight new members were welcomed into our fellowship. In mid July the wedding of two of our young folk took place. Sadly for us, four of the older sisters in the church have passed on to be with the Saviour they adored.

Gleanings

Where am I going?

by S. E. Petts

Jesus saith unto him, "I am the way, the truth and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me". (John 14:6).

THE rendezvous of the Evangelaire choir was at Victoria Square, Portland, Dorset, for their visit to the Verne prison. From Bournemouth Square we were to follow our leader in a convoy of cars, as he knew the way. When the car we were in began to go downhill, we knew that we had lost our way. The car we had followed was one which had infiltrated our "carcade" and was bound for a different destination. We had followed the wrong leader and we and the cars behind us had gone off the track in consequence.

Later, as we sang to the men in the prison, we couldn't help feeling, "This is why they are here. They followed the wrong person at some stage and he led them here".

It is important that we make sure that the one whom we follow is bound for the destination at which we desire to arrive, viz, heaven. Many religions say that theirs is the way, but Jesus said that He is the only true, living way to God the Father and that no-one can get to heaven except by Him. Why should His claim excel any other? Because He proved His deity by being the only one to accept death and burial and to rise again, to be seen during forty days by more than five hundred people; because He was, as God's Son, the only one without sin who could pay the price of our errors, unlock the gate of heaven and give us admission.

Jesus said, "Follow Me". He alone can lead us safely home to our Father in heaven.

You are not just a Worker; you are a Co-partner

by William Dunn, Pastor of our Bishop Auckland Church

TIORIO once said, "You can employ men and hire hands to work for you, but you must win their hearts to have them work with you".

Long before Tiorio made this statement, Paul wrote: "For we are labourers together with God" (1 Corinthians 3:9). Paul knew that God was not employing people to work for him. He knew that God sent His Son into the world to pay the price of sin. The price was not paid to employ man for God's service; it was paid because "God so loved the world". Paul could write: "For we are labourers together with God", not that we are working for God, but that we are working with God. This same thought is brought out again in 2 Corinthians 6:1. Some may ask, "What is the difference? Surely you are splitting hairs over working for God and working with God!".

If an employer asked me to work for him, I would take it that he wanted to employ me as a worker, but if he asked me to work with him, I would take it that he was asking me to be a co-partner with him in the business.

This is what Paul means. What a revelation — we are co-partners with God! We who are the created are co-workers with the Creator. Can we say that we are the type of partner that any businessman would be pleased to have? Are we really looking after the side of the business that God has entrusted to us? Slothfulness in any businessman will soon affect his business. "By much slothfulness the business decayeth and through idleness of the hands the house droppeth through" (Ecclesiastes 10:18). Edmund Burke said, "Too much idleness, I have observed fills up a man's time much more completely and leaves him less his own master, than any sort of employment whatsoever".

The parable of the talents (Matthew 25:14-30) reveals that through slothfulness (v.26) one of the three servants had his privileges withdrawn. The other two, because of their faithfulness to their Lord were rewarded (vv. 21, 23).

"Be not slothful in business, but fervent in spirit, serving the Lord" (Romans 12:11). Paul is exhorting us to be zealous in our work no matter how it may look in the eyes of man, because we are not merely serving ourselves or our fellowman. We are serving God.

Are we guilty of the following sentiments?

I'll go where You want me to go, dear Lord,
Real service is what I desire.

I'll sing a solo any time, dear Lord.

But don't ask me to sing in a choir.

I'll do what You want me to do, dear Lord,

I like to see things come to pass,

But don't ask me to teach boys and girls, O, Lord

I'd rather just stay in my class.

I'll do what You want me to do, dear Lord,

I yearn for Thy kingdom to thrive.

I'll give You my nickles and dimes, dear Lord,

But please don't ask me to tithe.

I'll go where You want me to go, dear Lord,

I'll say what You want me to say.

I'm busy just now with myself, dear Lord.

So I'll help You some other day.

Over the triple doorway of Milan Cathedral there are three inscriptions spanning the splendid arches. Over one is carved a beautiful wreath of roses and underneath is the legend, "All that pleases is but for a moment", while over the opposite one is sculptured a cross and the words beneath are, "All that troubles is but for a moment", but underneath the great central entrance in the main aisle is the inscription "That only in important which is eternal".

Do we really believe that this scene of time will soon be past and only what we do for Jesus will last? "He that gathereth in summer is a wise son, but he that sleepeth in harvest is a son that causeth shame". (Proverbs 10:5).

The Carpenter

by Sheila Price

JESUS loved Nazareth. He must have thought of it all through His life. When He rested after a long, busy day no doubt He thought of that crooked Nazareth street and the little carpenter's shop in which He had spent His childhood. He remembered the customers, the farmers who came to buy ploughs and cattle-yokes, the housewives who came to buy tables and chairs. He remembered sweeping up the shavings from the floor. He remembered standing at the big bench watching Joseph and learning from him. When Joseph died, Jesus continued to work in the shop in order to support His mother.

When I think of that little carpenter's shop I think what a friendly place it must have been, filled always with children who stopped by on their way home from school to talk to Jesus and watch Him at work.

Perhaps they loved to sweep up the shavings for Him and to sit on the big bench while He told His stories. We read in the Bible that Jesus loved having children around Him so surely they were welcomed to His shop.

When the children were in school and Jesus was alone at the workbench, He would think of His widowed mother and be glad He was able to provide for her, care for her and plan for her future. He thought of His own future, too, when He would go into the world to do the great work for which He came.

One day He put away His tools and closed the door of the carpenter's shop for ever. It was time for Him to teach men, women, boys and girls of the great love of God, time to begin the journey that would take Him to Calvary.

At the workbench in Nazareth, Jesus aimed always at doing the job well for the joy and satisfaction of seeing it done well. Likewise, during His ministry, He gave His life to selfless obedience to God in the service of man.

Some would not listen to Him. "He's only a poor carpenter", they cried, "just like His father!"

Never think of the Lord Jesus in this way, children, for, at that work-bench in the little Nazareth shop, Jesus taught the world that good and honest work in the sight of God is a truly wonderful thing.

Book Reviews

Against the Tide, by Angus I. Kinnear. Published by Victory Press, price £1.95, postage and packing 19p extra.

It is said that the Acts of the Apostles is an unfinished book. One could add this story, as the "Acts of Watchman Nee." How amazing it is to read and to think that God raised this man and his loyal wife to live in our time! His pilgrimage and pioneer work, apart from his imprisonment in 1952 for twenty years, are remarkable. Like the Apostle Paul, he laboured for Jesus Christ. Do buy it and read it, and see the Acts of God in and through a Chinese missionary. It would make a grand present, that will stimulate faith. Every nation has produced its heroes; China has produced one — perhaps the greatest in our day and generation.

Leon C. Quest

Sergei Kourdakov, published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott, price £2.50, postage and packing 13p extra.

SERGEI tells of his childhood in Soviet state orphanages; his education in communism; and of his recruitment as leader of a special squad, formed by the KGB, to break up secret meetings of Christian believers. In 150 raids which he personally conducted, several Christians were killed and others were permanently injured. The account of brutality is horrifying. The believers responded with true courage and faithfulness to the Lord. I was reminded of the Scriptures: Matthew 5:44; 10:28; Revelation 12:11; and Hebrews 11:37,38. . . "of whom the world was not worthy". In short, the book gives a detailed description of the Russian communist system and its effects upon one of its own youth.

Let Conscience speak, by David Fountain, published by Henry E. Walter Ltd., price 15p, postage and packing 5p extra.

THIS booklet gives a good coverage of a subject not often dealt with. The author views conscience from several angles such as "the weak conscience" and "the insensitive conscience", seeing conscience in its proper role, not as an infallible guide, but as a God-given instrument used by the Holy Spirit in both saved and lost. The book is challenging when the writer turns to Christians and deals with the training of conscience and our need to give heed to this inner voice.

One Christian's View on the Occult

by Gwyn Thomas

THERE is at this time an upsurge of books on the market about the occult. These are either "Satanic" or "Christian". The Bible states that any interest in the occult is Satanic. Knowledge of the occult is dangerous for anyone, including Christians, for Satan is "more subtil than any beast of the field", (Genesis 3:1).

Before I was saved, I was interested in such spiritual things, which led to me delving into the occult. This started with telepathy. A friend and I discovered that we could pass messages to each other and, being scientific by nature, we tested it and it worked. It should never be forgotten that the occult is never harmless or without a power of its own. Then some knowledge that I already had of the black arts came up and I passed a black magic spiritual message about death to my friend. This had drastic results and my friend and I became very scared and dropped the whole subject.

Later some other friends said that they were having seances and invited me to join in. While I was there, nothing happened, but, three days later, one of my friends was possessed, and this was recognised by unsaved people. This scared me off again.

Later again I came into contact with somebody else who was interested, as I was, in the oriental black arts, and we both read up on it. This time I was saved by moving house.

I tried to keep out of the occult, but again started reading up on it. My flat-mate said that there was nothing in it and I decided to prove him wrong. I set up an experiment to move a glass of water and turn it upside down by occult means. The Lord prevented my sitting in the seat where I was intending to sit to conduct the experiment. I could, however, move in the opposite direction. That was on a Sunday. I was saved on the following Tuesday. The Lord dragged me out of a mire that was sucking me down!

In my experience, the occult is subtle and may appear in one of a million manners, even as an angel of light (2 Corinthians 11:14). Knowledge of the occult is dangerous, as this knowledge can always rise in a man's consciousness. No Christian will ever say that he has always been where the Lord would have him and, when a man steps outside his Lord's will, any knowledge of the occult will arise and can drag the man down in Satanic paths (see 1 Samuel 28:6-16).

I know a good Christian girl who was solid in her belief in the Lord, but, after reading a book on the occult that was actually written for Christians, she lost her assurance.

The Bible says, "There shall not be found among you anyone that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire (any sacrifice of animals or men is the equivalent of this practice in this day), or that useth divination (ANY means to find out the future or which way to go that is not DIRECTLY from the Lord), or an observer of times (astrology), or enchanter, or witch, or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits (a medium), or a wizard, or a necromancer (anyone who claims to get in touch with dead people including so called Christian spiritualists)" (Deuteronomy 18:10, 11, my parentheses).

"Lest Satan should get an advantage of us, for we are not ignorant of his devices" (2 Corinthians 2:11) is often quoted in support of learning about the occult, but in context it has to do with forgiveness and not letting bitterness reign in our hearts. It is the ability of Satan to use this of which we are not ignorant. The Lord commends those in Thyatira who "have not known the depths of Satan, as they speak", and they were merely told to hold fast that which they already had (Revelation 2:24, 25), and again the Scripture says, "Your adversary the Devil . . . whom resist . . . IN THE FAITH" (1 Peter 5:8,9) — not with his own weapons!

The Scripture says, "Come out from among them and ye be separate saith the Lord and TOUCH NOT the unclean thing" (2 Corinthians 6:17).

The best defence that a Christian has against the wiles of Satan in this sphere is ignorance. Faith in God will sustain and allow Him to defend us. The Bible gives us all the information on the occult that we need, as it gives us all the knowledge that God wants to give us. "I would have you wise unto that which is good, and simple concerning evil. And the God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly".

"The great Reversal"

George Canty viewpoint on a new book and its general subject

WITH other Elim men, after reading widely the varying views of scores of writers, we concentrated together on what the Bible expects us to do about social issues. Our differences proved to be deep and our eventual agreement rather superficial, after discussions over several months.

At four o'clock one afternoon the Field Superintendent of Elim could not read his diary for me, as light was rationed by the miners' strike. Just now preachers are saying that we wouldn't have these discomforts if the gospel was accepted. So if the Gospel is preached more, the Field Superintendent will be able to read his diary! Is that the purpose of the gospel — that, and of course, even greater public advantages? "If you want better conditions, security, British greatness, and no strikes — take Christ as your Saviour". Is that gospel preaching?

There is that kind of preaching — far too much of it. The objects of the gospel are more than to improve our moral welfare. In some instances the object of the gospel is to rebuke us for wanting further improvements in our conditions. We've enough already. There are many other sides to the whole question of the Christian attitude to social matters. So I welcomed an entire evangelical book about it. Hopefully I sought its clarifications. David Moberg, of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology of Marquette University (U.S.A., I suppose), writing for Scripture Union, should help to sort out my puzzlement.

Some other writers are loudly positive, like Fr. Kenneth Leech, who generally expresses himself sforzando with full orchestral wallop. This clerical oracle thinks Billy Graham's gospel is only "reactionary and house-trained" compared with Martin Luther King's "profoundly disturbing social consequences". Of course, nobody can judge the social effects of either very well, but Fr. Leech habitually offers his opinions as established facts of the universe. Despite him, I fancy that Billy Graham's social effects are greater, so I preach that way myself. However, perhaps the new book could help me? Unfortunately it took me three readings to understand its American academic-evangelical style. I found myself stumbling over finding unproved assumptions with which I disagreed and, worst of all, that it was based entirely on what evangelicals in America did, and demanded action on American conditions which do not even obtain in Britain.

I think that we would agree that we should try to improve the country we live in. When it comes to spelling it out, we meet a host of problems. That is where the crux of the whole issue is found. What should we do? "Join the Labour Party, or put in an order for Race Today" some urge. Others would consign us to perdition if we did, as they are all for praying for the Establishment and keeping Britain white. There are as many different views on social problems within the Church as outside it. Fr. Kenneth Leech may think that Martin Luther King effected the right sort of changes (if any), but others feel that he didn't. I am personally against the Race Relations Act and the Race Relations Board. Others think they represent a great social victory. What can we do? David Moberg's book about American issues is not much use to us in England. We may even feel that Mr. Moberg himself has a standard of living which is wrong and that his job in sociology is mere modernistic vanity.

These prophets are so hard to follow. We have odd ones too — such as Herbert Armstrong heading the Radio Church of the Air, telling us about all the wickedness of Americans (greedy for luxury), who gobble up the world's resources, while he himself lives like a king and hops around the world in his executive jet. One social gospeller even complained about our mass-guilt for damage to nature by sewage. What then — are our natural functions to be forbidden by the do-gooders?

David Moberg points out that the evangelicals used to be socially concerned, until men like Moody, Billy Sunday and A.C. Dixon, together with the Christian and Missionary Alliance, the Episcopal Church and others, changed their minds and got on with converting sinners. He thinks that it was a great mistake, and that the "Great Reversal" ought to be reversed again. Having read his reasons why, I found myself disagreeing. Moody, Sunday and the rest probably did a lot more good in this world when they began talking more about offering one's life to Christ. The job of evangelists and churches is not to plan social changes, but to produce Christians, who will live like Christians and become Christian social planners. A surgeon might not like continued immigration into Britain, but he could do more against it by operating to save the life of a Powell disciple than by marching with a banner himself.

Every one of us must do good as we have opportunity, particularly where the poor, the innocent, the lonely, the sick and the imprisoned are concerned, as Jesus said in his famous sheep and goats parable. As an evangelist I can do most good by preaching the Foursquare Gospel. Out of my small means and limited spare time, I might offer help and make some protest, but I am not prepared to change my job as an evangelist to render such temporary benefits. Others, not equipped for my job, may do better as social workers.

To use the organised church for social protest is to try to fish with a frying pan. The church can inspire other bodies to such tasks, and should. But Elim's great contribution is to pour such knowledge of the love of Christ into the world that individuals and organisations can become an effective social force. For decades, the churches have said that they must make the gospel relevant — as if it wasn't! They have talked social welfare, preached life-situation, become involved, and so — as a result, I think — the churches have steadily emptied. That is not the way to make the gospel relevant.

If the gospel is merely to effect secular changes, as soon as those changes have been effected, folk are going to give up the gospel—discard it as having performed its task. In a welfare society, with affluence, folk have got it all — although they strike for more. So what interest has a social gospel for them? They can forget God more easily now.

But when nobody has any complaint left — when we've settled down to lots of everything, no race or sex discrimination, a twenty-four hour work week, nobody lonely and no hungry pensioners — what then? India fed, Africa freed from apartheid — what then? Has the gospel fulfilled itself?

There still happens to be eternity, heaven, hell, judgment and sinners, and the death of Jesus for the restoration of man to God, beside which, mere circumstances and comfort are minor issues, even the "profoundly disturbing social consequences" of Fr. Kenneth Leech.

One thing neither the Church nor the Christian can do, and that is "pass by on the other side" and go on our way to support our gospel meeting, like the religious men in the Good Samaritan parable, with desperate people needing a bit of practical help left dying.

The needs however are not always as simple as seeing a wounded robbery victim on the pavement. They require today a highly complex and sustained approach, social action, new legislation, and experts. The Samaritan did help, but he got on with his ordinary job while the victim was nursed by the innkeeper. We can help — AND evangelise. The two should find a balance in the use of our resources and time. Our struggle is with the forces of greed, exploitation, immorality — which are not flesh and blood, but spiritual powers of darkness. Whatever others do, this is the salient of the battlefield where Pentecostals are engaged, and we must not give up fighting to tend the wounded. If we win the spiritual battle — and we will — there won't be any wounded.

The Great Reversal - evangelism versus social concern by David O. Moberg, published by Scripture Union, 75p, paperback (194 pp.), postage and packing 9p

We print the following for your concern and consideration. George Canty is the P.R.O. of the B.P.F.

Extracts from the 1973 report of the Public Relations Officer to the British Pentecostal Fellowship's annual general meeting

"The General Meeting 1972 extended the field of my authority so that I could speak on issues beyond the previous scope of purely Pentecostal representation.

"It will be appreciated that the whole world lieth in evil", to quote the Scripture, and it would be impossible to speak up on every issue which confronts Pentecostals, but I have kept it well in mind that I should make our voice heard at any critical moment. From various Pentecostal circles I believe that there is a strong demand that we be heard.

When I have had specific requests to take action as P.R.O. it has been mostly on objections to references in the press on broadcasting, especially bad language and bawdiness. I wish that greater concern was shown for other evils, such as the lack of all moral tone in the conferences of the political parties, the insistence on financial considerations as being the final test of political activities, the erosion of God's ideal of the family, usury in international finance and the weakness of governments in controlling those who exploit land and property against the interests of the common people. I hear so little being said of these things within Pentecostal circles that I have not felt that I could speak from a position of strength.

"I would greatly appreciate any suggestion as matters arise on which I ought to initiate Pentecostal protest or approval. I would like members of this Fellowship or indeed any Pentecostal to contact me when they think that I could usefully employ my office".

Upward Vision

"Jesus made him look up" (Mark 8:25)
by Ramon Hunston, (Cardiff City Temple)

OUR vision of spiritual things will always determine our concept of God and the direction of our lives. The appreciation of events in human experience is governed by the direction in which we look, as the poet says, "Two men looked through prison bars, One saw dust, and the other saw stars". It all depends on which way you look.

This man in contact with Jesus had been totally blind. Jesus led him by the hand outside the city of Bethsaida and there He touched him. Immediately the man began to see, but with distorted vision. No doubt he was disappointed, possibly even disillusioned, but "Jesus made him look up".

The Lesson of this Miracle

Jesus touched this man, but his vision was only partial. When asked what he saw, he replied that he saw men as trees walking. He had an experience that was both tremendous and at the same time disappointing, but Jesus stepped again into this man's confused experience and made him look up. The Lord touched him a second time and, causing him to look up, lifted him out of his disappointment. The moment that this man's gaze was heavenward, he saw clearly.

Jesus caused this man to look up, to change the direction of his vision from the circle of his own disappointment, from the limited vision of his own experience. It is often the same with us. The moment we take our eyes off Christ and vainly search with the distorted vision of disappointment for true insight into spiritual things, we know failure. It is so important that we look up, for this is the answer to backsliding and the key to the correct orientation of faith, for faith is born of an upward vision.

The Incentive to Faith (Psalm 121:1)

David wrote that he lifted his eyes to the hills, the symbols of divine visitation. As his eyes scanned the hills around him, he may have thought of Mount Sinai where God gave the law, of the victory of Mount Carmel, of the intervention of God on Moriah, or of the spiritual blessings of Mount Hermon, but he lifted his vision beyond the hills and cried, "My help cometh from the Lord". He was looking beyond past experiences and the memory of past blessings to the Lord Himself.

An upward vision always finds its focus in the Blesser, not the blessing; in the Giver, not the gifts. David continued that his help came from the Lord who made heaven and earth. When his eyes were uplifted towards God, whom he loved and served, his faith was maintained, although his circumstances might grow difficult and dark. The upward vision lifts a man above the pressure of circumstances to live in the atmosphere of God's presence, the atmosphere of worship, for an upward vision always promotes worship and adoration.

Incentive to Worship (Isaiah 40:26)

Isaiah, somewhat dejected by the spiritual state of his nation and the problems that beset him, was called to stand beneath that eastern sky, with the stars shining like a myriad jewels set in black velvet. He was told, "Lift up your eyes. . . Who hath created these things?". In that moment of upward vision he saw the greatness of the power of God.

What is God like? An upward vision is always the incentive to worship God for what He is, lifting our thinking beyond the confines of what the Lord has done for us, for God is bigger than our experience of Him. That upward vision caused the prophet to realise that this almighty God "giveth power to the faint".

The pattern of the effect of worship is seen in the last verse of this chapter. There is the elevation of spirit — "mounting up as eagles"; the strength of direction — "run and not be weary", and the stability of living, — "walk and not faint". No Christian should become totally involved with his own experience, surrounded by his own needs and dominated by his own desires. The message to Isaiah is the same today: "Look up".

Incentive to Rejoicing (Luke 21:28)

A survey of world events today must bring pain to any heart with feeling, and perplexity to the reasoning mind. We live in the days of destiny portrayed in Scripture as days of human dilemma, when there will be war, violence, bloodshed, hatred, with large areas of the world overwhelmed by famine and disease. Prophecy in Scripture declares these days, the last days, to be days of fear, growing anxiety and godlessness. If their vision is focused only on the things around us, then it is little wonder that depression is the experience of so many, but Jesus said that when these things begin to happen, we should look up for our redemption draws nigh. This means looking beyond events and circumstances to the Lord Himself. Personal vision is always the secret of personal joy.

The upward look is sharply in contrast with the outlook of those who have no faith in Christ, whose hearts, we are told, fail them for fear. In the same atmosphere the Christian can rejoice, because, in response to the command of Christ, he is looking up.

So much in prophecy has been fulfilled; most of the signs of the times are now behind us, fulfilled in the affairs of men. So now we look up, no longer looking for signs around, but listening for sounds above. "For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout with the voice of the archangel and the trumpet of God". It is vital to take stock of the direction of our vision in the light of the attitude of Jesus.

"Jesus made him look up".

66. Foreseeing the Future (Genesis 49:1,2)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

JACOB was clearly aware of his approaching death when he called his sons together for the last time. Undoubtedly the Lord enlightened the mind of Jacob for, as he looked at his sons, he was able to look into the future. He saw plainly both the immediate future of his children and the things that would befall their descendants in the distant "last days". Jacob's prophecy was not merely the "second sight" of someone about to pass from time into eternity, but a definite revelation of the Lord to a man of God. Future generations would confirm the accuracy of the vision given and of the word spoken.

The Lord our God fashions the future according to His will. Many of the things which He has planned are set out in His Word, the Bible. We see how accurately His declared Word came to pass, especially in the events surrounding the birth, life, death, resurrection and ascension of the Lord Jesus. We see, also, how prophecies are being fulfilled in the events taking place today and we can therefore be sure that the Scriptures relating to the Second Coming of the Lord Jesus will be exactly accomplished. Peter declared, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place" (2 Peter 1:19).

God's Word triumphs

THE Gideons are well known because they mainly are engaged in distributing the Word of God. One of our pastors recently visited a prison and was thrilled to find that a member of The Gideons had succeeded in placing a copy of the Scriptures in every cell and he was given the opportunity of addressing the prisoners when he gave a first-rate evangelistic address.

One of our deacons has passed to us thrilling comments on the results of the distribution of the Scriptures in South Korea. In one village on the outskirts of Kwangju, about 175 people, the entire population of the village, have been converted to Christ and a church has been established. Many of the men-folk of the village were seriously wounded and incapacitated during the Korean and Vietnam wars.

There was also the wonderful occasion in 1972 when 3,473 South Korean soldiers were baptised at one time. It has been stated that perhaps 95% of them were saved through reading copies of the Scriptures supplied by The Gideons International. The scale of the baptismal service can be envisaged when it is realised that 130 Korean Pastors were engaged in carrying out the baptisms.

The Scripture is quite clear that "by all means" we must save some and the distribution of the Word of God is an essential especially in these benighted days. Pray for all those who are actively engaged in this ministry.

Bible Translators' Peace Prize

THIS growing team of missionary linguists of the Wycliffe Bible Translators (Summer Institute of Linguistics) recently received the Ramon Magsaysay Award for International Understanding, widely regarded as the Asian equivalent of the Nobel Peace Prize. This is the first time that a missionary organisation has received an international peace prize. It is doubly significant that a Third World country (Phillipines) bestowed the reward, since nationalistic rhetoric denounces missionaries as tools of colonialism. This charge is echoed by the World Council of Churches, which in recent years has been down-grading missionary efforts.

Armed with the conviction that every tribe and nation must hear the gospel in its own tongue, Wycliffe's 3,100 missionaries and support personnel approach, on an average, a new tribe every other week. First they reduce the language to writing and then they put the Word of God into the newly-developed medium. As this goes on, native, sometimes savage, people are transformed by that Word.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

"1974, YEAR of population growth"; "United Nations sponsors World Conference on population growth to be held in Bucharest next August" — what are these headlines all about?

Experts on the subject of world population growth are worried about the phenomenal growth of mankind on the earth. They estimate that, even if the governments of the world who send delegates to the coming conference put into operation a plan to control growth, the population of the world will double in eighty years. Not all governments will adopt any sort of plan, as some are developing nations and are hungry for manpower, so it could mean that world population could double itself in far less than eighty years.

This may be very interesting, but does it concern us? Why should I be using this column to tell you these facts? The simple answer is that these people will need to know the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Tremendous efforts of all kinds, by missionaries, literature, radio and television must be made to bring the nations to Christ. I can well imagine that communists, moslems and others will make plans to convert them to their political ideology or religions. So again comes the question, what can we do? We can pray!

The Master told His disciples to pray that the Lord of the harvest would thrust forth labourers into His harvest field. We need to pray that God will raise up missionary statesmen and that young men and women will catch the vision and the fire and use their God-given talents in the service of Christ.

God can meet the financial need. The China Inland Mission, now The Overseas Fellowship, have never asked for a penny nor used missionary boxes, yet, during the years in which they have been operating, millions of pounds have come in to their work. The financial need is an urgent matter about which to pray. Do not forget Britain with its increasing population and the thousands settling here from other countries.

As I write this, fear grips my heart. I am afraid that so many who were once ablaze for God are becoming nominal Christians. Only prayer can change this. I am counting on this, that the readers of this column will not fail to pray.

Ephesians 6:11-18

On opening my "People's Friend" magazine on a dreary January morning I was confronted with a delightful colour photo of Bothwell Bridge in Scotland. It must have been taken in high summer, for the Clyde is shown flowing peacefully between banks crowned with fine old trees in full foliage. The sun is shining on the Bridge's sturdy arches, on the sparkling waters and on the immaculate lawn and flower beds of the public garden facing the river. I often travelled over this bridge when living in Motherwell and knew in a vague way that it was associated with "old, unhappy, far off days and battles long ago", but how steeped in history it has been, was quite a revelation to me.

As an all-important Clyde crossing it was the scene of many a conflict and the Battle of Bothwell Brig was the most memorable of them all. It was fought between the Covenanters and the Duke of Monmouth's army, representing King Charles II. In the year 1679 Scotland was in the midst of religious strife and Lanarkshire was a stronghold of the Covenanters, the body of Scottish Presbyterians who made a valiant stand against Popery and for the right to worship God freely according to their own faith. Eventually the powerful army of the Duke of Monmouth was sent north when the desperate Covenanters collected their supporters and decided to fight for their rights. Their ministers had been outlawed and deprived of their livelihood, their secret services had been broken up by the King's men and even then before the battle, the Covenanters offered to lay down their arms if promised a free Parliament and a free General Assembly. Alas, Monmouth refused to make such promise and in the battle that ensued the Covenanters were defeated and four hundred were slain and 1200 taken prisoner, yet the remaining Covenanters stood true undeterred by heavy fines, long imprisonment and the fear of death.

Gazing once more at the picturesque bridge I guess that hundreds of people pass over it by car and on foot and are ignorant of its place in history. I agree with the comment made in the magazine. "Bothwell Bridge is peaceful and pleasant now, with its shining river, its colourful flowers and green sward. But it's worth remembering the brave Scotsmen who fought for their faith there, and of whom it was said, 'The world was not worthy of them'".

We cannot withhold admiration from such men of courage; it has been said that they were bigoted and were gravely wrong in resorting to physical violence, yet they were men of the Book, men of faith and godliness. As I pondered their great conflict I thought of to-day's conflicts: the threat of the miners' strike, the rail dispute, and the grim spectre of Communism with its avowed anti-God propaganda. I am very aware, too, of the evil forces of Satanism, the increase in violence and cruelty, murder and drunkenness, all of which strike fear to the hearts of ordinary folk. So I ask myself, what should our attitude be? Are we, too, determined to stand fearlessly for truth and righteousness as did the brave Covenanters? There is a spiritual conflict in which we must engage, which is far more demanding than any physical fight. We must pray for our nation, yet not as the contemptuous Pharisee who stuck out his chest and cried "I thank thee, God, that I am not as other men are".

What an abominable prayer, he had no concern for the poor unhappy sinner. How different from Daniel, the greatly beloved who interceded for his nation. I love the words of Daniel 9:3, 4, "Then I turned my face to the Lord God, seeking him by prayer and supplications with fasting and sackcloth and ashes. I prayed to the Lord my God and made confession, saying, O Lord, the great and terrible God, who keepest covenant and steadfast love with those who love Him and keep His commandments, we have sinned and done wrong and acted wickedly" (R.S.V.). No wonder he was loved of God, for he identified himself with his people; as part of the nation he acknowledged the national sin to be his own. In verse 20 he reveals that humbly he confessed his own sinfulness before speaking of the nation's sin. The description of his ministry of intercession is very moving, and he faced just such a desperate situation in his day as we do in ours and yet he prevailed in prayer. May God grant that in our land there may be found Daniels in this our hour of great need, that once again our God will be pleased to intervene.

How to present a Message in Song

by Laurence E. Lambert, Pastor of our Blackpool (Waterloo Road) Church and a member of the Elim Youth Committee

Realise how valuable music has been to the gospel.

WE think of the Psalms, teams like Moody and Sankey, the marvellous combination of the Wesley brothers, for John got them praying, Charles got them singing. In our own services music and song make a valuable contribution, so singing the gospel is very effective and important, and not just part of the preliminaries.

Practice is essential. When people in the world present their song they get it word and sound perfect. If people who present something ephemeral do this, how much more should we who offer eternal things? Go through the piece until you are sure of it. This in itself gives confidence. Try not to need the words in front of you.

Sing within your ability. To know one's limitations is good. Nothing is more embarrassing than to listen to someone trying to sing some highbrow aria which is beyond their vocal range. Sing something simple and tuneful which you can master.

Sing under the anointing of the Spirit. The blessing of God "maketh rich" . . . and it is no coincidence that being filled with the Spirit is linked with singing and making melody (Ephesians 5:18, 19). I have been thrilled sometimes by the singing of someone, who perhaps had no great voice, but who melted hearts as he sang under the touch of the Spirit. So pray much before you minister in song. Bev Shea spends much time in prayer before he sings and you can tell it by the anointing.

Consider starting a musical group. If you have no group in your church, why not get together with a few young people, either to play and sing, or maybe just to sing. Young folk singing the gospel is a testimony in itself. There are many helpful books available, and with enthusiasm and practice, it is surprising how well you can sing for the Lord.

Set up equipment WELL beforehand. To hear people tuning up, or to suffer electronic distortions if something is too loud, or the other weird noises if things are not plugged in properly, can greatly detract from the sense of the presence of God. Some groups make inane comments and think that they are being professional to keep the congregation waiting; this is not so. If you are singing a solo, make sure that you practice with the person who will accompany you in the service. It is not fair to the pianist or organist to plant your piece before them just before you sing and then expect them to know where you will be pausing, etc.

Realise that the words are very important. Gospel singing is intended to convey a message — the greatest message in the world — that God loves people and that Jesus died for sinners. It is not sufficient to crash out a noise which makes people wonder whether to praise the electricians rather than the Lord. Some modern groups seem to think that the more the decibels the more the disciples. Make sure that you enunciate clearly.

Sing something new. There are vast numbers of books of beautiful gospel songs and we must not be too lazy to learn something new. Some lovely old gospel songs have lost their impact by repetition. Some people when singing a solo just sing a well-known hymn. Sing something new and true.

Not too many verses, please. The better the singer, the less verses they seem to sing. If the piece has a chorus, then sing two, AT THE MOST three verses. Try listening to the tape recording of a service when a singer has sung say four verses and four choruses of a piece . . . it seems to go on for ever . . . and it does!

The Pre-eminence of the spiritual. More important than ability, more valuable than practice, is the inner life of prayer, Bible study and godliness. Never neglect your own church services. If they make you keeper of the king's vineyard . . . do not neglect your own. To be filled with the Spirit, to be like Jesus is everything.

"Sirs. . . we would see Jesus".

A. Anstey

Monday, February 25th

Luke 8:1-15

"Preaching the glad tidings" (v.1).

JESUS left His mark on every village and city that he visited. From the depths of demon possession Mary Magdalene was rescued to become a herald of His salvation. This astounding ministry touched Herod's palace, for Joanna, the wife of Herod's steward, like Moses, forsook the palace with its affluence, sin and pride. She left those like Salome to please the whims of an earthly king, while she used her life to follow the lowly Nazarene, ministering of her substance to her Lord (vv.2, 3). Her testimony of healing would make an impact on the crowds who listened to the parable of the sower. The Word of God (v.11) had certainly fallen on good ground, for Joanna was at the cross (Luke 23:49, 55) and at the sepulchre (Luke 24:10) to proclaim the truth of the resurrection. Perhaps she was among the women in the upper room at the great Pentecostal outpouring.

Tuesday, February 26th

"Storm on the lake" (v.23).

SAILING with the Master did not make them immune from any disturbances. The testing of our faith is imperative. Storms hit Job's inheritance, cut right across every sphere of his life and left him bereft, friendless, yet through faith he triumphed and ended with a double portion. Storms hit the beach where Jehoshaphat had built his ships to go to Tarshish (2 Chronicles 20:37) and broke up an unhealthy alliance with the unregenerate king of Israel, so this divine intervention proved beneficial to the king. "Where is your faith?" (v.25) challenges us when storms arise in the office, the home, the workshop and sometimes, unfortunately, in church life. Remain resolutely calm and trusting, for the Lord who controls our lives will still every storm at the right moment. In the final great storm of his life, Stephen, still full of the Holy Ghost, knelt with a prayer on his lips and a glorious vision of Jesus.

Wednesday, February 27th

Luke 8:26-39

"He saw Jesus" (v.28).

THE demoniac living among the tombs was a pathetic sight. Possessed, tormented, outcast from Jewish society, the most degraded case of human existence in the Scriptures, yet he saw Jesus and Jesus met him. Sitting at the feet of Jesus (v.35), clothed, in his right mind, willing for full-time service —this was a great transformation from the kingdom of darkness to the realms of light, from fetters to faith and liberty, from the power of Satan to the power of God. This dramatically, dynamically demonstrated the power of God, not only to still storms in the elements, but also in lives. He was changed in outlook, challenged in outreach, channelled in outflow.

Thursday, February 28th

Luke 8:40-56

"Who touched Me?" (v.45).

DURING the war, blind people were employed on the final inspection of aircraft parts, because of their sensitivity of touch to detect errors too minute for the eye to observe. One feeble finger touching the right switch can flood a whole building with light. The woman in her great need feebly touched the Light of the world and she was not disappointed. This original idea was followed later by many ("for as many as touched Him were made perfectly whole"). Eve's original touch on the forbidden tree brought sorrow, sin and death, as did Uzzah's touch on the Ark of God (2 Samuel 6:6,7); but this woman and also Jairus (v.41) stooped to touch unlimited resources in the living Christ and healing and even resurrection were the astounding result. Touch Him today.

Friday, March 1st

Luke 9:1-17

"Herod was perplexed" (v.7).

CARNAL kings and unregenerate minds cannot understand the things of God. Herod was no atheist; he feared the resurrection of John the Baptist. There are no atheistic demons, for even they believe and tremble! Twelve ordinary men, went out evangelizing and great things happened — converts, healings, deliverances, by the authority of Jesus' name. The true King of the Jews had no throne as yet, but His kingly power was evident. Looking up to heaven, He blessed them" (v.16); this was not the Ascension or the mount of Transfiguration, but grace before the feeding of 5,000. The boy, the twelve, the crowd, He blessed them all. Like the barrel of meal and the cruise of oil, a surplus always remains when God moves for us. The twelve baskets of portions provided an extended ministry.

Saturday, March 2nd

Luke 9:18-27

"Whom say ye that I am?" (v.20).

PETER answered, under heavenly inspiration, "The Christ of God". This profound statement was made in Caesarea Philippi (Matthew 16:13), the city which had built within it a temple to the power of Rome. Philippi was added in honour of Herod the Tetrach (Philip). Agrippa called this city, "Nero-nais". This

Why save the Lord's Day?

"The Son of man is Lord also of the Sabbath"

by Leon C. Quest

The Lord's Day is pre-eminently a benevolent institution. It must be defended as one of the most enlightened of divine institutions.

The Sabbath occupies a place in the decalogue, which God wrote with his own finger on the tablets of stone. Jesus Christ came not to destroy the Sabbath. He introduced the Lord's Day and sanctified it by His resurrection, by His appearances, by Pentecost. He gave men the right interpretation of the day and ennobled it. "He is Lord of the Sabbath".

The Lord's Day was made for man, not for the Jewish nation only, but for every nation, people and tongue. The Lord's Day was introduced by the Divine Legislator, who knew the need of mortal man.

The Lord's Day considered from an intellectual point of view, is an inestimable boon. It provides rest, physically, mentally and morally.

The Lord's Day is necessary for men. We should not only rest from secular labour; we need instruction regarding the things which belong to present and eternal salvation.

The Lord's Day is designed to afford mankind a convenient opportunity of commemorating the manifold and glorious works of creation and redemption.

The profanation of the Lord's Day, whether voluntary or compulsory, is usually associated with other vices. To the working man, whose employment requires physical exertion, the Lord's Day provides healthy and buoyant existence.

Sunday desecration is prejudicial to national stability and progress. It is a divine maxim that "Righteousness exalteth a nation". Desecrators of the Lord's Day are usually distinguished for their lack of reverence. Sunday schools are the greatest safeguard against juvenile delinquency.

The Lord's Day is the greatest institution to build up spiritual, social and family life.

The Lord's Day helps to preserve all that is deepest in human life. Psychologically necessary for the renewal of man's strength, it is the savings' bank of human existence. It conserves man's physical, mental, spiritual and eternal welfare.

Above all, by Lord's Day observance, we honour God. The Divine Legislator gave this day for man's liberty, not for man's licence. The highest form of liberty is always found in conforming to the laws of God and man.

rock-like city has long lost these great names, but the great name of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, exclusive, excellent and everlasting, remains powerful today. Christ was the embodiment of every truth that he proclaimed! When He spoke of light, He was the Light, of truth, He was the Truth, of bread, He was the Living Bread. He is greater than history — He was before it; greater than death — He lives beyond it; greater than all creation — He made all things; greater than science, philosophy — for by Him all things consist.

Sunday, 3rd March

Luke 9:28-45

"His decease which He should accomplish at Jerusalem" (v.31).

DO not be so taken up with the experiences on the mount of transfiguration, that, like the three apostles, we lose our sense of priority. The subject of conversation of this very wonderful moment was CALVARY. The cross is still the centre of theology. The Lord sometimes has to send a cloud to blot out personalities that would obscure Christ and His purposes. "This is My beloved Son; hear Him" (v.35). When our ears are attuned to what He has to say, we shall hear other voices in their right proportion. They were ready to build tabernacles. Sometimes, impulsively, we launch out on extra projects, rather than getting on with the obvious, more needy ones. Only one of the three stood at the cross; John stood on the mount with Jesus in that moment of glory and also with Him at Calvary.

'I FEEL like saying 'Praise the Lord!' and 'Hallelujah!'", said the pastor one Sunday morning. The effect on the congregation was remarkable. God's servant was as good as his word and gladly, freely, reverently gave praise to God. Soon others joined him and before long the whole congregation was united in gladsome praise, I was the visiting preacher and it did my soul good. It was grand.

Am I alone, I wonder, or have others noticed it? I find that ejaculations of praise during the preaching of the Word are becoming rarer. Now there are times when such expressions are out of place. There have been occasions when people have voiced their apparent praise, but it has been totally out of place and has led to one to conclude that their outbursts had become rather mechanical, matters of habit rather than true earnestness. Having said all this, however, I must say that I miss the "praise the Lords". I have found that their lack is apparent in many areas of the Pentecostal movement. While it is rewarding to be listened to with attention and rapt silence, my strong feeling is that some expressions from the congregation denote their active, ready involvement. What do you think? Perhaps you would like to watch this point yourself and compare your feelings in the matter. Of course, we do sometimes find that folk go on about needs which they are not supplying themselves. It is not unknown to find that the people who complain about unfriendliness do not show themselves friendly. Sometimes those who complain about the lack of prayer are not themselves conspicuous in their participation. We all have to watch out as to whether "physician, heal thyself" could be applied to us. I know that Pentecostal folk love the Word and the response to the ministry of the Scriptures is undoubted. My fear really is that we allow ourselves to slip into formality without noticing it. Not a few other movements began with congregation participation, to quote a current phrase, but some have become deadly dull and lifeless.

"O that men would praise the Lord. . .". Yes, I know that they do, but I think my point about the ministry of the Word is worth thought.

NEWCASTLE UPON TYNE

LAST October saw the beginning of a new venture in outreach, a luncheon club for senior citizens. Lunch is cooked in our modernised church kitchen and served in the minor hall or, as the need arises, taken to people's homes. This project was started as a result of concern for our aged members and those in the church locality. It has enabled us to express care in a practical way and has opened up opportunities for witness. An informal fellowship meeting before lunch is another meeting point in this effort. Local response has been encouraging; most of those attending are new local contacts. We cook for forty to forty-five and numbers are steadily increasing.

After realising that many of our new friends would be alone on Christmas Day and after discussing this with our local Age Concern organisation, a Christmas lunch and tea were served at the church. This proved to be a time of happy fellowship. About fifty folk attended.

Helpers involved in this work enjoy this new avenue of service and our prayer is that, in reaching out to those around us, some may find the Lord.

RYDE

Pastor: I.R. Hall

On January 26, 27 we held our Annual Men's Weekend, when the guest speaker and soloist was Rev. E. Dainton of Hastings, a former minister of the Ryde Church. His forthright preaching and inspiring singing brought great blessing to all who gathered.

Other special singing was provided by duettists Messrs. B. Parkman and J. Watkins, and by the Men's Quintet. The men of the fellowship also participated in reading the Scriptures, testimony, prayer, and chorus leading. The Pastor convened the meetings, which despite inclement weather reached almost sixty in attendance on Sunday night.

WEST BROMWICH

Pastor: R.M. Kingsbury

THE first anniversary of the re-opening of our Church in West Bromwich was held on October 24th-26th. A full church enjoyed the anointed ministry in song of the Selly Oak Male Voice Choir on the Saturday, and a gospel folk group from Graham Street on the Monday. The Word of God was powerfully presented by Pastor J.C. Smyth from Headquarters on the Saturday and Monday evenings. On the Sunday we enjoyed the messages brought to us by Pastor Graeme Parkins.

Christmas was also a busy time for us as we went carol singing at various senior citizens' homes, and on Christmas Eve we visited the homes of some of our older members to sing carols for them. On the Sunday before Christmas the Sunday-school scholars presented a Christmas programme. Christmas Day was also an occasion of blessing as Pastor Peter Sanderson an ex-crusader from West Bromwich, returned to share some timely thoughts with a full congregation. At the Crusader Christmas Party, about 40 young people were present.

PONTLOTTYN

Pastor: M. Richards

WE were privileged and blessed on Sunday evening, when our Sisterhood took over the gospel service. The convener was Betty Bate and our eldest member Mrs. Leonard gave out the first hymn. Scripture was read by Maggie Williams and Mrs. Burns. Singing items were sung by Helen Davies, Betty Bate and Mrs. D. Bate. Megan Lyons gave a recitation and M. Williams her testimony.

The message was "Breathe on me breath of God" given by Mrs. Davies.

Prayer was asked for Mrs. Spacey who was unable to attend through illness.

The sisterhood were truly a living testimony that we are saved to serve.

INGATESTONE

Pastor: G.R. Pickett

A recent morning communion service was followed by a Dedication Service when Margaret and Peter Buers brought Keith to be dedicated. The evening service took the form of Baptismal Service when four of our young people obeyed the Lord by following Him through the waters. As Pastor G.R. Pickett baptised the candidates, it was thrilling to recall how God has blessed during the past weeks. Three of the candidates having recently been filled with the Holy Spirit. A good number of visitors attended the services. Pete Cole, from Elim Bible College, was the guest speaker for the day.

We rejoice at what God is doing in Ingatestone, as we pray and work together we look forward to great times with God.

Pastor: A.J. Downes

A UNITED Mission is to be held in Cheltenham from March 16th-31st. We are supporting this series of evangelistic meetings. Please pray for Martin Higginbottom and his team as they speak in schools, colleges and factories in the area, for all the background organisation and committee work leading up to the mission, and the linking up of young Christians with the churches, that they may find a real welcome, and that they themselves may be instrumental in bringing new life to the congregations that they join.

Television

by A. J. "Monty" White

NEARLY every family in this country has a television set in their homes and it is fair to say that an enormous amount of time is spent watching this product of the technological revolution. I am not against television as such (I have one in my own home), but I am convinced that the Christian MUST exercise his will. He must not view, nor allow his family to view, all the programmes which appear on the screen at the mere press of the button or the turn of the switch. I often wonder how many of us can say with David: "I will set no wicked thing before mine eyes". As Christians, I believe that we must wisely pick and choose the programmes that we allow ourselves to watch.

On BBC 2 there are many natural history programmes, which not only reveal the glories and wonders of God's Creation, but also the errors of man's thinking. Scientists who appear on such programmes are completely indoctrinated with the "theory" of evolution. Biologists explain that the enormous variety and forms of life are due to evolution, that simple forms of plants and animals evolve into more complex forms due to chance genetic changes and natural selection. Geologists explain the present structure of the earth in terms of the principle of uniformitarianism which states that all the geological processes now operating on the earth have been acting in the same way over extremely long periods of time, and that such gradual processes account for the world as we see it today, with its continents of mountains, valleys and fossiliferous strata. It would appear that there is no room in such programmes for God, the Creation or the Flood (or indeed for the Second Coming!).

The Bible teaches that God created all the different kinds of plants and animals that we see in the world today. They did NOT evolve. The Genesis account of the Creation and scientists' account of Evolution are mutually exclusive; if you believe one, you cannot believe the other because they contradict each other. The Bible also teaches us that God created the Earth; it did not evolve as geologists would have us believe. Similarly the Bible teaches us that the heavens are the work of God's hands (Psalm 103:25) and that He created the stars (Genesis 1:16), whereas astronomers would have us believe that the universe has evolved into its present form.

In viewing natural history programmes therefore, we should remember the things that the Bible teaches and refuse the profane, old wives' fables that are propagated in the name of evolution. Remember that Isaiah declared that God would not give His glory to anything else. To accept evolution and to deny the Biblical account of the Creation is to take glory from God. Instead, let us give glory to God for the great things that He has done!

In many current affairs and news programmes, however, we can view first hand the fulfilment of some of the prophecies that our Lord Jesus Christ spoke of as heralding His second coming. Before our eyes we can see wars, nation rising against nation and kingdom against kingdom, famines, pestilences, earthquakes and the distress of nations with perplexity.

It is my belief that the Christian should not watch television for entertainment purposes. The Bible exhorts us to rejoice in the LORD and to rejoice in our salvation. We should not rejoice in "The Generation Game" or "Top of the Pops" or in the affairs of such programmes as "Coronation Street". Tell me, Christian, what spiritual value have these programmes? Surely we should not be fed with the chaff of television, but with the Bread of Life so that we will be "nourished up in the words of faith and of good doctrine" (1 Timothy 4:6).

Furthermore, Paul in writing to the Christians at Philippi wrote: "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things" (Philippians 4:8). Does television merit such commendation? I think not!

Here is my warning: do not let the following become your watch-word:

"The T.V. is my shepherd; my spiritual growth shall want. It makes me to sit down and do nothing for the cause of Christ, because it requireth all my spare time: it keepeth me from doing my duty as a Christian because it presenteth so many programmes that I must see. It restoreth my knowledge of the things of the world: it keepeth me from studying God's Word. It leadeth me in the paths of failure to attend the worship services. Yea, though I live to be an hundred, I shall keep on viewing my T.V. as long as it will work: for my T.V. is my close companion; its sounds and picture, they comfort me. It presenteth entertainment before me and keepeth me from doing important spiritual things with my family. It filleth my head with ideas which differ from those set forth in the Word of God. Surely little good will come of my life because of my T.V., which offers me no time to do the will of God: and I will dwell in spiritual poverty for ever" (Channel 23).

Testimony Time

by John Bristow, Pastor of our Luton Church

I WAS sitting at a pub table having a drink with two friends. "Chelsea Potter", the pub was called; it still stands in Kings Road, Chelsea, London. Somehow our discussion turned to religion. Both Vic and Roger admitted they had been patronizing a nearby Methodist church on odd occasions. As for my religious conviction, well, I was becoming very interested in spiritualism. "Spiritualism!" Vic rejoined. Vic also had an interest in that and had been receiving training as a spiritualist healer. Having discovered a common interest in religion, we promptly made arrangements to attend a healing service to be conducted in a few days by the famous spiritualist healer Harry Edwards.

Vic told me later that he did turn up on time at the place where we were to have met to go together to the service, but I certainly could not find him. As I did not have the address of the healing service, I had to return home disappointed.

One day, I got back to my London bed-sitter after work to find my father waiting with some interesting experience of which to tell. That day he had been out on business along with a director, Mr. Lionel Zucker, a Jew. While travelling in the car, my father mentioned that he was thinking of taking a certain problem to a spiritualist medium for help. Immediately, Mr. Zucker stopped the car and urged my father not to go to the medium. Then he spoke of how he had recently found Jesus as his Messiah after being witnessed to by some members of the Ealing Elim Pentecostal Church. Flabbergasted at hearing a Jew speak of loving Jesus, my father accepted the invitation to go with Mr. Zucker to his church that Sunday. My father wanted me to go with him. The prospect of a church service was unappealing, but I yielded to the request.

Lionel, as we came to know him, arrived on time, and I paid my first visit to Holland Park Mission (later transferred to Kensington Temple). I was only sixteen then and I was pleasantly surprised to notice the wide age range in the congregation. After the service I was made welcome, and the Pastor, Eldin R. Corsie, took the opportunity to show me the error of spiritualism.

These people were so good to me. They took a genuine interest in me and I soon found myself having Sunday lunches at various homes. They spoke of the baptism in the Holy Spirit. Everything of which they told me was remarkable and so different from what I thought Christianity was supposed to be. I went to see a medium about these Christians and told him of the baptism in the Spirit. He was not impressed and said that anything that they could do, he could do better, in fact, if I were to kneel right there and then, he himself would lay hands on me and give me the baptism of the Spirit. I have no doubt now that had I done so he would have baptised me in a spirit from hell.

I left that medium never to return again. There seemed to be an atmosphere of death about spiritualism, while with these Pentecostal Christians, there was an atmosphere of life, and I knew what I wanted.

It took several months of heart searching before I finally came through to an assurance of salvation. This happened at a Ron Jones' crusade in Bournemouth, while I was on holiday there. By this time my two friends had also started attending Holland Park Mission and Roger had been wonderfully converted.

That was in 1963. From then on I was a member of Kensington Temple until I went to Elim Bible College in 1968.

I thank God for the ministry of Pastor Corsie, who gave me a love for the doctrines of the Word of God. I thank God for Christians who loved me, despite my many faults, and who thus encouraged me to go on with God.

I would not want to return to those days, however, simply because today's experience of the Lord Jesus overshadows yesterday's blessings.

Surely "every day with Jesus is sweeter than the day before".

"Helpers in the War"

1. ITTAI THE GITTITE

by Stanley Beresford, Pastor of our Blackburn Church

2 Samuel 15:19-22

THE distress and rejection of David brought out the very worst in some of his subjects, yet at the same time it brought out the very best in others.

Some seem to be almost glad at others' calamities, especially of those who have been most blessed of the Lord, while others recognise amid it all the providential workings of God and rally to the cause as never before.

King David himself had his surprises and encouragements. Ittai came at a time when others had listened to the voice of the Usurper and had deserted their King. His was a full committal of himself after being with David just one day ("Thou camest but yesterday", 2 Samuel 15:20).

It is wonderful to see the triumphs of grace in the unexpected and to realize that such triumphs arise, not because one is committed to a principle or to a place, but to a person. Ittai said, "Wheresoever the king shall be, there will thy servant be, whether in death or life".

This kind of committal should characterise every child of God. Paul the Apostle said, "To me to live is Christ". What he did for Christ was important, but he did not live for that; he lived for Christ. He could say, "I have suffered the loss of all things, but I count it but refuse that I might win Christ."

Ittai did not come to David when the king was on the throne surrounded with glory and majesty, but when he was fleeing before his own son who had risen against him. There was no promise of immediate or even future blessing, of security or of a certain dwelling-place. David said, "Shall I make thee wander about with us seeing I go I know not where?", yet Ittai threw in his lot with the king. There was no turning back. As Ruth said to Naomi, "Whither thou goest, I will go".

Faith can triumph in the midst of tragedy and, in any case, the joy and rejoicing of Ittai were simply to be with the king. Alas, there are so many who care more about personal promotion and position than about the favour of the One who died for them.

May the language of Scripture never be strange to us who have found grace in His sight. Let us go forth therefore "unto Him" outside the camp, bearing His reproach. To be with Christ, in Christ, and for Christ is necessary before we can say, "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me".

To be with the king, whether in death or life, was the firm determined decision of Ittai, who was a stranger and an exile. No wonder that in a very short time he was made one of the three most prominent captains (2 Samuel 18:2).

Try Thanksgiving

by S. E. Petts

"I will sacrifice unto Thee with the voice of thanksgiving" (Jonah 2:9).

ARE you among those who have long prayed for some great need to be met and still await an answer? Try thanksgiving!

Paul advised the Philippians to worry about nothing, "but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God".

When the princes of Babylon tricked their king into making an edict that would cause Daniel to be thrown to the lions, the prophet prayed and gave thanks before his God. His thanksgiving showed that he trusted God to answer his prayer. This confidence brought the answer.

Jonah 2:1-8 deals with this man's prayer for deliverance from the belly of the whale. Verse 9 records his thanksgiving and God's act of salvation followed immediately.

A minister with the spiritual gift of healing was brought to a woman who found standing difficult because of varicose veins in her legs. His first words were, "Thank God, Jesus wants to heal". The asking had frequently been done by the woman; it only required thanks to God for the healing to be manifested.

Supplication makes the need known; thanksgiving brings response.

Thanksgiving

Words: A. A. Biddle

YOU will be sure to know the chorus of the hymn, "Count your blessings". It goes like this:
Count your blessings, name them one by one,
Count your blessings, see what God has done;
Count your blessings, name them one by one,
And it will SURPRISE you what the Lord has done.

Do we grumble and complain? Really we ought to be full of thanks to God for all the good things that we enjoy in this fantastic world of 1974. The last thing that I want to do is to go back 100 years or even fifty years. It is great to be alive now. Let us count our blessings and be grateful.

Some time ago I read this. It really made me think how privileged I was to be alive at this time. I hope it will have the same effect on you.

"Why fret? Are the trains too slow for you? Caesar with all his Court never exceeded the speed limit. Are the lights too dim? David wrote his psalms by the light of a smoky torch. Are you hungry? The children of some lands are starving for a crust of bread. Are you sick? Suppose you had lived 2,000 years ago when most sickness was fatal. Are you poor? The Lord Jesus Christ was not wealthy. Cheer up! Thank God you live in this age. Why fret?" Remember what it says in Philippians 4:6: "In everything by prayer and supplication with THANKSGIVING let your requests be made known unto God". A famous minister once wrote, "The greatest thanksgiving is thanksgiving".

Are you always counting your money? Try counting the total number of pennies in Matthew 18:28 + Mark 6:37 + Luke 7:41 + John 12:5.

Keep that smile!

To the Young People of Elim

A Letter from the President

I FELT that it would be good to share with you some of my thoughts about today's — and tomorrow's world and our place in history as Pentecostal Christians. I felt that I should write to you about this because, in many ways, you are the generation on which depends the future of Christianity in general, and Elim in particular.

When Napoleon marched his troops into Egypt, he halted them by the massive pyramids and said, "Men, the centuries look down up us!". You, too, stand at a cross roads in history. You are the twentieth century successors of those young men and woman who walked out into the arenas of Rome and died for their faith. You are members of that same born-again breed, who, by the grace of God and the power of the Spirit, carried the message of the gospel across oceans and continents, penetrated the dark recesses of paganism with the light of Christ and lived and served the Lord Christ, some by amazing feats of courage and endurance, and others by quiet dedication in humdrum everyday situations, because they were convinced both of the truth and the worthwhileness of the Christian faith. Your spiritual ancestry goes back into an illustrious past; the blood that flows through your spiritual veins is derived from a long line of faithful, Bible-believing, Spirit-enabled men. You are the modern descendants of the Early Church, of the men who died at the stake, of the evangelists who rode forth with Wesley and Whitfield, of that intrepid company who followed William Booth into the dark places of the earth, of the earnest, hungry men who prayed for another Pentecost and lived to see the fire descend from heaven. Upon you are the ends of the ages come.

With such an ancestry and such a destiny, it goes without saying that we need to be keenly alert to the opportunities and responsibilities that rest upon us today. The world in which we live is truly an amazing one, a Jekyll and Hyde of great scientific progress and incredible wickedness. How then are we to face the challenge of life in our modern world?

In the first place, we cannot opt out of it. Strangely enough, this is what the modern hippy community has in common with the monks of medieval times. The monks tried to run away from the temptations and harsh facts of their world in the hope that isolation in cloistered calm would bring them freedom to pray and to live holy lives. They discovered that the world, the flesh and the devil squeezed through the cracks in monastery doors and their meditations were interrupted by the demands of sin. The modern hippy, often disgusted — and understandably so, in some cases — by the hypocrisy and corruption of modern society, has also tried to opt out by creating desert communes. But, like the monks, he has discovered that there is no ideal society, that latent selfishness, greed and lust grow as vigorously in the commune as they do in the rottenness of modern society. The Lord Jesus has reminded us that we are "in the world" and that He desires that we shall be so, not to partake of its corruption, but to stand as His representatives as a redeemed — and redeeming — community in the world (see John 17:14-18).

The fact is, then, that we cannot huddle away on some spiritual desert island with our eight evangelical discs. By the wish of our Lord and Saviour we are committed to living in the world and to living positively and creatively. How can we do this? First of all by jealously guarding our personal fellowship with God. That may seem almost a contradiction, but no Christian can live effectively in the hostile territory of a godless world unless he has a firm spiritual base. The Lord Jesus Himself was able to live and work effectively among publicans and sinners only because His own life was deeply rooted in God through prayer. Too many Christians lurch from convention to convention, from camp to "Come Together", relying on occasional doses of enthusiasm instead of learning to walk humbly and consistently with God. Somewhere or other we must make time for prayer and the reading of the Bible every day. Each new day demands that we consciously and definitely get alone with God and open our whole being to the Holy Spirit, asking Him to fill us afresh and to enable us to meet the opportunities of that day. The Word of God and the Holy Spirit are the channels through which Christ communicates with us and, unless we open ourselves daily to communion with Him through these means, our relationship with Him will deteriorate. I am convinced that one of the basic reasons for the failure of the Church is the failure of the majority of the members to learn this principle and live by it. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength. . . they shall run and not be weary; and they shall walk and not faint".

From such a position of strength we can move out to meet the challenge of daily life. Life is very complex and for many of us there are difficult decisions to make. How far shall I pursue my studies? Shall I go on to university? How far should I as a Christian get involved in the promotion race? What should be my attitude to the trades unions? Is it right to get involved in some of the social aspects of my profession? I don't believe that there is a stock answer to any of these questions. What may be perfectly right for one man may be wrong for another, and the danger is that we judge everyone else by what appears right to us personally. I do believe, however, that there is a basic principle on which we can make our personal decisions. Let the words of the Lord Jesus test our response: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you". Our first commitment is to Christ and His kingdom. For one man that kingdom may best be served by his presence in high academic circles, for another, by his effective presence in the meetings of his union. Others may feel that they must forego lucrative offers because they would interfere with their spiritual priorities. The world certainly needs dedicated Christians in the key positions in education, nursing, commerce and industry and the social services and we need to recognise these as legitimate areas of ministry in the world of today.

Several years ago I visited a kibbutz — one of the early Jewish settlements on "the other side" of Galilee, not far from where the man among the tombs was delivered. I had the opportunity of talking with one of the first Jews to return to Israel and I have never forgotten his words. Speaking about the attitude of those early settlers, he said, "We are not concerned with what we could get out of the land. Rather we saw the land as a vessel of grace into which we could pour our resources for the common good". Ought not this to be our attitude? We are "stewards of the manifold grace of God" (1 Peter 4:10) and our first concern should not be, "What's in it for me?", but "How can I best serve God in this situation?"

Seeking first the kingdom also involves seeking the righteousness of God. We are called unto holiness and that holiness needs to be expressed in our integrity, our punctuality, our honesty in business dealings, our clear-cut purity in personal relationships. Life for us is not merely a matter of success at all costs; it is doing the will of God from the heart. We are called not merely to be prosperous, but pleasing to God. Whether it be in class room, hospital ward, factory, shop or boardroom, there is a need for young Christians, dedicated to their Christian principles, but also efficient and conscientious in their duties, who will both speak courageously and live consistently. Our presence in the world should be as an oasis of purity and love, where those who have lost their illusions and those who are just plain "fed up to the teeth" with life can find understanding and practical concern. Such an approach may get us deeply involved with people and their problems, and it will certainly make demands on our patience and our resources of wisdom and spiritual strength, but are not these part of our calling as Christians? We are not here merely to make money or to multiply possessions. Our calling as Christians is to minister to men and women in their need, to tell them of Christ and to manifest the reality of His love through our genuine desire to help.

Recently I was privileged to visit the little town of Monaghan in Eire, where Elim was founded. Working with the warm-hearted members of that Assembly, I was moved by the realisation that in this small town rose the spiritual stream which has widened and deepened into the Movement that we know today. Since those early days in 1915, thousands have been saved and filled with the Spirit, healed and led on into a deeper walk with God. I thought of George Jeffreys and the small band of dedicated men and women who commenced the Elim work in those days and then I thought of the multitudes of honest, God-fearing people who have formed the backbone of our churches through the years, ordinary people, many of them, but thirsty for God, men and women moved by a deep concern for the ungodly, who have prayed and given and themselves have witnessed in order to spread the gospel. Thank God for the thousands of "unknown warriors" who have faithfully maintained our churches and therefore our existence as a Movement to this day. As I pondered all this I found myself wondering how I, as a contemporary Elim minister, compared with those early pioneers. Do I possess the same dedication, the same passionate love for Christ, the same Pentecostal fervour, the same concern for the lost as they had? It is a challenging thought.

This is where you come in. Upon the shoulders of your generation lies the future of Elim. You, the young people of Elim in 1974, are the ministers and missionaries, the deacons and spiritual leaders of tomorrow's world. It may be that the Lord will come again before then, but we cannot and must not preasks veteran preacher Joseph Smith

To what purpose is the Universe?

SIR Bernard Lovell says: "Any answer lies outside the scope of scientific observation and theory". Harlow Shapley, one of America's foremost astronomers, says: "Although science knows something about what the universe is composed of and a certain amount about how it works, when it comes to 'Why?', we're stuck. All we can say is, 'God only knows.'" Some time ago an astronomer gave a lecture in Belfast on "The Starry Heavens". He said (as reported in The Belfast Telegraph): "If it were possible to devise an automatic machine which could count stars at the rate of 1,000 a second, it was estimated that at the end of 5,000,000,000 years of continuous operation, it would have counted only about one per cent of the stars in the visible universe".

I read in The Reader's Digest: "It is estimated that our galaxy is of the order of 100,000 million stars. If you reduced the size of the earth to the size of a full stop at the end of a sentence (or 1/50 of an inch), then on this basis the distance of the earth to the moon would be five-eighths of an inch, the distance of the earth to the sun about 19½ feet, the distance of the Milky Way about 23,380,000 miles, the distance of the Andromeda galaxy 467,600,000 miles".

This mighty universe, continuously working so smoothly and perfectly, gives us some idea of the greatness of our God and of His Son. Read and compare Colossians 1:16-18; John 1:3,10. "And God (plural) said, Let Us make man in Our image, after Our likeness" (Genesis 1:26). Could God go higher?

God is truly great in power, wisdom, knowledge, understanding, goodness, righteousness and mercy; above all else He is great in love, for "God is love". Love desires someone to love; it seeks expression. See John 3:16. Therefore the Most High desired to have a great family of sons, real sons born of Himself, having His own life and nature in them, whom He would educate and train in the ways of the Lord. He had one Son, the Heir of all things, by whom He made the worlds (Hebrews 1:2). God decided to send Him into this world to gather out of this world a great family of sons through Him. According to John 1:11,12 both male and female become sons of God when they receive Jesus Christ. The Bible goes on to say: "And if children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified together. For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us" (Romans 8:17,18). If we are heirs of God, to what are we heirs? As joint-heirs with Christ we are heirs to whatever He is heir and He is the heir of ALL THINGS! This includes the universe. "For it became Him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings" (Hebrews 2:10).

What great, wise king would desire to have a family of sons without making provision for them concerning their future? God's sons, having their Father's life in them, will live for ever, therefore it is natural that God will make great provisions for them for eternity. Surely the universe is part of God's kingdom. If not, to whom does it belong? "Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?" (James 2:5). "Then shall the King say unto them on His right hand, Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world" (Matthew 25:34).

According to the Scriptures how much we inherit of God's mighty universe depends on our faithfulness down here. Study Matthew 25:20,21; Luke 19:12-27; Revelation 22:12. "He that overcometh shall inherit all things: and I will be his God, and he shall be My son" (Revelation 21:7). "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with My Father in His throne" (Revelation 3:21).

But someone may ask: "Why such an immense universe?" It is not so immense that there is no end to the number of stars. "He telleth the number of the stars; He calleth them all by their names" (Psalm 147:4). How great is our God? He not only knows the number of the stars, but the name of every one of them. For how long do you think that we will live in God's great kingdom? "Why," you say, "for ever and ever!". By the time that you will have seen over your Father's estate, it will not be breakfast time in eternity. You can depend upon it that there will be plenty of variety in God's everlasting kingdom, as there is in this world of ours. "For one star differs from and surpasses another in its beauty and brilliance" (1 Corinthians 15:41, Amp.).

It is not only the size of the kingdom which thrills my soul, but also its character. It is more than a place; it is a state of heart and mind, without which no place, however great and grand, would be worth living in. It is righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost (Romans 14:17). It is wherever the Lord of hosts reigns as king, whether in the human heart, on this earth, or throughout the mighty universe. When Peter had a foretaste of that kingdom on the mount of transfiguration he wanted to stay there. Such is the place where we are going to enjoy its glorious heavenly atmosphere, not in a mortal body subject to death, but in a glorified body which will never know pain, suffering nor death, a body perfectly adapted to space travel.

The One who created the universe, who is seated on the Father's throne, with all authority in heaven and earth in His hands is Jesus Christ, who is one day going to reign over all things. "If we suffer, we shall also reign with Him".

Nothing grips my soul more than the love of the one, sole, everlasting Heir of all things — that He should come down from His throne to be born in a manger, to live in a humble home in very primitive conditions, and then to die an agonising death on a cross amid the derision and blasphemies of His enemies, that they with others might be forgiven many sins and be brought into the royal family of God to be heirs of God and joint-heirs with Himself in His everlasting kingdom. A young man who is the heir to a great estate is seldom, if ever, really happy at the prospect of his father going out and bringing in a host of other young men to be joint-heirs with himself, but the sole Heir of all things shed His blood and died the most ignominious death that we might become joint-heirs with Himself to the everlasting kingdom of the God of the whole universe.

No wonder we sing: "Love so amazing, so divine, demands my soul, my life, my all".

The Danger of Supposing

"Whom do men say that I . . . am?" (Matthew 16:6-20).

1. Suppositions about His Birth: "(As was supposed the son of Joseph)" (Luke 3:23).

"I want to assure you that I do not believe in the virgin birth, and I hope none of you do". (Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick). Dr. L. Weatherhead, in his last book, offers the theory of another, that Mary was a temple prostitute and that Zechariah was the father of Jesus.

2. "Supposing Him to be the Gardener" (John 20:15), only a man.

3. Supposing Him to be a Spirit (Mark 6:49), only a spirit. Today His physical resurrection is denied.

4. Supposing Him to be in the company (Luke 2:44). But He wasn't! The most dangerous supposition of all is to take for granted that He is with us when He isn't. Now read Matthew 16:15-20.

Ellen Arnold

ELLEN Arnold, whom I knew well, dedicated her life to the winning of India for Christ. All through the years she revelled in her sublime task. Then she reached retiring age. But she could not retire. She argued that, although the years of her official service had expired, she had a right to live where she liked. She would live in India and labour for her Saviour still. So there she remained to the end. And on her tombstone at Ataikola, near Pubna, is a text, and a comment on that text. The text is this: "I am the Way, and the Truth, and the Life". And the comment? "Ellen Arnold walked that Way; taught that Truth; lived that Life!"

A Quotation

Not merely "Wear a Hat!"

"AND this further. Let the woman wholly cover her head (unless perchance she be at home), for so dressed she will have respect, and be withdrawn from gazing eyes. And if thus with modesty, and with a veil she covereth her own eyes, she shall neither be misled herself, nor shall she draw others, by the exposure of her face, into the dangerous path of sin. For this willett the Word, seeing that it is meet for the woman that she pray with covered head."

Clement of Alexandria, Paedagogues III.

But who regards Clement's understanding of things today?

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

67. "Shiloh" (Genesis 49:10)

by F. Lavender

AS Jacob showed the future of his sons we notice that he quickly passed over his three oldest boys, Reuben, Levi and Simeon, because of their sin. Instead he declared the supremacy of Judah, his fourth son, and Judah was promised the ruler's sceptre "until Shiloh come". This word has a number of interpretations: "the sent one"; "the seed"; "the peaceable, prosperous one". One thing is clear about all these expressions: they each refer to the Person of the Messiah, the One to whom the gathering of the peoples would finally be.

The Lord Jesus was sent by the Father (John 17:3) and is called the Apostle ("Sent one") of our profession (Hebrews 3:1). He is also the promised Seed of Abraham (compare Genesis 22:18; Galatians 3:16). The Bible shows that He is the peaceful One (compare Isaiah 9:6; Mark 4:39; Luke 24:36; Revelation 22:1-5); and the prosperous One (Isaiah 53:10; Hebrew 10:7; Matthew 17:5; 28:18). It is certainly true that "to Him the gathering of the people" shall be. The cross of the Lord Jesus has been the gathering point of multitudes. Believers have always met around "Jesus in the midst". The Scriptures show that the Lamb is the centre of the worship of heaven. On the Day appointed by the Father every knee shall bow at the name of Jesus and every tongue confess His lordship. All these revelations concerning the Lord Jesus are gathered up in Jacob's vision of Judah's supremacy.

Workers Together

Within hours of each other two dear members of the Elim family passed into the presence of the Lord. I refer to Pastor W.J. Hilliard and to Mr. Bernard Wardley of the Elim Church, Sheffield. There must have been a sweet re-union in the gloryland for these two brethren served the Lord together in the Sheffield church, one in his capacity as a shepherd and teacher and the other as Head Usher and caretaker. It is good to view life in retrospect, specially so at the parting of the ways. I was a young Crusader during the time of Pastor Hilliard's ministry in Sheffield but I thank God for the sound scriptural teaching I received and the example of a godly life and of indefatigable service, particularly in sick visiting.

It was early in Pastor Farlow's ministry in 1932 (I hope my recollections are correct) that I first met Mr. Wardley. He had only one daughter and she was a cripple, as a result of contracting polio at the age of 3 years. This dreaded infection had left her with a club foot and leg severely shrunken and weak. She was entirely dependent upon a surgical boot and a leg caliper. Mr. Wardley was a typical hard-headed non church goer and very sceptical, when in desperation his wife and daughter announced that they were to attend the prayer meeting of the Elim Foursquare Gospel Church. In fact, if my memory serves me right he gave them this parting shot "Well, you can go, but I should have to see someone before they claimed to be healed and after, for me to believe that praying can do any good".

Well God took him at his word and in the ordinary prayer meeting Evelyn was anointed with oil and prayed for and apparently nothing happened! But God had begun to work and the healing processes were restoring the poor deformed limb, for on returning home, Evelyn Wardley discovered, — how or when she knew not, — but to put it in her own words, her foot "had gone right"! The surgical appliances were stripped off and after 13 years Evelyn found she could walk on the sole of her foot and that her leg was strong and healthy, completely restored by the power of God!

The neighbours were called in and the grandparents who lived nearby, and there was great rejoicing. Post-cards were written there and then to relatives, giving the good news and on the next day Evelyn's miraculous healing was made known throughout every department of J.G. Graves and Co, the large mail order firm at which she worked. As a result of this miracle the whole Wardley family experienced the greater miracle of conversion and have served the Lord ever since. Mr. Wardley's elder son is a deacon in the Sheffield Church and his wife and gifted family are saved and are very active Spirit-filled believers. His younger son is a Salvation Army Officer and is working for God in Ghana, West Africa where we had precious fellowship together.

Since the death of his wife some months ago, Mr. Wardley had lived alone and had said on a recent occasion "I hope the Lord takes me" and the dear Lord did just that for he passed into heaven, sitting in his chair with the Elim Evangel in his hand. We have had many fine men of God in Elim and we do well to remember them. William Hilliard was a brother beloved, a gracious gentle Christ-like man; Bro. Wardley was cast in a different mould, he was a down to earth, plain speaking Yorkshireman, but they were both sold out for God. Their lives showed forth the power of God in saving and keeping and using poor sinners. We praise God for such men and like them in the hymn-writer's words:

*Let us join — 'tis God commands
Let us join our hearts and hands;
Help to gain our calling's hope,
Build we each the other up;
Still forget the things behind,
Follow Christ in heart and mind,
Toward the mark unwearied press,
Seize the crown of righteousness.*

TO THE YOUNG PEOPLE OF ELIM... from page 11

sume on that. Upon your generation lies a great responsibility and a glorious privilege. If you are not fully committed to Christ and His kingdom then Elim will suffer in the days that lie ahead. If you are not fully Pentecostal then Elim will become a sub-Pentecostal movement. If you are not convinced of the urgency and absolute necessity of evangelism then Elim will become just another denomination tending the spluttering flames of memory. Let me put it the other way. What you are as the new generation of Elim people will determine what Elim will be. If you will love Jesus Christ with all your heart and seek first His kingdom, if you will walk humbly and consistently with God in your own personal life and out in the world at large, if you will seek to be truly Pentecostal, in actual personal experience as well as by name, if you will see that the cause of Christ demands nothing less than your total personal commitment, then the faith and vision of those early Pentecostals will not have been in vain and the cause of Christ will prosper because of you.

Think again of your spiritual ancestry: you are the successors of a noble race of godly men. Think again of your destiny: you are called to live and serve Jesus Christ in the end of the age. God bless you and inspire you to be faithful in your witness in the world, faithful to your local church, and faithful to Him who loved you and gave Himself for you.

Yours sincerely in Him,

John Lancaster

How to give a Testimony

by Laurence E. Lambert, Pastor of our Blackpool (Waterloo Road) Church and a member of the Elim Youth Committee

Regard it as a Privilege. DO not think that it is just a programme filler; it is great to be able to tell what the Lord has done for one's soul. The apostle Paul often spoke of his dramatic meeting with Jesus; before kings and judges he witnessed to God's saving grace.

Do not apologise. Some young people say something like: "I'm afraid that I have not got a dramatic testimony like. . .". To be saved from sinning is a greater miracle than to be saved out of sin. Anyway the depth of inbred sin is in us all. The Lord has saved you and has done GREAT things for you; tell them gladly.

Do not exaggerate. In order to make their experience more graphic, some talk in overstatements. "I tasted all the sin and wickedness of the world"; "I went to the dens of iniquity" they say; to follow this with, "The Lord saved me when I was ten" tends to cause listeners to smile, to say the least!

Do not just repeat dates. Some say, "I was saved on the 14th July, 1972, baptised in water on 24th September, and filled with the Spirit on the 12th November. Amen". This does not convey anything of the wonder and glory of knowing Christ. Mention the dates by all means, but tell of what led you to the service, of what brought conviction to your heart, of the first awakening of eternal reality, of the way of God, the way in which He has led and kept you.

Adapt to the Type of Testimony requested. There are match-stick testimonies, when you have to say in a few moments what Christ has done for you. At other times you have the opportunity for perhaps fifteen minutes of sharing experiences of the Lord's working. Either way, ascertain what is expected of you.

Be up to Date. Begin at the beginning, but Christ is real now, Christ is keeping us now, we should be growing now, we should be witnessing now. Mention some examples of how you have proved the Lord recently, some prayer that has been answered recently. Avoid needless repetitions that the heathen use.

Do not glorify the Devil. Give no place to the enemy of our souls. We can overdo descriptions of the sin and evil that used to fill our lives. Also do not say things like, "I have failed the Lord many many times and often fall away from Him". That does not bring glory to Christ. Do not say, "I backslid into the world and then rededicated my life, then I backslid again". These things do not show the keeping power of Christ. Talk of Jesus, His love, His cross. Be positive.

Do not preach. There will no doubt be a speaker during the service. How often when one calls on someone to give a testimony, they start to preach and even to make an appeal. A testimony is what God has done and is doing for your soul, for your family, for your group.

Be radiant. Some folk stress all the difficulties of the Christian life, the hardness of the way, the persecutions, the problems, the hardship. There is a cross in being a Christian, but the disciples counted it all joy that they could suffer for Christ. A salesman would not sell many items if he spent his time giving all the reasons for not buying the goods. It is a wonderful thing to be a Christian; say that and more.

Be prayerful. Ask the Lord to bless your effort and perhaps your testimony will be the means of bringing some either to Christ or nearer to Him. A good testimony can transform a meeting and bring much blessing.

Monday, March 4th

Luke 9:46-62

"He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem" (v.51).

THE fixed gaze of the Lord Jesus was noticed by the wayward Samaritans. Because of religious sectarianism they rejected Him. Even the apostles rejected thoughts of the cross. When we focus our gaze on it, human reasoning and religious argument are hushed. Maybe today in our lives the cross will cut across our natural desires, but let us steadfastly fix our eyes on the Christ of the cross, then later we shall gaze on the heavenly Jerusalem. The enemy will see that we look backward if our eyes are not focused on the Lord (v.62). Ploughing in winter months was not easy; the warm comforts of home would readily distract the ploughman from the task in hand. Preparation work for the sowing of the seed is vital in Christian ministry. Keep your hand on the plough and your eyes on the Lord, looking forward to the harvest.

Tuesday, March 5th

Luke 10:1-16

"Seventy - two by two" (v.1)
WE would perhaps prefer a teach-in or a rally for the seventy, with plenty of items to boost things! Jesus made thirty-five teams of witnesses to go before Him to the place where He would follow; what a privilege to be forerunners of the Christ. The seventy sowers went forth with prayer and a message of deliverance for spirit, soul and body to the whosoever. Salvation, healing and great joy followed in the trail of these pioneers, who preached and witnessed about the Christ whom they knew and loved. The seventy were not in the ranks of the apostles or the inner circle like Peter, James and John, but nevertheless they were effective in their God-given ministry. The knock on the door, the talk around the table, and in some cases a bed and breakfast stay brought great rejoicing in heaven and peace to many a home. "Peace be to this house" was no vain greeting.

Wednesday, March 6th

Luke 10:17-24

"The devils are subject unto us" (v.17).
WHAT a thrill they experienced in their outreach ministry, when power from heaven was released in Jesus' name to liberate so many captives. Jesus gently warned them to get their priorities right and to thank God that their names were written in heaven, which is far better than being on the honours' list of kings, or receiving great publicity for healings. They were only instruments and channels of divine grace. Pharisees, scribes and lawyers looked on while uneducated believers (v.21) gladly gave their time to outreach ministry. What ecclesiastical authorities failed to grasp babes in Christ understood by faith. Go forth, hold forth, show forth, in the mighty name of Jesus!

Thursday, March 7th

Luke 10:25-42

"Went to Him, and bound up his wounds" (v.34).
SERMONS on the wounds of Christ should move the Christian to awareness of the wounds in our society and the great responsibility that is ours to turn aside and minister to the "half dead" of our generation. He "took care of him"; the Samaritan went the extra mile in the literal sense, paying his bill and reminding the innkeeper also to "take care of him". Harmony between the evangelist and the pastor of the local assembly is needed for the strengthening of the rescued soul. "When I come again, I will repay thee" reminds us that whatever energy, time, money we spend now to rescue souls will be amply rewarded when our Lord returns.

Friday, March 8th

Luke 11:1-13

"Teach us to pray" (v.1)
WE have teach-ins for every subject today, and very profitable times they can be, but the disciples asked for an instructional talk on prayer, so that all other aspects of their work could be reinforced. The disciples' prayer starts with the upward aspect: Heavenly name, Heavenly kingdom and the Father's will. The second part is inward to soul and body. The third part is outward, to the forgiveness of others. Finally we are directed onward to future paths to which He may lead us. The emergency request for three loaves came at an inconvenient hour, at midnight (v.5). It seemed inconsiderate to ask, seek, knock, on behalf of someone who had called on you at some unexpected hour. "How much more" (v.13) shall our heavenly Father bestow abundantly His gifts, His bounty, His Spirit on all who call today. Let us make our requests with thanksgiving and in faith.

Saturday, March 9th

Luke 11:14-26

"The finger of God" (v.20).
REPLYING to His critics as He cast out devils, the Lord used this expression, maybe reminding His accusers of the incident in Exodus 8:19, where the magicians admitted that the finger of God was responsible for the supernatural demonstrations before Pharaoh. Jesus used His finger (John 8:6) to write in the dust of the temple floor and this brought

Mother

by A. S. F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

THE name above all earthly names is "Mother". The greatest word is "God". The deepest word is "soul". The longest word is "eternity". The swiftest word is "time". The nearest word is "now". The darkest word is "sin". The meanest word is "hypocrisy". The broadest word is "truth". The strongest word is "light". The tenderest word is "love". The sweetest word is "home". But the dearest word is "Mother".

To have a godly mother is the most precious treasure that anyone can have. What this country needs today is more home religion. The most important chapters of history should be entitled, "A Mother's Influence".

Let me try and show you some of the thousands of mothers who have left their influence on history.

It was Lincoln who said, "All that I am or hope to be, I owe it to my angel mother". Of Cromwell, the historian says, "No other member of his family, neither his wife nor his father, influenced him as did his mother. He followed her advice when young, he established her in the royal palace of Whitehall when he became great, and when she died, he buried her in Westminster Abbey". From the mother of Augustine to the mother of John Wesley, and from the mother of John Wesley, to Victoria, the mother of Edward VII, the story of Christian motherhood has been the brightest thing on the pages of history.

Henry Ward Beecher, whose mother died when he was three years old, said, "No devout Roman Catholic ever saw so much in the Virgin Mary as I beheld in the childhood vision and memory's dream of my sainted mother". That angel form was ever present in the life of the great preacher.

This chain of sacred contribution, like a necklace of jewels, like a rosary of fond memories, like the glittering flash of an ever-recurring thought, like a thing of beauty for ever, runs through all the pages of history and biography.

Geroge Herbert said, "One good mother is worth one hundred school masters", because the first school is the school of the home and the hours for lessons are morning, noon and night. Home is a blessed word, but home is not just lovely furniture — a large home complete with gardens and car — but a place of real motherhood and fatherhood. Here the child begins the study of nature and human nature. The most sensitive thing in the universe is the soul of a little child. God has so arranged it that in the home life all human characteristics should meet and all human eccentricities should find a proper balance. Youth and age, ignorance and experience, courage and weakness, all find their co-ordination in home life.

The Church must also be a home where all ages meet and feel one with each other. The greatest sacrifices for the Church have been made by Christian mothers.

Bishop Sampson was the only son of a widowed mother and when, as a young man, he felt called to the ministry, it was with fear and embarrassment that he went to tell his mother. He was all that she had in the world, he tells us. "I feared that it might almost break her heart to tell her that I must go away to study" he reveals, but his mother was not surprised or disturbed. This was her answer: "My son, I have been looking for this hour ever since you were born!"

Some of you may have given up sons and daughters to serve the Lord in this land and overseas: God bless you, mother!

conviction to the critics of the woman concerned! Many fingers point at others, but we must first point our fingers within in self-assessment, so that our family altar, with all its value, may be enhanced by the sincerity of pure hearts and consciences. The hand of God will soon be evident as a result of our heart-searching and many lives will be influenced as our hands are linked with the Saviour's in intercession for the souls of men.

Sunday, March 10th

Luke 11:27-36

"The queen of the south" (v.31)

THE queen of Sheba made a journey to ascertain the truth concerning the wisdom, might, and dominion of Solomon. She was overwhelmed by the majesty of the great son of David.

Thousands of repentant sinners will arise to give allegiance to the King of kings (v.32), along with kings and queens who have found peace with God in their earthly reigns. Jonah's failings as a preacher and even Solomon's faults, did not excuse those who heard the Lord's message from their lips. Let us long for the wisdom of Solomon and also to experience the revival that Jonah witnessed, when people of all ranks cried out for mercy. This Lord's day, expect God to do great things as we faithfully proclaim His truth.

Editorial

IT seems likely that no-one has really won the election.

Christians will view the situation with concern, for they are bound to be on the side of law and order, and weak or indeterminate government can lead to a lessening of the regard for these. Underlying the pre-election campaign and the situation in the country are some very worrying aspects. For me there has been an air of unreality about the scoring of party political points; you could hardly have guessed that our land was faced with such problems. It has been pointedly said that in the wake of permissiveness comes anarchy, which leads to the possibility of dictatorship. Where leadership is weak — and the current political situation seems likely to bring about such weakness — men can be pulled along in the wake of a leader who appears to be able to provide direction and national aims. You have only to recall the Weimar republic in Germany and the subsequent rise of Nazism. We can not be complacent (if we ever could be!) and say, "It can't happen here". We have lived for too long on what spiritual capital we had.

Did you not long for a Christian voice to be raised at national level during all the party political posturings? Yet what a problem it all is for many Christians. Government there must be, but how do you subscribe wholeheartedly to all the points in the party manifestoes or even most of them? For example, it appeared that the Common Market was played down, and this remains a great headache to many. The confrontation between what used to be called capital and labour seemed to be accentuated, when thinking men must see that nations depend on all their citizens working together. The producer, the administrator, the teacher, the judge, the doctor, yes and the minister, and all the others of us must be a family if the nation is to prosper in true righteousness. What was said about Ulster that was truly constructive?

I cannot help but return to an oft-expressed theme. In these last days we need to pray and to evangelise with new fervour and power. The impact of Pentecost on Great Britain has nowhere like achieved its full potential. Materialism has made such inroads into the thinking of so many of our fellow-citizens that spiritual values seem to them to be irrelevant.

We have to confess that we are too often preaching the gospel within the walls of our churches to the already converted. We must find ways of reaching the lost. Our country needs the Church today perhaps as never before. A Wesleyan-type revival is our longing and desire.

FUNDAMENTAL BELIEFS OF THE ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH — 1. THE BIBLE: We believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God and that none may add thereto or take away therefrom except at their peril. 2. THE TRINITY: We believe that the Godhead eternally exists in three persons Father Son and Holy Ghost and that these three are one God. 3. THE CHURCH: We believe that the Church consists of all persons who have been regenerated by the Holy Ghost and made new creatures in Christ Jesus. 4. THE SAVIOUR: We believe that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God and that through the death and risen power of Christ all who believe can be saved from the penalty and power of sin. 5. THE HEALER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Healer of the body and that all who will walk in obedience to His will can claim Divine Healing for their bodies. 6. THE BAPTISER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Baptiser in the Holy Ghost and that this Baptism with signs following is promised to every believer. 7. THE COMING KING: We believe in the personal and pre-millennial return of our Lord Jesus Christ to receive unto Himself the Church and afterwards to set up His Throne as King. 8. THE FRUIT: We believe that every believer on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour should produce the ninefold fruit of His Spirit: Love Joy peace longsuffering gentleness goodness faith meekness temperance. 9. THE GIFTS: We believe that the Church should claim and manifest the nine Gifts of the Holy Spirit: Wisdom knowledge faith healing miracles prophecy discernment tongues interpretation. 10. THE MINISTRY: We believe that God has given some apostles and some prophets and some evangelists and some pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry for the edifying of the Body of Christ. 11. THE FUTURE STATE: We believe in the eternal conscious bliss of all true believers in Christ and also in the eternal conscious punishment of all Christ rejectors. 12. THE ORDINANCES: We believe in the following ordinances: Partaking of bread and wine in memory of our Lord's death baptism by immersion for believers the laying on of hands and the anointing of the sick with oil.

CREWE

Pastor: M.C. Epton

WE in Crewe praise God for His presence among us in our seven day youth Crusade in January.

Before each meeting we organised ourselves in pre-meeting evangelism and thank God for the youth who have raised their hands in acknowledgement of their need of the Lord Jesus in their lives.

During the campaign we were favoured with messages from the word of God and with songs and testimonies. On the opening night and closing nights the Gospel Five from Macclesfield sang to us and the Tapestry from Birmingham also brought a blessing to our hearts.

Out of the many who raised their hands we praise God for the twenty who signed decision cards that were returned.

PORTSMOUTH

Pastor: A.A. Biddle

IS there another church in Elim where there is such a spirit of excitement and expectancy before, during and after every service? The weekend began on Friday night with a banquet in The Royal Beach Hotel, Southsea. Dinner was to commence at 8 p.m, but at around 7.30 nearly all the seats were filled, something like 160-170 being catered for. Many were members of the Church, but many more were friends and relations specially invited for the evening, not just for the meal, but that they might hear the good news of Jesus Christ. This is where my part in the weekend began. I had been deeply concerned about this. How do you speak to a crowd of people who have enjoyed a very fine meal and in a spirit which makes the occasion seem like a festival? I need not have worried; this was an event which was not only highly and efficiently organised, but which had been the subject of much prevailing prayer. The atmosphere was like an old-time revival meeting and I felt myself being carried along by the Spirit. What eternity will reveal as the outcome of that night must be good.

The Saturday and Sunday services were the same. The Gifts of the Spirit were in operation in the Communion service, young and old taking part in the operation of the Gifts and in the time of worship. I felt in my heart that this must be Pentecost. Then came the final service of the weekend, the gospel service. Outside in the streets it was almost like Piccadilly Circus in the rush hour. Cars seemed to be coming from everywhere; what a sight to gladden a preacher's heart. Inside the building — which bears the evident signs of a Pastor who is concerned that the House of God should be as attractive as it is possible to make it — the atmosphere was again one of exciting expectancy. A young man led the chorus singing, but there were young people everywhere. The front rows of the church were filled with young people. Great joy in what they were doing was so evident in their eyes and expressions. There was a wonderful blending of ages in the congregation, from somewhere in the nineties down to many babies. This is a family Church indeed.

Pastor and Mrs. Biddle took over the pastorate of the Church in 1959 and after fifteen years the work continues unabated. Mr. Biddle's own energy and dedication are clearly reflected in the congregation whom he pastors so splendidly. Two decisions for Christ were a magnificent seal on all the effort.

May God continue to bless Pastor and Mrs. Biddle and their wonderful people. Many thanks Portsmouth, for the privilege of sharing such a time with you.

BROADSTAIRS

Pastor: B. Grist

SEVENTY ladies from the Broadstairs free churches gathered with us to celebrate the first anniversary of our ladies' fellowship. A wonderful sense of the presence of the Lord was felt throughout the service, both in the ministry of song by Mrs. Stiggers and in the message presented by Mrs. Mathews of Blean. Two sisters from our Hastings Assembly were also present.

It is the custom in Broadstairs for the ladies' fellowship to visit each other at the time of each anniversary. We had been accorded a very warm welcome wherever we went, so we decided to return the hospitality, but we had no kitchen in our church, no gas, and no crockery! We sent out the invitations in faith that the Lord would provide, which He did. During the month the gas was connected, a coffee-bar type of kitchen installed, and a cheque from friends in Switzerland purchased a set of crockery. The result was a very blessed afternoon of fellowship for which we give the Lord all the glory.

(Mrs.) CHRISTINE SUMNER

GRANGETOWN, Teesside

Pastor: A.L. Hawkes

THOUGH the idea of spending a day at church seemed strange to many who attended the morning programme, the experiment of a day of fellowship and prayer was a great success. After the usual choruses, classes and the Communion service, we sat down to an enjoyable, well-prepared dinner. After the washing-up, shared by everyone, there was a time of questions and sharing followed by prayer and praise in which we all seemed to have a greater freedom, not being limited by time or thoughts of other activities. Following a buffet tea some young people went out on the streets distributing copies of Elim News and inviting people to the evening service. Others stayed for the regular 5.30 prayer meeting, which seemed to have an even greater "oneness in the Lord".

Having been close to the Lord and each other all afternoon we entered into the evening service with a greater spirit of joy and thankfulness. It was truly worth staying for and I at least hope that it will be done again.

Beginnings

2. "In the beginning God"

by Adrian L. Hawkes, Pastor of our Grangetown (Teesside) Church

HAVE you noticed what funny ideas some people have? They start with something that seems quite crazy, but from it they lead to something that sounds almost logical. When you stop to think, though, you wonder how they got to where they got from where they started. Is your head going round and round? Actually we call that sort of thing "starting with basic presupposition", i.e. because you assume that one thing is true, you are able to work out other things.

Christianity has a basic presupposition. It is that there is a God. The Bible never takes the trouble to give us long explanations about God. It just starts by saying, "In the beginning God", and, because we trust the beginning, we are able to work out and apply what God teaches us through the rest of the Bible.

This is not all, however. Compare assumption and presumption. At school we used to have science lessons. The teacher would tell us certain things and then we would be given experiments to do, the idea being that we should prove for ourselves that what the teacher had said was true. Not being too much of a good listener, I usually mixed the wrong things and something totally different from what should have happened would happen to my test tube and the teacher would write on my experiment report, "How amazing!", or something equally sarcastic.

I suppose that it must be something like that when it comes to cooking. You take the basic recipe and if you put in all the ingredients in the right way, the finished object should look something like the glossy picture in the book. Don't worry, though, if yours turned out flat and burnt and tasted all squelchy instead of crisp — it was probably the oven!

What I'm trying to get at is that, although Christianity assumes that there is a God, it isn't all something that is airy-fairy or unprovable. In just the same way that you need to get the experiment right to show the correct result or the recipe right to get the cake to look like the glossy picture, I know that, if we really put God to the test, He doesn't let us down. God says in the Bible, "Prove Me". To put it another way, "Put Me to the test". He invites us to experiment. "Here are the ingredients — try them and you'll find that they really do work", is the offer.

Sometimes I think that the prayers that people pray are vague, like, "Bless all the people in the world".

How would we know if God answered that prayer? We need to bring God into such a situation that, when we pray, we will be sure if He has answered or not. We need to be more daring, a little more adventurous.

I read in the Bible that, if a person calls out to Jesus Christ to forgive their sin and give them peace within, He will answer. So I experimented. I called, I told Him positively that I wanted to know Him, to be sure that He was there and that I belonged to Him, that He really was looking after me. There was no blinding light or tremendous emotional experience for me, but He certainly answered with a steady, growing assurance that, the more I trusted Him, the more He was able to take care of me, to guide, lead, direct me, to watch over me. More than these, He showed me that He really was there and understands me. Now, when I pray, I pray in such a way that I really will know if God has answered my prayers or not. I've learned that He sometimes says, "No" and that sometimes He says, "Be patient", and that sometimes He says, "That wasn't a very good thing to pray for". I didn't understand it all at once, but, having begun, we continue. Christ said that it was the people who sought God who would find him, not the ones who don't bother. Having begun to search and prove, you find that it really does work or rather, God works!

The Triumph of the Truth

by H. Burton Haynes

"Herod was eaten of worms. . . But the Word of God grew and multiplied" (Acts 12:23, 24).

KARL MARX, the political economist and philosopher, was born in Prussia. While at the University, he came into contact with many fellow radicals, editing a radical paper which was suppressed. During the German revolution of 1848 he issued the Communist Manifesto. He was subsequently banished and came to London in 1849, where, despite the daily cares of a large family and unrelenting poverty, he continued his economic studies, employing the literary resources of the British Museum in his research.

Many people are beguiled in this country because there is no political representative of the Communist party at Westminster, but how naïve people can be? There are well-informed experts who estimate that in the last Parliament there could have been as many as seventy agents of Red fascist imperialism. In all probability there are at present in this country many thousands of Communists, supporters of a foreign power. Clearly all these people are not in the official Communist Party, which is deliberately kept small in order to lull us to sleep.

Alexander Solzhenitsyn, a Nobel prize winner and a dedicated Christian, now exiled in Switzerland, in his book Gulag Archipelago gives the latest evidence of horror of life under the Soviet system for fifty-seven years. The importance of Solzhenitsyn's book lies not in its novelty, but in its scope, its authority and its concern for truth. Asked recently by a friend why he chose to remain in Russia in such appalling conditions, he replied: "Because from here they listen to me". Who can doubt that what he says is true if he is prepared to risk so much to say it?

What does he say? That arbitrary police rule is part and parcel of the system from its very first days right up to the present: continual repression, mass arrests, closed trials, torture, deportation, prison, slow death in the camps and quick death by the executioner's bullet. But for these methods the Soviet system would not exist today and Brezhnev, Kosygin and their colleagues would not be ruling Russia.

To understand Communism rightly we must thoroughly understand its character and principles as enunciated by Karl Marx, its originator and propagator.

Karl Marx was a Jew, but was embittered all his lifetime by the fact of being a Jew. His origin was to him a personal stigma, to which he never made reference in any of his writings. He was bitterly anti-semitic, caustic and virulent in his communications to the Jews, or in his writing about them.

He was insensitive toward others and indifferent to the masses who he claimed to champion. The majority of men whom he met were, in his opinion, either fools or sycophants. Toward such he behaved with open suspicion or contempt.

Marx was a thorough-going materialist, for whom material values alone had meaning and importance and to whom, in the last analysis, they were the only governing factors in human destiny. His solution for the ills of humanity was stated succinctly in the Communist Manifesto: "The theory of the Communist party may be summed up in a single sentence: abolition of private property. They (the Proletariat) have nothing of their own to secure and fortify; their mission is to destroy all previous securities and the insurance of individual property". A seemingly simple solution this — merely change the title to property and you have changed human nature! Marx had no new ethical or social ideal to press upon mankind; he did not plead for a change of heart; a change of heart was necessarily but a change of one set of illusions for another.

Karl Marx or the Lord Jesus Christ? — these are the two great figures in human destiny today — contrasting personalities predicating contradictory philosophies of life and proposing conflicting programmes for human welfare.

The Lord Jesus was not ashamed of His nationality. The Jewish question was as acute in the first century as it is in the twentieth. In His day many of His

The Big Door

John 3:16

Words and drawing
by Sheila Price

WHEN I was a young girl, I loved to play in the shed at the bottom of the garden. One afternoon, while I was there cleaning the mud from my bicycle, a gust of wind blew the door shut, locking me in. It did not worry me at first, but, as the minutes ticked by and the wind howled around outside, I became frightened. I banged on the door and called to my mother. It was ages before I was able to attract her attention. I remember how relieved I was when at last she opened the door. If you have ever been locked in anywhere you will know what a frightening experience it can be.

68. Joseph, the fruitful Bough (Genesis 49:22)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon church

JACOB declared three things with regard to his beloved son, Joseph.

He was not barren or unproductive; he was a "fruitful bough". The troubles through which he had passed had been only a pruning process.

He was planted by a spring of water — his trust in the eternal God — so that the time of drought and famine could not destroy him.

His boughs went over the wall; he was not self-centred. His fruit not only blessed his own family and the people of Israel, but other peoples, too.

This picture of Joseph is surely a revelation of the divine purpose for the nation of Israel; it is God's intention that she shall be a blessing to all the nations.

In the New Testament the will of God is revealed for every believer. Each Christian is a branch in Christ the true Vine and it is the desire of the Father that we should bear abundant fruit (John 15:5, 16). As with

How do you suppose Noah felt when the door of the ark closed tightly behind him? Don't you think he must have felt anxious, even frightened at times? I wonder what his thoughts were during that long year in the ark when he was shut off from everything. Had God forgotten him? When would God release him? Had he built the ark strong enough to take the beatings of the winds and the rains?

There was never any need for Noah to be afraid, however, for God did not forget him. At the end of the year God dried up the waters and opened the door. Noah was able to step out on to dry land.

Most buildings, trains and aeroplanes have several doors in them along with fire escapes and emergency exits, but the great ark had but one door. I want you to picture that door. What do you notice about it? Can you see how big it is? It is a high door, a wide door, big enough for two elephants to enter side by side, yet there is room enough for a pair of rabbits, mice and tortoises to pass through at the same time.

The door of salvation is a big door, too. It is big enough for every boy, girl, man and woman to enter and it is open today. We need to enter it now while there is time. Salvation is possible only through the Lord Jesus. He says, "I am the Door, by Me if any men enter in, he shall be saved". He has opened the door and sent out His invitation: "Whosoever will may come". "Whosoever" means you and me!

Joseph, it sometimes becomes necessary for God to prune our lives (John 15:2). This is not done to destroy us, but to make us more fruitful. The spring from which we draw the refreshing, life-giving water is the Lord Himself (John 7:38) and, when we trust the Lord, that life flows through us to enable us to bear fruit. Even in a time of spiritual drought our lives will not wither away. The fruit which we produce both brings glory to God and blessing to other people (Matthew 5:16, 45-48). If we are truly His children we cannot be self-centred; we must live for others.

The George Canty Viewpoint

. . . on Giving

JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES are pushing a near-libellous attack on Christian churches through our letter-boxes at present, loaded with indiscriminate accusations and misrepresentations. As usual we'll let it pass with the silent pity such evil speaking demands from the Lord's people. Highly praising themselves, however, the "Witnesses" try to lure people into their meetings with the promise of cheap religion, saying "no collection plate is passed". Like all their literature, it is printed in American English. In English English "no collection plate is passed", means that everybody puts money into every collection plate. In American it means the opposite — that no collection plate is passed round.

For this reason, I for one will never attend their meetings, among fifty-seven varieties of other reasons. I don't understand a form of worship in church divorced from giving. The offering is the point where love for God becomes concrete in expression. Jesus said "Freely give". This command the Jehovah Witnesses actually quote, but in their astonishing jugglery with Scripture they deprive visitors in their very services of the opportunity to "freely give". Mind you, they'll get your money all right, later when they've hooked you on their free habit.

An oh-so-smart television script writer said that a parson isn't allowed to wear a dog collar until he can sit up and beg. Who's to blame? The indignity of having to beg is something not even a dog should be obliged to bear — never mind a parson. Robbing a Belgium Catholic Church, a thief saw that the Madonna was adorned with paste gems. He wrote a note saying that the church authorities ought to be ashamed of themselves for insulting "our Lady" with imitation jewellery. In the middle of his ethical somersault he still kept intact his sure instinct that worship deserves genuine monetary expression.

It is rammed home to us that Jesus never asked for a penny. No, but God did, as readers of the Old Testament know. Nevertheless the extraction techniques of some mendicant evangelists are painful to me, though their anaesthetic blarney might work on some. Their injection of that stuff intended to lessen the agony of a donation, a cash subscription pact to get God's blessing, doesn't take in my system. This is buying blessing, or as near to it as is acquiring crockery with trading stamps. Giving to get may be worldly-wise, but as a motive it hasn't much to do with Christianity. It ranks with "giving to be seen of men".

Fund-raisers should study Paul. He asked for money. The chapters in Corinthians 1 and 2 (16, 8, 9) are a massive monument enduring through two thousand years inscribed with the most moving and lofty sentiments, making both asking and giving a glory of the Christian faith. Against the black backdrop of that age of gross sensuality arises this incredible splendour of a little man possessed with a God-like love-passion to bring succour to a race that had rejected him — even asking for prayers that his gift may be received and he delivered from the malevolence of those he ought to benefit.

I can think of no more enriching times for my soul than the evenings spent in expositions of these chapters to my small group of Bible-lovers. I can reproduce little here of all that. I merely mention that we saw that one should give where there is a material need, though not only for that reason, but also because fellowship calls for sharing, and because others give, and others give to us, and giving is a gift itself, comparable to a gift of the Spirit, and because it is a confirmation of our Christian professions of various kinds, and because it brings thanksgiving to God, and particularly because Christ gave all for us and to us.

However the one reason that appealed to me like a voice from God was implicit in all other motivations. We should give because it makes us like God. The whole object of our election by God is "to be conformed to the image of His Son". How that can be achieved without my giving, nobody can tell me. God is a giver and His image and likeness in anybody will carry the same feature. God is not a giver by necessity of some odd turn of events, pushing Him into an activity out of the normal run of His behaviour. I, for instance, might, if required, eat boiled cabbage or cooked cheese, if some unimaginably peculiar and desperate circumstances forced me to against my basic aversions, but for no living person would I do it otherwise. God doesn't give then driven by the sheer requirements of unique emergency. God is a giver. God gives like a fountain fountains, or the sun shines. Giving is He, needed or not.

As a British minister, I stand in no danger of becoming affluent, so the temptation to attain it by large church offerings withers without roots. I can, without suspicion of ulterior motives, encourage giving. I ought to encourage my congregations to give as part of my pastoral aim of making them like God. I don't appeal just "for the needs of the church" or "for the needy", but to develop the "grace of giving". Paul, in one word, does answer the question as to whether or not the Bible commands Christians to tithe. He clearly says, "Let no man give grudgingly or of necessity". It wasn't just money Paul was after, but "fruit that may abound to your account". There's no point in giving just because the Bible commands it — or doing anything else at all, I should think, because we are legally obligated by Scripture. The object of the whole operation is to give opportunity for spontaneous generosity. It is at this point that we prove the truth of the new covenant which promised to write His laws on our hearts, not on tables of stone. Giving becomes a gift of God, a divine talent, a grace produced by grace. We are under no law except one, that of love. Love must give as fire must burn. God must be God, so He must therefore be out-going, creative, self-liberal, prodigally lavish with all He can impart. The reluctant giver doesn't know God. The promise of cheap religion derives from a false religious concept alien to the heart of Christianity. We are called to be like Him — the Giver.

God proves Himself

by S. E. Petts

"Prove Me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing" (Malachi 3:10).

ON the last Sunday of the Easter holidays our pastor preached on proving God. The next day I returned to school. Christopher came into my study to say that his brother Gary wouldn't be at school because he was in hospital in a coma which had lasted fourteen days. He had been running on the roof of an empty warehouse and had fallen fifty feet through a skylight to the ground. He had serious multiple injuries including a fractured skull and the doctors had little hope for his recovery. Would I pray for him during the morning act of worship?

The words of our text came to me as I doubted if I could pray with faith for the recovery of one so close to death and with a body so badly mangled. At assembly I told the boys of Gary's condition. I spoke of the many instances of Christ healing the sick and of His promise, "Whatsoever things you desire, when you pray, believe that you have them, and you shall receive them". I explained the importance of believing that God really would heal Gary and I asked them to add their faith to mine as we prayed together for his complete recovery. Then I prayed simply and thanked God in anticipation.

At that moment I knew that his restoration to full health had begun. The fervent "Amen" from all the staff and boys left no doubt. I told the boys that we were proving the truth of God's promises.

The next day, we heard that Gary had recovered consciousness and the next term he returned to school.

You can depend upon God!

"Helpers in the War"

2. Barzillai the Gileadite of Rogelim

by Stanley Beresford, Pastor of our Blackburn Church

"labour of love" in our Lord Jesus Christ, in the sight of God our Father, as we wait for His Son from Heaven (1 Thessalonians 1:3, 10).

The Waterer will always be watered (Proverbs 11:25).

The Giver will always be given unto (Luke 6:38).

The Lover will always be loved (John 14:21).

AMONG those remembered by David before he died was this old man, Barzillai, the supplier and sustainer of David and his men at a time when they were fleeing from Absalom, hungry and thirsty in the wilderness (2 Samuel 17:29). He brought "beds", "basons" and food, not only for David, but for all his men. What he did at that time earned him the privilege of being put on the king's honours' list and was the means of assuring his sons of a glorious future under the reign of King Solomon. What we do today, through what we are today, may bring blessing to a future generation, or more.

Barzillai brought rest and refreshing for recuperation in the battle — beds to lie on, basins in which to bathe their weary feet, and food to sustain them. Providing for others in so many ways is not only virtuous, it also reveals true vision. Truly Israel made a grave mistake when they said, "It is vain to serve God", that is, to bring tithes and offerings to God and supply the needs of His house (Malachi 3:14), for in robbing God they robbed themselves and their children.

Barzillai met David at Mahanaim when he was fleeing from the throne and from his own son. Royalty was met by loyalty, though it was clothed in sackcloth. In some of David's last words to Solomon he said, "Deal loyally with the sons of Barzillai and let them be among those that eat at thy table for with such loyalty they met me when I fled from Absalom thy brother" (1 Kings 2:7, R.S.V). God arranges the future in relation to the present.

Barzillai crowned his own life with glory by his devotion to the king and his men. Being old, he could not go to the battle himself and would not cross over again with David at his return, but he did what he could for his love of the king and was remembered. A Book of Remembrance is being written which will yield many surprises. Let us be "stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord", for we know that our labour is "not in vain in the Lord", and methinks that the most important aspect of labour is our

One more word must be said regarding two others who were with Barzillai, for it is so often the case that others will follow a good example. There was Shobi the son of Nahash of the children of Ammon (foreigners came to the help of the king), and Machir the son of Ammiel of Lodebar. These men sheltered Mephibosheth in a place of poverty. They brought beds and basins and earthen vessels and wheat and, and, . . . for they said that the people were hungry and weary and thirsty in the wilderness.

Jesus said to some, "I was hungry and ye gave Me no food, I was thirsty and ye gave Me no drink" (Matthew 25:42), so unlike Barzillai of Rogelim.

NUGGETS OF GOLD—from page 8

contemporaries sought to curry favour with Romans, Greeks and Idumeans. He declared that He had come to seek the lost sheep of the House of Israel. He, unlike Karl Marx, was compassionate to all, not only to His own, but even to His enemies. How kind, how courteous, how compassionate, how magnanimous He was! He was always concerned with the need of every man, woman and child. He was not a materialist, but One who said: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and all these (material) things shall be added unto you".

Herod was destroyed by worms because he fought against God; they ate like a cancerous growth into the very vitals of his life. Communism resembles a loathsome worm in its insidious working; it worms its way into every established order of human society. Like Herod, Communism is doomed; it is being destroyed by what it has produced, by the worms of a gross, anti-christian materialism which would turn all its advocates into worms of self-destruction which are grovelling in the dust of a gross materialism.

"REVENGE!" cried Karl Marx. "RECONCILIATION!" cries the Lord Jesus. "REVOLUTION" cried the sinister Anarchist. "REST!" cries the Author and Finisher of our faith.

LET US GO FORTH TO SPREAD THE RECONCILING WORD OF GOD AND SO LIBERATE MANKIND.

Book Reviews

The Man with three Fingers, by J.B. Donovan, published by Scripture Union, price 45p, postage and packing 7p extra.

THIS is a fictional adventure story for boys (or tomboys), age bracket: 10–16 years. The action is fast and furious; South American jungles, a lost tribe of Inca Indians whose chief is the guardian of a strange, burning light, unknown to modern science, bullets, the sun-god, right against wrong, they are all here. The clever, wicked villain is opposed by a team of evangelical “Batman and Biggles” — you know what I mean — brave, indestructible gentlemen — and religious with it! They are ready to quote appropriate Bible verses when about to be sacrificed by the cruel high priest or when escaping from an erupting volcano. Who poisoned the coffee, put the bomb on the plane, turned the Indians rather nasty? How did Comac lose his hand — and what about the man with three fingers?

There are weaknesses in the plot, but a young teenager sitting in the armchair with his bag of peppermints will hardly notice them!

John M. Cuthbert

The Mystery of God, by C.L. Parker, foreword by Howard Carter, published by A.O.G. Publishing House, price 35p, postage and packing 4p extra.

I HAVE had much joy and have found much food for thought in reading the above book. The underlying theme of this work is the true happiness of man and God's continuous and amazing efforts to bring this about. In his scholarly endeavour to prove his point, the writers' exegesis covers a colossal, almost breath-taking view of “the plan of the ages”. To put so much into so small a volume is remarkable. Not a word is wasted.

A few chapter headings will whet the appetite of all Bible-lovers: “The plan of the Ages”, “The Law of Life”, “Free Will”, “The Pre-Creation Council”, and “The Pre-Adamic Ages”. These are just some of the brief but thought-provoking meditations. Howard Carter says that it is a “precious deposit of truth”.

O.G. Miles

Soul-winning Success, by J. Nelson Parr, published by Grenehurst Press, price 25p, postage and packing 6p extra.

THE author of this book is writing of his own experience, drawing upon the wealth of ways, means, and methods used by him in many years of evangelism. I have watched with great interest the growth of the work he founded so many years ago in Manchester. I preached for him in the early twenties when he had twenty to thirty in an upper room. The next time was in the first Bethshan Tabernacle. Then later I preached in the fine new Bethshan. In both these buildings it was to hundreds of people.

His advice to pastors and to workers in all departments of Christian activity is to sweep aside all excuses for failure and to put into operation activities that he has proved turn failure into success. To those who complain that their church is in a hard area, he insists that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation in any and every place. He suggests that, if the methods being used do not bring success, then those methods should be scrapped and others used. His theme throughout the book is that there is no substitute for success. He states that success is God's will for every Christian worker. I have heard him say many times, “We either evangelise or fossilise”. He challenges us: “If we all had a vision of hell, we would be more desperate in our efforts to win souls”.

The favourite hymn of this author would not be “Hold the Fort for I am coming”, but rather “Onward Christian soldiers!”. “Attack, and enjoy victory” is his advice.

This book should be read by all who claim that they are in a hard place. He also maintains that personal evangelism is of tremendous importance.

John Woodhead

The Sound of a Going, by Alfred Missen, published by Assemblies of God Publishing House, price 90p (paper), £1.30p (cloth), postage and packing 9p extra. THIS book is largely a collection of brief biographies of those who have built up and made Assemblies of God in Great Britain an effective Pentecostal witness. It records dedication and determination in building large assemblies from what were often small groups of believers, sometimes over many years of patient labour.

Alfred Missen seems to put his finger on the secret of success when he writes: “The Movement has attracted men of individuality and enterprise who, whilst remaining loyal to the Fellowship, have also felt the urge to develop their own vision as they have felt God has directed them.”

Some pioneers of the Movement have whole chapters to themselves, other a passing reference, but together they build up a story interesting to all lovers of the Word.

Unfortunately the book lacks care in production and editing.

H.W. Greenway

From T. H. Stevenson

In an exclusive interview with Ian Colvin of the Daily Telegraph, the Shah of Persia had much to say relevant to the oil situation and to his opinion of Britain and the West. When it was suggested that he had led the Gulf countries in the fourfold increase of crude oil costs and that the West could not pay such prices, he replied "that is not true. Take off part of the Government tax and put it on beer and cigarettes". (He earlier did point out that "Western countries never noticed how cheap oil was because of the taxes your Governments put on it"). Later he said "at the risk of repeating myself, the West has become a permissive society and undisciplined. You don't work and you expect too much for the little work you do". As a Moslem the fact that at a whim he has divorced a few wives by way of change, not of any specific charge, his religion makes respectable what the West and more so Christianity would describe as permissiveness. Concerning our "undisciplined society", on the same page of the interview report there was also an account from New York that "a feud between rival Moslem factions flared into a gun battle in a Brooklyn mosque early yesterday in which four men, including two priests, were killed and a fifth man seriously wounded". The Arabs have not been pronounced for their discipline in recent times by any means. Concerning the laziness of the British Westerners one may comment that though oil flows freely in Persia and neighbouring countries this was discovered, developed, and distributed by Westerners, inventiveness and industriousness. In even more recent years the young and small nation of Israel has wrought within two decades what had failed to become even a dream to the Arabs when they occupied Palestine for centuries. The Shah's criticisms can easily be turned towards his own kin, but they nevertheless remain true in many respects of the West including Britain. Again in the same issue of the Daily Telegraph appeared a report of pupils in some of our schools being brain-washed by Left-Wing teachers. Mr. C. Paley-Phillips spokesman for the Conservative members of London education committees warned that "subversion could cause a total collapse in the educational system in many areas because of the very damaging attitude by a number of teachers". His claim was supported by the report of a teacher training college where students were imbued with the idea that education was pointless because pupils had no chance of success due to the structure of society. It was said that in a Tulse Hill, Brixton, school pupils were taught by some that it was hardly worth bothering to learn or get a job because of the system of society. There have, as is to be expected, been denials concerning such. We know with certainty that our country needs God and the need is great.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

"Pray Ye"

HOW wonderful is the Bible! It not only exhorts us to pray and teaches us to pray, but it also records the lives of great men of prayer and even the words they prayed.

In the New Testament an example is the aged Simeon. He lived for one thing only and he was at last allowed to see the Christ child and hold Him, the Son of God, in his own very arms. Some people live in the expectancy of seeing a loved-one saved or a backslidden son or daughter restored, but Simeon wanted to see Jesus. Once he had seen Him, he asked to be released from his old body.

When I was at the World Pentecostal Conference in Korea there was an incident in the great Sunday morning Communion service, which left few in that vast congregation dry eyed. Sitting on the platform was an aged blind missionary. She was the first Pentecostal missionary to that land. She told us of the awful struggle of those early days. She had lived in squalid surroundings, often with very little to eat. The winters were bitterly cold, which had affected one of her lungs, from which she still suffers pain. Now she was privileged to be in the midst of a mighty revival. Coming into that beautiful church building seating 10,000 people and sensing God's presence, she quoted the words of Simeon's prayer, "Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen Thy glory".

Do read Simeon's prayer again. It starts with worship and then humbly recognises God's sovereignty and His working, asking for a peaceful dismissal. He concluded by blessing others.

This is truly one of the great New Testament prayers. I hope that reading the prayer again will bless you.

"Each little Bird that sings"

WE had some delightful visitors to our garden here in Salisbury during February. These unexpected guests from the far north were four or five siskins which have paid daily visits to our supply of nuts and have given us immense pleasure by their dainty acrobatic skills. For the uninformed, these tiny birds are only 4½ inches long and have greenish plumage with yellow areas on the sides of the tail and bright yellow wing bars. They are smaller and daintier than the greenfinches and much more streaked and have a preference for coniferous woods for nesting sites. The siskin is a winter visitor to the south of England and was featured in Robert Dougal's programme about birds on B.B.C. television.

There is something very refreshing and rewarding about even the most amateur bird-watching and, though we can only boast about fifteen species in our garden, their beauty and variety have charmed our eyes and hearts.

Another aspect of bird study which never ceases to amaze me is the wonder of migration. Shall we ever comprehend the amazing mystery and scope of the flight of birds over Arctic wastes, desert sands and mighty oceans? It has been said that a migratory bird possesses a built-in map of the universe and I submit that this is true, but there are other remarkable factors. For instance, it has been proved by experiment that day-length is of importance and influences the hormonal production of the pituitary glands of migratory birds. Furthermore nature prepares the birds for the strenuous effort of travelling by enabling them to store energy in the form of fat. It is also known that birds find their way with the help of the stars and sun and can recognise some local geography. How wonderful are the works of the Lord and how magnificent is the scope and variety of the bird kingdom, the work of His hands!

I'm so glad that in these days there is a growing appreciation of bird life and an awareness of the need for nature conservancy so that the habitat of our feathered friends may be safeguarded and so that rare species may be protected. We read in the first chapter of the Bible that God gave man dominion over "the fowls of the air" and this was surely a sacred trust, which sadly has been abused with tragic consequences. Such conduct was never in God's plan as is shown when we turn to Deuteronomy 22:6, 7 and catch a glimpse of the Almighty's concern for the bird population. The Lord Jesus, ever a lover of nature and a keen observer of birds and beasts in His Father's world, used the humble sparrow to illustrate God's care for His children. Those well-loved words in Matthew 10:29, "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father", have brought untold comfort to many an anxious heart. An old lady of eighty years first introduced me over forty years ago to the song with the chorus:

I sing because I'm happy,
I sing because I'm free,
For His eye is on the sparrow
And I know He watches me.

I heard it again recently, sung by a young fresh voice, and it was such a blessing. "Fear ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows" is a simple promise, yet how precious. Surely, in view of such a statement by the Lord Himself, we can both say and sing:

Every moment of the day,
My Father cares for me,
Every moment of the day,
My heart from fear is free.
He who sees the sparrow fall will hear my call.
Every moment of the day God watches over me.

Measuring up

by Joy Rook

*Sons of Adam, we must die,
Because we dared to trust the lie,
But God in love for sinners vile,
Died lost sons to reconcile.*

"I AM the way, the truth and the life", said Jesus, therefore outside of Him lies error.

Our thoughts, contaminated by sin, give us a false view of life. We are like a man beholding a mirage; we see things which are not true. When the distance between the man and the mirage is covered, he finds nothing there. Man's mind is warped by sin, just as light is bent by heat, causing an illusion.

Jeremiah said: "O LORD, I know that the way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps" (10:23). "For My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways My ways, saith the LORD" (Isaiah 55:8), because God is not hindered by illusions. He sees things as they are and He has never hidden the truth from man. Our difficulty lies in our not being able to identify what is true. We set ourselves standards by comparing ourselves with our fellow-man, who is setting his standard against us! Then there is the "keeping-up-with-the-Jones" standard. Some people worry if they feel that they are being outdone. What do they get? — usually a loss of identity and a duplication of everything!

As Christians, we should enquire as to what God would have us to be.

I believe that He would have us to be holy, even as He commanded: "Ye shall therefore sanctify yourselves, and ye shall be holy; for I am holy" (Leviticus 11:44).

I believe that He would have us to be ourselves. God has a purpose and work for each of us individually and, if we are trying to do or be what someone else is, we are not being ourselves. We thus deny ourselves the blessing which God has promised us. No matter what our calling is, even if it seems insignificant to us, it is not insignificant to God. The crown of glory that we shall receive for being faithful will be as bright as those belonging to Abraham and Paul. These men, though we consider them to be great, only did what God knew that they were capable of and God asks us to do only what He knows we are capable of. Note the promise given to the church in Smyrna: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life" (Revelation 2:10). God's reward is for faithfulness, not greatness.

Much is said about standards in today's world. Many prefer to overlook the fact, but there is much in the Bible about standards. The Word of God can have one of two effects on people. It can be their means of salvation, or it can be their stumblingblock. Many apply to God's Word many uncomplimentary names; they are not acquainted with its Author. The Word affects them just as Jesus affected the Scribes and Pharisees. They hated Him simply because His purity and goodness showed up their sin. They were conscious that Jesus knew the condition of their lives, for He said that they were like whited sepulchres, clean on the outside, but full of corruption inside. Likewise, God's Law as laid down in Scripture is rejected by men, even as Christ was rejected, because men chose to live after the imaginations of their own hearts, rather than to obey the Lord their God. Jeremiah tells us: "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it? I the Lord search the heart, I try the reins, even to give every man according to the fruit of his doing" (Jeremiah 17:9, 10).

God's law shows up sin in man, yet people prefer to live in their sins rather than to accept the law of God. They excuse themselves by calling God's standard "old-fashioned", "narrow-minded" and "too hard to keep". God never asks us to do something that He knows we are incapable of. Jesus said, "My yoke is easy and My burden is light". Is God a liar?

It is not our privilege to set our own standards, though many consider it to be so. It is God's privilege. He created all things, therefore He has the right to tell us how to function to the greatest harmony. We can choose to discard the standards of the only wise God, but does the result of this neglect lead to any greater benefit to mankind? Look at our prisons overflowing with unlawful citizens. Think of old people's homes, containing in many cases unwanted parents. Need I mention the unwanted baby problem? Are these the beneficial results of setting one's own standards? It is much easier to use the name that God applies, that is SIN.

The difficulty of many is being able to believe the truth, but one day soon, if they do not turn from the error of their ways, they will not only believe the truth, they will have to live according to it, for Christ will reign, and He will administer His law with a rod of iron.

Christians do have a comparison to make, not with our fellow-believers, but with Christ Himself. We are to measure up to the stature of Christ, the perfect Example. He is the only One worthy. Measuring up will take us a lifetime of service to the glory of God.

Monday, March 11th

Luke 11:37-54

"From the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zacharias" (v.51).

ABEL was first good shepherd to give his life for his faith. Zacharias the priest was stoned in the house of God for his faith and witness (2 Chronicles 24:21). The value of their blood was recorded in heaven. Jesus Christ, the Shepherd and Priest, would soon give His blood also, and some of the listening Pharisees would voice bitter criticism against Him. The strong indictment that Jesus made in the Pharisee's house would no doubt be long remembered by all who heard Him. He held them responsible for the blood of the innocent witnesses of the Lord. The blood of Calvary is most precious to us and the means of our redemption, but the crowd said, "Let His blood be upon us". How true this has been in the history of the Jews, but they will yet look upon Him whom they pierced and finally acknowledge Him.

Tuesday, March 12th

Luke 12:1-12

"The very hairs of your head are all numbered" (v.7).

A VERY minute part of your body, a hair is highly sensitive to a tug! The hair protects our skull; eyebrows and eyelashes protect our eyes from foreign bodies. We are reminded by Christ that we cannot make one hair black or white (Matthew 5:36). The colour of the hair to the leper of old was vital if he was to be certified clean by the priest (Leviticus 13:30-37). To the Nazarite the hair was a sign of the vow that he had made and to Samson a vital link with his power with God. The untrimmed hair of Mephibosheth was a token of his loyalty to David during the king's rejection, when disablement prevented his following his king. Hair reminds us of the sufferings of Christ, for they plucked at his beard, to add pain and great humiliation. We may be small members of the Body of Christ, but nevertheless we are able to feel with the whole mystical Body a sense of belonging to Him.

Wednesday, March 13th

Luke 12:13-34

"God feedeth them" (v.24).

THIS was true not only of ravens and fowls of the air, but of all His creation, for the Lord is a faithful Creator, sustaining and supplying. "God feedeth them" could be said of the widow, her son, and Elijah, for in famine their faithful Lord supplied. "God feedeth them" could be said of Israel as they passed through the desert; the daily manna and quails were a divine guarantee. The Lord was asking His disciples to enter the spiritual realm and exercise faith, urging them to seek first the vital things of His kingdom (v.31). This is a great day of opportunity. Let us seek great things in the kingdom and keep our hearts intent on heavenly treasure (v.34). No rust, moth, or thief will destroy this treasure.

Thursday, March 14th

Luke 12:35-48

"Blessed are those servants" (v.37).

THE exhortation to watch at all hours for the coming Lord is the message for the Church, watching for opportunities, for signs of the times, for indications of His movings, alert and steadfast daily. Waiting too, is commended. We are to wait on Him in obedience, wait with Him at the time of rejection, wait for Him in anticipation of the coming revelation. The working servant is commended, too. We are to be faithful stewards, giving out portions in season in our ministry, for the Master is always at hand (v.42). Rewards or rebukes will be the order of that great Day when Christ shall be revealed.

Friday, March 15th

Luke 12:49-59

"Discern the face of the sky" (v.56).

THE wind and the clouds were to the farmer a sign of the coming weather. We are exhorted to discern the signs of the times. Some clouds in Scripture, with the accompanying rainbow, indicated the faithfulness of God in keeping covenant with creation. A cloud as big as a man's hand thrilled the heart of watching prayer-warrior Elijah at the foot of Carmel's mount as he prayed for rain. The constant sign of the cloud by day and the fiery cloud by night reassured Israel that the Lord was with them. At Christ's Ascension, the watching disciples were told that he would return in a cloud. Revelation 1:7 was the message to the Church as they passed through times of persecution, giving them hope and encouragement.

Saturday, March 16th

Luke 13:1-17

"Whom Satan hath bound" (v.16).

IT is possible for Satan to deprive the body of normal functions in certain cases, but the hands of the Master liberated this woman from such restrictions (v.13). She walked uprightly and straight after the Lord's healing touch. She was healed on the Lord's Day. We must walk in newness of divine life, upright according to the Word of the Lord, in a very crooked world, worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called. Satan still seeks to bind us, but we can be set free constantly by the Spirit of the Lord.

My Testimony

by Jennifer McGillivray, daughter of Ken and Wyn McGillivray

EVER since I can remember, my parents told me about the love of Jesus and His saving grace. Because of their ministry and the dedication of their lives to serving God on the mission field in Taiwan I knew that God was a real Being and not some intangible figment in men's imagination. As a result, I accepted Christ into my life at an early age.

The area in which my parents were led to work was not the most enticing place on the island, averaging 200 inches of rain yearly, suffering an average 1,000 earthquake tremors per year, and usually being the worst hit by the annual typhoons (tropical hurricanes), so there were no other missionary children in the vicinity. My parents were forced to send my brother and me to an American missionary boarding school on the other side of the island, about a five hour trip by train. There I spent the majority of my years between the ages of 7 and 17, when I graduated from the high school.

Growing up in such a sheltered Christian atmosphere had its advantages and disadvantages. As we grew older, the more rebellious ones began venturing out to more worldly activities which had previously been forbidden to us. Many of us felt that we were missing out by not being able to grow up in North America and lead "normal" lives. We rebelled against any and all authority and prided ourselves in breaking as many rules as possible without being caught. My resentment for my parents' work was often evident in my very obvious disrespect for them and for the Chinese people with whom they worked.

When the time came for me to return to Canada, I was looking forward to discovering what life was really all about. In Vancouver I began college and made friends, who I thought were genuine, but who had never experienced God's love.

At the end of the first year, I was more miserable and confused than ever before, but praise God for His leading! I was unable to find a summer job in the city, so I went up to the Yukon when the opportunity arose to help out at a Christian camp. There I became involved in the lives of many young people from broken homes where they had never known even parental love, much less the love of God. I saw their lives changed by God's power and love and realised at long last that I had to want to follow Jesus sincerely and allow Him to work in my life before He would. Previously, my salvation had only been my "ticket to heaven" which I was afraid to throw away in case I missed the rapture. Now, with the help of another "Jesus person" and through the faithful prayers of my parents, I decided to give Jesus an honest try and prayed the prayer of the psalmist: "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me. Cast me not away from Thy presence; and take not Thy Holy Spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of Thy salvation, and uphold me with Thy free spirit (Psalm 51:10-12).

That was three years ago, and, praise God, I haven't regretted it yet! Just as anyone else must do, I had to realise that the pleasures of the world could never satisfy the needs of my soul and admit that I was wrong and needed help, and then have a personal experience of encounter with Jesus Christ.

As the saying goes, "Hindsight is always better than foresight". I enjoy looking back on my life and seeing how God had a guiding hand on me even though I did not know it or appreciate it at the time. I realise that He is still with me and will continue to lead me through all the exciting experiences which wait for me ahead.

"As a hen doth gather her brood" (v.34).

THE Almighty had been very loving and tender to His ancient people Israel and to all creation, showing great longsuffering, not willing that any should perish. The willingness of the Lord almighty to gather His children as chicks under the wing proves the tender heart and compassion of God. Man has resisted the tender wings, the loving care, the patient waiting, and has gone his own way. The earthly Jerusalem carries many sorrows and sad memories, but the new Jerusalem will be free from sorrow, sickness and pain. The Lord Himself will be the light of that city in all its coming glory. The gathering time will soon be upon us. Let us allow the love of Christ to permeate our beings, as we seek others to shelter under His almighty wings.

FELLOWSHIP is a marvellous thing. I recently had the privilege of ministering at the celebrations connected with the anniversary of one of our pastors in his present church. It was a heart-warming occasion. There was such a sense of mutual regard, of family joy, of thankfulness to God and of hope for the future. The work has been greatly blessed, especially in this last year. It is, of course, easier to rejoice when there is a rising tide of blessing, but the happy feeling of communal togetherness was moving, and showed that the ministry of the pastor and of the whole church was enhanced by the spirit of being of one accord.

One of the tragedies about the community of our nation is its divisions. Self-seeking must be seen against a sad background of sectional interests. My opinion is that the country was really telling our political leaders by the results of the general election that they wanted a national effort. Party demarcations seemed woefully ridiculous viewed against the backdrop of galloping inflation and the rest.

One of the Christian's great messages is that Jesus Christ our Lord will one day reign. It is a great joy and wonder to know that God is working His purposes out and (to quote our beloved brother, Samuel Gorman) "The coming World Ruler" will reign in righteousness, truth, equity, justice and love. The Bible has a clear message for the population of this earth as well as with regard to the Church and the marvellous plans of God for the future.

Meanwhile Christians could do much to show themselves friendly, loving, gracious, to one another and indeed to every man, whoever he is. I have remarked before on the charming greetings used by our brethren in Church of Pentecost in Ghana. "Praise the Lord!" says the first to speak. "Hallelujah!" gladly replies the other. My first encounter with this happy custom was in an airline office in Accra, Ghana. I imagined the frosty looks on the faces of the stiff-lipped British if it had been in a similar office in London's West End!

Someone sent me the following simple poem from Grasmere Methodist Church. I like it.

Fellowship

If, after Church, you wait awhile,	Is, perhaps a stranger too.
Someone may greet you with a smile.	All here, like you, have fears and cares;
But, if you quickly rise and flee,	All of us need each other's prayers.
We'll all seem cold and stiff, maybe.	In fellowship we bid you meet,
The one beside you in the pew	With us, around God's Mercy Seat.

Pentecostal European Conference, 1975

by H. W. Greenway

ABOUT thirty Pentecostal Leaders from various parts of Europe met recently at Hedmarktoppen, Hamar, Norway to make arrangements for the second Pentecostal European Conference (PEK) 1975. Hans Svartdahl, Chairman of the Norwegian Committee, welcomed the committee members and arranged a visit to the departments of the People's High School (Folkehyskoler), where the guests were introduced to the scholars in the modern departments by Ragnvald Fryshov, the director of the conference centre. It was an inspiring visit, during which the pupils sang and joined with the delegates in a time of praise and worship.

The Committee then got down to business and decided to hold the Conference during the second week in July 1975, July 7-14, with a pre-conference weekend July 5, 6. "JESUS CHRIST TODAY" is the chosen theme and speakers from many countries will present Jesus Christ as the Saviour, Healer, Baptiser in the Holy Ghost, and Coming King. Morning sessions will be devoted to prayer and the Bible study theme for the day. Following this, groups will be formed where different languages will be represented to enable nationals to discuss the subject under review. In the afternoon a panel will be formed in the main auditorium to answer questions and in the evenings great revival meetings are to be convened. Kathryn Kuhlman has been invited to speak at the Conference and her decision is awaited before final announcements can be made.

Hedmarktoppen is ideal for this Conference; situated over looking the longest lake in Norway, it commands a beautiful view, and is only about 100 kilometres north of Oslo.

The first European Conference, which was held in Berne, Switzerland, was a great success, and it is hoped that many British people will avail themselves of the opportunity to enjoy the spiritual atmosphere of an international Pentecostal conference combined with a holiday in what is considered by many visitors to be the most beautiful country in Europe.

PLAN NOW TO ATTEND. Further particulars will follow when plans have been completed.

More Notes from Africa

by R. B. Chapman, Field Superintendent

Meeting the Masai. THE Masai are an unusual, primitive nomadic race whom the Tanzanian government is trying to restrict to certain areas. They have an ancient, to us a strange, culture with deeply-embedded and sometimes uncivilized customs. One old chief in the area has forty-two wives and 3,000 head of cattle. Promiscuity is prevalent and consequently the tribes are being seriously decimated. It is hard for their womenfolk to make a stand for Christ, because they are completely under the dominance of their menfolk, who show no interest in the gospel. In spite of this the Saviour has won His trophies. With their own hands these women have built their first church and it was our privilege to dedicate it to the worship and service of the Lord.

It was a service long to be remembered for many things. I could not avoid thinking how literally we fulfilled the Lord's command to "preach the gospel to every creature". Flying overhead or hanging to the thatch were some little bats; crawling round the mud walls were some multipedes eight to ten inches long which, if you turned them over, looked like sweeping brushes. Then there was a host, a cloud of unusually persistent flies which filled the eyes, the ears, the noses and most other parts of the Masai and lavished their attentions on the visitors also. We thought that the fourth plague of Egypt had returned.

For the occasion of our visit these charming ladies had prepared a feast. The lamb had been specially selected and awaited our arrival. It was photographed with us and then slain before our eyes, dressed and put into the pot. Eventually the lamb, in stew form, was placed before us with mountains of boiled rice and a special brand of tea! Courtesy, custom and charity required that we should partake of the "sumptuous" meal and we did so. The consequence was an inconvenient dose of dysentery, but we would not have missed for anything the joy of meeting these delightful people who have opened their hearts to the Saviour. We were informed that it is not just an ancient custom, but part of the law of this tribe, that, when a stranger of consequence passed their way, he had to be provided with the companionship of one of the young ladies for the night! We were glad that we were mixing with the converted and anyway we did not stay the night, but moved on to alternative accommodation. The great need, as we see it, is for the message to reach and win some of the men, otherwise what future do these women have? Many of them are committed before they are born to marriage to old men in the tribe who pay a dowry for them prior to the birth. They love children and want children, but the prospect of a Christian partner is hopeless at the present time. How thankful the women of our land should be for nineteen centuries of Christian teaching.

PRAY FOR THE MASAI!

Troublesome Transport. During our 1,600 miles of itinerary in Tanzania we met with problems which called for improvisation and initiative. We had not travelled far before we noted a very strong smell of petrol and shortly afterwards the engine cut. Peering beneath the bonnet we noted that the petrol lead had parted company from the carburetter. The boy scout's invaluable piece of string met the need and proved successful for the rest of the tour. Later, further trouble developed beneath the bonnet. The air-filter had broken loose from its moorings. More string came to the rescue! This needed to be replenished and added to from time to time on the journey until it was difficult to decide whether it was an air-filter or a ball of binder-twine. For much of the journey we had unmusical accompaniment from the exhaust until finally the pipe, with clanging protestations, bade farewell to the silencer. We completed that part of the journey with a vehicle whose engine noises came somewhere between that of a jumbo-jet and a Massey-Ferguson tractor. We were not through yet; there was the final journey of about a 300-mile round trip, in a different car. All went well until we stopped on the roadside for coffee. Sharp eyes noted spots of oil as we stood on the dusty road. Examination revealed a fairly extensive oil leak from the engine. We proceeded cautiously with one eye on the tell-tale light; at first it only flickered, soon it was full on. A test revealed that no oil remained in the engine and we were five miles from our destination. One member hitched a lift to the nearest town, the others waited patiently for an hour until a big lorry rumbled up with the "hitching" member. We were towed in. Examination revealed a sheared-off bolt. The engine had to be taken out, the bolt replaced, and some eight hours later we commenced the return journey. In the meanwhile we met the workers and took a service which commenced two hours late, but that did not really matter; it was Africa. Before we reached home we were held up at gun-point by the army in the inky blackness of the night. The car and our bags were searched; it was suspected that they were after diamond smugglers. We pleaded "not guilty", though we had a few "gems" in our Bibles!

Costly Carelessness. Two elegant little gazelles went for a walk beneath the African moon. As they made their perambulations, one foolishly gambolled in front of our passing car; the "widower" went home alone that night. We learned that meat is something very precious to the Africans; many of them only taste it twice a year. If meat prices continue to rise so steeply we may yet find ourselves alongside our African brethren in this respect. However, some of the "boys" benefitted from the wayward gazelle and her carelessness. May we learn a lesson and be sure to walk the roadway of life carefully and thus avoid disaster.

Black Nuggets. In Tanzania alone we met some sixty workers and many more members and adherents, whose lives have been transformed by the preaching of the gospel through our Elim missionaries. Most of these brethren came from heathen backgrounds, some from the families of witch-doctors, others from polygamous homes, all from the ranks of the unsaved. We met Petro, the first convert pointed to Christ by one of our earliest missionaries. We met a man once leprous, a woman who had been a prostitute, many who had experienced deliverance from spirit worship. One felt that they could safely repeat the words that the Apostle Paul used to the Corinthians: "And such were some of you: but ye are . . . justified in the name of the Lord Jesus" (1 Corinthians 6:11).

Thank God for these precious treasures and thank you for helping to reach and to salvage them for Christ's sake.

From a Pastor's Study

1. The Three Ms of Mountbatten

by A. Nicolson,
Pastor of our
Southend-on-Sea
Church

LORD MOUNTBATTEN declared, "I always insisted that the campaign in Burma resolved itself into three Ms; Morale, Monsoon and Malaria".

I have been thinking of those three things from a spiritual viewpoint and my musings may be of some help to you.

Morale can be boosted, when there is difficulty or even defeat, by the confidence and personality of a leader. The true Church may be going through difficult times in these days, but her Leader has made it clear that she will triumph and He has supported His confidence by His own personal triumph over death and hell.

Monsoon reminds us of rain, torrential downpours that turn roads into rivers. Though they may halt an army on the march, they help a nation to live by providing water for the parched land. How wonderful is the promise in Isaiah 44:3: "For I will pour water on him that is thirsty and floods upon the dry ground". We need the rain, Lord! In our beloved land today the spiritual ground is dry and there are many cracks on its surface, but revival rain, individually and collectively, is the answer.

Malaria is the result of bites from the tiny mosquito. Fever, restlessness, hot spasms followed by violent shivering are some of the symptoms, all caused by such a small insect. So often it's the little things in spiritual life that do the damage. Watch out for them, won't you!

CHILDREN'S CORNER

LIGHTS

Words: A. A. Biddle
Drawing: John Gregory

WHAT a marvellous thing is light! I am told that it travels at 186,000 miles per second and that is going some! How useful it is even if it is what we call artificial light. There are so many ways in which it brings much pleasure.

The Jews in December have what they call a "Feast of Lights" when every house is lighted by all the lamps they have in their homes. It might be funny to us, but we know that the bridesmaids at a Jewish wedding all carried lamps. We cannot think of Samuel but what we are reminded of his connection with the lamps which he looked after in the House of God, where God spoke to him and called him into His service.

A traveller to a European village came across this lovely custom. At night he saw the people going to church, each person carrying a little bronze lamp. These lamps they placed in holders by their pews. The church was illuminated only by the light from these little lamps and so, if one member was absent, there saw a dark space where he would have sat. Remember that about your place at Sunday school or the mid-week children's meetings. If you are not in your place there will be a light missing.

Jesus said: "Ye are the light of the world". Jesus expects us to shine out for Him, "you in your small corner and I in mine". Let us get rid of the darkness around us by shining all the time. To shine means living the Christian life and telling others of Jesus and His love.

Now what about a little competition? Here are six words which are all mixed up and all you have to do is to re-arrange them in their correct order:

EBLBI RAEYPR NEOSYTH URCHCH ANUSDY
OLHCOS

When you have done this, send it on a postcard to: Uncle Archie, 80, Kimbolton Road, Copnor, Portsmouth.

Be sure to put your name and address on your entry and I will put the names of those who send me correct solutions in this Children's column. I shall look forward to hearing from you, so out with pen and paper and get cracking!

Onesimus

by H. L. Dawson, Pastor of our East Ham Church

“ONESIMUS” means profitable and how good it is to have profitable people around us. Paul certainly felt that way about many friends, but specially so about Onesimus. If we look at Paul’s Epistle to Philemon we shall see in more detail the characteristics in this man which endeared him to the heart of Paul.

Onesimus was a runaway slave. Slaves were the lowest level of society; they were treated like animals, mere chattels, ill-clothed and ill-fed, hard-worked and misused by their masters. Onesimus had no pedigree to boast of; he could not say, like Paul, that he was a Hebrew of the Hebrews, as touching the law a Pharisee. He was only a slave.

We are not told if he was born a slave, or if he was sold into slavery. We know nothing about his mother and father. Were they also slaves? We do not know if he had any relatives, so we build up a picture of this man’s loneliness. His only friends might well have been others, who, like him, were slaves.

We do know about his discontent, though I am inclined to believe that he was better treated than most slaves, for his master was a Christian of good character who loved the Lord and honoured God’s Word, a man who was loved by other Christians and respected by the apostle Paul. Philemon was a man with a big heart and he would not ill-treat or misuse his slave Onesimus. Onesimus was very ungrateful, for discontent filled his soul — perhaps he resented the Christian atmosphere, the hymn singing, the praying, the preaching, the witness and testimony of Philemon, his wife, Apphia, and their son, Archippus.

His spitefulness is also clear. He would be planning how to hurt his master and his family. First he would run away, yes, but where would he go and how would he survive? So the second thing to do was to steal from his master. This tells us that Onesimus had freedom in the house; he was not chained as other slaves might be. He could enter the house and was free to use it as his own home. It was wicked that a man should misuse such privileges and diabolical that he should steal from such a master. Is not this just how we behaved to God?

With Philemon’s purse in his pocket and perhaps his clothes on his back, Onesimus fled from the house, but we can never run away from God’s Spirit. His conscience would give him no rest and providence took a hand in his circumstances. How it happened we are not told, but God has his ways of bringing about his purposes. He fled from the kindly Philemon, but God saw to it that he ran into the arms of zealous Paul.

If there is one thing that I am going to ask Onesimus in heaven, it is to hear his testimony of how he met Paul and how he was converted. Was it on the ship? Was it in the Roman prison? Had Onesimus been caught doing something else which was wrong?

All this is speculation, but it is no speculation to say that he became a Christian. Paul says, “If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new”. This really happened in the life of Onesimus, once unprofitable, but now profitable to Paul, to Philemon, to his Lord (Philemon v.11).

Look at the changes made by salvation.

Onesimus became a reliable servant. The whole character of the man was changed by his conversion. One cannot but marvel at the grace of the Lord Jesus and the wonder of how this slave, who had misused his privilege, was led to meet a man like Paul, a free Roman citizen chained to his guards in a Roman prison, in order that he might find Christ. Something in these circumstances helped to bring Onesimus to Christ, as he listened to Paul tell of his missionary activities, as he heard of the way in which he had been persecuted for his faithful preaching of God’s Word, as he heard of his joy in chains and imprisonment for Christ. Perhaps his own wickedness and discontent in the house of Philemon came home to his heart and then he realised how God had led him to meet his master’s friend in such circumstances. It must have melted Onesimus's heart.

Not only did he give his life to Christ, but he also gave himself in service. He was determined to make up for past ungratefulness. Paul describes him as a faithful brother; the once unfaithful Onesimus who ran away from his master could not do enough now for Paul. He was so valuable to Paul that to send him back to Philemon was a great sacrifice. It was like sending his own heart, so much did he love this man. But send him back he must, and to return to Philemon was the duty of the now converted Onesimus. It must have been as hard for Onesimus to leave Paul as it was for Paul to see him go, but he did not quibble. He would do what he had to do. He would face the music, and return to the man he had wronged. It is no easy thing to go back and say sorry, but restitution is part of the victory over sin. It wasn't easy for the Prodigal to go back to his father, but it was the only way of getting back into favour and blessing. It wasn't easy for Zacchaeus to repay all those whom he had wronged, but it was essential if he was to enjoy peace and contentment.

There was a great difference. Onesimus did not return the same as he left his master's house; he was a changed man. He was no longer a slave, but a beloved brother. He went back a Christian, on the same level as Philemon. Grace had lifted him to a new level.

Paul says to Philemon, "He is one of you". Grace is a great leveller in Christ. "There is neither bond nor free", we are "all one in Christ". We are brethren. We may not be perfect, we may have our faults, but we are all brothers and our former sin or status ought to be no deterrent to our present standing and repute. What is more, we ought to recognise the grace of God in a brother, be prepared to forgive his past misdeeds and receive him as a brother in Christ. Paul certainly did, for he sent Onesimus and Tychicus together bearing tidings of the imprisoned preacher and the love tokens mentioned in his Epistle. What beautiful harmony we see in this, what unity of purpose, what equality of service, what generous love. In a short time Onesimus had won the heart of Paul; Paul had found him trustworthy and faithful. Hidden qualities had been revealed and virtues which grace had polished now showed themselves. Onesimus went back with the highest recommendation and an apostolic commendation.

This all speaks volumes of what salvation had wrought in him. Surely Philemon responded as Paul expected and welcomed him back. I can picture the tears of joy rolling down his cheeks as he read Paul's letter. His prayers had been answered and Onesimus was saved. I can feel the thrill as he takes Onesimus in his arms and kisses him with the kiss of forgiveness.

Another in our series by Assemblies of God writers

by Colin C. Whittaker

COLIN C. WHITTAKER was born in Haslingden, Lancs., in 1926. Coming from a family with long, strong Methodist traditions, he was saved on Remembrance Sunday, 1941, at an after service conducted by the young people of the Champness Hall Methodist Mission, Rochdale. His brother also trusted Christ the same night. It was purposed that he should enter the Methodist ministry, but early contact with C.E.M. missionaries from Haslingden (Fred and Isobel Ramsbottom) resulted in the whole family joining the newly-formed Home Missions Assembly of God in Rochdale. In 1944 he started working with Home Missions in their first caravan in Derbyshire. After serving for 3½ years in the R.A.M.C., he became a minister of Assemblies of God and has pastored Assemblies in Rochdale, Radcliffe, Edinburgh, Bishop Auckland, and currently in Luton. He has served on the National Youth Council of A.O.G., and as Editor of "Pentecostal Youth".

Great Minds think like Christ

Philippians 2:5

"WE are not what we think we are, any of us. But what we think - we ARE!", for "as a man thinketh in his heart so he is" (Proverbs 23:7). In a bookshop in Cambridge which caters largely for the University students, the political section was loaded with the writings of Marx, Mao, Castro, etc. The battle for the mind of modern man is being waged with increasing pressure and ever more subtle propaganda. In a corner devoted to religious books I picked up a small booklet entitled: "The Thoughts of Chairman Jesus". I can't say that I was happy about the title (although no doubt it communicates instantly with students), but I was delighted with the contents which consisted entirely of the words of the Lord Jesus.

In Philippians chapter 2 the inspired apostle Paul shares with us the divine revelation afforded him into the mind of Christ. We soon find how different is Christ's thinking from ours.

This chapter has been called Paul's version of the Christmas story. Here is further light from heaven upon that stupendous miracle of divine love which we call the Incarnation. "The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us". That sensitive Christian poet, Edwin Muir, put his finger on the weakness of the pulpit of his youth when he said, "The Word made flesh was here made word again". The same weakness is still with us, not only in the pulpit, but in the pew also. I have an old 78 rpm record of Gipsy Smith singing plaintively: "Can others see Jesus in you, for how will the lost know of Jesus if they cannot see Jesus in you?". We believe that He is in us if we are truly born again because the Bible declares it (2 Corinthians 13:5), but outsiders will never believe until they see something of His likeness in our lives. For this to happen it is imperative that "this mind" which was in Jesus Christ be in us.

Hudson Taylor once said, "The earthly life of Christ began at the manger and finished at the cross, but the life of every Christian begins at the cross and finishes at the manger" i.e. the cradle of complete, childlike trust. Let us "think on these things".

His thinking about others is found in vv.3-5. "In lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves. Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others".

As usual we get it all mixed up and entertain high thoughts about ourselves and low thoughts about others, but He, the Lord of glory, who alone had the right to think Himself superior to others, never displayed a superior attitude to any.

Peter's superior attitude was the underlying cause of his shameful denial. Clearly, at this stage in his discipleship he did esteem himself better than others. Brushing aside the solemn warnings of his Lord, he boasted, "Although all shall be offended, yet will I not" (Mark 14:29). Surely this is why the risen Christ had to perform publicly on the shores of Galilee a painful and major, spiritual, surgical operation on Peter's personality. The roots of this dreaded cancer of personal superiority had to be removed permanently if Simon was to be truly Peter, if the reed was to become rock-like in character. Three times the Saviour's cutting words — keener than any surgeon's knife — skilfully and ruthlessly excised the hidden roots. "Lovest thou Me more than these?", i.e. "Peter, do you still claim that your love for me is superior to that of these other disciples?". By the third stroke, Peter was surely at the very point of death: "he was grieved". Oh, how it hurt! He saw himself as he had never seen himself before, but the risen, living Word can distinguish the humanly indiscernible line between soul and spirit. Part of Peter surely died that morning, but it was a part which needed to die if Peter was ever to live effectively for Christ. Never once did Peter indulge in a "Watergate" cover up, no excuse, no attempt to justify himself escaped his lips. His quivering, dying flesh stayed on the table until the operation was successfully completed. "THOU KNOWEST ALL THINGS" he exclaimed. Whatever our thoughts about the charismatic renewal in the historic churches, is it not a sad fact of Pentecostal life that we have fallen into the trap of every revival movement and begun to think ourselves superior to others? The power will not remain upon us, the power will not come upon us in renewed measure, until we start thinking like Christ about others.

His thinking about position is found in v.6. He held the highest position, but He willingly vacated His throne. How easily the human heart is obsessed with position! On one occasion at a feast, when He "marked how they chose out the chief rooms" (Luke 14:7), the Lord of glory told a searching parable which exposed the carnal, ambitious hearts of the religious leaders. "Take the lowest seat, not the highest", He advised. He applied it with the divinely unalterable law. "Whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted", said the One who stooped to conquer. From stupendous heights of glory and majesty He stooped to the lowest depths possible.

We must ever watch, for ambition is a subtle thing. James and John, urged on — as so often is the case — by a doting mother, sought the two chief positions in the coming kingdom (Matthew 20:21). When the ten found out about it they were indignant, but it was certainly not righteous indignation, for soon afterwards we read, "There was also a strife among them which of them should be accounted the greatest" (Luke 22:24). A man can have position without ever loving it and conversely a man may love position without having it, but the great mind of Christ is unveiled for us in John 13 when He, their Lord and Master, stooped to wash their feet. Stripping off His garments and girding Himself with a towel, He served like a slave. Peter never forgot this divine object lesson in humility. As an old man he wrote to the church leaders and urged them: "Be subject one to another and be clothed with humility" (1 Peter 5:5). I imagine that, as Peter wrote that line, his pen poised for a lingering moment of deep meditation as in spirit he was back in that upper room. The word he used, "clothed", is the same word which John used to describe how Jesus "clothed" or girded Himself with the towel. Is it just my imagination, or are those tears in Peter's eyes?

Once when visiting, I chanced to arrive at the home of an elderly Christian lady who was ill, to find that she already had a visitor, a faithful, sweet, but very timid member of the congregation. In the course of conversation she asked, "Pastor, the likes of me who never do much, we shall be last in the Kingdom, shan't we?". I did not have to ponder much before I answered. I knew her. Here she was visiting, having done the shopping for her friend, etc. when she herself had rheumatism. She was so faithful in giving, so unobtrusive. "No, R. . .", I replied, "Jesus said that many that are first shall be last, and the last first, and I fear that many of us who are in the public eye and many who seem to be doing so much, may in that day find ourselves last, and many others who have thought that they did little, will find themselves first."

Read on through this tremendous chapter, Philipians 2, and "think long and deeply on these things": Christ's thinking about reputation, His thinking about service, His thinking about death, His thinking about the cross. We are moving rapidly towards the end of this age. Soon we shall see the mystery of iniquity exposed in its final ghastly, cancerous growth, the culmination of Satanic ambition and human sin, when in the Antichrist the demonic lie will be perpetrated that man has become God. That is the final "perfected" sin! But for all his vaunted claims, the one who has wisdom counts his number and knows that, for all his claims, it is only the number of a man, not a god! The mystery of Godliness is seen at the cross, when God who became man yet remained God died a worm. We know, though, — and for all eternity will sing of the wonder and the glory and mystery of it — that this Man was God.

Only the greatest Mind could have conceived such a plan of salvation. Great minds, therefore, are those who seek to think like Christ.

Divine Healing

by Joseph Smith

OF all the great truths for which we stand as Pentecostal people I know of none on which we are being more sorely tried at the present time than on the matter of Divine healing. There is a need to get down to the great principles of Divine healing as taught in the Scriptures. By the Word of God men live. We may, and we ought to, enjoy the glowing testimonies of others who have been healed, but, when the need for healing comes to our own door, then it is a different matter. Then we realise that faith is a very personal thing and that the faith of others is not sufficient. Faith comes by hearing the Word of God (Romans 10:17).

Sin, sickness and death are three great facts which are ever before us. We cannot ignore them. How did they come into being? In the beginning we start with God and perfection in both heaven and earth. How long this state of perfection continued we have no idea.

In Isaiah 14:4-21, Ezekiel 28:12-19 we are given a description of Lucifer: "Full of wisdom and perfect in beauty". Yet he sinned and fell, because he was not created a machine, but a free will agent. The first man was created in the image of a perfect God, yet he sinned and fell, because he was not a robot but a man. Any person, whether man or angel, who is free to obey, is at the same time free to disobey. How could God have any pleasure in the service of men or angels if they were merely machines without a free will? Angels and men were wrong to take advantage of their freedom as they have done, and they surely have paid for the misuse of their liberty.

In Romans 5:12 we are told how sin and death entered this fair world of ours. God told our first parents concerning the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die (Hebrew: "dying thou shalt die"). From that day a change took place in the bodies of Adam and Eve, and they knew it. What had happened? Their bodies had suddenly become mortal, subject to death. A consciousness of guilt entered their hearts and they sought to hide from the presence of God. Their bodies, having become subject to death, were also subject to sickness, which is really death working in slow motion: "Dying thou shalt die". Sickness and death are partners: sickness lays you low and death comes along and finishes you off.

All along the line of human existence sickness has been associated with sin, beginning with the sin of our first parents, then under the law of Moses, for sickness and disease of every kind are included in the curses of the law which would come upon the children of Israel

if they failed to obey the voice of God (Deuteronomy 28:15, 21, 27, 60, 61). In Galatians 3:13, we read, "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us". In the church at Corinth, because of sin among some of its members, sickness and premature death were visited upon them (1 Corinthians 11:27-32). See also 1 Corinthians 3:3; 5:1-7; 6:1-8 as to the nature of these sins. How could they discern the Lord's body in such a state of mind and heart?

Doctors tell us that seventy per cent of the sickness in this country is caused by what they call "negative emotions", such as hatred, bitterness, envy, spite, jealousy, unforgiveness, revenge, murmuring and anxiety — all of which are forbidden in the Bible. Such a state of mind affects emotions, heart, glands, stomach and nerves. Dr. William Sadler, the eminent specialist in nervous diseases, says, "If people lived in a truly Christian way half the diseases would drop off tomorrow morning and we would rise up a new superior race of human beings". The Yorkshire Evening Press, March 20th, 1972, has this to say about a sermon preached in York on the previous night by Dr. D. Coggan. The Archbishop said, "Many of the beds in our hospitals would be empty tonight if many people knew what it meant to forgive and be forgiven. If a man knows what forgiveness of sin is all about and has the right relationship with God and his neighbours, then a healing process is set in motion which affects the mind, the body, and the whole being". I could mention a host of similar testimonies from several doctors. I would not for a moment say that a person has necessarily sinned when he is attacked by some form of sickness. Our bodies, being mortal, are subject to the attacks of Satan, but James 5:15 mentions sin as a possible cause. However, all sickness and death (according to the Bible) find their root cause in sin. That being so, where are we to look for the remedy? There is only one perfect Deliverer from sin, Satan, sickness, and eventually from death: "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and for ever". The Bible says, "But God's act of grace is out of all proportion to Adam's wrong-doing. For if the wrongdoing of that one man brought death upon so many, its effect is vastly exceeded by the grace of the one man, Jesus Christ. And again, the gift of God is not to be compared in its effect with that one man's sin" (Romans 5:15, 16 N.E.B.).

Jesus Christ came into this world to deal effectually with sin and its effects. Jesus bore our sins that we might be made righteous and He bore those dreadful stripes that we might be healed (1 Peter 2:24).

The Greek word for "healed" is "iaomai", and is generally used for physical healing. Matthew 8:16,17 tells us why Jesus healed all who came to Him for healing: "He cast out the spirits with His word, and healed all that were sick; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses". He healed people in the light of Calvary. It would be impossible for a perfectly righteous God to heal people on any other basis. A prisoner who has been justly sentenced by a righteous judge can only be set free in righteousness when someone pays his fine, otherwise he must go through with it and pay the full penalty himself. We must remember that it was God who said: "Dying thou shalt die". Sickness was part of the penalty of sin. There was no sickness in this world before Adam sinned and before we can get healing for body or soul the primary cause of all sin, sickness and death must be dealt with. Sickness is not sin, therefore there is no need to atone for sickness, but the cause of sickness was sin and that must be atoned for.

The word "bare" used by Isaiah and referred to in Matthew 8:17, means "to bear substitutionally". In Isaiah 53:12 the same Hebrew verb is used in reference to Christ bearing our sin. The word "bare" used by Matthew means to bear in the ordinary way - see Young's Concordance.

Andrew Murray tells us of a lady who was brought into a meeting in North London suffering from epilepsy and tuberculosis. She was laid on a couch, too ill to take any notice of anyone in the meeting. Then she heard someone quote Matthew 8:17 and a voice seemed to say to her, "If Jesus Christ bore your sicknesses and infirmities why should you bear them? Get up!". "Get up", she thought. "If I get up and fall on the floor what will the people say?". Then the voice came again, "If Jesus Christ bore your sins why should you bear them?". She got up and sat on a chair near to the table. Immediately healing set in and in two weeks she was quite well.

Although Jesus Christ bore both our sins and our sicknesses, in neither case does deliverance come to us apart from faith (John 3:16; Acts 16:31; Matthew 9:22,29; Mark 16:17,18; Acts 14:7-10; James 5:15).

According to the Word of God eternal life is given to a person WHEN he believes (John 3:36; 5:24), but there is no such promise given in the Bible concerning divine healing. It may come instantly or gradually. In the ministry of Christ healings were nearly always instantaneous, and considering who He was that was what we might well expect. But after our conversion our heavenly Father, who is deeply interested in the development of our characters, frequently allows our faith to be tested. See James 1:2; 1 Peter 1:7; Hebrews 10:35-39. Hebrews 6:12 shows that it is by faith and patience we inherit the promises. According to 1 Timothy 6:12 faith is a battle and in Hebrews 11:6 we are told that faith calls for diligence on our part in seeking God. The Master Himself gives us two wonderful parables on how diligently we should seek God: Luke 11:5-12; 18:1-8.

Although Jesus Christ has finally and for ever dealt effectually with death and mortality, yet according to the plan of God death is allowed to continue in this age, but will be for ever destroyed at the time appointed by the Father (1 Corinthians 15:51-57, 26; 1 Thessalonians 4:16; John 5:28,29).

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

69. The Death of Jacob (Genesis 49:28-33)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon church

SEVENTEEN years had passed since Jacob went down to Egypt and they had probably been the happiest, most peaceful years of his troubled life. He was settled in a good land, surrounded by a devoted, united family, and honoured by all, even by Pharaoh himself, because he was the father of Egypt's deliverer. For some time he had been conscious of the approach of death, yet his attitude had not been tinged by fear or agitation; rather we are conscious of a calm, dignified serenity in the old patriarch as he faced the last earthly encounter.

Jacob's death should speak to our hearts, for we can learn from the death of a righteous man. The death of the righteous is fearless; its terror and sting are gone, because sin — which puts fear into death — is taken away by the Lord Jesus. Their death is hopeful, because the resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ is also the promise of their resurrection. Their death is triumphant, for Jesus had conquered death on behalf of all who trust Him, so that, in the words of Paul, they can say, "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness" (2 Timothy 4:8).

These are powerful reasons for the Christian attitude to physical death. It is not the end of life, nor does it contain the threat of divine judgment, but it is rather the beginning of a new life of service and worship.

Why did Jesus Die?

A Good Friday Meditation

ANSWERING the question, Mrs. C.F. Alexander in her hymn "Green Hill", taught children a three-fold reason:

- He died that we might be forgiven (PARDON);
- He died to make us good (PURITY);
- That we might go at last to heaven (PARADISE).

Consider the New Testament phrase, "He died that...":

1. That He might deliver us from this present world order (Galatians 1:4, Phillips);
2. That He might bring us to God (1 Peter 3:18);
3. That He might redeem and purify us from all Iniquity (Titus 2:14);
4. That He might destroy him that had the power of death (Hebrews 2:14);
5. That He might sanctify, cleanse and perfect His Church (Ephesians 5:25, 27);
6. That He might establish His lordship over all (Romans 14:9, NEB).

God's Prodigals

THE old cottager, living alone, had a prodigal son in a far land. He had not heard from him for a long time. One day, after years of silence, a letter arrived. Since the old father couldn't read, he asked the postman there and then if he would read it. The postman, a gruff and surly individual, and, unfortunately, on that day in one of his moods, read, with a churlish voice, "Dear Father, I am very ill and in great need. Please send me some money. Yours, Tom". "The rascal", exclaimed the old man indignantly, "he only wants my money, and he shan't have one penny of it!". Later in the day, in the village general shop, the shopkeeper enquired of him if he had heard from his son of late. He showed him the letter that he had received that morning and asked him to read it. The merchant, a genial soul took it from him, and, with feeling and sympathy read, "Dear Father, I am very ill, and in great need. Please send me some money. Yours, Tom". The poor father, brushing away a tear, asked the shopkeeper, "How do I go about sending some money?"

Brother preacher, it is not just what you preach, however excellent your matter may be, it is the way you say it that matters. This is what Homiletics is all about.

Supplementary Hymn-tunes

HOW many realise that we have a fine supplementary tune book to our Redemption Hymnal, which also includes guitar chords? It has been in use for years, yet the writer finds that many church organists and pianists have never heard of it. There are twenty-five lovely new tunes to many old favourites, like "Thy Life was given for me", "I will sing the wondrous Story", "What a Friend", "My Song shall be of Jesus", "The solid Rock", "And can it be?", "Happy Day" and others. Your worship will be enhanced by using it.

"God is Love"

by S. E. Petts

"He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love" (1 John 4:8).

LOVE is at the root of all good things. A life without love is no life at all. Once love is discovered, life takes on purpose. It gives meaning to existence. God made man like himself, and God is love, so man must love. It is his greatest virtue and his deepest desire.

Who can measure the effect of love? It transcends all, overcomes all obstacles and demolishes all barriers. Its power is infinite, for it is born of almighty God. It calls forth response. Love breeds love. The wise look beyond the effect of love to its source and discover its origin in God. So, as we love others, they will love us. This should lead them to loving those whom we love and so to loving God.

How important it is that our love should exceed the ordinary love of men and show forth the very love of Christ Himself, for the love that we show may be the only expression of God that they see.

Let us love all men with Christlike compassion that they too might be born of God.

Christian Marriage

SPRINGTIME is always looked upon as the mating season, the time of wedding bells a-ringing. By tradition many newspapers and magazines carry extensive articles about wedding procedures, the preparations, the ceremony itself, and the honeymoon. I opened my local weekly and discovered three full pages devoted to wedding topics. "The question of presents", "Planning for the big day", "Radiant is the bride", were some of the captions. The choice of wedding ring, the styling of the bride's hair and the care of her hands were also covered.

I couldn't help but reflect that there seems to be an over-emphasis on the outward show of the actual wedding, but very little thought is given to the significance of marriage itself. Marriage is one custom which has survived since the dawn of civilisation. In Christian circles in these days of permissiveness and moral decline, holy matrimony should be upheld as never before. I sometimes wonder if we, the first generation Pentecostals, have been guilty of neglecting to teach those growing up in our assemblies the God-given instructions for the marriage partnership. Because we early Pentecostals grew up in a society where marriage was secure and divorce never was envisaged or only spoken of in whispers, we have failed to prepare our young people to stand firm against the inroads of easy divorce and remarriage as the norm of society.

I believe that Christian marriage is the foundation of civilisation and that before ever marriage is contemplated Christian couples should pray together and test their relationship before God. Then, after seeking God's blessing upon their union, having taken the trouble to discover God's rules and guide-lines for Christian marriage, they can embark on the great adventure under His control. This is where older Christians can strengthen the young people who are beset by so many temptations and conflicting ideas today. May we lovingly show that God's standards and rules of conduct never change and never fail.

If we base the marriage relationship on Genesis 4:24 we see that, joined together, husband and wife become a new unit, the basis of a new family. Their first loyalty is to one another. Much as they may love and be tempted to cling to their respective parents, their new relationship is supreme. How many unhappy situations could be avoided if only God's directions were heeded and over-anxious possessive in-laws would recognise the wisdom of allowing the young couple to build their lives without interference. In 1 Corinthians 11:3, marriage is given a very sacred meaning and the whole relationship is lifted on to a divine plain. God has decreed the relative positions of the partners and it is all bound up with the relationship between Christ the Lord and God our Father. Jesus was submissive to God and yet co-equal with Him. Submission does not mean inferiority and surely the Christian wife will find joy in submitting to her husband even as Christ did in submitting to God's will. "In practical terms, this means that the husband takes the ultimate responsibility for the welfare and discipline of the family, while the wife acts within the protective support of her husband". (John Gunstone, in Greater than these).

A development of this teaching and one which has tender overtones is to be found in Ephesians 5:22,23. It is obvious, simple and yet sublime and, if obeyed, it will cancel out all clashes of personalities, selfishness and resentment. If a husband loves his wife as Christ loved His Church even to the point of sacrifice, a wife must in return respond with all her heart, her love and esteem being given to him. It takes the grace of God, coupled with prayer and obedience to the Scriptures, to build a really Christian marriage. When such a marriage has been achieved it is a wonderful blessing to the partners and to the community and a clear witness to the power of God in the lives of believers.

Spring weddings are very popular and some of my readers may be already in the throes of preparation for their own special day. Please get your priorities right. The wedding day is exciting, even glamorous and should be the very best that you can make it, but it is only one day and not at all typical of the days, months and years of marriage. Prepare thoroughly for a life-long partnership based on heavenly wisdom and guidance; love, and as the years go by your relationship will deepen and strengthen and become an extension of God's love.

Holiness is... Being concerned about Environmental Pollution

declares National Youth Director, Eldin R. Corsie

GOD has made us the custodians of His earth (Genesis 1:28) and therefore we should be taking a responsible attitude towards the battle against pollution. Whenever the symptoms of ecological disease appear, one tends to blame industry and the motor car. Have you considered that YOU are to blame? Young people today are setting the scene for tomorrow's world. The dedication with which the problem of pollution is tackled will determine the kind of world in which you will live.

Every commodity purchased has been produced by mother earth and so much of the waste of these materials is redeemable, if careful thought is given to their value. Perhaps one of the benefits of the petrol shortage is the clearer air around us. Someone has calculated that a single motor car consumes as much breathable oxygen per minute as 1,135 human beings. God has built into his world trees and plants which help to refurbish the atmosphere with vital oxygen. Oxygen is generated in the botanical world by a by-product of a metabolic process called photosynthesis. Toxic by-products from the car inhibit this photosynthetic action in plants limiting the amount of oxygen they can return to the atmosphere. All this is going on imperceptibly. A Dutch scientist recently predicted a world oxygen crisis! No wonder statistics show that in 1970 over 3,000,000 Britons suffered serious bronchial or respiratory disorders. During our lifetime we take into our lungs an average of about 500 million breaths — that is about eighteen breaths per minute. We are constantly absorbing polluted air. Carbon monoxide is belching out from motor vehicles. Radio-active fall-out and chemical deposits of industry are vomited into the atmosphere.

Of course pollution is manifested in other forms than gaseously in the atmosphere. There is liquid pollution (average and industrial waste) and solid pollution (dumped cars, bottles, plastic material and general rubbish). We are in a throw-away society. So much is disposable that consideration is never given to what the cost of these items is.

If, as I pointed out at the beginning of this article, we are the custodians of this earth, we should be taking positive, practical steps to cleanse the world. Often we think of ourselves as the innocent victims of pollution. Is there nothing we can do to help?

So much of the problem is wound up in our lifestyle. For instance, in the realm of our buying habits. We have grown accustomed to everything being packaged. Do we have to accept this? Are we careful enough in returning bottles to the milkman or grocer's store? The bottle shortage has become critical. How about the litter that is dropped to the ground so thoughtlessly? Does that amount of litter make all that difference? Yes, there must be 100 per cent individual co-operation, if the world is to be cleansed.

Jesus, after feeding the five thousand, was careful to gather up the fragments that remained — twelve baskets of litter! We note with interest how Jesus cleansed the Temple, but we must be challenged by the fact that He also cleansed the hillside!

Let young Christian people lead the way in showing the world that clean living is not only a matter of moral living in the context of personal relationships, but also care for the physical world in which we live. Crusade for cleanliness!

Monday, March 18th

"Sit down in the lowest room" (v.10).

THE Lord emphasised the need for humility in the lives of His disciples, with the promise that the humble will be exalted in due time. We see so much false humility, even boasting of possessing it. The perfect example of humility is Christ, who humbled Himself even unto death, laying aside His heavenly glory for the lowest rooms in the company of fallen humanity. God has highly exalted Him and given Him a name above every other name and a throne above every other throne. He who sat in the judgment hall of men in humility will one day sit as the judge of the whole world on that great day of reckoning.

Tuesday, March 19th

Luke 14:12-24

"They all . . . began to make excuse" (v.18).

WE must confess that at times our petty excuses have robbed us of the blessings of God. All the reasons given for non-attendance at the feast were legitimate, but all had contributed to assign the most important matters to second place. The great commission to all disciples is the message in this parable (v.23). The command was to ignore class, status, rank or physical ability; "whosoever" was the keyword — that "My house may be filled". We happily invite folk to something "without money" that will enrich them for evermore if they accept the divine invitation.

Wednesday, March 20th

Luke 14:25-35

"Salt is good" (v.34).

JESUS said, "Ye are the salt of the earth". Salt is vital to our daily living; so is the influence of Christ through believers. Salt can bring out the finest qualities. It was considered so important that wages, called "salarium", were paid in salt to Roman soldiers, hence our "salary". African natives gladly accept salt as a reward rather than more exciting gifts for they value its importance to healthy living. The preserving power of this common commodity is well known to the housewife. Its purifying power in the bloodstream is known in the animal world, where creatures will travel miles for salt-licks. The cruse of salt (2 Kings 2:21) was used to heal the waters. Let our speech be with grace, seasoned with salt (Colossians 14:6).

Thursday, March 21st

Luke 15:1-10

"He layeth it on his shoulders" (v.5).

THE shepherd uses both shoulders to bring home the lost lamb, whereas in Isaiah 9:6 only one shoulder is needed to hold the government of the kingdom by the wonderful Counsellor and mighty God. Here we see the tenderness of the Almighty's shoulders as well as His strength in ruling. The amazing compassion and tenderness that the Lord shows to His straying children indicate the importance of the individual Christian to the heavenly Shepherd even in our weakest moments. Copy His example in Church life and help those who are in need. No burden is too heavy and no heartache is too small to place upon His shoulders.

Friday, March 22nd

Luke 15:11-32

"Father, give me" (v.12).

HOW often we pray in the same strain, making request for what we feel is necessary to happiness. How wrong this attitude is. "Father, make me" (vv.18,19). This request met his every need as we see him cleansed, restored, seated and rejoicing in family fellowship. A thousand sermons on this theme could not express the full depth of the Father's love and forgiveness and the overwhelming welcome to one who returned in humble repentance. "Father, make me a channel of blessing" should be our daily prayer, that we may live in His likeness, in humility and obedience. The wayward son became a willing servant.

Saturday, March 23rd

Luke 16:1-18

"Wasted his goods" (v.1).

WHILE some waste their substance with riotous living in far-off places, others remain as stewards in the household and are found guilty of the same charge. "Give an account of thy stewardship" (v.2). The dishonest man, rather than make restitution, indulged in further deceit against his master by falsifying the accounts in order to benefit himself. As stewards of His gospel we are responsible to administer the small things in dedicated faithfulness, for we too, must give a personal account of our stewardship (v.10). Let us not waste opportunities, talents, time or the Lord's money on unworthy enterprises.

Sunday, March 24th

Luke 16:19-31

"The rich man . . . died, and was buried" (v.22).

ONE can imagine the tremendous crowds at this funeral. From far and wide, noblemen, representatives in the business world, would bring tributes and speeches. It is not what men say about us that matters, but what the heavenly Recorder has indelibly put to our account. The reception on the other side for Lazarus — carried by angels (v.22), comforted, rewarded, free from hunger and pain — is worth far more than a world of material wealth and popular acclaim. The lost soul (v.28) had more concern for other lost souls on earth than many professed evangelicals today. Pray this Sunday, "Lord, make me a lover of souls!"

Mother

A second study by A. S. F. Horne

THERE is no influence in the world today like the influence of Christian mothers. No class of persons in the world has tested the power of a consecrated life like the mothers of Christendom.

The mother of Alfred Tyny was distinguished for force of character and wonderful faith in God. When gasping for breath in her dying hour, she heard her husband express some anxiety about the future welfare of their children and this was her confident reply: "My dear, give yourself no uneasiness about my children. God will bring them all to Himself; this is His covenant with me". This woman was on speaking terms with God. She knew what God was going to do; He had taken her into His confidence. The secret of the Lord was with her.

There is only one absolutely unselfish love. It is a mother's love. A mother's love is the best illustration of God's love and a mother's love is the best guarantee of God's love, for a God who can create a mother's love must be love.

It was Theodore Parker who in his public prayers addressed God as "The Father and Mother of us all". What a happy phrase is: "The mother heart of God". There is so much hard theology; what a difference it would make if it was read beneath the candlelight of a mother's love. Then it would no longer be cold, stern and unbending.

Kipling wrote those glorious lines:

If I were hanged on the highest hill,
I know whose love would follow me still;
If I were drowned in the deepest sea,
I know whose tears would come down to me;
If I were damned in body and soul,
I know whose prayers would make me whole,
Mother O' mine! Mother O' mine!

Mr. Gladstone, when announcing to Parliament the death of Princess Alice, told the following touching story. The Princess's little boy was ill with diphtheria; the doctor had warned her not to inhale the poisoned breath. The child was tossing in the delirium of fever.

The mother took the little one in her lap and stroked his fevered brow; the boy threw his arms around her neck, and whispered, "Kiss me, Mamma". The mother instinct was stronger than her doctor's caution. She pressed her lips to the child's and lost her life.

It was Thomas Carlyle who said, "There is only one person in the world who understands me — my mother". I believe that he paid her the greatest compliment ever paid: "She understands me".

If only more homes knew a real mother's love, a lot of teenage trouble would disappear. We have too many children today who have no one to love them.

The poor, besotted, sin-cursed prodigal shunned by man, even by father and mother, is never forsaken by God. No matter how wayward a man's footsteps have been, how deeply he has sunk in sin, how low his standard of joy, though drunken and loathsome — he is some mother's boy.

God help all Christian mothers to set a godly example. The nation's future is in their hands. Many a church is without young people because no, or little, real Christian example was seen in the home. It is not what they see and hear in the church that matters so much as in their own homes. They need the influence of Christian parents.

Paul could write to Timothy 2 Timothy 1:5: "I cherish the recollection of guileless faith which first resided in your grandmother, Lois, and your mother, Eunice, and I am sure does still in you. It is on this ground that I would urge you to fan the flame of the divine gift imparted to you when I ordained you" (Dr. Schonfield).

May God give to the Church more and more such grandmothers and mothers. Amen!

EASTER is getting nearer. It is a wonderful opportunity for fellowship and outreach. A glance at our list of Easter conventions shows that our churches are taking every advantage. The plans for Easter Monday in Trafalgar Square and the Royal Albert Hall, London, are by now well-known and thrilling.

The way Elim friends support our activities is both humbling and gladdening. No little sacrifice by many helps to back our efforts as a movement. I feel very burdened to write to you for you special prayer backing this Easter. May the Lord graciously guide many to invite unsaved friends to our Easter gatherings.

That God does wonderful things on Easter Monday in London is readily discernible from the many testimonies one hears, from the witness of missionary A. D. Bull to his having been baptised in the Royal Albert Hall before the war to the acknowledgement of a young man saved last Easter Monday. Every year has its record of blessing and grand results.

Our country has been passing through such challenges and has a future to face which is set about with problems. We long for a mighty revival, for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit.

Your part in all this is vital. Many have made plans already. We know that you will do your best to spend time in believing intercession both individually and in our churches. Pray for every aspect, every ministry, every means.

"The Lord hath declared and the Lord will perform".

FUNDAMENTAL BELIEFS OF THE ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH — 1. THE BIBLE: We believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God and that none may add thereto or take away therefrom except at their peril. 2. THE TRINITY: We believe that the Godhead eternally exists in three persons: Father, Son and Holy Ghost and that these three are one God. 3. THE CHURCH: We believe that the Church consists of all persons who have been regenerated by the Holy Ghost and made new creatures in Christ Jesus. 4. THE SAVIOUR: We believe that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God and that through the death and risen power of Christ all who believe can be saved from the penalty and power of sin. 5. THE HEALER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Healer of the body and that all who will walk in obedience to His will can claim Divine Healing for their bodies. 6. THE BAPTISER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Baptiser in the Holy Ghost and that this Baptism with signs following is promised to every believer. 7. THE COMING KING: We believe in the personal and pre-millennial return of our Lord Jesus Christ to receive unto Himself the Church and afterwards to set up His Throne as King. 8. THE FRUIT: We believe that every believer on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour should produce the ninefold fruit of His Spirit: Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. 9. THE GIFTS: We believe that the Church should claim and manifest the nine Gifts of the Holy Spirit: Wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discernment, tongues, interpretation. 10. THE MINISTRY: We believe that God has given some apostles and some prophets and some evangelists and some pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry for the edifying of the Body of Christ. 11. THE FUTURE STATE: We believe in the eternal conscious bliss of all true believers in Christ and also in the eternal conscious punishment of all Christ rejectors. 12. THE ORDINANCES: We believe in the following ordinances: Partaking of bread and wine in memory of our Lord's death, baptism by immersion for believers, the laying on of hands and the anointing of the sick with oil.

WISBECH

THE "Capital of the Fens" is situated twenty-one miles north-east of Peterborough. It is a busy town of some 17,000 people and is surrounded by strawberry fields and rose nurseries.

Last May a small group of young people who had been wonderfully saved and filled with the Spirit made contact with us and much fellowship has since been enjoyed at our Peterborough Church.

At the beginning of December the first Elim meeting was held at Wisbech in the new W.I. Hall. Beside all the Peterborough folk who attended forty Wisbech people were present.

We recently held a second rally there. In the afternoon an open-air service was conducted in the Square and hundreds of people stopped in the February sunshine to listen. The Rally in the evening saw fifty-seven Wisbech people at the meeting beside our own. The Spirit of God moved in a wonderful way, resulting in three adults making their decisions for Christ.

Please pray for this latest outreach that a permanent work for God will be established and that a whole new area will be opened up to the Pentecostal message.

KING'S HEATH, Birmingham Pastor: J. Williams

WE were very conscious of the Lord's presence on the occasion of Pastor Williams's induction as Minister. Some eighty people gathered for the service, including several ministers from our churches in the Birmingham area. Pastor R.J. Morrison, the District Superintendent, convened the meeting and Pastor R.M. Kingsbury gave a message of encouragement to Pastor and members alike. Two members of Pastor Kingsbury's Church ministered in song. Mr. R. Lucas (Secretary) welcomed Pastor Williams on behalf of the members. He said that, in the short time that he had been with us, Pastor Williams had already gained the love and respect of everyone. Pastor Williams replied that he and his wife had felt warmly welcome as soon as they came to the church. He said that he had claimed the surrounding district for the Lord and looked forward to his work in the area. The ministers present then laid hands on Pastor and Mrs. Williams and Pastor M.W. Carr, founder and retiring Minister of Calvary Chapel, prayed God's blessing on them.

Pastor and Mrs. Williams have spent many years abroad, first in the mission fields of Rhodesia and then in U.S.A. and Canada. We look forward to gaining from their experience and trust that the Lord will richly bless their ministry here. (Mrs.) F. DYSON

PORTADOWN, N. Ireland

Pastor: S. Shaw

THE children of today are the men and women of tomorrow — how often have we heard these words in relation to society, school and politics! The Christian Church has likewise acknowledged the worth and importance of children.

With these thoughts in mind the local Elim Pentecostal Church started a Good News Club. A children's meeting was started during a recent mission by Miss Neville and Miss Kelly, after which a regular meeting was held every Wednesday evening.

The response has been very encouraging. An average of about sixty meet each week and the meetings are kept very bright and brief with plenty of choruses, Bible quizzes, prizes and surprises. Short messages from the Bible are also given.

A willing band of workers rally round each week to help in many ways. Some help in transporting the children to and from the Church, others lead the singing and there are those who maintain some kind of "law and order". The task of running the Good News Club has been taken on by Pastor Shaw, Miss Sylvia Wiggans and Mr. Alex Richardson.

At first there were twenty-four children, the numbers increasing every week and now there are some sixty children attending every Wednesday night.

Pastor: R.R. Taylor

THE recent induction service of Pastor R.R. Taylor was very well attended, a number of neighbouring churches supporting. The Scriptures were read by Len Colbourne, the new Minister was welcomed by Mr. G. Garland for the Church, and by Pastor J.H. Hunt for the Presbytery. Mr. Garland said in his remarks that the advent of Pastor Taylor was an answer to prayer. The Pastor's daughter, Irene, rendered two solos. Mrs. Taylor and Andrew were introduced to the Church by Pastor Hunt. The address was given by Pastor Brian G. Edwards who, in forthright manner, stirred and encouraged us by a timely reminder of our responsibility to God. The service was ably convened by Pastors Ron J. Mackenzie and J.H. Hunt. We were happy to have with us Pastors D.C. Crawford, Pastor R.T. McDonald of Tamworth, and Pastor E. Snelling a former Minister. Mr. Vernon Smith of Tamworth was the pianist for the evening. At the close the members of the Presbytery laid hands on the new minister and prayed the rich blessing of God on his future ministry. After the service tea and refreshments were served by the ladies of the church.

Pastor: Len Magee

THAT extra Elim-mile of fellowship in the gospel, all in one week of devoted service, began, after our usual Sunday services, on a Monday evening with the visit of our President, Pastor John Lancaster, whose ministry of the Word was most helpful and encouraging. The prayer meeting on the Wednesday was urgent with petitions for blessing the following three nights.

On the Thursday Pastor W. Ron Jones and his daughter Rhianon came from Bristol for a three-day visit. At the first service Pastor Ron Jones drew a masterly word-picture of the sombre background to the gospel in our day. Pastor Len Magee ably convened and rendered excellent ministry in song with his guitar accompaniment. Rhianon gave splendid support with most apt and faultless recitations. Our newly-formed singing group, after much practice, gave their first performance.

On the Friday evening the High Wycombe Westbourne Quartet rendered some excellent songs with beautiful harmony. The numbers increased and the Word was with power and point. At the appeal a great many stood to rededicate themselves to witness.

On the Saturday evening the climax of blessing came with an extremely good word on the Second Advent. A group of young people from Bristol City Temple cheerfully went that extra mile and brought the equipment to show the film "The End of the Age", a most impressive film which gave real point to the following message. Glenys Jones sang a duet with Pastor Len Magee most acceptably.

Each night there were first-time committals to Jesus as Saviour and Lord, for which we thank God. We thank from our hearts Pastor Ron Jones and all who served so effectively under the anointing of the Holy Spirit, for a week of blessing.

ROYAL ALBERT HALL AND CONFERENCE by the Secretary-General

It's amazing what enthusiasm and personal interest will accomplish. Already Conference bookings are ahead of the corresponding period last year. Have you booked yet? I write these words in the context of a remark by the wife of one of our honorary pastors. Already she informs me that out of a church with an average Sunday evening congregation of some twenty four, (there was no church there three years ago), twenty are already booked for Trafalgar Square and the Royal Albert Hall and thirteen for the Conference.

I commented that if every church sent a proportionate contingent we would need two or three Royal Albert Halls and a Conference centre five times the size we now book. What about you and your church?

Each year attendances rise; already, as mentioned above, the prospects for the Conference are encouraging. Let us each make this year's Annual Conference and Royal Albert Hall the best attended and most effective yet. Pray, work, attend, and so help us to "Lift Jesus higher", for this is the be-all and end-all of our existence as a Pentecostal denomination.

Zena

ZENA bent to gather spinach. She had no knowledge of the shock that awaited her! Suddenly there was a loud thump and shrieks from two horrified little girls. Two year old Kenniti was buried (injured or dead) beneath the enormous tree that his father had just felled. The wide, vertical trunk, with half its roots in the ground and the remainder free, had swung back into an upright position when it was severed. The children had been warned to go elsewhere, but, being very young and not knowing the danger, they had returned. The small boy's body was completely covered, so that the father at first wondered where his son was, until the trembling finger of his daughter pointed to the grave-like mass of earth beneath the weighty tree. At that moment the mother (Zena) gave up hope and began to cry bitterly. Already one baby boy had died because the witchdoctor grandfather had insisted on witchcraft only when the month old infant had been ill; now it seemed that she had lost this one, whom we had all grown to love because of his cheerful fun-loving nature. Where was the God of his father to let this happen?

Neighbours rushed to help the father to dig frantically while an older child ran for me. The rescuers had just laid the still form down as I arrived to clear the choked mouth and nostrils of earth. Gently examining him, hope increased as I found no fractures and he responded to artificial respiration. Only the soft parts of his legs had been injured and other parts of the body bruised, including along the spine. As he was treated, Kenniti's colour improved, and a look of incredulity passed over his mother's face. Would he live after all? The possibility had not crossed her mind before, but now I reassured them as we prayed and thanked God for this miraculous escape and for His great love once more proven.

Down through the years I had delivered the children in this household and each time had prayed with the heathen, superstitious mother. To some extent, the family had become a comforting replacement of my own faraway loved-ones, their ages and sex being the same. Colour was not a barrier; they were precious.

Although unable to walk at first, Kenniti improved daily. As I spoke with Zena on the need of her soul's salvation, she listened thoughtfully, and a look of decision and determination crossed her face as she said, "I would like to become a Christian, Memsahib, if you will show me how to". What a delightful request for a missionary to hear! Explaining by Scripture and quoting faith-building experiences with the Holy Spirit's guidance, the need of repentance was seen and acted upon. Christ's sacrifice on the cross to cleanse away her sins was acknowledged and a sudden awareness of the faith that He instilled, plus His power to sustain the Christian who is desirous of following Him entered Zena's glad heart. It was new to her, but sincerity was obvious. From childhood she had been taught the dogmas of Mohammed the Moslem prophet, but now she gives Christ His rightful position as Lord of all and, more amazing still, as her own personal Saviour.

Nowhere in her home now will anyone find the witchcraft that previously ruled her life with fear. Once more we see God's ability to change a life of cruelty superstition and sin into one of love, trust and cleanliness, and our hearts rejoice greatly. Of course Satan continues to rage through the Moslem relatives, but the young woman's decision has broken their power as she stands firm with her husband who was converted from Islam years ago.

Can you wonder that despite the heavy persecution and innumerable difficulties that we missionaries bear, we count it worthwhile when we see what God has done in hundreds of lives like Zena's? Our gratitude is towards God and those of you who have united to back this work by prayer and sacrifice. As the witch-doctor's bits of wood, bone, snakeskin, blood and other filthy items burn, the new convert realises the inability of such rubbish to protect from evil, sickness and trouble, and turns with relief to the purity and faithfulness of God. Already Zena knows what heathen relatives do to those who disobey them, as she has seen her husband accused, robbed, cursed, deprived of wife and children and finally disowned, but she does not falter in her stand, for she has also seen God triumph over it all. Zena cannot preach, but she can tell what God has done for her, in her own words, "Isn't He wonderful?"

Letters to the Editor

Dear Pastor Walker,

I always enjoy reading my EVANGEL on Sunday afternoons. The last three readers' letters have all been concerning the "Jesus Festival movement".

After reading February 2nd EVANGEL I feel constrained to throw a little light on our two young brothers, J. Williams and G. Baunds. These brothers are not from the Jesus movement. They are young men who have been nurtured in the admonition and love of the Lord by Christian parents, staunch and sincere. I have watched them grow up from birth and my heart has been thrilled to hear of their faithful service and sincerity until this present time.

I will remember the mistake in the remark they made in their letter of January 5th. Don't we all make mistakes? I have always been told that if we make no mistakes we don't make anything. I have now served the Lord for forty-eight years and I have made so many mistakes that they are uncountable. I try not to make the same one twice, but Jesus loves me just the same. It is as we acknowledge our mistakes we grow in grace and love.

Had I not made mistakes I would never have known the love of God. I would never experience the depth of His love, which is unexplainable.

I thank my God that He does not keep a record of our mistakes and shortcomings.

May the Lord, bless those who are upset. I say to them, "Go and tell Jesus".

Yours in the bond of Christian love,
(Mrs.) A. Barker

Dear Sir,

Please allow me the privilege of passing on a word of tribute to the life and work of the late Pastor Hilliard. As one who has been actively engaged in Christian work for very many years I cannot recall anyone so dedicated as he was to his pastoral duties and he certainly carried out the doctrine of the "second mile". Much time and energy were spent seeking to help those in need and in sorrow I can say that he was a source of great comfort. The influence of his labours here was felt beyond the boundaries of the Elim Church. I pray now he has passed on to his reward that the effects of his ministry will still be felt and even now inspire those who sat under it to follow his beautiful example. My sympathy at this time along with many fellow-members goes out to his devoted wife and to Stephen and Anna.

Yours sincerely in His name,

S.J. Maddock (Greenock)

Dear Brother Walker,

ALLOW me to pay a personal tribute to Pastor W.J. Hilliard, recently called Home. He was my pastor when I was a small boy and, though I was too young to remember his ministry, I do remember him as a kindly, godly pastor. It is to his credit that my family stayed in the Elim Fellowship at a time when there was much pressure to do otherwise. The office of President was an honour which he richly deserved, though I am sure he neither sought nor expected it. Never in all my life have I heard one word of criticism of this dear brother, which is a rare distinction.

Our work is all the better for men like him, yet the poorer for his Home-call.

Every blessing,

Ken Smith

3. Hushai the Archite

by Stanley Beresford, Pastor of our Blackburn Church

THIS man is said to be the friend of the king (v.37). There are those who are followers and those who are friends. They are very closely linked, but there is a special emphasis on friendship laid down by the Lord in John 15, which brings an absolute involvement with the Lord in His purposes and an implicit obedience to His Word.

Hushai recognised his inability to do certain things. David said, "If thou passest on with me, then thou shalt be a burden to me" (v.33). He must not therefore insist on doing what would hinder the king even though it was his heart's desire, but he must recognise his usefulness in another direction. What harm has been done to the cause of Christ by believers insisting on doing that for which another is more fitted and missing that which will really delight the heart of the Lord and bring victory to His people.

Hushai was David's friend and he did what David told him to do. Jesus said, "Ye are My friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you" (John 15:14). David knew his friend and could trust him to go into the midst of rebellion and work on his behalf. Jesus said, "I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves. Be ye therefore wise as serpents and harmless as doves". Nothing but absolute devotion to David could accomplish such as undertaking. Hushai did as he was told and turned the battle into David's favour. He was a true friend of the king.

What I did once I may not be able to do now. It may even be a burden to the Master and to the church, but, if I am devoted to Jesus and in absolute oneness with Him in His course, I may even do something more important and prove my friendship to Him by doing exactly what He tells me.

I'll go where You want me to go, dear Lord,
I'll be what You want me to be.

2. "Is it magic, Pastor?"

I WAS asked this question some time ago by a little boy who had been part of the congregation at the annual Sunday school prize-giving in one of our churches. The reason for his question was my trick electric light bulb which appears to light up without any contact with a source of power. I demonstrated the secret of my light bulb to the young lad and a number of others, much to their delight.

Paul, in his Letter to the Ephesians, writes of the mystery which was made known to him by revelation. We know that that mystery is not magic, but a secret which is kept until the time of its revelation. There is nothing magical about the gospel, but there was a glorious mystery connected with it, namely, that the Gentiles, who had no part in the covenants of Israel,

by A. Nicolson,
Pastor of our
Southend-on-Sea
Church

should be grafted in and become heirs of the promises in Christ. There is no magic in the Gospel but there is power. . . DYNAMIC POWER to change the lives of men and women, boys and girls, to enable ordinary folk in ordinary walks of life to become living witnesses for Christ.

The secret of my bulb was a small battery and contact with silver paper hidden in my hand. The secret of the Christian is to be in personal contact with the Holy Spirit.

Sam's Song

by Sheila Price

If you were to pass Tom's house — the one in the middle of the street — you would hear singing. Tom loves songs. He listens to them every spare moment he has. He rushes through his homework and turns on his record-player and taps his feet and drums his fingers and shakes his head in time with the music. Tom spends most of his pocket-money on records. He isn't particular which record he buys as long as it is one of the Top Ten. His only interest seems to be in the latest releases. What a boring, aimless life Tom has!

How different is Sam, who lives across the road. Sam loves songs, too. He sings them all the time, in the bath, on the way to school. If you went into the Elim Pentecostal Church on the corner at about half-past two on Sundays you'd hear his voice above all the others! Sam accepted the Lord Jesus as his Saviour three weeks ago and Sam cannot help singing for joy for the wonderful love that God has showered on him. Sam's songs come from his heart. Unlike Tom, Sam is never bored. He has a purpose in life now and there is always something for him to do for the Lord Jesus. His life is full and happy and Sam expresses his happiness in song. It is not easy to live a Christian life, as Sam has discovered. It takes courage and determination, he says, but he doesn't worry, for he knows that his Friend is ever near to help and to guide him. Sam thinks how wonderful it must have been when Jesus was born. He wishes he had heard that song that the angels sang to greet His arrival. He read in his Bible that the song was heard by the shepherds, not just the music, but the words as well. The angels must have come very close to earth that night, Sam says. Sam also read in his Bible that the angels rejoice and sing praises in heaven over every sinner that repenteth. "They sang for me!" Sam exclaims. "Three weeks ago they sang for me!"

When Tom tells Sam about the great new song just recorded by his favourite singer, Sam tells Tom about the greatest song of all. "What one's that then?" Tom asks. "Oh, it hasn't been sung yet," Sam tells him. "It's the song I shall sing in heaven when I meet my Saviour face to face. I shall sing that day in the presence of the angels. It will be a sweeter song than even they can sing, for they do not know, like me, the joy of salvation".

Sam would dearly love Tom to know this joy too. Perhaps he will one day. He has promised to go along to Sunday school with Sam next week. Sam is calling for him at two o'clock.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

70. Joseph interprets the Past (Genesis 50:20)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon church

It is plain that Joseph's brethren were very uneasy after Jacob's death, because they felt sure that Joseph would take his revenge for what they had done to him. They completely misunderstood their brother's character, for Joseph related all that happened to him to the will of God. Undoubtedly some of the things that occurred would have hurt and bewildered him at first, but Joseph learned to look to the Lord and not to be ruled by circumstances. He therefore bore no malice toward his brothers for what they did to him; he believed that God had a purpose in all that happened. He shared the faith that sustained the apostle Paul in his trials; he believed that all things work together for good to those who love and obey God. They worked not only for his own good, but also for the blessing of others and the glory of God.

Joseph's attitude must surely help thoughtful Christians. Hard, distressing experiences sometimes come to us. They could make us bitter, hard and cynical. We must learn to look beyond our circumstances to our almighty God and to remember that He loved us so much that He gave His only Son to save us. Would He, then, allow anything to touch us which would destroy us? Let us have confidence that He is overruling all that happens to us, for if only we will trust Him He will bring to pass His full purpose in our lives. We ourselves will be blessed and become more like our Saviour, the blessing of God will flow through us to others, and God will be glorified by our lives.

Passion, Prayer, Protest— the Need of the Hour

by the Pastor, Ken Smith

“WHERE is the Lord God of Elijah?” is the text for our consideration, as if God had disappeared, or gone out of circulation! Let me remind you that He is still here, whatever the situation, behind the shadows of our personal or national lives. Elijah was to be called to glory, but Elisha was commissioned, for, to quote a cliché, “God buries His workmen, but His work carries on”. Remember His words to Joshua: “Moses my servant is dead, now therefore arise”, for Joshua was not to be wrapped up in the past, mourning his dead leader; he must be up and doing for God. This is a great lesson: God is not dead, hallelujah! The sovereign presence of God in every age is a fact that we must recognise. He is “the same, yesterday, and today, and for ever”; the God of our fathers is our God, if we are “on the Lord’s side”.

Reverse the question and ask, “Where are the Elijahs of God?”, for He is still there, as constant as the sun, 3,000 years after this incident. Are we right to pose this question? People often say that we need another Elijah, John the Baptist, Martin Luther, John Calvin, John Wesley, Charles Finney, D.L. Moody, General Booth, George Jeffreys, and so they go on ad infinitum. There is a wrong emphasis if we talk like this, for it is the God of these men who really counts and whom we need. They served their generation, as we must serve ours, yet there is a point in the plea for another Elijah, or whatever man of God we name. I detect the heart-cry behind the comment. It is the spirit of that man, not the man himself, which is so often needed, for this is what counts in a man’s ministry for God.

MEN OF PASSION, like Elijah, are needed, for we ought to be men of like passion. He cared enough and was concerned enough to have convictions. How deeply do we feel about the state of our nation? He prayed, “I have been jealous for the LORD God of hosts”, and the Lord knew this and honoured him for it. He was jealous for God’s name, His Word, His house, His holiness, indeed for anything that belonged to the Lord.

The same marks of spiritual degeneration were in the land of Israel as in ours. INFIDELITY was seen in the broken vows and covenants, the broken altars, and the broken servants of the Lord. They abound in our land today. I hear so much of churches in Communist lands turned into secular buildings, but I would remind you that here in our city and throughout the land former churches may be seen as bingo halls, betting shops, warehouses, or a thousand other things. We can hardly point the accusing finger at their godlessness. It is symptomatic of our spiritual condition. IDOLATRY had replaced the worship of God, for Baal was typical of the idols of their day. Robespierre commented that, if man disbelieves in God, he must invent one, and that is idolatry. Ahab caused the nation to sin in this matter more than his predecessors and our own leaders do not set the example of godliness that one expects; we must pray for them. Film idols, pop idols, and many more exist and people unashamedly call them idols, not understanding the implications of idolatry. We are more sophisticated, but the message is there in the Word: “Little children keep yourselves from idols”. IMMORALITY was the natural consequence of their sinfulness; are we really surprised at the state of our nation? Is the Church of Jesus Christ entirely guiltless in it all? Do we not share, in a measure, the corruption of the age? In Scripture, God’s servants often identified themselves very closely with the sins of the people; the message of repentance, which the nation needs, ought to begin in our churches. As then, there is no fear of God in the land, and as a nation, we will really have to be on our knees metaphorically, before we are on our knees spiritually. One has said that God will have to apologise to Sodom and Gomorrah if He does not judge our nation for its sin, and he has a point, for we are more godless than Communist lands. Having a form of godliness we stand condemned for our national hypocrisy. Have we any concern? Does your heart weep, or bleed, for our land? It has so often been blessed of God in years long past. Let us not weep in frustration but in prayer.

MEN OF PRAYER, like Elijah, are needed. James said of Elijah that "he prayed in his praying" — prayed, not played, for I sometimes feel that we are playing in our praying if there is no passion in our prayers. He prayed "earnestly", and saw the results. We do not read his prayer for rain, but we read the prediction that he made to Ahab. Elijah's prayer at Carmel was brief, for there are only sixty-four words in all, but it moved the hand of God, and it was believing, because results always follows faith, when prayer in His will, and we know it was His will, for God had predicted rain in the previous chapter. One question stands out: "Why didn't he ask for rain?". Repentance, not rain, was the prime need of the nation. "Why don't you pray for rain?" the people ask — balance of payments deficit, stage 3, industrial action, and many other problems are but the symptoms of national unrest. It's much deeper than these. I was glad that at the recent ministers' and deacons' prayer meeting in our Presbytery, the emphasis was not prayer for the present crisis, but for the longstanding crisis, of a national turning from righteousness. Are you praying for the oil to flow and the miners' problems to be solved? You must go much deeper! It was God's sovereign name and the spirit of repentance that only He can give to a nation, which caused Elijah concern, and which must concern us as well. But these are not all!

MEN OF PROTEST, like Elijah, are needed. Is it enough to pray? Some think so, but I think not. Obadiah kept quiet, for, though "he feared the Lord greatly", he feared Ahab more. To his credit, he did hide 100 prophets in a cave, but they should have been out giving Elijah their support. Where were the 7,000 who had not bowed the knee to Baal — skulking in some cave, hidden away from Ahab's reach? Ever remember Elijah's great courage: "I'm not the trouble. YOU ARE", he boldly told the king. How I admire that man's character; no wonder he has a place in God's Word. His challenge left the people speechless and the priests helpless. Read about his judgment on the idolatrous priests. I think that God's people have gone soft about sin and sentimentalised the God of love; the consequence is plain to see in our nation. There are corruption, crime and violence.

Stand and be counted, like Elijah, and God will vindicate your stand. When did you last protest, indeed have you ever protested? "I can't write", "I can't speak", you say in excuse; Moses, Gideon, Jeremiah, and many others, have said similar things and have gone on to do great things in the name of the Lord. "I can do all things. . ." — you finish the text! If there is too much swearing on T.V. don't just turn down the sound, or turn it off, PROTEST! If your grocer gives you too little change, PROTEST! If you see violence in the street, PROTEST! If you hear His name defamed, PROTEST! If there's something in the paper that offends you, PROTEST! We protest at much more than the errors of Rome. If you do not know how or where to protest, find out, and may God help you to be a man and woman of conviction in these days of anarchy.

Passion, prayer and protest are not the ingredients of some way-out religious eccentric, but of men and woman sorely needed in our land at this time. God help us to evidence all three for His name's sake and for the nation that we love.

From T. H. Stevenson

THOUGH several weeks have elapsed since the interview given by the Archbishop of Canterbury to Douglas Brown of the B.B.C. the substance of the conversation retains interest. The Archbishop had toured the U.S.A. giving a series of addresses upon the Holy Spirit. Not surprisingly Dr. Ramsey eventually spoke freely and fully on the charismatic revival of today, after remarking that in the U.S.A., being such a vast country, there is always somewhere spiritual awakening. According to the Archbishop the Pentecostal experience spreading throughout the U.S.A. and the world is but that which was common in the Early Church from Apostolic days, including the manifestation of other tongues. To that point every Pentecostal believer could well have said "Amen", but perhaps inevitably the Archbishop had to express his reservations about the Pentecostal churches which have witnessed and grown through this century. He stated that our mistake is in looking upon the baptism in the Holy Spirit as a separate experience, whereas, according to Dr. Ramsey, it is the end result of the "initiation baptism" in water, which in the Anglican church is commonly "infant sprinkling". It is here that even an Archbishop may expose ignorance rather than expound knowledge. How often must he have read of Cornelius and his household receiving the Holy Spirit and because of this convincing Peter that this should be followed by water baptism? Going back to Acts 8, where indeed the apostles Peter and John went to Samaria by direction of the Jerusalem church to lay hands upon the many believers there who had been baptised in water but had not yet received the Holy Spirit until hands were laid upon them, we wonder what the Archbishop really believes about the ordinance of Confirmation in the Anglican church, which is partly and strongly based upon this very incident. The bishops as the professed successors of the apostles lay hands upon the candidates to impart the Holy Spirit, but how can the Archbishop reconcile an adherence to the necessity of Confirmation while admitting the Scriptural basis and experiential reality of the baptism in the Holy Spirit including speaking with tongues? This bewilders me as much as the stance of Anglican evangelicals who baptise infants, in later years guide them through Confirmation, and preach that they should be and need to be converted. I have closely co-operated with sincere Anglican clergymen in former years—both in evangelistic crusades and meetings for receiving the Holy Spirit. How easy to see the truth and how difficult to forego tradition.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman "Pray Ye"

ONE of the great prayers in Scripture is the one prayed by the dying thief on the cross. His was a prayer for salvation and we have recorded for us in Luke's Gospel the immediate answer, so graciously given by the Lord Jesus. Let us look at this story and note some things about the man and his prayers.

This dying thief was a bad man. The Pharisees said that they knew that the Lord does not hear sinners. They were wrong, for when a sinner sincerely asks the Lord for salvation, it is granted at once.

This man was saved in the last hours that he had left to live on this earth. Some think that there are those who are beyond redemption, but this poor thief was so bad in that he had committed so many crimes that he had been sentenced to die the awful death of the cross. A man can repent and be saved in his dying hours.

See how quickly and definitely he was saved. Like the other criminal, who was dying with him, he had at first reviled Jesus. Suddenly a change took place; he recognised who Jesus was and turned from his friend in crime to the Friend of sinners, who at once saved him.

Now note the man's prayer. Although he was a condemned thief, he believed in life after death. From where did he get this knowledge? Perhaps he had been taught the Scripture when he was a boy and, though deep down in the mire of sin, the truth had not been erased from his heart. Now it was used of the Holy Spirit to turn him to Jesus. Sunday school teachers, take heart, for the truth planted in the hearts of your scholars will one day bear fruit.

He believed in the loyalty and power of Christ to

Thoughts on Mother's Day

MOTHER'S DAY or Mothering Sunday (to give it the ecclesiastical title) is an occasion associated with all the precious love and blessedness of Christian motherhood. On this day we gladly remember our own mothers, with particular thoughts of their love and care down the years, and we show our appreciation in tangible form. Where there is an emphasis on motherhood in our services, without even opening our Bibles we can recall examples of mothers who served God. We think again of Sarah, the mother of nations, Rebekah, Rachel, Deborah, Hannah, Ruth and the godly Shunammite mother who showed such remarkable faith. We add to these the splendid mothers of the New Testament, beginning with Mary of Nazareth, the mother of our Saviour, her cousin Elisabeth, and Mary, the mother of John Mark, and Eunice, the mother of Timothy. We know these noble women by name and we can add to them a host of unnamed mothers who followed Jesus, who brought their children to Him for blessing and for healing. Summing up my feelings on Mother's Day, may I suggest that we dare to change a well-known quotation and say, "Let us now praise famous women!"

Deborah the prophetess is one of the most famous women in Israel's history and she claimed the title "a mother in Israel". It is significant that her name means "a bee", an Egyptian symbol of regal power. I believe that God prepared this noble woman for her role as a wise adjudicator and a militant mother-figure to lead the nation back to God and to strengthen the despondent warriors of Israel. H.V. Morton makes a fitting comment on Deborah in his book Women of the Bible: "One imagines that her influence spread through the dispirited tribes much as that of Boadicea spread from mouth to mouth through Roman Britain. Her outstanding personality, her faith in the future, her inspiring contempt for weakness and inaction and, above all, her belief in God, made her the uncrowned Queen of Israel".

When the victory was won, Deborah reached a peak of inspired praise and, filled with the Holy Spirit, she sang a great hymn of worship, in which she gave the glory to God. I think we will all agree that our beloved land and its people are in jeopardy, for unrest prevails and fear stalks the land. As in Deborah's day, there is anarchy and a rejection of God's laws, so much so that people are dispirited and bewildered. We could certainly welcome the strength and determination of some modern mothers in Israel. Deborah arose and went into action when her children, the family of Israel, were threatened with destruction.

As a mother myself and possessing a wonderful mother of the calibre of Deborah, I know that we can, with the spiritual weapons of faith, prayer and practice, go into battle and encourage our men-folk. It is pleasant to be cosseted and to rest on our laurels on Mother's Day, but conditions in our country are too serious for us to ignore. Did you see the I.T.V. documentary "Scream quietly or the neighbours will hear"? This programme revealed the heart-breaking stories of a few battered wives and mothers who have sought refuge in a house provided by Chiswick Women's Aid. Reliable statistics suggest that wife-beating is on the increase and, coupled with an estimated 4,600 battered baby cases each year, they reveal how desperately we need to make a stand for Christian motherhood in all its dignity and blessedness. There is no substitute. By their lives Christian mothers must show that God has given them a very special part to play in family life and in society at large.

Thought for the week: "Give me a generation of Christian mothers and I will undertake to change the whole face of society in twelve months" - Lord Shaftesbury.

save him. Faith made him ask the Saviour for salvation. Jesus spoke to him the words of life: "Today thou shalt be with Me in paradise".

In the morning he had stood at the bar of earthly judgment and was condemned. In the evening he stood at the bar of heaven justified because of his faith in his Friend who stood beside him.

Pray for your unsaved loved-ones and friends. God hears and answers prayer.

Drifffield Youth testify

TWO years ago a gang of us went to the Elim Church Youth Club. Every time I went to the Church my conscience would be pricked, but I used to fight against it. I remember going into the back room of the Church one night when the prayer meeting was on. I got a shock when I heard them praying for me. Just over a year ago I thought that I had got myself into trouble so I went to see the Pastor. For the first time I realized that somebody really loved me and cared for me. In the last year my whole life has been changed. I have been converted, baptised in water and in the Holy Spirit. I am eighteen years old and very grateful to the people who prayed for me.

Michael Wilson

I HAD never been to a Pentecostal Church before. I wondered what it would be like. I found the people quite normal, except that they had a wonderful love for each other. I could feel the joy and happiness. The Minister led the people in praise and worship, when many of the congregation raised their hands and praised the Lord aloud. The first night that I went the sermon was about Saul, who said, "I have played the fool". I didn't want to be a fool like Saul, but like Paul I wanted to say "For to me to live is Christ". The last hymn was "Take my life and let it be". During the hymn many people in the service stood and dedicated themselves to the Lord. Some were crying. I stood and asked Jesus to come into my life and forgive my sins. Nobody moved from their seats even after the service. Jesus was real. That night He became real to me.

Peter Richardson

I BECAME a Christian last year, on April Fool's Day! It was the greatest day of my life, the day I met Jesus. I picked up an invitation off the cash desk of a local supermarket to hear a gospel group. I went to the Church and was very impressed. The following week Len Magee sang and spoke. Through his ministry in song I found that there was more to life than merely existing. It was living — living for Jesus. That Sunday night I asked the Lord into my life. Since last year all I can do is praise Him. I have been baptised in the Holy Spirit, which opened a new dimension in my spiritual experience. This year I go to university to take a degree and my prayer is: "Give me grace to say, Lord, I'll go where you want me to go".

Derrick Wilks

LAST April I noticed a change in my friend's character. He told me that the Person who had changed his life was Jesus. I couldn't comprehend what he was saying. He persuaded me to go to the gospel service at the church that he had started to attend. During the service the sermon was taken from Psalm 66: "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me". I caught a glimpse of the person that I really was and not the person I imagined myself to be. The same Jesus who changed my friend's life changed mine.

Jon Hoffman

MY sister was singing in the gospel folk group at the Elim Church. I was invited to attend. When she went to Sweden the next week she said to her friends at the Church, "Kim will not come to the Church while I am away". She was wrong. On her return I was saved. Now I can understand what she was getting at when she talked about being saved. About twelve of us went from the Church to Spree '73. There I bought my first Bible. The words of 2 Corinthians 5:17 are "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature, old things are passed away, behold all things are become new".

Kim Fullam

I LOOK back on the last year. I entered it full of doubt, anxiety and depression, but it turned out to be the year when I found peace, joy, satisfaction and forgiveness in Christ. I never knew anything about being saved, baptised in water, baptised in the Holy Spirit, but now all these things mean something to me. I can remember the day that I entered into a more real, meaningful relationship with the Lord. I remember last year being baptised in water and more recently in the Holy Spirit. Things are truly different now since I gave my whole life to Jesus.

Suzanne Davies

FOR a number of years I doubted the existence of God and Christ. I was invited by Peter to the film Like a mighty army. It showed me my need for a personal Saviour. I went to the Church each Sunday for a number of weeks. Each time a few of my doubts were obliterated, until on November 4th I allowed Jesus to enter my life, which He did and now I wonder how I ever lived without Him.

David Butterworth

TO be a Christian is not easy. People said to me "It will wear off"; "She'll get over it". No matter how much I have been tormented, I could never give up my faith in Jesus Christ. It is as natural to me as breathing.

Linda Fullam

I WAS brought up a Roman Catholic. My work brought me to Drifffield where I had to find lodgings. The son of the people with whom I am staying invited me to the Elim Church. In Drifffield I haven't just found lodgings; I have found the Lord Jesus Christ. I thought that I was a Christian. Now I am certain.

John Sinski

I'M saved, I'm sure and praise the Lord I'm satisfied!

Notes
by
A. Anstey

Monday, March 25th

Luke 17:1-19

"As they went, they were cleansed" (v.14).

THE command was to show themselves to the priests in anticipation of healing. Their step of faith in obedience caused them to experience miraculous healing by the word of the Master. One turned back (v.15) and glorified God with a loud voice. The nine continued in haste to obtain a clean bill of health from the priests, counting this more important than expressing gratitude to the Lord. Do not hastily judge the nine for we, too, would have been anxious to get back to our families and society with official recognition. This failure to return thanks first to the Lord brings a sad note to a wonderful story of group healing.

Tuesday, March 26th

Luke 17:20-37

"Where, Lord?" (v.37)

WHERE and when were the questions uppermost in the hearts of the disciples concerning the Lord's return. The times and seasons that the Father kept secret would eventually be revealed. Jesus exhorted them to be ready. Enthusiastic crowds have waited many hours in vain at the wrong place because they failed to check a royal route as authoritatively published. Some may be on the housetop, watching, some in the field, reaping, others resting in bed after hard toil, others grinding at eventide. Whatever aspect of His coming we may study — rapture or revelation — the universal involvement of this manifestation of the Son of God is evident. Every hour of the day or night the Church of Christ should be ready to welcome Him.

Wednesday, March 27th

Luke 18:1-14

"Prayed...with himself" (v.11)

SELF-CENTRED prayers do not reach beyond the ceiling, though strangely enough the Pharisee seemingly kept the law in every detail. Very few Christians today could even pray the Pharisee's prayer in honesty, yet they could associate themselves with the seven-worded desperate prayer of the man seeking the forgiveness of God. Justification in the sight of God is on the merits of an adequate sacrifice and the spotless righteousness of Christ whose high priestly work continues in the heavens. Christ-centred prayers in His wonderful name always receive attention from on High. The answer is always forthcoming from One who is able to do exceedingly abundantly according to His will and the power working in us.

Thursday, March 28th

Luke 18:15-30

"Manifold more" (v.30).

WHAT we receive from God is manifoldly more than from any other source of apparent advantage. The gold standard of heaven never fluctuates. The currency of the Eternal always increases with the years. Compound interest accumulates in abounding rewards to the faithful in Christ. "The Lord is able to give you much more than this" (2 Chronicles 25:9) said a prophet to a king who suffered the loss of many thousands of pounds and public humiliation. He proved that the prophet's words were indeed from the Lord. Jesus implied that rewards were not confined to the after-life; even now He rewards with manifold blessings.

Friday, March 29th

Luke 18:31-43

"What wilt thou?" (v.41).

THESE are not the words of Paul asking what he should do, nor of a believer seeking guidance; they are the words of Jesus to a blind beggar. "What wilt thou...to half of the kingdom?" said a king to his queen in a moment of favour. How much more important to a helpless beggar is the open cheque of Christ. Jesus stood still (v.40), though He was on the way to the cross, to listen to the cries of the needy, despite the disciples' discouraging attitude to this blind man. The Lord is always ready to hear a cry for help, to uplift fallen humanity, and to grant mighty manifestations of His power and love.

Saturday, March 30th

Luke 19:1-10

"Jesus entered and passed through" (v.1).

JERICHO proved to be the first city of opposition that the forerunner Joshua faced on his campaign to conquer Canaan, but the Lord's power was sufficient for the warrior to pass through in glorious victory. Jesus passed through Jericho and He stormed the bastions of the enemy, silencing for ever every foul accusation that could be brought against the children of God. "The Son of man is come...to save the lost" (v.10). What greater evidence could we have of the forgiving ministry and saving power of Jesus than a transformed Zacchaeus and later the impaired thief?

Sunday, March 31st

"Thy pound hath gained ten pounds" (v.16).

FULL marks went to this outstanding servant, who, with tireless energy and an equal opportunity to each of the ten servants, had expressed such devoted service. He realized that his master had gone to receive a new kingdom (v.12) and wished to be accounted worthy to be given a place in it. The servant who laid up his pound was rebuked for his lack of faith in outreach for the coming new kingdom. It would have been

The Real Crisis

by J. T. Bradley

I AM going to shatter some of you, I know, but why should we call now for a day of prayer? What kind of crisis is it that Britain is supposed to be facing? As far as the message of the Gospel is concerned, how is the situation different from what it has been, not only in the 'sixties, 'fifties, 'twenties, but ever?

We Christians are basically concerned with the message of the gospel, that is that millions of people in Britain are going to hell and that Jesus died for their salvation; this is the real crisis, a crisis that has always been with us.

Strangely enough, it is only when we are faced with discomfort and the threat of a lower standard of living that we cry "crisis". The worst effect of the present crisis is that we shall be made to do without things, but people will still be going to hell, whether we have things or we don't have them. This is the real crisis, an individual one for every unbeliever, and for every church member, for you and for me.

What is it about us that makes us cry to God because of the threat of poorer standards of living, or if you like, poverty — and let us make no mistake, that threat will be realised — when we do not have the same sense of urgency about the continual crisis that faces every man and woman and child who is not saved? Surely we should be calling the Church to pray about this. Why don't we feel the same sense of urgency? Is it because we don't really believe that unbelievers are going to hell, or is it because spiritual realities are submerged in the present wave of material possessions?

This call for a day of prayer is all the more remarkable because so often the cry is heard among Christians, not all of us of course, that Britain's godlessness is the result of her prosperity. If this be the case — and it is put forward quite seriously by thoughtful Christian people — then they at least should be praying for a sharpening of the crisis, not a solution. "More poverty, Lord", should be their prayer. For them at least this "crisis" should be hailed as an act of God to bring the nation to Himself!

No, my friends, the real crisis is always with us. Paul puts it in half a dozen ways, "Woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel of Christ", "I could wish myself accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh", "Knowing the terror of the Lord, we persuade men".

It's a crisis for us if we don't witness to the unconverted. It's a crisis for them as long as they refuse the message of salvation. This is what we should pray and pray and pray and continue to pray about all the time, until revival comes.

Gleanings

Proved in the Fire

by S. E. Petts

"O thou afflicted, tossed with tempest, and not comforted, behold, I will lay thy stones with fair colours, and lay thy foundations with sapphires. And I will make thy windows of agates, and thy gates of carbuncles, and all thy borders of pleasant stones" (Isaiah 54:11,12).

THE second and the penultimate chapters of the Bible both speak of gold and precious stones. These were present in the Paradise of Eden and in the Heavenly City. All that goes between tells of the formation of these gems.

Here the prophet Isaiah foretells that the gospel will make the lives of men pure and glorious like precious stones to be built into a spiritual house of God, radiant and sparkling from the presence of the indwelling Christ. God has the dross removed in the furnace. Precious gems are formed from extreme pressure and heat in the bowels of the earth for long periods; their beauty is revealed only when they are cut and bevelled.

There is no time with God. His patience is infinite. If He permits us to suffer burning refinement in the fires of affliction and the pressures of bitter experiences, it is only to reveal the beauty that lies deep within His creations. From the moment that Christ enters our lives, the evil and darkness within us disappear in His light, but deep potential virtues are brought to the surface only through the passing of time spent in costly self-denials and patient faith in Him. One day He will come again "to make up His jewels". Those who have endured to the end will be chosen to beautify His temple because they will be recognised as of lasting worth, proved in the fire.

better to have lost a little at first and to have launched out with gained experience eventually to profit for the Master. However gifted the servants might have been, the reward titles were the same (v.17), even to the best servant. On this Sunday do not leave opportunities to Pastor and Church Officers only, but use your ministry for the Lord.

IT all happened because of a funeral.

A loved-one had died and, as she had had some connection with the local Pentecostal church, the pastor of the church was asked to conduct the funeral service. Among the mourners were a young married couple. The wife was deeply impressed by the service and she and her husband have been attending the assembly ever since, the husband on Sunday nights only, but the wife never misses a meeting, even though she has to take her young child most times. The husband is under very deep conviction of sin, but so far has not yielded to the Saviour. The wife has been soundly saved and baptised in water. She gives every sign of being a real trophy of grace and an effective witness among her neighbours on the newly-built estate where they recently went to live.

I came across this "case history" recently on one of my weekend visits. It speaks to me of two important things. The first is that I believe that the various services, like funerals, weddings, dedications, baptisms in water, etc., are very important. I pay tribute to our pastors who take so much trouble with these important events in the lives of those to whom they have the privilege to minister. Time thus spent is never lost; folk remember the pastor who cared, who was so loving, who dealt with them so feelingly and with such evident concern. I know that our members will agree with me that Pentecostal ministers stand very highly in their regard because of their excellent record in service of this nature.

The other thing is that contact is one of our problems. Our separation from "the world" can make us isolated. Our pursuits and interests are so often at such variance from those of our neighbours that it can be hard even to find a common language. We are sometimes closer to our fellow-believers than we are to our unsaved loved-ones, with their alien talk of pubs, bingo, pools and the like.

But we must, we simply must, make contacts. We are — and we should be — on the alert for every possible chance of serving our fellows. Once we can make the contact, the gospel can so soon make an impact. The old motto, "Saved to serve" has many applications.

FUNDAMENTAL BELIEFS OF THE ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH — 1. THE BIBLE: We believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God and that none may add thereto or take away therefrom except at their peril. 2. THE TRINITY: We believe that the Godhead eternally exists in three persons: Father, Son and Holy Ghost and that these three are one God. 3. THE CHURCH: We believe that the Church consists of all persons who have been regenerated by the Holy Ghost and made new creatures in Christ Jesus. 4. THE SAVIOUR: We believe that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God and that through the death and risen power of Christ all who believe can be saved from the penalty and power of sin. 5. THE HEALER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Healer of the body and that all who will walk in obedience to His will can claim Divine Healing for their bodies. 6. THE BAPTISER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Baptiser in the Holy Ghost and that this Baptism with signs following is promised to every believer. 7. THE COMING KING: We believe in the personal and pre-millennial return of our Lord Jesus Christ to receive unto Himself the Church and afterwards to set up His Throne as King. 8. THE FRUIT: We believe that every believer on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour should produce the ninefold fruit of His Spirit: Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. 9. THE GIFTS: We believe that the Church should claim and manifest the nine Gifts of the Holy Spirit: Wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discernment, tongues, interpretation. 10. THE MINISTRY: We believe that God has given some apostles and some prophets and some evangelists and some pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry for the edifying of the Body of Christ. 11. THE FUTURE STATE: We believe in the eternal conscious bliss of all true believers in Christ and also in the eternal conscious punishment of all Christ rejectors. 12. THE ORDINANCES: We believe in the following ordinances: Partaking of bread and wine in memory of our Lord's death, baptism by immersion for believers, the laying on of hands and the anointing of the sick with oil.

Singing to the Glory of God

"THIS is our ministry and mission", says Pastor Douglas B. Gray, Director of the London Crusader Choir. Recent weeks has found the choir meeting and singing and preaching to crowds of people in varied walks of life: with the sick and suffering in hospitals; in homes for incurables; among the ever-increasing prison congregations; in churches and famous concert auditoriums covering a wide area in the South, including Chelmsford, Maidstone, Crowthorne and Potters Bar and within the Metropolitan Boroughs. Thus the message sounds out as we sing, as the psalmist says, to the honour of His name. Powerful personal witness and the preaching of the Word always finds a rightful place in every gathering conducted by the Choir.

Now in its forty-sixth year, the Choir's 1974 programme builds up to the usual tempo. It is recorded in Psalm 111:3 that "the work of the Lord in honourable and glorious". When we work for Him and with Him, our labours take on that same honour and glory. What a challenge faces us all! His work deserves the best! The harvest is great, but the labourers are few. Within our ranks dedicated singers and musicians would greatly assist such a national ministry and strengthen the witness of a unique and powerful Pentecostal crusade. Think on these things.

CASHES GREEN

Pastor: R.J. Teague

THE air was filled with expectancy when our prize-giving day arrived. It was a stormy evening, but, inside our Church, it was "showers of blessing". Pastor R.J. Teague convened the service at which Mrs. Broomhall of Gloucester preached. Her sermon was encouraging and many hearts were stirred. The Sunday school scholars were complimented on being so good all through the service and the pride on the faces of the hard-working teachers was unmistakable as the children sang to us. Mrs. Broomhall presented each child with a beautiful book or Bible at the end of the evening. It was plain to see that they were all thrilled with their prizes. We grown-ups, too, were thrilled, because we realized the truth of those words, "God is still on the Throne and He will remember His own".

ERDINGTON, Birmingham

Pastor: K. Smith

AN Erdington minister has joined local M.P., Mr. Jo Kinsey in the campaign to get the controversial film "Clockwork Orange" banned. He is the Rev. Kenneth Smith, of South Road Elim Pentecostal Church.

Both Mr. Kinsey and Mr. Smith believe that the film, infamous for its disturbing violence, should be taken off the cinema circuit while the authorities investigate what effect it has on people.

This follows a stabbing incident in which a sixteen-years-old Great Barr youth lost his life. It happened outside a local cinema which at the time, was showing "Clockwork Orange".

Mr. Smith said: "Are we surprised at this, for violence leads to more violence?"

"And to say that many young people who see the film do not commit rape, mugging and murder will not satisfy many people.

"If freedom means to be at liberty to incite the desire for rape, mugging and murder, then this is not liberty but licence".

Mr. Kinsey has written to Mr. Mark Carlisle, Minister of State at the Home Office. He asks Mr. Carlisle to make use of his "very influential office" to get the film banned while investigations are carried out.

The Home-call of Pastor T. H. Stevenson

by James T. Bradley,
Secretary-General

MEMBERS of our Elim Churches will be sorry to learn of the home-call of a highly esteemed and respected minister from our ranks. T.H. Stevenson and his wife were well known among us for their pastoral work through the appointments they had held throughout Scotland, Ireland and England, and Mr. Stevenson also for his expository ministry. Many of our older members will look back to the early part of their ministry and thank God for their faithful labours in those pioneer days. But right up to the very end our brother continued his writing and pastoral ministry. Although ill-health necessitated his early retirement two years ago, readers of the EVANGEL will have been acquainted with his active ministry in Ireland in particular and also with his articles in our EVANGEL since his retirement. His contributions for many years have been a stimulus, challenge and encouragement and were much appreciated. He was a man who gave himself whole-heartedly to the duties of his office, whatever they were.

T.H. Stevenson entered Elim in 1932 by campaigning with the founder of our Movement, George Jeffreys. He was ordained in our Clapham Church in 1937 and was a member of the Irish Executive Council from 1942 until 1945.

His appointments in Ireland were Armagh, Bangor and Melbourne Street (Belfast), and in Scotland, Ayr and Dundee, and in England, Dorking, Penzance, Hull, Grimsby, Carlisle for seven years, Ilford for eight years, and Worcester for eight years.

The Conference expressed its appreciation of his ministry by electing him President in May 1961. He was also a member of the Salary Committee and latterly was a member of the Doctrine of the Church Committee at which Committee his contributions were clear, constructive and thought-provoking.

We express on behalf of all our members our deepest sympathy to his widow and to their son Alistair and their daughter Ethne at this time of their bereavement. Though we do not sorrow as those who have no hope, yet we do sorrow, though it is sorrow mitigated by the assurance of reunion when we rise together to meet our Lord in the air at His coming again. We pray that God will comfort them by His Spirit and draw them nearer to Himself.

The Insistence of God's Love

by S. E. Petts

"They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick" (Matthew 9:12).

IF you were in a helicopter searching for a place to land, you would probably choose a spot where you would be most welcome, but Jesus picked a location where He was most needed. It was the sick in body or in soul to whom He came. He always pin-pointed the deepest problem. He made Zacchaeus aware that his exaction of taxes was dishonest. The young ruler was shown that his love of possessions was what stood between him and eternal life. Nicodemus, dead in rabbinical customs, was told that he needed to be born of the Spirit. The Samaritan woman had the immorality of her life revealed as her stumbling block. Even if it hurts, the divine Surgeon will continue to cut at the moral cancer of your life until the trouble is completely removed. God's love is insistent because He wants to do away with all that would separate you from Him in glory. When your conscience pricks, thank God for His revealing love, and obey.

The Day the Vicar did not come . . .

by Mrs. Shirley Lamb

IT was Sunday afternoon, 3 p.m. precisely. Visitors had been and having bade farewell to their relatives and friends, had departed hastily as hymn books were given to each patient who was well enough to sing and to take part in the usual Sunday ward service. The piano was in place in the centre of the ward and we eagerly awaited the arrival of the vicar and his group of supporters.

It was now 3.15, but still no vicar had come. What was to be done? Praise the Lord for an open door of opportunity to have our own ward service, of course! It just so happened (or did it?) that three out of eight nurses who were on duty loved the Lord and, one being the staff nurse in charge, the Lord had arranged this perfectly (as always, bless Him!). Naturally, as I am married to an Elim minister, there was no debate about who should give the message. As others chose a couple of suitable hymns, I found a quiet corner to thank the Lord for this opportunity and to ask His leading in giving the right word.

AT 3.30pm with eight nurses around the piano, we started by singing that old favourite, "What a Friend we have in Jesus". A nurse read John 14:1-14. After another hymn, "Guide me, O Thou great Jehovah" for ten minutes I told them of Him who is not a disappointment, but who is the Way, the Truth and the Life. Linking with the thirsty, disillusioned Woman of Samaria, I told them that He cared about them as individuals in the midst of their suffering and of the emptiness of life without a Saviour. He loved the crowds and ministered to their needs, but "He must needs go through Samaria" to fulfil the empty longings of one sinful woman. After an invitation to think of their own needs and in the quietness of their own hearts to ask Christ for that inner will of joy and cleansing, we closed with "O happy day that fixed my choice on Thee, my Saviour and my God".

Five minutes later, a dying man, in the bed immediately behind where I stood to talk about Jesus, passed into eternity. Did he hear the invitation? Did he respond in his heart? I don't know. Maybe I never will know this side of heaven, but though the vicar did not come, the man still had a last opportunity, praise God! I was led to pen these few verses as my heart overflowed in His presence:

*These are days of fear and great uncertainty,
Without a Saviour — oh, how dark the road,
But with my Jesus I am more than conqueror;
Such peace is mine, I'm resting on the Word.*

Chorus

*But there's a price to pay if you would walk with Jesus,
If you desire Him deep within your soul.
Come, give your life in total consecration
Yield now your all and let him take control.
For there's a price to pay
If you would walk with Jesus.*

*What need have I outside of His provision? —
What great distress outside His tender care!
He sees and knows, and oh, how much He longeth
My load to carry and all my sorrows share.*

An Appreciation of Miss Ivy Munday (Sholing, Southampton)

by Henry Jeffery

MISS Ivy Munday was the daughter of a godly mother whose intense, passionate prayers influenced the life of every member of the family.

While still a young lady she was brought into contact with the full gospel through a campaign conducted by George Jeffreys in the Central Hall, Southampton, where she was a Sunday school teacher. Convinced of the possibility of the impossible, she, accompanied by a saintly Wesleyan deaconess, pushed her elder sister in a dying condition in her spinal carriage the miles from her home to the Central Hall. The prayers of these two saintly women enabled them to get the sick one to the hall and to witness one of the greatest miracles in the history of the modern Church.

Her life was from that time completely devoted to God and the message of full salvation. The same intense passion, devotion and love to God that dominated her mother's life now dominated hers and she walked with God in a new and intimate fellowship. Subsequent to her sister, Florence's, healing she, together with her two sisters, were joined by a young man challenged in the same campaign to work for God and a campaign group was formed.

Miss Ivy Munday's talent of singing was used of God in a special way in leading the singing during the subsequent campaigns. The story of this young woman and the group reads like a thrilling novel. She was told by God the clothes that she was to wear in His Service and miraculously led to the cloth and exact and unusual colour. She used her sanctified voice to bring blessing to hundreds. Who can forget the experience of hearing her sing "Take my life and let it be consecrated Lord to Thee" or "The Holy City"? Those who were privileged to be led in worship by Miss Ivy in her "uniform" still feel the benediction of this privilege and the peculiar blessing that always seemed to fall when she was thus attired. Her prayer life not only sustained her during the trying, sacrificial days of the campaigns, but was the prime factor used by God in the salvation of many souls and the establishing of churches in the area. To Miss Ivy Munday prayer was not a soliloquy, but a passion. For many of us who were brought to Christ through the instrumentality of this campaign group of which she was a member, her prayers have stirred us to the same devotion to God and His service.

She eventually accepted the responsibility of pastoring the Lord's people in Sholing where for forty-five years she laboured faithfully in the Four-square Gospel.

The number of true intercessors has been weakened by her passing, but the influence of her life, ministry and passionate prayers remains.

Good night, Ivy, we shall see you in the morning.

The shining lamp

Words: A. A. Biddle

Drawing: John Gregory

WHEN Jesus was born some shepherds went to Bethlehem to see the great thing that had happened. Legend tells us that a boy took a lantern and went with them. The shepherds took very little notice of him, but, after they had worshipped the new-born King and had then left to spread abroad the news, this little boy stayed behind. Remember that it was night. He noticed that the air was chill and soon he saw Mary wrap her cloak around the infant Jesus. Then he did a grand thing. Humbly he drew near, holding up his small lantern so that the small flame might warm the air about the Babe. For two hours he stood there. His arm ached ever so much, but his heart was full of love. When the sun came up, he crept away.

Now here is a remarkable thing. When he was in the sunshine, he tried to blow out the light in his lanterns, but he could not do so and the story says that no-one else could blow it out. It burned all that day and the following night, and so on. Day and night the lamp burned steadily. The boy grew to be a man and lived to a very old age, but, as long as he had his heart full of worship for Jesus, the lamp kept alight. Then, when death came, the lamp seemed to shine like the sun, and a voice said, "Behold now, your lamp has never gone out because your love has never wavered. Lo, I am the Light of the World. Come, enter into the joy of thy Lord".

Keep your light burning!

Australian Afterthoughts

by Archie Nicolson

I HAD to leave our Annual Conference rather suddenly as news had been sent to me of my sister's serious illness and the family wanted me to fly out as soon as possible.

The huge form of the Quantas B747 jumbo jet, not to mention over 300 passengers and their baggage, seemed to defy all suggestions of flight. "We have had clearance for our take-off and will be airborne in three or four minutes", said the flight captain. He was right. It seemed impossible on the ground, but there we were, 33,000 feet in the air and travelling over 500 miles per hour.

"Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air". Sometimes, down here on ground level, it seems so impossible, but don't worry, it's for real and it will happen just as the Word describes it.

Melbourne fascinated me with its roads, those long, broad ribbons of tarmac, parallel pathways for the power-driven vehicles of our modern age. Somebody had made straight the highways of Melbourne. That rings a bell somehow! Yes — John the Baptist, quoting the words of Isaiah the prophet, "Make straight the way of the Lord".

The Christian life is a straight road in contrast to the way of that old serpent, Satan, whose path is as crooked as a corkscrew.

I liked the straight roads of Melbourne, you could see clearly ahead. It's a thought isn't it?

4. Benaiah the Son of Jehoiada

by Stanley Beresford,
Pastor of our Blackburn Church

THERE is a difference between a gift and a prize. Eternal life through our Lord Jesus Christ is an unmerited and unearned gift by sovereign grace alone. Even the faith to receive it is a gift from God (Ephesians 2:8). Yet there is the aspect of our Christian life which demands patient continuance in well doing (Romans 2:7), as Paul would put it, a pressing "toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" (Phillipians 3:14). This line of truth is rarely emphasized in these days and is sometimes completely ignored. "Not as though I had already attained", says the apostle, "but I follow after".

Among David's mighty men who were helpers of the war was Benaiah. He slew a lion in a pit in a time of snow. He slew two lion-like men of Moab and an Egyptian whose spear was like a weaver's beam. He became a chief among thirty, but he attained not to the first three. This did not upset or deter this valiant warrior, but, without bemoaning his lot or considering that he had been given a lesser place than he ought to have, he kept faithful to David all the days of his life. Through the mighty acts that he accomplished he might have considered himself worthy to be among the first three, but no such thought is recorded. Rather does he appear to have been ever and more zealous for the king's honour. With Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet he stood by the king amid the rebellion and uprising of Adonijah. At that time even Joab turned aside to follow the usurper, but Benaiah stood awaiting orders to bring Solomon, the God-appointed king to the throne. How touching is his remark to David when he appointed Solomon king over Israel and Judah: "Amen:" he said, "The Lord God of my Lord the king say so too. As the Lord hath been with my lord the king, even so be he with Solomon, and make his throne greater than the throne of my lord king David" (1 Kings 1:36, 37).

Such are the words of the man who attained not to the first three. He was concerned with the honour of the king and the ordering of the kingdom. The language of his heart and life could well be expressed in New Testament principles given by our blessed Lord: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God" — the rule and righteousness of heaven, so different from, so contrary to this world. To this command the promise is given: "All things shall be added unto you".

Is it any wonder then that in the reign of Solomon Benaiah was made captain of the host in the place of Joab (1 Kings 2:35; 4:4)? He did not serve for this but for love of the lord and the king. He who did not attain at the first was at the last honoured by king Solomon to be captain of the host.

*I would not work by soul to save,
For this my Lord hath done.
But I will work like any slave,
For love of God's dear Son.*

Evangelism in Elim

by Ken Smith,
Evangelistic Secretary of our Birmingham Presbytery

YOU may consider that, since I am not an evangelist, this disqualifies me from writing on the subject, but observation as well as experience gives one insight. Like all our ministers, I am keen to promote the cause of evangelism in our Fellowship. Perhaps this article will give another slant to the subject.

"Elim is a movement, not a monument" may have been true when it was expressed in pre-war days, but for me, at least, it is a cliché best forgotten, for I consider that it is not entirely true these days. The same source said that "Elim is an eye-opener", but Britain would hardly lift its eye-lids at Elim's existence in the '70s. There is, in my judgment, a desperate need for a new spirit of evangelism to surge throughout our work. LET'S BE POSITIVE in our approach.

Talking to some of our ministers and members about evangelism, a list of excuses as to why we should NOT have any evangelistic effort soon arises. How we are plagued by the past, past successes, and failures, and evangelists, for whom we should thank God and take courage, not bemoan their passing. Joshua's word from the Lord — "Arise" — must be ours. Sometimes, because in an area Elim has had a church which closed down, well-meaning friends advise doing nothing in that area again. One would counsel caution, but if the door opens by all means move in. Derby is an example of this point, for Elim had been in this town before its present congregation was commenced. "Do the work of an evangelist" must apply to all Elim friends. LET'S BE PRACTICAL in our application. In life one must walk before one runs, and so it is in evangelistic endeavour. Ask any of our present evangelists of their beginnings and they will confirm this truth. "Despise not the day of small things" is good advice in this field. Debts are not glorifying to God, not to our work, and, even though it is a work of faith, there must be sanctified commonsense, or else someone else may have to foot the bill, in more than one sense! Gideon's fleece has its counterpart today and He knows our hearts. Church buildings are a problem when opening up in a new area; with supervision and loyalty all round "the church which is in thine house" has a place. Think of the many years of patient toil before the Ellesmere Port Assembly had its own very lovely building, and this story can be repeated throughout the country. Much harm can be done to our testimony, and to the work of the Lord, when we do not have this approach in evangelism, but this is not all by a long way.

LET'S BE PRAYERFUL in our attitude, for we cannot approach the need to evangelise in the spirit of "have a go". We need more than enthusiasm, though we will need this quality, of course. We need the guidance of the Holy Spirit; remember that He prohibited Paul in order to send him to Europe and thus changed the course of Church history. I am making a plea for balance in evangelism, for there is need of balance in it all — positive, practical, prayerful evangelistic endeavour.

Let there be PERSONAL INITIATIVE. Why is it that often Elim members when they move away from an Elim assembly are content to attend another Fellowship, which often means hiding their Pentecostal light under a bushel? It is often easier to join another assembly, but having known Elim fellowship there is a price to be paid to do this. I never forget Alex Tee's tremendous plea at the youth rally in the Bingley Hall, Birmingham, last year, that no Pentecostal believer has the right to go to another church for fellowship, if he has not seriously attempted to consider the commencement of a Pentecostal work in that area. I say "AMEN" to that, don't you? I know that you may not be able to do it alone, but who says that you will be alone? God is with you. I know of at least one Elim couple who advertised prayer meetings in their home and now they have Sunday services in a hall as a cell of witness. "Where there's a will there's a way" is very true of evangelistic endeavour "Pray as you go, and go as you pray," counsels W.T.H. Richards, and he is surely right.

Another problem that I find, as Evangelistic Secretary for Birmingham, is that one may be forty, fifty, even eighty miles from the area that one is seeking to explore. If you are "on the spot" you can "keep your ear to the ground", and "play it by ear" to a much larger degree. Imagine my frustration when I discovered a lovely former Methodist Church in a Midland town for which much prayer had gone up for some time, only to find that, although vacant, it is the property of the local Education authority, and we receive a firm "NO" to any approach, in spite of much personal prayer and endeavour. We have Elim members living in that area — why, oh why, did not one of them keep their eyes open and let someone know a couple of years ago?

It may be a prayer group, or a children's meeting, but do consider a cell of witness for Elim in your area. There is nothing like personal vision and enterprise in this field. I am pleased at the interest that the Secretary-General has shown down the years in smaller churches which have been formed in this manner and it is a delight to see them highlighted in THE ELIM EVANGEL. Whether a church has twenty or two hundred in its fellowship, it operates on the same principle, and for the same purpose, that of worship and witness within the community.

Let there be PASTORAL INITIATIVE. We must be prepared to lose good members to expand the work. Few of us ministers would be happy at this, but there is a scattering that increases, and a withholding more than is meet, that tendeth to poverty. Encourage your people to pray that the Lord will thrust forth labourers into the harvest field and the Lord will bless your assembly. With rising transport costs and the decentralising of the population, is not the pattern of Elim churches in Birmingham and Assemblies of God churches in Nottingham the pointer for the future? Our churches must be where the people are. Encourage your people to receive the regular evangelistic prayer letter to stimulate intelligent intercession. Study your local map for evangelistic outreach in your area and expand your witness as a church.

Let there be PRESBYTERY INITIATIVE. This is the purpose for their existence, i.e. to extend the witness of Elim within its borders. Has your Presbytery an active evangelistic secretary, not necessarily an evangelist, but certainly one with a love for men and women, and the extension of our work? If he is not fired with enthusiasm, then fire him with enthusiasm! If I am not keen to do the work I have been requested to undertake I would be better not to take the task on in the first place. If every Presbytery opened one church in the next twelve months we would have nineteen new churches to bring before the Conference next year. Arrange an evangelistic conference, as the Birmingham Presbytery have done. There are plenty of materials available for your people to use in personal witnessing and evangelism and societies are only too glad to co-operate. I would consider that the imbalance between personal witness in evangelism and Elim's normal manner of evangelism has been too great for too long. It is so easy to contribute to the annual Evangelistic Thankoffering and leave it at that, rather than letting "the spirit of evangelism" get hold of you. Evangelism is not just great evangelists, but YOU, keen to witness for the Lord and win souls for Him. Through it all, our work will expand.

Motives are of vital importance. Let it all be for His glory and not Elim's. Beware of the spirit of jealousy too. As one has said, "I don't mind who gets the credit, as long as He gets all the glory"; so say all of us!

Let it not be increase for its own sake, for there is no real glory in statistics alone. Do not build on other foundations either. I was invited recently to discuss Elim's entrance into one Midland area, only to find that the people concerned were disenchanted with the local Pentecostal Church and the coming minister, and so their thoughts turned to Elim, an inauspicious start for any work. No, let our motives be so pure that they can stand the scrutiny, not of men, but of the Judgment Seat; then Elim will maintain a high moral standard of integrity and holiness. We are not to be in competition for the souls of men with other brethren. There are areas in the country where there is very little Elim witness. Is this true of your Presbytery? Make sure that Elim members in your church and presbytery are followed up when they move to another area.

Re-read this article prayerfully and then ask, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?". He will give you His guidance, if you are in tune.

BOOK REVIEW

Arrows of Deliverance, by Harold Horton, published by A.O.G. Publishing House, price 20p, postage and packing 6p extra.

THIS small, pocket-size book of ninety-four pages is packed with fifteen remarkable chapters, each one a powerful witness to the ability and skill of the author, whose grasp of biblical truth is eloquently revealed in the style and depth of exposition, which is original and tremendously convincing. If you do not believe in Biblical Deliverance this book will thrill and challenge your heart to re-think your position re this doctrine. By Scriptural text, homely illustration, and a host of unusual Bible themes, which include a lost axe-head, a bent woman, a living bird and Goliath's brother, Mr. Horton, with an artisan's skill, erects with the fabric of the material a building that is solid as rock. My only reservation is the package in which the articles are bound. The contents deserve a more permanent form than a flimsy paper back, but at 20p it is a good buy.

The personal Testimony of a young Woman who received Deliverance from Demon Power in Jesus' Name

MY first introduction to the occult world began one day after school. I had gone round to a friend's house. Inside, she and several other girls were playing the ouija game with an improvised board, made with a glass, mirror and pieces of paper with the alphabet written on them. I decided to join in. The glass moved in answer to our questions and I began to feel frightened. I knew I was doing something wrong. When I left my friend's house, I was still feeling frightened because of the eerie atmosphere which was present in the house. As I was making my way home, an old man stopped me and gave me a tract. He then began to talk to me about the Lord Jesus, a message that I had heard many times before. I began to listen intently to what he had to say. As a result I asked Jesus to save me. When I got home I told all my family and friends; they seemed very pleased for me. I began to attend Church, but the things of the world remained fresh in my mind. As the parable of the sower says, "the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, AND THE LUSTS OF OTHER THINGS ENTERING IN, CHOKED THE WORD, AND IT BECAME UNFRUITFUL". It was easy to say yes to a friend's plea to go to a "just one more" disco; there was no harm in that. But the one led to many more, and, after four weeks, I found it easier to say no to the fellowship that I had at church and yes to the things my friends were enjoying. That is how I began on the backslider's path. Fading out of church life I concentrated on finding out about the best discos. I learned to smoke and drink and be the "big girl" in front of my friends. I moved from one disco scene to another seeking satisfaction, but I found none.

One night I was given a book to read, just an ordinary book on the occult. This heralded a great change in my life. I became obsessed by the thrill of fear which I got when I read a horror book. I thought nothing of spending pounds on this kind of reading. One day I picked up a book written by a man who called himself king of witches. He wrote of actual happenings which people claimed to have experienced with beings from the "other side". After this I read many such books and became very interested once again on the ouija board. Often I would coax friends into a game. To them it was just good fun, but to me it was a necessary part of my life. I was so desperate because no-one would play with me that I would call up spirits by myself; it was not an easy thing to do. Even at that time I still thought of it as just a game. The time came when life without the ouija board was boring, frustrating and dead. Friends laughed when I told them that I was speaking to spirits through the board, even though they had seen it at work. They put it down to the electricity in my body; I also agreed that this really was the most logical explanation. But no-one could quite explain the feeling of unseen, yet very present influences in the room, whenever I played with the ouija board or read books on black magic. This way of life continued for two years from the time that I turned away from God until six months ago. In that time my once-normal personality had been changed to an enormous degree. It is only now that I realise why I became less tolerant of my family and friends. I hated even to be seen during the daytime. I suffered continually from a restless feeling, living and finding a weird sort of joy in the things of the occult world. I had an intense hatred of my family. Even the touch of my mother's hand was enough to make me see red.

Life was hopeless. First I tried to go to my aunt in Canada, but I backed out at the last moment. Then I decided to join the Royal Air Force, that way I could get to England, be certain of a secure job, and have time to seek out a certain person and be initiated into a black magic cult. BUT GOD HAD OTHER PLANS.

I can't explain why, but I decided to go with a friend to a pentecostal gospel meeting. I was Presbyterian by rights, but had not been to church for over two years. What a shock I had in the meeting that night. Instead of the expected formerly boring affair, I found people who looked as if they enjoyed being there. I sat through the meeting and almost enjoyed it. I did not give much thought to where I stood before God, nor when the preacher gave the appeal for those who wanted to receive Christ to come to the front

The main thought in my mind was to have a good laugh at these fools who were taken in by the show of emotionalism that I had witnessed. One minute that was my thought, the next a greater power than my own feeble thoughts or that of evil spirits showed me in one second the place where I stood before almighty God. A terrible panic took hold of me; the next I was in the line at the front of the church. The preacher came to me. I told him I was a backslider and he led me in prayer for forgiveness and restoration to God. As I prayed, suddenly an evil power took hold of me and threw me on the floor; I writhed about screaming. That was how I found out I was demon-possessed. The game that I had passed off as harmless and explained as electricity from my body now was manifested, not as one of these feeble things, but as a real, live, satanic power which had taken control of my mind and body. Several people held me while the preacher prayed. In the name of Jesus a demon was cast out of my body; its power was broken. BUT THAT WAS ONLY THE BEGINNING.

The next night God led me to the Elim Pentecostal Church, Apsley Street, Belfast, where I was ministered to again. I went at 7.30 p.m., but it was 3.30 a.m. before I was brought home again. Through it all fifty or more such demons were cast out of my body in Jesus' name. It was at no time easy; for the next two months the battle continued. If I was not being prayed with, I was being oppressed by the devil who constantly tried to dissuade me by every subtle trick from going through this time with God. Thank God it was He who died for me at Calvary and overcame the devil who brought me through. The same strength that upheld Jesus, upheld me. It surrounded me and protected me during the nights which followed. The devil would come into my room and manifest himself, trying to frighten me back from the Lord. This was not something imagined; it was too real. During those dark hours I was awakened from sleep by an intense evil power pressing me down from every side. This may sound incredible to you, but it is true.

Two months after coming back to God I was sitting at the end of a meeting in our church; I was particularly depressed and oppressed that night. I was waiting to receive the baptism in the Holy Spirit. I was at wits' end corner and had been praying hard for complete victory over these demonic powers. As my brother in Christ laid his hands upon me I felt a quickening power flow through my whole being. I can only describe this gift as a beautiful river of concentrated love that lifted me into such a closeness with Jesus my Lord, that I thought I was in the third heaven, so real was my Saviour to me, and so very close. The remaining influence that the devil had upon me left, but just as quickly this was replaced with praise to God in another language as the Holy Spirit gave me utterance.

Since that night there has been such a change in my life. Satan has no more power over my life, for JESUS HAS GIVEN ME THE VICTORY. My life has been transformed by his love and grace. I trust that if anyone unsaved or who has been dabbling in the occult reads this testimony, they will do as I have done: GIVE THEIR LIFE TO THE ONE WHO IS ABLE TO SAVE THEM TO THE UTMOST — JESUS CHRIST MY LORD!

Footsteps on the Sea

by Alistair Forrest

"Jesus", as gospel folk singer Graham Kendrick puts it, "has made footsteps on the sea", the only Man in history to do so without sinking.

In a different sense, everyone has the power to walk on the sea without sinking — the sea of life. When the storms of life are blowing and the waves of troublesome experience become boisterous, then we can all step out above the turmoil, just like Peter.

He heard the words of Jesus: "Be of good cheer, it is I; be not afraid", and with the last phrase ringing in his ears he stepped out in faith on to the tempestuous sea. He was on top of the problem. For a while (and it could have been longer) he had the enemy beneath his feet.

In just the same way we can make footsteps on top of the trials that Satan throws our way and conquer them with the aid of our Saviour. At no time is the problem taken away from us — it is always there beneath our feet — but we are riding it in the strength of our Lord. That is what Jesus meant when He said that it was His peace that he was giving to us. With His peace in us we cannot be drowned in the storm.

If we do begin to sink, we can cry out as Peter did: "Lord, save me".

It is great to be a Christian and to have a Saviour like Jesus to lift us up when we sink!

Points for Preachers

by J. Alexander Wright

An Outline

Four Easters

1. The historic Easter: "HE arose". Even some who claim to be Christians, cannot believe it. A modern theologian, Bultmann, says, "It is impossible, in an age of electricity and radio, to believe in miracles". We would have thought the reverse more arguable!

2. The annual Easter of Commemoration, like the Jewish Passover. "There is Springtime in my soul today!". Growing millions proclaim, "He is risen!".

3. The weekly Easter. "We keep the day (Sunday) with joyfulness, the day also on which Jesus rose from the dead" (Barnabas, 2nd Century). Why don't we sing the Easter hymns throughout the fifty-two Sundays? How can a Christian absent himself from church on Sunday mornings?

4. The continuous Easter of Christian experience: "risen with Christ". "Tis Easter in my soul". "The early Christians did not remember Jesus", James Denney startlingly said, No, for they lived in the consciousness of His continuing presence. "O my soul", said Dr. Campbell Morgan, "thou shouldest keep perpetual Lent within the secret chamber of thy being and Everlasting Easter upon thy face!".

Perpetual Lent — "I am crucified with Christ" — and Everlasting Easter — "Alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord".

An Incident

Who reads the daily Paper?

DR. J.H. JOWETT once asked a young servant girl what she was doing for the Lord. She explained that she had very little time off and therefore could not attend church-meetings very often, but she always did take the daily newspaper up to her bedroom each night. A bit irritated with her response, he asked what possible good that could do to her spiritual life. "Well," she explained, "I turn to the columns on Births, Marriages, and Deaths. I ask the Lord that each of the little babies mentioned will be led to the Saviour at an early age and become a great blessing to their parents. Next, I check the weddings and pray that the couples may be very happy, build their homes on Christ, and remain true to each other. Then I go over the death notices and remember before the Throne all the bereaved ones by name, asking that in their sorrow they will turn to the Lord who is the only source of lasting comfort". Dr. Jowett added that he wished more in his congregation were like her.

A Quotation

Ministerial Dress

"I AM not proud of my life. I only wish I could have my youth over again with the wisdom of experience I have gained since. I have had every sin confessed to me, including murder. People have come to me and told me everything without hesitation. That's because they've always recognised me as one of themselves. I have never worn a clerical collar, or any outward symbol".

Dr. F.B. Meyer in The Lancashire Weekly Post

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

71. Joseph declares the future (Genesis 50:24-25)

by F. Lavender

'NOTICE two important features of the ministry of Joseph: his human wisdom seen, for instance, in his business ability, and which could be regarded as a natural gift; above this, his spiritual wisdom shown, for example, in his interpreting of dreams, and which was very clearly a gift of divine revelation. This second type of wisdom was manifested when Joseph was dying. The children of Israel may not have realised the fact, but they were already a captive people. It was a benevolent captivity at that time, but it would become very bitter later. Joseph, however, had his heart fixed on the promise of God to Abraham and he saw plainly that the Lord would deliver Israel from Egypt in order that His purpose and promise might come to pass.

Before the Lord Jesus went away he declared that He would return and He showed that His Coming would involve Christians in some dramatic changes. First, as we know only too well, in this world we are constantly at war with evil forces, but at His Coming this warfare will be ended and we will be delivered from the very presence of evil. Second, although we are children of God through faith in the Lord Jesus, we are still liable to sickness and death, but when He returns we shall be set free, our very bodies will be redeemed and we will be made immortal, incorruptible. Third, at this time we are conscious of imperfection but when Jesus comes all imperfections will go and we will be made like Jesus. As surely as the word spoken by Joseph came to pass, so certainly will the word of the Lord Jesus be fulfilled.

Known by your speech

IT has always been considered remarkable that, in the comparatively small compass of the British Isles, there is such a variety of speech. Accent and dialect are often very pronounced. There is an appreciation these days of our rich heritage of language and a serious attempt is being made to preserve and record the words and expressions peculiar to each area. I rather like the competition being organised by the B.B.C. programme entitled "Sunday" to sponsor Bible reading in the vernacular. It should produce some interesting listening. I'm sure that the participants will do their homework and will consult older people and draw from the age-old roots of our language and culture.

It seems to me that when we are young we are particularly influenced by speech as opposed to written language and we receive our early impressions of life from the spoken word. This was certainly true of my childhood. I still use words and expressions common in the West Riding of Yorkshire together with those I learned from my Nottinghamshire grandmother and Oxfordshire grandfather. It is strange that, in a time when such emphasis is laid on literacy, and speech in many languages is circling the world through the medium of radio, slovenly speech, American slang and expletives are increasingly in vogue and even blasphemy is permitted in everyday conversation. Recently I have been appalled at the disgusting language used by respectable looking shoppers and passers-by and no-one turns a hair or appears to object.

Such filthy communication is an indication of an impure mind and is surely abhorrent to all decent folk. The individual is betrayed quite often by his speech, whether good or bad. Our vocabulary and our accent reveal much about our backgrounds and our characters and we must remember this. A classic example of such a revelation is the case of Simon Peter when found in the palace of the high priest. In Peter's hour of trial, when he was distraught and afraid, his speech betrayed him. His Galilean accent was unmistakable. In two of the four Gospel accounts this is revealed and in Matthew 26:73 it actually says: "Thy speech betrayeth thee". Poor Peter, his northern fisherman's brogue could not be disguised and he had no cause to be ashamed of it, but when the curses and the swearing began to pour from his lips the denial was made even more appalling. Peter learned at bitter cost that the spoken word can never be recalled. Many of us have had to learn this lesson too.

Never let us be ashamed of a genuine accent, but let us strive to speak in such a way as to commend our Master. Turning once more to the Bible for direction we learn that speech should be comely or becoming as befits a Christian; it should be gracious, sound and wholesome. Paul remarked in 2 Corinthians 11:6 that his speech was rude, meaning unskilled. We may not be fluent or cultured in speech, yet even the humblest believer can, as exhorted by Paul, use speech seasoned with salt and always glorifying to God, when giving a reason for the hope that is within him.

*Words are mighty, words are living;
Serpents with their venomous stings,
Or bright angels, crowding round us,
With heaven's light upon their wings:
Every word has its own spirit,
True or false that never dies;
Every word man's lips have uttered
Echoes in God's skies.*

Happiness is . . . Being Content and Thankful

CONTENTMENT is not an easily-gained virtue in our modern, affluent, status-seeking society. Pride and prejudice are built-in features of our social structures. The churches we attend, where we go to school, the houses we live in, even our personal choice of words, are brandings of our places in society. Virtually everyone consciously or unwittingly, is striving to rise another rung on the social ladder because he is discontented with his present status.

The invitation is further complicated in that our culture is basically materialistic. A man's success is measured by his accumulation of wealth, his possession of luxury items and status symbols, and his association with others of known opulence.

Many who have climbed the social ladder from the bottom to the top, however, would agree with Christ's statement that "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (Luke 12:15). Things do not satisfy; they do not bring deep, inner happiness.

Paul reminded Timothy that "godliness with contentment is great gain" (1 Timothy 6:6). Such an attitude does not imply laziness, lack of desire for self-improvement, complacency, or mere resignation to the status quo. Throughout the Scriptures, we are exhorted to be diligent and industrious, making full use of our divinely-bestowed talents and abilities. Facing life with contentment does, however, preclude the possibility of lusting after the things of this world and grasping for more than we have. Carnal covetousness is undoubtedly the root cause of many ulcers, heart attacks, and nervous breakdowns, even in young people. A covetous person can never be content; as he sees it, he has nothing for which to be thankful. All that he has, he thinks has been gained through his own greediness.

The writer to the Hebrews reveals the secret of contentment: "Be content with such things as ye have: for He hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee" (Hebrews 13:5). Contentment comes through realising that God is with us; we need not make our way through life alone. He will never leave us and He has promised to "supply all our need according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:19). If we give priority to spiritual considerations, He will see to it that all our needs are provided for (cf. Matthew 6:33, Psalm 37:25).

A contented person is a thankful person. He realises that the blessings that he daily enjoys are gifts from the hand of God. He knows that, if he continues to trust his loving heavenly Father, he will never lack the necessities of life. When reverses come, his world does not crumble. He still trusts God, recognising that he brought nothing into the world and he will not be able to carry anything out of it.

BOOK REVIEW

The Blue Bubble, The Think Tank, The Truthstone, The Creeping Slime by Norman Moss, published by Henry Walter Ltd., price 15p each postage and packing 3p each extra.

THESE books are described as being suitable for age 8-12. If this is so, sophistication sets in very much earlier these days! Somehow the terminology does not fit in with stories of gnomes (do 12-year-olds read stories of gnomes?). Then there are some pretty horrific passages for eight year-olds to cope with, particularly in "The Creeping Slime", not a happy choice of title for a children's book. I do not feel that the facets of gospel truths contained in these stories would be readily apparent to young children. One could be so overawed by the terror of the Evil One that the power of the love of God could be overlooked.

Luke 19:28-48

"He beheld the city, and wept" (v.41).

JESUS wept, but not for himself at the thought of Calvary. His mind was on a time not far distant, when the Roman armies would level the stately buildings of Jerusalem to the ground. The Jews had been blind to their opportunity (v.44): it was the blindness of men who didn't want to see. Now Jesus wept, for He knew that what was to come could have been averted, but it was not merely the downfall of the city that troubled Him, it was the men themselves. He saw other temples than that of Solomon crashing in ruins, the temples of man's souls that had rejected His love. Their ruin moved Him to tears. He came to save men, but He cannot save men against their will.

Tuesday, April 2nd

Luke 20:1-18

"That stone . . . will grind him to powder" (v.18).

THE Stone is Christ (1 Peter 2:4-7), chosen, living, precious, the joy of all who trust Him and build their lives upon Him. Upon whom this stone falls, however, it will grind to dust. We are told of a Jewish custom of punishment where a scaffold was erected twice the height of the man about to die. Standing on its edge he was violently struck off by a witness. If he was killed in the fall, that was the end, if not, a heavy stone was thrown down, killing him at once. Jesus was saying to His enemies then and now, that all who reject and oppose Him will be crushed and will perish (2 Thessalonians 1:7-9). The wrath of God is no myth.

Wednesday, April 3rd

Luke 20:19-40

"He perceived their craftiness" (vv.22, 23).

THE enemies of Jesus were out to trick him, but He turned it to good account, giving us teaching regarding our duties as citizens of the state. "Render unto Caesar" (v.25). Read Romans 13:1-7, noting particularly v.7: "Render to all their dues". This includes God (Luke 20:25). "There should be no better and no more conscientious citizens. . . than Christians" (Barclay). As citizens we have an obligation to the state: as Christian citizens we have an obligation to both God and the state. We are to "fear God. . . honour the king" (1 Peter 2:17). With the scribes we can only say, "Master, Thou hast well said" (Luke 20:39).

Thursday, April 4th

Luke 20:41-47; 21:1-4

"She. . . hath cast in all" (v.4).

SOME of the thirteen chests that stood in the outer court of the Temple were for the Temple tribute, a yearly tax which every Jew over the age of twenty was expected to pay towards the maintenance of Temple worship. Four of these chests received free-will offerings. Jesus had a special interest in the free-will offerings of His people. From our reading He appears to judge our offerings by what we keep back. We hardly deny ourselves if we give only what we can spare. The attention that Jesus draws to this widow seems to infer that this is real giving that touches our very lives: not denying ourselves of things, but yielding our very selves.

Friday, April 5th

Luke 21:5-19

"Your adversaries" (v.15).

THE honesty of Jesus is a marvel. He never tried to get recruits under false pretences or to keep them by showing only the good side of things. Constantly He sifted the crowds by His truthfulness, e.g. Luke 14:26-33. In today's reading He warned of "Your adversaries". Were you ever told when you were a child that someone was out to "get you"? You were grateful, because it put you on your guard and helped you to plan. Here Jesus forewarned all His disciples that they have enemies and that living for Him will involve them in rejection and hate. He wants us to know this, but not to despair over it, for with the warning comes the promise that He will not leave His followers helpless (vv.15-18). It is good to be warned; it is better to have the assurance of victory.

Saturday, April 6th

Luke 21:20-38

"Watch . . . and pray always" (v.36).

HERE we have much truth concerning the Second Coming of our Lord: the terrors that precede it (vv.25, 26); the blessed hope and safety of Christians (v.28); its certainty illustrated in the parable (vv.29-33); and much-needed advice to all who wait for it (vv.34-36). These final cautions to watch and pray always cannot be safely neglected. The world and the flesh would ever ensnare and seek to absorb us in cares and lusts. We need to discipline our lives to watch constantly for the tell-tale signs of a cooling love, a weakened faith, a disobedient heart, a fading zeal. Along with this we must pray always for an honest, obedient heart, for courage to confess and to forsake that sin which so easily besets, for a daily quickening in His Word, for a constant sensitivity to the Holy Spirit, for a readiness to be involved for Christ and for grace to endure to the end.

Sunday, April 7th

Luke 22:1-13

FOR over 1,000 years the Jews had kept this feast (Exodus 12:14). Now it was to be kept no more;

The Axe and Saw that work themselves

by A. S. F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

I HAVE an axe that weighs seven pounds. I have not used it for forty-five years, but in days long gone I have felled many a mighty tree with that axe.

You will have already noticed that I have used a few "Is".

There are too many Is in most of our lives and not enough of the Lord. "Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build". In Isaiah 10:15 we read: "Should an axe boast itself over the one who moves it back and forth?" (Berkeley). The Living Bible paraphrases this: "Should the axe boast greater power than the man who uses it? Is the saw greater than the man who saws?"

Boasting is not good, though there is plenty of it around these days. Notice Isaiah 10:16. God was saying: "Because of all your evil boasting, the Lord of all hosts will send a plague among your proud troop and strike them down". There is a proverb which says, "Pride comes before a fall". We must ever remind ourselves that it is not I, but the Lord, not the axe or saw, but the man.

I read a preacher's advert. the other day. With all his gifts that he could boast of, one wonders whether the Lord was really needed at all. It was the axe and the saw saying, "It's good to have the man around, but he is not really necessary".

In Cassell's English Dictionary the meaning of "boast" is given as: proud, vain-glorious assertion. To brag, to praise oneself". Anyone — politician or minister of the gospel — who has to descend to the low level of a boaster is not only poverty stricken, but has little to boast of. "Whoso boasteth himself of a false gift is like clouds and wind without rain" (Proverbs 25:14). "Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth" (Proverbs 27:2).

This is well summed up in Jeremiah 9:23, 24: "Thus saith the Lord, Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches; But let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth Me, that I am the Lord". This is a lesson worthy of universal application. It is repeated at the end of 1 Corinthians 1. Paul asks in Romans 3:27: "Where is boasting then? It is excluded". The only places where the Greek word ekkleio is found are here and in Galatians 4:17.

God forbid that the Church should adopt the ways of the worldly. I remember the little man who kept on shouting out in an open-air meeting: "I am a self-made man". I looked at him and said, "The more I see of you, the more I am led to believe that you are right"! Paul states, "Not of works, lest any man should boast" (Ephesians 2:9). Goliath was a boaster (1 Samuel 17:51) and he lost his head. It was cut off by his own sword.

Ben-hadad, drinking himself drunk in the pavilions, received this message from the king of Israel: "Tell him, Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself, as he that putteth it off" (1 Kings 20:11). The Syrian king was so sure of himself and of victory, but we read in v.20: "Ben-hadad the king of Syria escaped on an horse" — the boaster ran for his life!

In 2 Kings 18:19 we read of the boastings of Sennacherib — "What confidence is this wherein thou trustest?". It will do us all good to notice that Hezekiah put his confidence in the Lord and he came out of all his troubles victoriously. Read his testimony in Psalm 120: "In my distress I cried unto the Lord, and He heard me".

We will not boast of axe and saw, might or power, but "In God we boast all the day long, and praise Thy name for ever" (Psalm 44:8).

Christ our Passover had come. Soon, as the Lamb of God, He would be nailed to the cross to take away the sin of the world (John 1:29). A new feast was now to be kept, in which no lamb is killed. It was to be a very simple feast of bread and wine, which our Lord commanded to be received in memory of His sacrifice until He come (1 Corinthians 11:26). In loving obedience and gratitude many will be at His table this morning, remembering and responding to that supreme offering He made. Will you be there, or, like someone else in our reading, will you be going your own way (v.4)?

HAVE you ever witnessed — or shared — a conversation in which two people were failing to communicate? It happened to me like this. Two folk had read the same book. To one it was bright with promise, to the other it was deadly dull, or so their rather heated comments indicated. They utterly failed, not only to convince one another of their respective points of view, but also to convey to each other what they were trying to say. It was a relief when someone else came into the room and diverted the conversation.

It set me thinking. So great is the gulf between the Pentecostal Christian and many of his unconverted fellow-citizens, that the believer fails to appreciate that his message is too often couched in terms that are meaningless to the unsaved one, who regards him and his message as irrelevant anyway.

We need furiously to think and pray about this. Communication of the message is vital to us. We are saved for many other purposes and reasons, but we gladly accept that priority must be given to our spreading the message which has changed us. To add to our problems many unconverted people are so comatose from "telly-itis" that they do not really listen in any case — they have largely almost ceased really to hear anything.

But the common people heard HIM gladly and the gospel preacher and witness is firstly a prophet both as to foretelling and forth-telling. We must get through with our message — "loud and clear"!

Pentecostal Pioneer celebrates his ninetieth Birthday

A section of the crowd at the birthday celebrations

WHAT can be accomplished through one man's vision is clearly seen in the life of Lewi Pethrus of Filadelfia Church, Stockholm, Sweden.

Prior to becoming a Pentecostal minister, he was in the Baptist Church. He received the Baptism in the Holy Spirit and commenced, what is today, a vast movement of Pentecostal churches.

Filadelfia Church seats 3,500 people. Adjoining it are a bookroom and a suite of offices. A few miles away there is a beautiful Bible college. Another part of the church outreach is the publishing house that produces the magazine Evangelii Harold. Probably one of the greatest methods of outreach is the publishing of a daily newspaper called Dagen. The gospel radio station Ibra was commenced by Lewi Pethrus.

There are now 92,000 Pentecostal believers in Sweden, with over 600 churches and almost 700 missionaries scattered around the world, supported by the Pentecostal people of Sweden.

On March 11th, 1974, Lewi Pethrus was ninety years of age. The Stockholm Church, of which he was the Pastor for over half a century, decided to celebrate this great occasion by a week-end of services, with music and a variety of speakers.

Lewi Pethrus has written over 100 hymns, some of which are going to be used by the State Lutheran Church, and he is the author of fifty books.

On Saturday, March 9th, there was a service of music and preaching, where some of the finest hymns composed by Lewi Pethrus were played by the orchestra and the band and sung by the united choir. Rev. Joseph Mattson Boze was the preacher on the Saturday night. On Sunday morning, March 10th, a great devotional service was held, when Rev. P.S.

Brewster, Secretary of the Pentecostal World Advisory Committee and Editor of the World Pentecost, was the preacher. Again, on Sunday night, 3,500 people attended a great service of music and revival. They sat for over two and a half hours. Many people found Jesus Christ as Saviour and the Lord Jesus was exalted throughout the whole service.

On Monday morning, March 11th, ministers, friends and overseas guests met Lewi Pethrus in his private home. This home has been built by the Church in the beautiful grounds of the Bible college and presented to him. On Monday night the great Filadelfia Church was packed to capacity half an hour before the advertised time; crowds surged down the aisles and the doors had to be shut.

Attending this service were political leaders, both of the Conservative and Christian Democratic parties. Lewi Pethrus was the founder of the Christian Democratic Movement. A telegram was sent from the royal palace by the King of Sweden. The Archbishop of the State Church of Sweden (Lutheran) attended and spoke highly of the influence of Lewi Pethrus and the Pentecostal people on the life of Sweden.

The editor of the daily newspaper and the chairman of the television station were also there. Then there were the ministers, missionaries and civic authorities from all over Sweden. These leaders, as representatives, paid their tribute to the ministry of Lewi Pethrus.

Rev. P.S. Brewster, representing the Elim Pentecostal Churches of Great Britain and World Pentecost, also paid tribute. Lewi Pethrus was presented with a gold medal with the church inscribed on one side and his profile on the other. A cheque for 2,700,000 Kroner, (the equivalent of £270,000) was handed to him. This man of God gave the cheque back and requested that premises be built to house and rehabilitate drug and alcoholic addicts.

With all the solemn atmosphere of this historic occasion, the Holy Spirit spoke through a message in tongues and the interpretation was forthright. Words that will ever be remembered were: "Blessed is he who sits down and shares his bread with another. . . Blessed is he who waits for God to answer prayer".

There were tears in the eyes of this great congregation as Lewi Pethrus, ninety years of age, stood and preached and gave his response. He said: "I started life as a very humble working boy and everything I have done is through God and my many helpers".

Long will be remembered the tribute paid by his son. He spoke of the influence of his father over the family and the influence of his mother. Lewi Pethrus has thirteen children and fifty grandchildren.

On the Monday night a dinner was given by the Filadelfia Church to family and friends. This was attended by approximately 150. It was a great pleasure to hear his children and grandchildren speak of the influence that Lewi Pethrus had over them.

The weather was very cold, the lakes and the rivers were frozen and icicles were hanging from the trees, but the warmth of the Swedish people and their fervent love for each other brought heart comfort and inner glow.

Rev. P.S. Brewster paid tribute by saying:

"It gives me great pleasure today to share with you this weekend of recognition and congratulation to our esteemed and beloved brother, Rev. Lewi Pethrus. Lewi Pethrus belongs to the Pentecostal people of Sweden in particular. He also belongs to Scandinavia, but in so many ways he belongs to the world. We must never allow ourselves to forget that God has set in the Church, apostles, prophets, pastors, teachers, evangelists, and these men are not only gifts to the local church, but they are gifts to the Church of Jesus Christ world-wide.

I have known and admired Brother Pethrus over a period of thirty-five years and more. He came to my church in the city of Cardiff, Wales. Over these long years he has not changed in the basic teachings of Christ as Saviour and Baptiser in the Holy Ghost. He has remained a firm contender and defender of the faith. He has never lost his vision. In the latter years I have worked with Lewi Pethrus on the World Pentecostal Advisory Committee, of which he was the founding father. He has been an apostle and spiritual statesman of the highest order and we have been enriched and strengthened by his wise counsel.

What Brother Pethrus commenced thirty years ago for World Pentecost has not only survived, but it is now reaching into every country in the world. There is hardly any area in the world which is not linked in fellowship with World Pentecost. There are now over 30,000,000 Pentecostal people in the Pentecostal Church today.

Brother Pethrus is a member for life of this Committee. This Committee met in Florida, U.S.A., only last week and I have a mandate today from the World Pentecostal Advisory Committee to convey our love and our best wishes to Brother Pethrus on his ninetieth birthday, and also to his church and to the Swedish people. Dr. Zimmerman, Dr. R.H. Hughes, Bishop Floyd Williams, Bishop Crouch, Dr. H. Courtney, Dr. Taitinger, Yonggi Cho — you will remember these names. They are some of the Committee members. Brother Edestav very ably represented Sweden at this Committee on this occasion.

During my travels around the world I have heard of the outstanding results of the Swedish missionaries.

One outstanding memory that will always remain with me regarding my dear Brother Lewi Pethrus is the quality and strength of his spiritual character, not only what he has accomplished, but what he is, a world leader.

The life of a spiritual leader is a lonely path and yet he is following in the footsteps of Jesus of whom it was said, "He trod the winepress alone".

Brother Pethrus, on behalf of all the Pentecostal people around the world, thank you for your friendship, your fellowship and your spiritual guidance and your personal example.

What's that in your Hand?

by S. E. Petts

"The Lord said unto him, What is that in thine hand? And he said, A rod" (Exodus 4:2).

GOD wanted Moses to lead the Israelites out of their bondage in Egypt to a land that he would give them for their own. Moses raised many objections: he wasn't a person with authority, he didn't know what to say to convince the children of Israel that he was sent by God to lead them; they would not obey his orders, he had no proof of his calling and he was not fit for it as he had nothing to offer.

God asked him what he had in his hand. "Only a straight branch cut from a tree", Moses replied. God told him to throw this very ordinary thing on the ground. He did so and it turned into a snake.

By this and other signs God showed Moses that to serve Him, he did not need to be a special person with great gifts. All that he needed was a willingness to put into God's hands whatever he possessed. God would do the rest.

It is a great joy to know that God is using us in his service. It means that He accepts what little we have to offer. The number or size of our talents is not so important as our desire to serve.

When God calls, He equips!

"Helpers of the War"

5. Nathan the Prophet

by Stanley Beresford,
Pastor of our
Blackburn Church

HERE is a man whom we may easily admire, but whom we may find difficult to follow. His name means "Faithful", and, as was his name, so was his nature. God could trust him to deliver the right message at the right time to the right person. This was revealed in David's darkest hour when he sinned against the Lord in sending Uriah the Hittite to his death and in marrying his wife Bathsheba. A less faithful man than Nathan would have been unsuited for such a task, but he went to the king and told the story of the poor man with his one lamb that he cherished and laid in his bosom, and of the rich man who refused to take of his own flocks and herds for a traveller who came his way and took the poorman's lamb from him. David's wrath was kindled and he said, "The man that hath done this shall surely die". Nathan said, "Thou art the man."

This faithful word was the beginning of David's restoration. "A faithful messenger. . . refreshes the soul of his masters" (Proverbs 25:13). "A faithful witness will not lie" (Proverbs 14:5). "Faithful are the wounds of a friend" (Proverbs 27:6). If David ever needed a friend, it was at this time, and he found one in the Lord's prophet, Nathan, and in a most unusual way.

"The prophet that hath a dream", says Jeremiah, "let him tell a dream. but he that hath My word, let him speak My word faithfully. What is the chaff to the wheat?" (Jeremiah 23:28). Nathan spoke God's word faithfully. This word not only brought about David's repentance, but later generations have been blessed and encouraged by David's words in Psalm 51: "Have mercy on me, O God. . . wash me. . . cleanse me . . . purge me. . . make me. . . Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit. . . cast me not away. . . Restore unto me the joy of Thy salvation; and uphold me with Thy free spirit". Wonder of wonders, because of grace upon grace, he could add, "Then will I teach transgressors Thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto Thee". Such is the effect of the faithful word. "Holding fast the faithful word. . . For there are many unruly and vain talkers. . . whose mouths must be stopped" (Titus 1:9-11).

Our blessed Lord is called a faithful "Apostle", "High Priest" and "Son" (Hebrews 3:1, 6, 12; 2:6); A faithful "Creator" (1 Peter 4:19) and a faithful "Witness" (Revelation 1:5). As heaven was opened to the eyes of John, he saw a white horse and he who sat upon him was called "Faithful and True". Consequently, "in righteousness He doth judge and make war. His eyes were as a flame of fire, and on His head were many crowns" (19:11, 12).

Faithfulness in word and deed will always receive its reward from Him who ever abides faithful and who cannot deny Himself (2 Timothy 2:13). Nathan the prophet stood by the bedside of King David with Benaiah the warrior and Zadok the priest. Nathan had said to Bathsheba, "Go in to the king and tell him how he swore that Solomon should sit on the throne and say, 'Why then doth Adonijah reign?' and behold while you talk there with the king I also will come in and confirm your word". (1 Kings 1:13, 14). So it was that the kingdom was given to its rightful king, Solomon. These were the princes which he had: "Azariah the son of Nathan was over the officers; and Zabud the son of Nathan was principal officer, and the king's friend" (1 Kings 4:4).

"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life" (Revelation 2:10).

The Substitute

(John 1:29)

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

EARLY each morning David the young shepherd boy hurried to the hills of Judea to lead his flock to fresh new grass. Throughout the day he stayed nearby keeping a watchful eye on them as they grazed. When he noticed the little lambs grow weary, he carried them for a while, stroking them down on the grass. When the lambs strayed from the flock, David searched until he found them and returned them to their anxious mothers. When night came, David gathered in his sheep in case a fox might prowl around or attack. .

David loved his sheep. He liked to see them jumping, running and exploring the hills. He was happy to see the little, snow-white lambs skipping along beside their mothers, wriggling their little tails as they went.

The sheep loved David, too. They knew that they had nothing to fear when he was with them. They knew his voice and came running when he called. Many times when David strolled among the hills, a little lamb joined him and skipped along happily at his side.

Imagine that we are living nearly 4,000 years ago, during the time when the Israelites crossed the Sinai desert. We see a man walking along, a little lamb skipping happily at his side. We notice that the man is not a shepherd, but an Israelite. He is on his way to the Tabernacle. What a pretty picture they make as they walk along. Once inside the Tabernacle, however, the scene changes. The Israelite, seeking forgiveness, confesses his sins before God, and, as he does so, the lamb is slain by the priest and offered in sacrifice upon the altar. The lamb dies for the Israelite that he may be saved.

Christ took our place. He gave His life on the cross at Calvary that we might be saved. When we, like the Israelite, confess our sins to Him and seek His forgiveness His wonderful salvation is ours and we can sing, "He took my place upon the cruel Tree. He took the guilty sinner's place, and I am free".

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

WE have a very interesting Scripture in the very early chapters of Genesis, where we are told that men began to call upon the Lord.

Genesis records that Adam had two sons who each brought an offering to God. One was accepted; the other was rejected. Cain rose up against his brother Abel, whose offering had been accepted, and in his anger he slew him. God faced Cain with his crime and punished him. Thus there began a line of men whom we call ungodly men.

It seems that many years passed by and another son was born to Adam, whom he named Seth. From this son a line of godly men started. There was also with Seth a reviving of religion. Men had worshipped God perhaps in secret; now they became bold enough openly to worship the Lord and call upon His name.

So he who prays is distinguished from him who does not believe in God and prayer. The one who prays shows that he has faith in God, while the other, who does not pray, does not have faith in God.

A girl, who attended an Elim Sunday school and who perhaps trusted in Christ for salvation, at about the age of thirteen was made to leave the school by her unconverted mother. Years later, married to a successful business man, blessed with two fine sons, she faced a crisis which had come swiftly and without any warning to the family. One boy had left for school and the other boy was about to leave when their trouble broke upon them. The mother looked first at her husband and then at her son. She told them that she believed in God and in prayer. She dropped to her knees and told the Lord of their trouble. When she opened her eyes, she found both her husband and son kneeling beside her. This had a great effect upon the son who is now attending a place of worship and who trusts in the Lord to answer prayer. Did God answer this woman's prayer? He did and in such a miraculous way, that that same evening they were rejoicing in a complete change of circumstances.

Who taught men to pray? There is something within the human breast which tells a man that he can pray, just like that something in the tiny bird by which it can navigate in its flight from one continent to another - with amazing accuracy.

We know that God hears and answers prayer.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Mr. Walker, •

AS one of the few who knew our beloved brother H.C. Phillips prior to his call to Africa, I would like to add to what has already been written. In the early twenties he was a surveyor in the offices of the Letchworth Garden City, having much interest in its development. At the same time he attended a Methodist mission and taught there. In 1923 he planned and organized a campaign in a disused paper factory and invited George Jeffreys and party. Many souls were saved in that campaign, with the result that an Elim church was established and Mr. Phillips became its Pastor. During the campaign, Mr. Phillips sat, not on the platform, but unobtrusively on the back seat. This was typical of the man. A wooden church was erected by him assisted by new converts and this was later replaced by the present beautiful church. I well remember Mr. Phillips showing me a drawing and explaining that this was how the building would look when complete. All the members - we children as well - worked alongside him. I have a photo of him in shirt-sleeves on the roof. He built the brick building, but, as he became Pastor and Sunday school superintendent, he was also building us up in the faith. I thank God for his teaching of the Scripture in those early days, as well as for the example of his godly, gentlemanly manner. He had a quiet sense of humour and his eyes would sparkle as he shared some amusing incident, which endeared him to us children.

Peggy Tate, who died in the Lord's service in Tanzania and myself were saved under his ministry and baptised in water by him. We also have much for which to thank God for the privilege of being in the class of his future wife, who faithfully taught us for several years. Bro. and Sister Blythen, missionaries to Transvaal, were also among his converts.

The day came when God called our Pastor to serve Him in Africa and a year later our Sunday school teacher sailed to marry him there. The Letchworth Church backed them both by prayer and support and the Lord has blessed them in S. Africa. One of my earliest recollections of Mr. Phillips was as he made preparation for his work in Africa. He spent some time working in a tiny cobbler's shop, learning to mend shoes, in the town where he was well known. He was so humble. During those forty-six years he and his wife have been spiritual parents to me, always ready with counsel, advice and encouragement. He was a true man of God and she a real helpmeet. Indeed during his illness she stood beside him and there was never a complaint. Even now in her deep sorrow, and in her eighties, I hear she is looking for a sphere of labour at Emmanuel Press, so that she can continue to serve God with her active mind. What an example this is to us, her spiritual children. I thank God upon every remembrance of them both.

Last but One Letter from the President

My dear Friends,

I AM writing this from the home of one of our ministers in South Wales. His manse stands high on a hill overlooking a mining town. From where I sit, I can see the huddle of small, grey houses clustered round the great, red-brick complex of mine buildings. On the slopes of the hill opposite, just across the railway, rows of red chimneys march like soldiers up the grey slate roofs, many of them wearing plumes of bluey-grey smoke. Beyond them brood the dark, pine woods and, still higher, the brown summit of the mountain stands massive against an overcast sky. A squadron of white pigeons circles in nervous, fluttering formation over the town. In next-door's garden, a tabby cat stalks through his own private jungle. Everything looks normal here. The trees are ripe with buds that promise early spring. Beyond the apparent calm are other things, however.

Two things dominate this town: the great pit wheel and the huge smoke-grimed chapels. The one is motionless while the others are powerless. The mine is as empty as the chapels because the miners are on strike. Perhaps it would be true to say that the chapels are as empty as the mine because the Christians are on strike!

Here I am, on the day before the General Election, pondering two great facts of life in 1974 — industrial unrest and spiritual bankruptcy. Down in the town there, people will be arguing, as they will be everywhere, about political rights and wrongs, the cost of living, houses for young couples and proper care for old age pensioners, the Common Market and a host of socioeconomic evils. Tomorrow they will vote — and wait to see — and the next day the arguments will start again. I look again over this grey town and wonder about the people in those terraces. What is the story about that man who has just got out of his car and gone into a house? Who is he? Why is he there? The home he visits, what is it like and who lives there? Does his visit occasion laughter, tears, worry or furtive fear? I do not know, but I do know that those houses down there in the valley hold the same secrets as houses anywhere: prosperity, poverty, gaiety, misery, driving ambition, listless despair, bounding vitality, wasting disease, loneliness, frustration, broken marriages, frightened teenagers, drunkenness, drugs, tenderness, violence, grasping greed, unexpected kindness — the same bewildering confusion of human nature that you will find anywhere in the world.

But what am I to make of those chapels? Listen to their names: Horeb, Zion, Bethel, Ebenezer, marvelous names that conjure up the mighty acts of God. As to their history, their stark simplicity recalls that they were built, not as ecclesiastical follies to satisfy a rich patron's vanity, but as urgently needed meeting-houses to provide accommodation for growing congregations when the rivers of revival poured through these valleys. Within their stark walls preachers thundered warnings of judgment and grew rhapsodical over the glories of the grace of God. Their high ceilings echoed to the cries of penitents and the songs of the redeemed. Today, sadly, there is no glory cloud over Horeb, no shining ladder to heaven in Bethel. In most — not by any means all — a small handful in their Sunday best struggle bravely to sing "Hyfrydol" with an organ built for hundreds.

Why is it? There are many answers. The growth of an urban society, the vast changes in the patterns of everyday life brought about by education, industrial development, radio and television, and a host of other factors have left their mark on the smallest village and the remotest valley. But there are other, spiritual, reasons that we should heed. When Jacob came to his "Bethel", the sense of the presence of God made him build an altar and dedicate himself to the Lord (Genesis 28:10-22), though it was a rather self-centred dedication. When he came back at a later time he renamed the place "El-Bethel" ("The God of the house of God"), which indicated that this far from perfect man valued the sense of the presence of God more than anything else (Genesis 35:7). It seems to me that here lies an important truth. The glory and the presence of the God of Bethel are more important than Bethel itself. The failure to seek God and to glorify Him lies at the heart of our spiritual decline. Bethel without God is just a place, however sentimental its memories and traditions. Church building and institutions without the living presence of the Holy Spirit are no more than empty shells. Unless you can say, "The Lord is in this place", the building is no more sacred than a bingo hall.

Paul's analysis of spiritual decline is that "when they knew God they glorified him not as God" and consequently they "changed the truth about God into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator" (Romans 1:21,35). Wherever a church begins to value its institutions, its structures or its traditions more than the glory of God and the sovereignty of the Holy Spirit, it is sowing the seeds of its own destruction. Wherever the truth of God as it is contained in His Word is exchanged for the latest trends in thought, however idealistic or seemingly relevant, the frontier of spiritual failure has been crossed. Once we abandon the Word of God as the basis of belief and practice and no longer seek the enabling of the Holy Ghost in day to day renewal and direction, we are treading the path of inevitable spiritual decline.

How do things like these happen? I look across the valley at these chapels and wonder where it started in them. Possibly in the minister's study. Losing faith in the value of prayer maybe, or perhaps no longer trusting the authority of the Bible, one of the Lord's servants sought to be more intellectually respectable than spiritually authoritative and turned to what was then known as "higher criticism". He found himself popular with the professional people of the town and, though the common people no longer heard him gladly, he was gratified by the greater respect that he earned from people who mattered in the social life of the community. The recognition of shopkeepers, schoolmasters, doctors and solicitors was more important than the trust of working men and their wives or the confidence of servant girls — more important, indeed, than the smile of God.

Who can say where the rot set in? In some cases it was in the minister himself, in others, the deacons. Sometimes individual members of the congregation became the "root of bitterness" by which many were defiled. Whatever the immediate cause, however, ultimately it was the failure to give God His rightful place, the failure to obey the Scriptures, the tendency to neglect the anointing of the Spirit in the search for other, more humanly-pleasing sources of spiritual authority and influence. The Christians "went on strike" from the Word of God, the prayer meeting, the Lord's Table and the work of evangelism and, as a result, the work of the churches and chapels ground to a halt.

I suppose it is easy for me to sit here reflecting on the failures of the past. I was in one of these former chapels last night, but it was different. The blessing of God was there. You could feel it in the worship of those Elim people and see it in the radiant faces of a newly-converted young couple. It was good to be there because the Lord was in that place. It was truly Bethel. But we must never grow complacent. Unless we jealously guard our priceless heritage, unless we are sober and watch unto prayer, unless we humbly seek to know the Lord and obey His Word, unless we see to it that nothing diverts us from our real priority — evangelism — it could be, should the Lord tarry, that the President of some other Movement might sit here overlooking this valley while reflecting on the rise and fall of the Pentecostal Movement. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall".

There is a closer connection between that motionless pit wheel and those empty chapels than we may care to think. It is still true that "righteousness exalteth a nation" and one of the major reasons for our present industrial unrest and economic troubles is the fact that, at every level of life, from the boardroom to the union meeting, godlessness abounds. One of the reasons why godlessness abounds is because the preachers of righteousness have themselves succumbed to the spirit of the age and have neither the inclination nor the spiritual authority to speak the Word of the Lord to their generation.

Probably by the time you are reading this the pit wheels will be turning again — but what of those little grey houses in the valley, or the high-rise flats in your city, or the tree-lined suburban avenue where you live? Satan and his band of willing helpers — sin, sorrow, sickness, hatred, fear, loneliness, joyless pleasure, reckless selfishness, greed, lust, perversion, materialism, utter despair and death — will be doing their door-to-door work tomorrow and the next day and the next. Hollow laughter, heartbrokenness, or the stupor of moral sedation will follow each visit as the Satanic "outreach" progresses and, as it goes on unchecked, each home, each street, each town and city, each nation, indeed, the world itself, will settle more deeply into the lap of the wicked one.

Does this not challenge us? Does it not disturb our complacency? Does it not move us to look afresh at our own lives and our churches and ask whether they are of any real use in such a situation? Too many of us are like Lot — getting on prosperously in a perishing community, and too few of us are like Abraham — moved with compassion towards wicked men. "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He hath anointed me to" — speak in tongues, enjoy "liberty", have "a good time", see visions, join the Charismatic movement? "No! — "He hath anointed me to preach the gospel" (Luke 4:18,19).

"Lord, help those sinning people down in the valley there; Lord, visit those empty chapels again; Lord, bless our Elim witness in this place; Lord, touch my own heart and make it sensitive to the moving of Thy Spirit and the authority of Thy Word. 'Move me, dear Lord, and others I shall move.' Yes, 'Under the anointing daily let me live, a priest and king: Relying not on fleshly energy Thy smile to win. A simple soul in contact with my Lord, in whom all fulness is for ever stored'. Lord, grant this grace to me and to all our ministers and missionaries and every member of every church."

This is my prayer for Elim.

Yours sincerely in Him,

John Lancaster

If only . . .

"If thou hadst known . . . the things which belong unto thy peace" (Luke 19:42).

by Ron Williams, Pastor of our Rochester Church

THE scene is most familiar, for from earliest days we've been told about the journey that Jesus made into Jerusalem. This was an occasion charged with atmosphere. As Christ rode the colt brought by His disciples, the precarious path to Jerusalem was carpeted with clothes and branches from the trees.

Added to this was the jubilant din of people shouting their hosannas, much to the annoyance of some Pharisees. The latter even asked Jesus to tell His disciples to contain themselves. Christ replied that the silence of the people would cause an even more dramatic scene, for the stones would begin a performance of their own.

As this cavalcade neared the end of its historic journey, it happened. Jesus could see Jerusalem a short distance away. His eyes began to flow liberally with tears. Without embarrassment, looking on this celebrated place through blurred vision and thinking of the people there, He cried, "If thou hadst known the things which belong unto thy peace". These people had missed out on something that prejudice had secreted from them; their sectarian eyes did not see the true image of the Nazarene. It certainly could be said of Him:

He watched and wept,
He prayed and felt for all

Goldsmith.

To a vivid imagination, the sight of the weeping Jesus surpasses all that man has ever cast his eyes on. Is there anything finer in art? Is there anything deeper in human pathos? Think of it as a revelation of God; surely to the weeping God even a little child may go.

There's a grim encouragement about this spectacle when we consider the lament of Jesus over this metropolis. Actually He had His disappointments in life. The ministry was not a "success" even in the hands of Christ. How easy it is to blame someone else because a locality is not all good. That miracle, being moral and spiritual and not of a nature that came within the limits imposed on almightiness in the flesh, even the Son of God Himself could not accomplish. The youngest child can clench its fist at God. Every heart can shut the door in the face of Jesus Christ.

Be sure that we have done for your town, what Christ did for Jerusalem, before we plead that where Christ failed it is impossible for us to succeed. This is not an encouragement to indifference, a sanction for careless work, a plea that we bar the soul against the claims of sacrifice. When Jesus Christ wept over the city, He realized that even He could do nothing more.

The statement of Christ regarding the ignorance of the people concerning the "things that belonged to their peace" seems paradoxical. The ordinary bystander would have said that the city was full of peace, judging by the holy festivity and rejoicing, but this was a false peace, which would not last. To them the day of peace had gone for ever and the sign of this was already approaching, for within forty years they were to be overwhelmed by a most destructive war. Christ was conscious of His impending death, but His sorrow was for the persecutors. The prospect of those temporal sufferings affected His pitying spirit as He beheld that beautiful city soon to be the seat of such calamities. "For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side. And shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another"

This would be the direct result of their not knowing the time of their visitation. The warning voice had been sent, saying, "Now is the axe laid unto the root of the trees" and "Repent ye, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand". This was the imminent danger that this day would not be known, that it would come and go and not be felt or understood, because their eyes had been closed by sin. Luke affords further evidence that these people did not know their day of visitation; the love of the world and business occupied and profaned the Temple where God dwelt. This is even so with the people of today who know not the things of their peace.

On entering Jerusalem, "He went into the temple, and began to cast out them that sold therein, and them that bought; Saying unto them, It is written, My house is the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves". Such castigating words, but they were so necessary.

Great reverence was due to that place where God had placed His name: none of this world's traffic should invade its sanctity. Scripture shows that Christians are regarded as being the Temple of God. Being such, we should keep ourselves holy. Nothing should be admitted as part of our lives that will impair or take the place of our constant living for God. We are called on to love God with all our hearts, souls and strength.

When people can say that this is their experience, they have begun to discover the things that belong to their peace. This is what is meant by knowing the time of our visitation, i.e., to understand the effect that God can have on our daily lives when they are given to Him. May Christ not be weeping for us while we rejoice in an empty jubilation this Easter. After Christ had driven out the buyers and sellers, "He taught daily in the temple". He does just the same for us today. If we're willing to rid our lives of the habits and sins which frustrate the plan of God for us, then Christ is willing to teach us how we may gain the best advantage of knowing Him and miss none of the pleasures available to us. We must be sure not to miss this day, for the shadows of time are stretched out and mankind must pay the eventual price for rejecting Jesus Christ. The joy of Christianity is to know that it is in our power to obtain this peace which Christ offers, for this is still our day. God's blessings are not hidden from us; we may desire and possess them.

How does Jesus Christ visit us? It is with the thoughts of repentance and desires to pray and to serve Him better than we've yet done. When He gives us these desires, He also gives us the power to fulfil them.

Spiritual indifference was the sign of concealed ruin for the people of Christ's day: apathy disguised the downward course of living souls. Christ saw in these people a self-wrought ruin that was rapidly becoming hopeless.

The gospel of Christ's love and salvation belongs to man's peace today. In a world of sorrow and trouble, God's Son offers a peace of conscience if we invite Him to take our lives and if we appropriate the work He performed as being on our behalf.

The steps that we need to take in order to make this peace our possession are:

Repent, i.e., sincerely regret that our present way of life separates us from God, turn from it and turn to Christ.

Confess our sin, for all people have sinned against God, and believe in Christ as our Saviour.

Abide in Christ, i.e., allow Him to help us to discover what lies ahead; then He will give us strength to bear sorrows and joys alike.

Profess Christ to others. Who knows, perhaps your neighbour, friend or workmate is just waiting to hear about the peace that you have discovered. Why not share it with them? Christ is willing to share His life with you!

(From a broadcast over BBC Radio Medway).

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

72. In Conclusion (Luke 17:26-30)

by F. Lavender

FOR nearly eighteen months we have been sharing these thoughts, gathering jewels from the rich storehouse of Genesis. In concluding the series let us re-state some important truths from this Book.

First, we note the power of the Word of God, for "God said" and it was done (Genesis 1). We are also aware of the overruling divine purpose, e.g., when Satan had used Eve to bring sin to mankind, God declared that He would use Eve's Seed to crush the serpent and set men free (Genesis 3:15). Again, from the lives of such men as Abraham, we realise that the blessing of God rests on those who trust Him (Genesis 22:15-18). Finally, the Scripture shows that His judgment comes on those who rebel against Him, as on the people of Noah's day and the inhabitants of Sodom. These truths are first declared in Genesis, but they are constantly repeated throughout the Bible.

The message of Genesis is remarkably relevant to our day. Despite the amazing inventions of men, supreme power is not in the words of man, but in the Word of Jesus, who said: "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but My words shall not pass away (Matthew 24:35). Secondly, the overruling purpose of God will prevent man's Satanically-induced madness from totally destroying the earth, for He intends that His Son shall reign on the earth (Matthew 24:22, 29, 30). Thirdly, those who believe on the Lord Jesus inherit the blessing of God; they are His sons now and will share Christ's glory when He returns (1 John 3:1, 2). Finally, those who reject His mercy are the objects of His judgment and wrath (John 3:36).

Are you trusting Jesus to save you? Are you truly a Christian?

(We thank Mr. Lavender for this valued series and are pleased to say that a new series on Exodus starts in next week's EVANGEL.

FILMSTRIP REVIEW

Benny on Holiday.

ELEVEN-YEAR-OLD BENNY is excited at the prospect of a seaside holiday. One day, tired of games on the beach, he decides to climb a cliff despite the warning notice. Near the top, he finds himself on a ledge from which it is impossible to go either up or down. In response to his feeble cries for help, people appear at the top of the cliff, in turn telling him that he should not be there, that he was foolish and various other pieces of unhelpful advice. Finally, along comes his father with a rope, having been summoned by the faithful terrier. On the Sunday after his escapade, Benny hears a sermon on the need of a Saviour to rescue us from sin. Benny feels that this is a message for him.

Benny and the Motor Car.

BENNY'S DAD buys a second-hand car and the family go for a day by the sea. After fun and games and a mishap with the collapsible picnic table, the family sets off for home. The car breaks down and, in trying to put things right, dad gets too involved with the engine and ends up in hospital. During his stay there, Benny decides that he will help by painting the car in a variety of colours. Taking the car for a trial run, dad again has trouble and goes to a garage. He should have gone there in the first place as the car needs a new engine. Painting it in bright colours didn't help. Benny hears of Jesus telling the Pharisees that it is no good being clean outside when what is needed is a new heart.

These filmstrips are two of a series and are excellent for the 7-11 age group. They have been shown in secondary schools with good response. Two more are in preparation and others are on the way. They are available from: Gospel Sound and Vision, 44 Georgia Road, Thornton Heath, Surrey, CR4 8DR.

BENNY FILMSTRIPS AND DECISIONS FOR CHRIST

One minister showed "Benny on Holiday". "I think I would have heard a pin drop among 30 lads, 9-14 year olds, right to the end".

Another writes: "This series is proving very popular and to crown the evening an 8 year old boy decided for Christ".

Another told us: "After the Benny filmstrip, nine children came up to me and asked how to be saved".

Primary and secondary schools are using Benny filmstrips in their Christian union meetings. Benny Crusades are being held in England, Scotland and Wales. Hire costs as little as £4.

Besides the 5 Benny filmstrips (with soundtracks on tape or cassette), we have 448 other titles in our large hire library, and most of them have soundtracks, which we ourselves have made in many cases.

Use filmstrips, win souls, build up the saints, use them in Bible studies, children's meetings, for youth and adults. We cover all ages. Hire fees: 80p for strip and tape (less 50% to members).

Send 25p (refunded on first order) for catalogue and details, and please don't forget your name and address (!) to: GOSPEL SOUND AND VISION, 44 Georgia Road, Thornton Heath, Surrey, CR4 8DR.

P.S. Have you seen "Evolution — or, Which came first, the Chicken or the Egg?". It's hilarious and really hits at evolution. Ref. no. 302.

By the way, we sell projectors too, for strips and slides, from £18, at special terms, and we do NOT charge VAT.

Spring Cleaning

THE penetrating rays of spring sunshine have a disconcerting way of showing up winter cobwebs, grubby paintwork and shabby wallpaper. Spring cleaning fever is the outcome. Most housewives are smitten to some degree and once they start, the urge to scour and clean extends to decorating, washing of curtains, turning out of drawers and cupboards, shampooing carpets and upholstery and changing round the furniture.

On the whole the children rather like the upheaval and find amusement in climbing step-ladders and investigating the mysteries of paint and paste. Husbands mostly tolerate the bare rooms and scrappy meals. Even mother's enthusiasm begins to flag if she has to work on single-handed. Sometimes it is forgotten that the routine work of running a home must continue during the spring cleaning period, so that it can be pretty exhausting. However, the housewife enjoys a sense of achievement when all her domain is clean, bright and orderly. It may still be a primitive instinct, even in this sophisticated age, to clean and to renew at a time when nature is renewing its life and, in the northern hemisphere, the earth is being re-clothed and bedecked with glorious colour.

I am certain, too, that in the all-important realms of activity in the Kingdom of God, there are times and seasons, divine impulses, glorious upsurges of God-given energy. Take, for example, the cleansing of the Temple in the reign of good king Hezekiah, of which we read in 2 Chronicles 29. Sickened, ashamed and warned by the evil reign of his father; encouraged and guided by his God-fearing mother, the twenty-five year old king decided to inaugurate a gigantic spring-clean. Here are cause and effect again for, when he saw the damaged gates of the Temple, the neglect, the rubbish and the devastation engineered by his father, as king, in the very first month, he eagerly organised this mighty spring-clean. In his first year the menfolk were the task force and I just wish I could paint a picture of the great company of priests and levites marshalled in East Street and detailed off to their particular duties. There was carpentry to be done, cartloads of rubbish to be removed, the whole fabric of the building to be cleaned. What a mighty army, complete with tools, shovels, brushes and water, must have invaded the Temple! This great cleaning squad was comprised wholly of men and in sixty days the work was completed! We womenfolk must surely take off our hats to the men on this occasion. It is gratifying to find men doing a task which in these days is regarded as usually reserved for housewives.

I am impressed, too, by the way King Hezekiah instructed the priests and levites to sanctify or purify their own hearts before ever commencing the cleansing of the Temple or calling the nation to seek God. We can learn much from studying this example of a down to earth springclean which preceded a mighty spiritual cleansing.

Do we feel at this time that we are in danger of being sullied by the filth of the world? Is your local church as clean and neat as befits the house of God? Is the temple of your heart pure and free from the pollution of this age? As an assembly of believers, are you upright in heart as were the levites (2 Chronicles 29:34)? Have worldliness, slackness, and a general lowering of standards crept in?

Thank God it is wonderfully possible that the evil filthiness of today may fill us with such revulsion as Hezekiah felt as he remembered his father's sinful ways. Hezekiah knew what had to be done to put the house of the Lord in order and to call the nation to repentance. When all was complete, great was the rejoicing, and the Bible tells us that God was behind the great scheme, for He had prepared the people, and their hearts and wills were in readiness. It became a day of new beginnings. The Temple was restored to beauty and order, its worship entered into a new dimension and, best of all, the people humbled themselves and many sought the Lord.

How I long that, in all our churches and in our personal lives, we, too, may have a mighty cleansing as we prepare ourselves to celebrate Easter and plan to attend the General Conference. Then I'm absolutely sure that God will hear our prayers from sanctified hearts and we shall experience a great revival.

Holiness is... Knowing God's Will

THIS is a most problematic area of the Christian life. Young people search feverishly for some assuring sign that they are in the place of God's choice and pursuing the goals that they believe God has set before them. The Christian life challenges the whole personality so that "to be in His will is better than success". How do you discover God's will? Are you left to the chance happening or a promise hurriedly extracted from a promise box? Perhaps to open the Bible at random will secure the golden text to send one confidently in the right direction?

Here are a few principles which will help you to live in the centre of God's will:

Think seriously. Some people are better endowed with intelligence than others, but all normal people have basic ability for carefully analysing and solving everyday problems. The human mind is created in the image of God. Although its thought patterns have become distorted by sin, there is still the possibility of perceptive and discriminating thoughts. In the world of science, where the unknown is considered to be a challenge rather than a catastrophe, scientists define the problem, consider their resources, do theoretical thinking, and then experiment until a workable solution is found. Christian, what about some hard, objective thinking? God places no premium on ignorance, but is pleased when His children use the power to think, which is itself a gift from God. The Bible declares that the Christian must possess a renewed mind (Romans 12:2). Someone has said that some mountains that we seek to move by faith can be moved with a pick and shovel! Young Christians, must think seriously. Some imagine that they have kissed their brains goodbye when taking the initial step of faith into the kingdom of God.

Examine your resources. A realistic attitude must be adopted. There are many things that one is not equipped to do, nevertheless each person is supplied with talents and abilities which can be dedicated to the Lord. God does not expect us to be other than what we are. A tone deaf person is unlikely to become a great musician. Except for a miracle, this person will have to find other areas of service and concentrate on other interests. The will of God is often to be found in these things that we do well. The Scriptures say, "Whatsoever you do in word or deed, do all to the glory of God". We must not look for the spectacular within the will of God. "Godliness with contentment is great gain".

Make the Bible the chart and compass. The will of God never contradicts the Word of God. The revelation of God regarding man and his relationship with his Maker have been recorded so that there is no need for anyone to live in doubt. If the Bible is practised as well as preached, it will provide those principles which lead Christians into complete fulfilment. It is dangerous when feelings, emotions, circumstances and experiences become the canons by which we determine the will of God. The Bible will not tell one where to live or where to work, but it will provide the principles that enable one to discover where Christian priorities lie. If the gospel must be preached to every creature, it seems criminal that a Christian should leave his home country to live in a land where there is a profusion of evangelistic ministry, even though he may justify his action with the words, "I feel that it is the will of God". The will of God is evangelism; each Christian must discover his optimum effectiveness.

Talk to God in prayer. The psalmist requested: "Teach me Thy way, O Lord, lead me in a plain path, because of mine enemies". Prayer must be offered to God in a positive way. Having committed the matter to the Lord, allow Him to inspire your thinking and arrange the circumstances. God's answers are not always "yes". Sometimes God says "no", or "wait". The overriding factor in prayer is that God's will should be done. This eliminates one's personal desires and ambitions. It establishes the nature of the motive. Jesus said, "When thine eye is single, thy whole body also is full of light" (Luke 11:34).

Ensure that one's will is surrendered to God. Jesus claimed: "My judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent Me". (John 5:30). The stubborn will presents the biggest barrier to an understanding of God's will. How can God reveal His way to one who has already made up his mind to take a certain course of action? Prayer is too often a request for God to "rubber stamp" one's desires. Our Lord promised: "if any man will do His will he shall know".

Ask advice from reliable Christian friends or counsellors. "Where no counsel is, the people fall: but in the multitude of counsellors there is safety" (Proverbs 11:14). There are good Christian counsellors to be found in every area of life. Some who occupy business and professional situations speak with knowledge, expertise and wisdom. Many a spiritual "hang up" has a practical earthly solution. Pastors, elders and deacons provide a source of helpful counselling, though it is always advisable to discuss the matter with parents first.

Be at peace in heart and mind. When the matter

Luke 22:14-38

"The Lord. . . Simon. . . Satan" (v.31).

HERE we meet Peter, his Friend, and his Foe. What Peter said (v.33) and what followed are deeply humbling to man's pride, but very instructive. Peter's experience shows that we do not really know ourselves, so it is not good to rely overmuch on our strength or prowess. We little know how feeble we are until we are tried. However, Jesus had a word for Peter (v.32); there is a constancy about His love and care that really is startling. Jesus knows our danger, for He knows our Foe, and the Devil will not win, for, as to Peter He pledged His prayer, so to all His children He ever lives to plead for us above (Hebrews 7:25).

Tuesday, April 9th

Luke 22:39-53

"An angel. . . strengthening Him" (v.43).

AS the Son of Man, our Saviour endured weakness, fears and pain like other men. Here we have the Father's answer to our Lord's prayer (v.42). The cup that He must drink could not be removed, but strength to enable Him to drink its bitter dregs was sent. This is the way in which all true prayer is answered. God does not always give what we ask, but what will best serve His plan for our lives at the time. Jesus made use of the answer He received; He "prayed more earnestly" (v.44). Paul also used the answer God gave to him: "My grace is sufficient for thee. . . Most gladly therefore will I . . . glory in my infirmities". (2 Corinthians 12:9).

Wednesday, April 10th

Luke 22:54-71

"Peter denied Him" (v.57); "remembered" (v.61); "and wept" (v.62).

PETER's fall was the sad fruit, now ripening, of a heart that was as rash as it was over-confident. His sin was not intentional, not planned; he really loved Jesus sincerely. He simply played into the Devil's hands because he ignored His Master's advice (v.31). He overestimated his own strength, so there followed "sleeping" instead of "praying" (vv.40, 45). "He followed afar off" (v.54), mixed with the wrong crowd (v.55), and found himself doing what he regretted. Peter fell and he knew it (v.62), but falling down is not failure; failure is staying down. With the help of His Master, he got up to become a power for good and for God (Acts). Repentance and faith can work wonders.

Thursday, April 11th

Luke 23:1-25

"And they began to accuse Him" (v.2).

THERE is nothing so hard to bear as undeserved blame, nothing which causes deeper feelings of indignation than to be falsely accused. It is hard for us imperfect creatures, so how much more deeply would the Son of God feel the rudeness and insolence of those around Him? In one second He could have stopped for ever those venomous tongues. In an instant He could have banished them all to the flames of hell. Instead, with divine dignity, He made no defence, but, on trumped-up charges, He allowed Himself to be condemned to death. Read this portion prayerfully and quietly reflect today on the shame heaped upon our Saviour. Then remember that it was for us, "For the Lord hath laid on Him, the iniquity of us all" (Isaiah 53:6).

Friday, April 12th

Luke 23:26-43

"Father, forgive them" (v.34).

FULFILLED to the very last are the words of the prophet: "He made intercession for the transgressors". (Isaiah 53:12). Here are the wonder and the glory of Christ, that His heart held no bitterness, His tongue spoke no railing accusation against those who inflicted cruelties on His blessed person. Here too we are shown that clear dividing line that sets Him apart from other men. Men of the world hold hate and seek for revenge, but Christ and those who are His bear reproach and persecution with patience and prayer. No other religion teaches men to pray for the forgiveness of their enemies; no other religion sets for its followers such an example. As Barclay writes, "There is nothing so lovely. . . as Christian forgiveness", but, sadly, he goes further: "and there is nothing so rare". Let us pray: "Let this beauty be seen in me".

Saturday, April 13th

Luke 23:44-56

"The veil. . . was rent in the midst" (v.45).

SPLENDID to look at, beautifully embroidered, the blue, purple and scarlet veil separated the Holy of Holies from the Holy Place. Suddenly, as Christ cried out and died on the cross, the veil was torn from top to bottom. What did it mean? To the priests offering the evening sacrifice it confirmed what Christ had cried from the cross: "It is finished" (John 19:30). Sacrifices had come to an end, for one great sacrifice had been made and accepted (Hebrews 9:26). To us, it says that the great High Priest has passed into the heavens with His own atoning blood. The veil that shut man out from God is no more. There is a way to God open to all who believe (Hebrews 10:19-22).

Many wives? Any wives? One wife?

"MAN is a polygamous animal," wrote a man with three wives. "Animal" is the key word.

My sometimes host has three wives. A man of no particular faith, he has come near to the kingdom, and yet may enter in. With an abundance of this world's goods, wives are a prestige symbol. I, so happily married, and for so long, to the wife of my youth, study his household. One wife, his first I believe, occupies another home 400 miles away. The two with whom I come into contact are apparently aged about twenty-five (the younger) and thirty-five (the senior wife). It seems that there is a duty wife who serves visitors, but she is not the hostess in any sense. She never eats with us. There is no purdah and no veil, but the main room is the man's domain. When my host comes home, the children run out to meet him. The wives are very cool; they do not even know where he has been for the last two to ten days. When leaving, I usually give my host a present for the duty wife. This is my own idea, as I cannot return their care. He may stay with me, but they never travel with him. The ties that hold them together are weak. He may put her (them) away. She (they) would return to her (their) people. The eight children all belong to him. His brother, an Elim minister in Tanzania, is often absent from his home. Being teased that his wife would run off with another man, he replied, "Without God, yes, but the bonds of Jesus Christ are not easily broken."

My friend, the Wazaramo chief, had four wives well dispersed around his kingdom, diplomatically chosen from the sub-chiefdoms. "They cannot quarrel," he laughed, "they are too far apart".

It was a privilege to be so esteemed by our Masai hosts, that they would have provided us with a "wife" each for the duration of our stay, this being a normal courtesy to a blood brother, but the blood which had brought us so close was not shed from our mutual wrists. Had the men understood the cleansing power of His blood in the lives of their wives, they would have shrunk from such an offer. The warriors scorned me: "He's rich enough to own a Landrover, but he has only one wife," they commented. The Landrover disposed of for cows would give me twenty wives, they pointed out. When I suggested that my wife might object, they retorted, "What has it got to do with her?" What indeed if you take away our Lord's teaching? He alone emancipated womenkind.

The neighbouring Catholic mission was staffed by two priests and two nuns. As they travelled, dispensing medicine, it was plain for all to see that one young priest and one of the sisters enjoyed each other's company; they seemed made for each other. One day I exclaimed in public, "Why doesn't he marry the girl?" My words were reported to him, poor man. I should have known that his man-made bonds could not restrict his desire for affection, nor negate the consent of his heart to God's Word, "It is not good for man to be alone."

Remember, when you look for another wife, or at another man's wife. "Hardness of heart — Adultery", said our Lord. "Animal", confessed the polygamist. "The bonds of Jesus Christ are not easily broken," declared an African Elim minister.

KNOWING GOD'S WILL —from page 18 has been fully and prayerfully investigated, leave it in the hands of the Lord. "Be careful (anxious) for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God" (Philippians 4:6). The restless, agitated, worried Christian is not waiting patiently. One must possess the peace of mind that Peter knew when he languished in prison. He was able to sleep despite the inevitable sentence of death that awaited him. He slept so soundly that the angel who was sent by God to deliver him had to strike him to awaken him from his sleep of faith.

Luke 24:1-12

"He is not here, but is risen" (v.6).

WHAT a message this is! Well might the world rejoice, for this message is noe for hope. Jesus said on numerous occasions that He must die, but that He would rise again (Matthew 16:21; John 2:19), but few, if any, believed Him. They even brought spices to anoint His body, but it wasn't there — He was risen! Hallelujah! Jesus is not dead; He is very much alive, the conqueror of sin, death, hell and the grave. He wants us to share in His victory.

Editorial

THE beginnings to the Epistles are tremendous. They so often reveal the lofty sense of vocation which motivated the ministry and message of the authors. There was no human appointment to office, nor was it self-sought aggrandisement; they were deeply aware of the divine compulsion and power, for which they were literally and experientially men sent from God.

At this Easter, the greeting of Paul at the start of his Epistle to the Romans is particularly relevant and encouraging. He refers to himself in the words, "Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God" (v.1). Before he makes any further remark concerning his calling, which he deals with in the first person plural ("we" not "I"), you are down to v.5. The part between is typical of the marvellous parentheses ("the lovely bits in brackets" I heard them called!) which characterise so much of Paul's writings. The expression "the gospel of God" in v.1 sparks off the glorious things of vv.2-4. Typically again, Paul's statements mount higher and higher, like the climax to a symphony. No politician's peroration was ever like this! Old Testament revelation culminating in splendid New Testament truth combine to make the calling sublime.

We must not miss either the reminder that "the gospel" is no limited, stylised presentation of a few facts. We cannot be satisfied that we have "preached the gospel" if we force every expression of it into a mould of but a section of the truth, however important, not to say vital, that section is. The "gospel of God" is the whole revelation of redemption. If you preach the gospel the whole Bible is your field, reference book, source and inspiration.

It is especially the resurrection which we highlight just now, however. "Declared ('determined'—margin) to be the Son of God with power according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead" (v.4) is the glorious unveiling of truth. He was the Son, yet Scripture says, "Though He were a Son, yet learned He obedience by the things which he suffered" (Hebrews 5:8), so His pilgrimage and Calvary were fundamental to the Gospel. So was the resurrection, though, for it raised Christ to a unique place—unique, not being one among many, some or even few—for He is the only Saviour.

You may be a witness in a tough situation—one of the mission fields, Ulster, a difficult city or lonely outpost. Edify yourself! You are taking the gospel of God, the whole stupendous revelation of truth in Christ, who is the Truth.

Jesus is alive—hallelujah! You are his servant!

FUNDAMENTAL BELIEFS OF THE ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH — 1. THE BIBLE: We believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God and that none may add thereto or take away therefrom except at their peril. 2. THE TRINITY: We believe that the Godhead eternally exists in three persons: Father Son and Holy Ghost and that these three are one God. 3. THE CHURCH: We believe that the Church consists of all persons who have been regenerated by the Holy Ghost and made new creatures in Christ Jesus. 4. THE SAVIOUR: We believe that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God and that through the death and risen power of Christ all who believe can be saved from the penalty and power of sin. 5. THE HEALER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Healer of the body and that all who will walk in obedience to His will can claim Divine Healing for their bodies. 6. THE BAPTISER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Baptiser in the Holy Ghost and that this Baptism with signs following is promised to every believer. 7. THE COMING KING: We believe in the personal and pre-millennial return of our Lord Jesus Christ to receive unto Himself the Church and afterwards to set up His Throne as King. 8. THE FRUIT: We believe that every believer on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour should produce the ninefold fruit of His Spirit: Love joy peace longsuffering gentleness goodness faith meekness temperance. 9. THE GIFTS: We believe that the Church should claim and manifest the nine Gifts of the Holy Spirit: Wisdom knowledge faith healing miracles prophecy discernment tongues interpretation. 10. THE MINISTRY: We believe that God has given some apostles and some prophets and some evangelists and some pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry for the edifying of the Body of Christ. 11. THE FUTURE STATE: We believe in the eternal conscious bliss of all true believers in Christ and also in the eternal conscious punishment of all Christ rejectors. 12. THE ORDINANCES: We believe in the following ordinances: Partaking of bread and wine in memory of our Lord's death baptism by immersion for believers the laying on of hands and the anointing of the sick with oil.

The Stone was rolled away

"And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great" (Mark 16:4).

THE resurrection of Jesus Christ is basic to Christianity. It is more than a statement of belief; it is the cornerstone of faith and the key to all reality. This fact lifts Christianity beyond mere ethics and relevance. The great truths of Christian doctrine, such as justification by faith, the forgiveness of sins and Pentecost, can have no credibility outside the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

The reality of His rising from the dead gives assurance to the personal faith of every true Christian. There is more positive evidence for the historical fact of the resurrection than for many other facts of history, but, more than this, the evidence of the resurrection is seen in every changed life and in every spiritual blessing in Christian experience.

The Evidence of His Resurrection

The Testimony of His Times

The miraculous in the earthly ministry of Christ adds feasibility to the resurrection. His miraculous power extended into the realm of creation as He mastered the wind and the waves; into the realm of providence as He fed a multitude from next to nothing; into the realm of human need by His miracles. He gave sight to the blind, cripples were healed and those whose bodies were racked with disease and pain were delivered. It is not feasible that such a ministry and that such a Man should slip from the scene of time after barely three and a half years of public ministry. He who raised the dead — and this was known not only to His friends, but also to His enemies, for in the village of Bethany the inhabitants were witnesses of the raising of Lazarus — could not remain a prisoner of the tomb. The Lord spoke of His resurrection, declaring that He would rise again. Either this was true or false. If it were false, then we can place no credence on anything that Jesus said or taught. The whole structure of faith in the Word of God would collapse.

The Testimony of His Friends

Critics of the resurrection have suggested that the appearances of Jesus after His resurrection were hallucinations or mental images forced into the consciousness of men deprived of their Leader, on whom they had depended so much. It can be seen easily that no such criticism is valid. He appeared to His friends sometimes singly, at other times in groups, and on one occasion to over 500 men at once. The circumstances of each appearance were very different. At times it was in a room; on another occasion they were walking along a road. He stood by the sea shore in the brightness of one early morning. This was no trick of the light, but the triumph of a resurrected Christ.

The Testimony of His Enemies

The credibility of the resurrection is given new strength when it is realised that His enemies, who stood most to gain from His death, present the most startling evidence of His resurrection. The events recorded in Matthew 28:11-15 are staggering in their implication. The Roman guard became paralysed by fear and later told the Jewish religious authorities what had transpired. Such was the resultant consternation that the priests had to plan a story that the body of Jesus had been stolen, bribing the guards with money and taking steps to ensure the safety of the guards in the supposed failure of their guard duty. The priests' plan presupposes the fact of the resurrection and when Matthew recorded the events thirty years after they had occurred, the same story was still in existence, for he stated: "to this day". Years later, King Agrippa when confronted by the Apostle Paul knew of the fact of resurrection. It is clear that the priests' story had no credence even among the enemies of Jesus Christ.

The Testimony of the Facts

We are confronted with one basic question: Who moved the stone? The stone sealed the tomb, which was guarded by Roman soldiers. It was sealed with the official seal of Rome, making it impossible for anyone to steal the body without the connivance of the guards, as the priests tried to say. This stone was to large that three women could not move it. On their way to the sepulchre they wondered who was going to roll away the stone for them. It would be impossible to move it from the inside even for a strong healthy man, bearing in mind that three women could not move it from the outside. The man whose body had been laid there had been tortured, crucified, stabbed by a spear which left a wound large enough for a man's hand to be inserted, and left sealed in this cavern for three days. Prior to His body being taken from the cross, soldiers who were experts at such executions had certified Him dead. We can only ask again, "If Jesus Christ was not raised, who moved the stone?"

One of the most dramatic changes in the events of this time was in the attitude of the disciples. Prior to having seen the Lord, they were fearful, so nervous of any intruders that they locked the doors of the room where they were. Yet after His resurrection and subsequent to the anointing of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost, these same men moved the world. Fearlessly they went everywhere preaching the Word. The resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead became the basic factor in Christian truth.

The Implications of the Resurrection

It is impossible to recognise that Jesus Christ is risen from the dead without also realising the implications. In 1 Corinthians 15 there is a fourfold declaration of them.

Firstly there is the declaration of hope (v.14). Christ is alive, and therefore there is hope, hope of the mercy and the grace of God. The words of Jesus, "Father, forgive them" are more than a sentiment of deep pathos expressed by a dying Man. Through the resurrection they became the expression of the mercy of God to us. Without the resurrection, hope is an unreachable objective in the swirling mists of uncertainty.

Secondly there is the declaration of forgiveness. There can be no forgiveness without the resurrection, for sin is an offence towards God and only a living Saviour affords hope from the wrath of God. The Scripture declares that we are saved by His life.

Thirdly there is the declaration of comfort (v.18). To be bereaved is in the natural to plunge into total despair, into a darkness that is impenetrable and without even the faintest glimmer of light. "But now is Christ risen from the dead" and through the resurrection "we sorrow not as those who have no hope".

Fourthly it is our declaration of peace (v.19). The resurrection takes our hope beyond this world, beyond the limits of the finite, beyond the tumults of international, national and local problems, for our hope is in God. The living Christ gives peace of mind and heart to all who trust Him.

The Impact of the resurrection

Because Jesus Christ is alive the reality of God is relevant in every part of our human experience. Jesus Christ lived among us as a man among men. He shared every problem and every difficulty. He knew the sorrows of a lowly birth. As a child refugee He knew the cruelty of Herod, sharing the agony of every displaced person as He lived in Egypt as a fugitive from His own land. In His manhood He shared the tiredness of the labouring man and knew the problems of the poor and of the deprived. The plight of the homeless was part of His experience, for the Bible declares, "Every man returned to his own house, but Jesus went to the Mount of Olives". The impact of the resurrection upon our experience is to present a real Jesus, living, vital and relevant. Spiritual life is given new perceptions and our personal life is endued with a new power so that the thralldom of sin is broken by a new experience. A new fellowship is brought into our social life and our family life knows a new union through the relevance of the resurrection.

Our reaction to the resurrection must be one of faith. Intellectually the resurrection cannot be disproved. The facts and evidence show clearly that something tremendous occurred that first Easter morning. Morally the resurrection cannot be denied, for there are untold millions of lives that have been changed, not by an idea or a system of ethics, but by a personal contact with a living Saviour. Spiritually the resurrection cannot be disowned, for it is the cornerstone of faith and the foundation stone of all Christian doctrine. We must believe that the living Christ is present, to save, to heal and to bless. The simple majesty of the words recorded in Matthew stand up in stark contrast to so many of the ideas of man: "And the stone was rolled away".

Thoughts from the Book of Exodus

1. "A new king . . . which knew not Joseph" (Exodus 1:8)

by F. Lavender,
Pastor of our Croydon Church

THE nation of Egypt was dominated for many years by the wise, godly Joseph. After his death, his memory was revered for some time by the Egyptians and, for Joseph's sake, they dealt kindly with Israel. Then came a disaster for Israel, because a new Pharaoh came to the throne. He had no respect for Joseph's memory and he regarded the Israelites as a source of cheap labour. The Egyptians began to treat the Israelites with malicious cruelty. Benevolence was replaced by a harsh, murderous slavery.

We recall that the purpose of God for Israel was Canaan not Egypt, but Israel had settled down comfortably in the best part of Egypt. They went into Egypt to escape the famine, but had afterwards lost the vision of their divine calling. The Lord, therefore, permitted the new Pharaoh to arise for three reasons: to stir up in Israel a longing for deliverance (Deuteronomy 32:11); to cause Israel to trust Him by signs and wonders (Deuteronomy 8:18, 19: 8:3, 4); to reveal His power and glory to Pharaoh and the nations (Romans 9:17). We see, therefore, that the Lord was with Israel in delivering them from famine and in causing them to prosper in Egypt, but, when they lost the vision of His call, He was with them in adversity and bondage. In all circumstances He overruled in order to fulfil His promise and purpose for Israel.

We are still inclined to think that prosperity shows that God is with us, but that trouble and adversity prove that He has turned from us or has even let us down. Our first thought from Exodus is that prosperity and adversity are equally His servants (Philippians 4:12, 13). Through both He seeks to fulfil His loving purpose for us. He has proved for ever His love for us and His power toward us by the gift of His Son, for if He has given His beloved Son for us, then whatever He permits will be for our good (Romans 8:28, 32). Let us humbly trust Him to perfect that which concerns us.

What is there in it for me?

by A. S. F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

"DOES it make any real difference whether He is dead or alive? This all took place 2,000 years ago — so what?"

It makes a great difference to every one of us today and in the future whether Jesus is dead or alive. There is no doubt whatsoever that the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead is the most important event in the history of this old world. The whole alphabet of human hope lies in this fact, that Jesus Christ is still alive and is a living Saviour, sitting on the right hand of God, praying for us, as Paul said in Romans 8:34. "Christ is sitting at the right of God. Keep your mind on things above" (Colossians 3:1).

If you have taken Him as Saviour and made Him the Lord of your life, "you have died, and your life is hidden with Christ in God. When Christ your Life appears, then you too will appear with Him in glory" (Beck). This would be impossible if Christ did not rise from the dead.

Hebrews 1:2-4 shows us Christ in all His glory: "brightly reflecting God's glory, and is the exact representation of His being", of whom God said, "My Son art Thou". "Let all God's angels worship Him" (W.T.). We are not charged to worship a dead Christ, but a living Christ who has shown His power in conquering death, the great enemy of mankind, and He has power to conquer all our enemies. He is the great living Leader, Protector, Inspirer, Saviour and Guide of all His people. His life is our life. Our King is King of kings and Lord of lords. Of His kingdom there is no end, a kingdom that will triumph over all evil.

Canon Liddon said, "The resurrection of Christ is the certificate of our Lord's mission from heaven, to which He Himself pointed as a warrant of His claims".

He proclaimed Himself to the beloved John, saying, "I am He that liveth, though I was dead; and behold I am alive for evermore; and I have the keys of death and the grave" (Revelation 1:18, Jerusalem Bible). "I hold the keys"; the power, the authority, once in the hands of our enemy, the Devil, is now in the hands of Jesus, our wonderful and great Redeemer. He has released, set free, "those who through this whole life were subject to slavery through the dread of death" (F.F.).

This glorious message of a risen Christ brought persecution to the Early Church. Paul, fired with this great theme, went proclaiming it to the ends of the earth. At Athens he "preached unto them Jesus and the resurrection". This is the new-born hope of all humanity and the supreme, final message of every Christian sermon. The message of the resurrection gives largeness and broadness to life. Everything we are and do has an influence and a meaning beyond the grave. The resurrection gives us assurance and takes away the darkness from the tomb and makes it the gateway to life. As A. Ware the hymnwriter puts it:

Lift your glad voices in triumph on high
For Jesus hath risen and man cannot die;
Vain were the terrors that gathered around Him
And short the dominion of death and the grave;
He burst from the fetters of darkness that bound Him
Resplendent in glory to live and to save.
Loud was the choir of angels on high
The Saviour hath risen and man shall not die.

Because Jesus lives, we look forward to the life beyond the grave as an essential part of our life, just as the college student looks forward to his graduation into real life for which he has been preparing. Larger spheres, grander opportunities, beckon. Heaven is before us. Here we learn the music of the angels and the deeds of Jesus. Because He lives, we live.

The doctrine of the resurrection was proclaimed by the Saviour Himself in the intimate and all-comforting words of His farewell sermon to His disciples in John 14. He gives us the wonderful revelation of the heavenly home — "In my Father's house are many mansions"; a blessed assurance of a true habitation for the resurrection body — "I go to prepare a place for you"; and the risen, glorified Christ gives us this great, glorious promise of a safe conduct to the heavenly Father's house, with many rooms — "I will come again and receive you unto Myself".

That is what there is in it for me!

"Helpers of the War"

6. Zadok the Priest

by Stanley Beresford, Pastor of our Blackburn Church

It is sad to note that many devout men in Israel forsook their king at a time when he most needed them and it is sadder still to realise that a number of his trusted priests joined in the rebellion headed by Absalom, the king's son. The fickleness of human nature, an easy prey to the deception of the enemy, will one day crown a man and the next day crucify him. Zadok the priest, however, remained true to David all the days of his life. In every trial and under every circumstance the son of Ahitub manifested his devotion to the king. He came over to David from the camp of Saul bringing with him twenty-two captains. He is described as a young man mighty of valour. Thus Zadok joined the company of those who were "helpers of the war" (1 Chronicles 12:28). His life from that time well expressed the sentiment spoken by Amasai in words of loving committal to the King: "Thine are we, David, and on thy side, thou son of Jesse: peace, be unto thee, and peace be to thine helpers; for thy God helpeth thee" (1 Chronicles 12:18).

He who shares the sufferings of his Lord will eventually be partaker of the glory. He who clings faithfully to Him in rejection will be exceeding joyful in His manifestation. "Wherefore", says Peter, "gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ". Consecration will be tested, devotion will be tried, but grace will give the enabling to go from strength to strength and victory to victory as we follow on to know the Lord.

We expect a bright tomorrow—

All will be well.

Faith can sing through days of sorrow—

All, all is well.

As David was hotly pursued by his treacherous son Absalom, he passed over the brook Kidron, a place where false altars and images were destroyed. Its name means "a black or dark place". David passed over this brook. It is called "Cedron" in the New Testament; our blessed Lord passed over it on His way to the cross (John 18:1). The whole country was weeping as David passed over. Zadok the priest was there with the ark of God, setting it down before him as if to assure him of the divine presence and protection of the Lord (2 Samuel 15:24). Zadok reasoned that the ark must go with Israel's true king, but the man after God's own heart said, "No, take the ark back to the city and if God delights in me He will bring me back to it". Even in rejection, sorrow and tears, David determined that the ark would abide in the place that he himself had prepared for it. Zadok obeyed the word of the king and, back in the city, he laboured with Hushai, David's friend, to end the rebellion and bring back the king. "To obey is better than sacrifice and to hearken than the fat of rams. Rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness as iniquity and idolatry" (1 Samuel 15:23). Zadok, whose name means "Righteous", was to discover the truth of the words later penned by Solomon: "In the transgression of an evil man there is a snare; but the righteous doth sing and rejoice" (Proverbs 29:6).

It is said by some, including Josephus, that Zadok was chief priest at the dedication of the temple when the priests could not stand to minister because the glory of the Lord had filled the temple, a rich reward indeed. Even richer rewards were to follow, for the blessings of the Lord to him and his family extend to all eternity. Not only did his sons occupy exalted positions in Solomon's reign, but the Lord especially mentioned them in connection with Ezekiel's temple of the future. They are seen as keepers of the charge of the altar: "These are the sons of Zadok among the sons of Levi, which come near to the Lord to minister unto Him" (Ezekiel 40:46) and "The sons of Zadok, that kept charge of the sanctuary when the children of Israel went astray from me, they shall come near to minister unto Me, and they shall stand before Me. . . They shall enter My sanctuary, and they shall come near to My table. . . they shall keep My charge" (Ezekiel 44:15, 16). Note carefully, "to minister unto Me", not "for Me", but "unto Me". These sons of Zadok are mentioned four times from chapters 40 to 48, each time with a pronounced blessing from the Lord. We live for the future whether we regard it or not. We need the enabling grace of God in these perilous yet momentous days.

The men who stood by David are still speaking to us today. Benaiah the warrior, "Built by Jehovah", suggests that we must be rooted and built up in Him, we must grow up into Him in all things and stand up for Him. Nathan the prophet, "Faithful", reminds us that we are to hold forth the faithful word. Zadok, "The Righteous One", teaches us to declare His righteousness in an unrighteous world. Thus shall we be, true "helpers of the war".

Our Lord is now rejected and by the world disowned, By the many still neglected and by the few enthroned. But soon He'll come in glory, the hour is drawing nigh; For the crowning day is coming by and by.

"Now therefore why speak ye not a word of bringing the king back?" (2 Samuel 19:10).

"They knew Him not"!

by Hugh Sawyer

"He appeared in another form unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country" (Mark 16:12).

WHY did those witnesses, so familiar with the face of Jesus in the flesh, fail to recognise Him when He appeared to them after He had arisen from the dead? The Gospels record several occasions when those who could not fail to recognise their beloved Lord on sight, actually did so! The question is WHY?

The popular conception of the physical appearance of Jesus is like the picturesque description, "The Fairest of ten thousand". A statement substantiated by the ancient historian Gentellus in a letter written to Tiberius Caesar during the earthly career of Jesus.

It is said that intense shock can turn a person's hair white overnight. Consider the agonising mental torture and the excruciating physical pain silently endured by the great-hearted, noble Jesus as He hung nailed to that rough cross at Calvary, with outstretched arms and pinioned feet, He who, through His unique, gently and love-embracing nature, was caused "to suffer more than any man". Was not this sufficient to turn His hair and beard as white as snow?

In John 20:14 we read that, outside that opened tomb, in the eeriness of the early morn, Mary saw Jesus standing, and she knew not that it was Jesus. She mistook Him for the gardener and only recognised the voice of Jesus when He whispered her name, "Mary". Probably the gardener was an absolute stranger to Mary, bearing not the slightest resemblance to Jesus, whom she knew so well. Why did she fail to recognise Him? Because His physical appearance was entirely changed!

Luke 24 portrays the grief-stricken Cleophas and his companion dejectedly trudging along the road to Emmaus discussing the tragic events that awful crucifixion day. Suddenly footsteps were heard behind them and a stranger drew near. It was Jesus, but they did not recognise Him. There was no need for Jesus to walk that dusty road. His ethereal body could now appear or vanish at will. Now material objects were no deterrent. Jesus made His casual approach so as not to startle His companions. Fully aware of their sorrowful despair, He nevertheless enquired the reason for their despondency, knowing that mental relief could be achieved by sharing troubles. After complying with His request they were amazed when this apparent stranger began to expound the Scriptures from Moses to the prophets relative to all things concerning Christ Jesus. They only knew that it was Jesus when, after accepting an invitation to the evening meal, He handed them the broken bread after blessing it and they saw the nail-prints in His hands. Thereupon Jesus vanished from their sight.

Why did they not recognise Jesus in the first instance? Mark 16:12 tells us, "He appeared in another form unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country". "Another form" signifies that His appearance was changed, not His body.

That same night they hastened back to Jerusalem where ten of the disciples (Thomas being elsewhere) were gathered with their friends. As they listened to Cleophas's dramatic account, Jesus suddenly stood in the midst of them. Consternation siezed them. They did not recognise Him. They were under the impression that a strange spirit had appeared in the room. Jesus convinced them that it was really Himself by showing them His pierced hands and feet. He ate some food, pointing out to them that He possessed what a spirit did not have: flesh and bones!

Peter and six companions went fishing (John 21). They toiled all night and caught nothing. Tired and weary, they turned about and made for the shore. There stood Jesus, unrecognised. Only after they had followed His instructions and cast their net to star-board, where it suddenly filled with a multitude of fish, did John know that the stranger was Jesus. Even after eating a meal prepared by Him, none dare to ask Him who He was, but in their hearts they knew.

Why did people fail to recognise the arisen Christ? Does the answer lie in Revelation 1:13, 14: "And in the midst of the seven candlesticks. . . One like unto the Son of man. . . His head and His hairs were white like wool, as white as snow"?

Wonderful Jesus

by S. E. Petts

"His name shall be called Wonderful" (Isaiah 9:6).

NEVER was anyone more suited to the name "Wonderful" than Jesus. His birth was full of wonders. So many details of it were precisely foretold. He was born of a virgin, the only one of all time. A star guided travellers to His birth-place and a heavenly choir's voices were heard on earth. His life was full of wonder, too, for He alone lived without sinning. He overcame storm and tempest, turned water into wine and walked on the sea. He healed sick men with a touch. By His teaching and perfect life He showed men the way of God. In His wonderful death He suffered reviling and mockery without recrimination and paid the price of the world's sin that man might be reconciled to God. His resurrection filled all who saw Him with wonder. He overcame all who attempted to confine His body in a tomb and finally ascended to heaven to pave the way for all who recognise Him as Saviour, the wonderful Lord.

Going, Going, G . . . !

by Michael W. Carr

OH LORD, I'm in distress, in fact the word to describe my exact feeling is despair. I have never sunk so low and been so disillusioned over circumstances. Everything, yes literally everything, seems to have gone wrong. The "working together" of Romans mocks my situation and God seems to be somewhere beyond an angry sky. I just wait for the next thunderbolt to fall, knowing that the present pain is so great that a little more will not matter. I am crumbling inside and all the vain platitudes from fellow saints are the mouthings of cold comfort. This adversity stretches into the distance in its vastness and my unbelief pushes it past the horizon. As I open my mouth to sigh my tongue is parched dry. "If only" is my constant theme. I languish in pity so thick that it sticks my feet in a morass of misery. Words hardly explain my state; they are inadequate to reveal the silent hurt that burns inside.

If I am honest, and honest I must be, I resent this thing called the will of God. I prayed for His hand to lead me into a walk that shines with love's sweet smile, expecting in my zestful hope that He would take me to transfiguration's mount. He took me to a valley so dark and drear that even music seemed out of place. Stark trees like dead fingers are my silent companions and ragged rocks my cold pillow. Hunched in stumbling weariness, slithering on slopes of shale, failing and fussing, moaning and groaning, bleeding and bothered and thoroughly shot through of every personal pride, I lay me down and weep until my soul is dry. Why God, oh why is this the way and not another? Must it be the dark and drear and not the bright and crystal clear? Will this poverty of joy lie like a shadow on my life much longer?

Lord, I cannot stand it. Enough is enough; turn on the lights and speak in the darkness. Change the chaos into peaceful order even if it takes six days, Lord. Begin now and do not leave it. Can't I nudge Your arm with my tears? Do these broken sighs mean anything to you? Won't You stop as You did to Blind Bartimaeus and speak with the voice of victory?

I understand, Lord, that You chasten those whom You love, but the pressure has been on for a long time now. There must be a difference between chastening and this. I'm bruised all over. You've left Your mark on my heart and head and I hate to think where else You will lay the stick. Is all this necessary? For I love, You know that, and I do try to follow You, You know that also. Then why this way which is so alien to all my inclinations and desires?

The Psalmist got the victory, so please teach me, Lord. He said, "I will praise the Lord no matter what happens" (34:1, NEB), yet I don't think that I can. Anyhow, it would take a superhuman effort, and I feel so terribly human at the moment. I've been down twice and the third time is coming up and the straws are fast disappearing: but perhaps that may be the answer. I have clutched at too many straws in the past and not at You. Hanging on to the hay can be pretty precarious. I think that I may be getting it at last, Lord. My grip has been on the transient things that have no substance outside time. It has been all vision and not faith. Because I could not see a way out I thought that there wasn't one. You're getting all the straws sorted out and burning them one by one. It's the heat from the fire that's causing all the pain. I'm too near the stubble and I've been reaching into the fire. The sunlight will succeed the shadow, the mountain the valley. While grumbling this matter over with You I failed to notice the terrain growing smoother and there is a suggestion of light on the horizon. It's changing, Lord, and I had hardly recognised it.

Covenant Hall, Stafford

Pause for Thought

HAVE you been round Spaghetti Junction in Birmingham yet? There the M6 meets the Aston Expressway and a host of other roads.

In America they have its equivalent. It is called the Chicago Loop. In the middle of this loop is located a church which is said to have on top of its steeple the highest cross in the world, but each day thousands of people pass it with scarcely a glance. One day, however, the traffic choked the Loop. A thousand people were jammed in the snarl up and in that jam they gazed upward at the cross on the church.

What made it different that day? There was a man on the cross cleaning it and this is what personalized it, making it attractive.

History's most famous cross has a man on it—and what a man—Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God! Because of it the "traffic" of the world stopped for a while. When Jesus signified to His disciples what sort of death He would die, this is what He said: "I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me" (John 12:32). Has that magnetism—that magnetism of the cross reached you yet?

Take time today to think of the cross and what it meant for Jesus Christ to die in your place.

"Behold My Hands and My Feet"

An Easter meditation by Ken Smith, Pastor of our Erdington, Birmingham, Church

He showed me His hands that were marred by my sinning,
He showed me His feet that were nailed to the tree,
I then saw His brow and His side deeply wounded,
And now I love Jesus and Jesus loves me.

"BEHOLD" the Master said. This must not be a fleeting glance or idle curiosity, but a constant gaze in reverent humility. The hymnist had the same idea when he wrote "When I survey the wondrous Cross" — i.e. surveying the height, length, depth and breadth of God's love as revealed in the cross. Picture the scene. The hope of the disciples had been buried in the stone-cold tomb and, for fear of the Jews, the doors were barred and bolted. Fear and frustration filled their hearts and minds. Then came Jesus!

His first word was "Peace", and His presence ensured it, but not before their minds were in even more turmoil. An angel, a ghost, a spirit — what was it? He knew their hearts. Doubtless with a gesture, He showed them His hands and His feet. "It is I myself" emphasises the deeply personal nature of it all. "It's really I", would be our way of saying these words. "I am Jesus, the One whom you loved and followed, and mourn" was the purpose of this invitation. Two of the senses are mentioned: touch and sight. He did not mention flesh and blood, but "flesh and bones", for His blood was shed on the cross.

Evidence of His Humanity

The genealogies in the Gospels of Matthew and Luke are not there without purpose; they established the historical reality of Jesus Christ and attested His humanity. In the early centuries of the Christian Church it was the person not the work of Jesus Christ which caused controversy, and understandably so, for the person gives value to the work that He did. His divinity and His humanity were challenged, and denied by some, and His humanity was questioned and denied even in Apostolic days. This is why John wrote, "Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God: And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God" (1 John 4:2-3) and, "For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an anti-Christ" (2 John 1:7). Read the opening verses of John's First Epistle. He emphasises the incarnation of the Son of God and mentions a number of senses that show that Christ's humanity was real: hearing, handling and seeing the living Word in the person of Jesus Christ, an extension of the prologue in John's Gospel, majestic words indeed: "In the beginning was the Word".

The reality of the person of Christ is the basis for fellowship among believers. We must have a Biblical conception of the Son of God if we are to have true, spiritual fellowship. Away with the present-day conglomeration of churches whose basis of fellowship is certainly not that of the person of Jesus Christ as revealed in the Word of God. He is man's perfect God and God's perfect Man. "God sent forth His Son, born of a woman" wrote Paul to the Galatians. "Found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself", he wrote to the Philippians. "One Mediator. . . the Man, Christ Jesus", he wrote to Timothy. "And without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh" (1 Timothy 3:16).

Hebrews 2:14-18 emphasises the fact and the necessity of Christ's humanity in fulfilling His high priestly ministry on our behalf. His hands knew the sweat and toil of the carpenter's bench and they were also healing hands, caring hands, for they lifted the children on to His knees in blessing. His feet trod the lanes of Israel in fulfilment of the Scriptures (Romans 10:15). Tired, hungry, thirsty, sorrowing, weary, poor, depressed, Christ knew the whole gamut of human experiences in the days of His flesh. "Jesus Himself" draws near in our trials, no-one else can.

Evidence of His Passion

In His sacrificial death His hands and feet were pierced. In the words of Lamentations 1:12, Christians have always seen a prophecy of the sufferings of the Messiah. I believe that P.S. Brewster went to see a man in U.S.A. who claimed to be the Christ. Mr. Brewster challenged the man to show him his hands. Of course he did not pass the test.

A priest was called to a dying Protestant woman. As he ministered the elements, she cried in horror and protest that he was an impostor, for her Priest bore the nail-prints in His hands. "I shall know Him by the print of the nails in His hands".

The only presence of man's handiwork in Glory will be the marks of His passion, a constant reminder of the cross and of the cost of our salvation. One could trace the sufferings of Christ through the Old Testament. For example, Psalm 22:16 records, "They pierced My hands and My feet", a graphic prophecy of His crucifixion, a method of execution not practised by the Jews. "The plowers plowed upon My back, they made long their furrows" (Psalm 129:3). Isaiah, the evangelical prophet, wrote, "By His stripes we are healed". Long and deep were the scars that the Saviour bore for us. (Isaiah 50:6). "Man of Sorrows, what a Name for the Son of God who came ruined sinners to reclaim, Hallelujah, what a Saviour!". His brow bore a crown of thorns and His side was pierced by a Roman sword. "But He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon Him, and with His stripes we are healed". The Roman Catholic Church makes much of the experiences of men and women who claim to exhibit in their bodies the marks of His passion. The experience is called "the stigmata". It must be a deeply emotional experience which causes this phenomena, though some would give them more sinister implications. For me, they have no spiritual value or purpose, unlike the words of Paul who claimed that "in his body" he bore the "marks of the Lord Jesus" for he had endured so much on Christ's behalf. It is His wounds, not theirs, that we remember in the Communion service, for there is supreme value and purpose in His wounds. Discerning the Lord's body is in that we seek to understand the sufferings of the Saviour at Calvary.

Evidence of His Victory

After the cross He made this invitation to His disciples. He was no ghost, angel, or spirit. "He shewed them His hands and His feet", for their evidential value was vital. He took the food that they gave Him, not that He needed it; the evidential value of the action inspired His request. As the fish and the food were real, so was He — so is He. "He did eat before them" speaks volumes. John's account reveals that He appeared to the disciples and that "He shewed them His hands and His side". The result was: "then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord". Thomas was missing; he was the exception who took exception to their joy in saying, "We have seen the Lord". Notice the marks of genuineness, for Thomas spoke of the finger, the print of the nails and his hand in Jesus's side. He was a realist and he had to be convinced. Christ bore with his credulity, though He commended the faith of those who believe. "He lives within my heart" gives tremendous assurance to the individual believer, but we believe in a physical resurrection, for Christ made an appointment beyond the grave, in Galilee with His followers, and He kept it!

"Many infallible proofs" writes Luke in the Book of Acts concerning His resurrection, and His hands and feet were proofs indeed of His glorious victory over death. What supreme irony, "that through death, He might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil, and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage" (Hebrews 2:14, 15). His followers were convinced and were willing to die and live for Him. An agnostic was approached by a young man eager to found a new religion. "Just die, and rise again on the third day", was his nonchalant reply!

As Ascension Day broke, His Hands were raised in blessing and benediction. They would see, even then, the nail-prints caused by their sin and ours.

Even His return will include His hands and feet. Read Revelation 1:7. Zechariah predicts that the nation of Israel will ask "What are these wounds in Thine hands?". "Wounded in the house of His friends" is the tragedy of it all, for "He came unto His own, and His own received Him not". That this is a Messianic reference is abundantly clear, for Zechariah goes on to speak of the smitten Shepherd and the scattered sheep, predicting the desolation of the cross. Eternity will never erase the marks of His passion. Even His hair is prematurely white, as seen in the Book of the Revelation. Even in glory His wounds will be eternally remembered.

Remember them NOW.

The Awakening

"We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump."
— 1. Cor. xv 51, 52.

Ev'ry bud and leaf doth peep,
Waking from the winter's sleep;
Gratefully to God they raise
Silent, yet unceasing praise;
Oh that men would praise the Lord
For the joy His works afford!

These glad heralds of the spring
To our hearts sweet mem'ries bring;
See! from hedgerow, flow'ring lea,
Verdant wayside, woodland tree,
Resurrection glories shine,
Quickened by a Hand Divine.

'Twas the same almighty power
Did unfold the tiny flower;
Raised the One who died to save,
From the power of the grave;
God, whose claims were satisfied,
Loosed Him from the death He died.

Shall the grave for ever claim
Those who sleep, who loved His Name?
Let the hosts of hell combine,
None the grave shall e'er confine,
When His glory fills the skies,
When His voice shall bid them rise.

Glad in faith's calm rest of late,
Precious loved ones quietly wait;
Death has laid them 'neath the sod,
But their life is hid with God
Till the coming of the King,
Till the everlasting Spring.

We shall all the Bridegroom meet,
Re-united, changed, complete;
Tho' it doth not yet appear,
As we pass from year to year,
'Tis decreed; and thus we rest
In His faithful Word full blest.

B. FELL.

Church Reports

SWINDON

Pastor: W.R. McKibbin

"SWINDON goal-keeper refused to play", said the Daily Express, "Jimmy won't play on Sunday".

Jimmy Allan, nineteen years old goal-keeper for Swindon Town A.F.C. refused to play football for the club on Sundays on religious grounds.

Jimmy attends our Church every Sunday evening. He is a really good Christian who takes a firm stand for the Lord among his club mates. Some little time ago he turned up to the prayer meeting with three other Swindon professional footballers. He always puts the Lord first. He belongs to the Free Church of Scotland. He never comes to Church without his Bible carried openly under his arm.

OTLEY

Pastor: M.R. Hodson

WE estimate that there were about seventy people present for the induction of our new Pastor, the congregation overflowing outside our small hall on to the landing. Support came from Middleton, Rochdale, Halifax, Harrogate, Rotherham and, of course, Otley itself. Derek J. Green (Bradford) preached and Peter Smith (D.S., Rotherham) convened and conducted the induction. The Church Secretary (Mr. George Pullan) gave a welcome to the new pastor on behalf of the church.

C.E. LAMB

Crowns

Words: Archie Biddle
Drawing: John Gregory

YOU have all heard of and maybe have even seen the Crown Jewels which are usually kept in the Tower of London. I wonder how much they are worth in these days? They are not only marvellous pieces of design and beauty, but their value is greatly increased because they are used by the Queen on special occasions.

The real value of the Crown Jewels is not so much what they are worth, but in the way that they are used. Jesus wore a crown of thorns which was of very little value, but He did wear them as a crown. In that act He is remembered all over the world in every century.

Paul refers to the Isthmian games which were held every three years at Corinth. (1 Corinthians 9:24, 25). Each competitor trained for ten months and, after all that, if he won he was crowned with the victor's pine wreath. In our day motor-racing drivers are crowned in the same way. The value of these crowns is very small, but they point to great victory and triumph.

A lady went to Paris for a holiday during which she was taken seriously ill. In her weakness she lost her speech except for one word, which she kept repeating over and over again. It was the word "bring". The friends around her kept bringing her fruit and flowers and all the things that we usually take to sick people, but she still kept saying "bring". They were at their wits' end and wondered what she wanted. One day she sat up in bed and said with a strong voice, "Bring forth the royal diadem and crown Him Lord of all". You see she thought of Jesus as her King of kings and as the One who had been victorious over sin and sickness and death, so she wanted to crown Him as her Lord and Master. Someone has said that unless we crown Jesus as Lord of all we do not crown Him Lord at all. Jesus must be Lord in every part of our lives, not only in church, but at school and in our homes.

Here is the word the lady said: "BRING". Will you complete the sentence on your knees?

FIGHT EVIL

WITH A WILL!

Do not leave the distribution of your estate to chance. Here are some reasons why you should make a will:

1. It prevents misunderstanding over your intentions about your estate.
2. It provides opportunity for you to continue to exercise Christian stewardship.
3. It helps to avoid heavy expenses, which can sometimes drain away valuable assets.
4. It gives you opportunity to designate who shall benefit from your possessions.

You can show your gratitude for blessings received and also continue the fight against evil by making a gift to the Elim work in your will.

The following wording can be incorporated in a will or codicil:

I bequeath to the Elim Pentecostal Church, of 117 St. George's Road, Cheltenham, Glos, the sum of £ free of duty for the general purpose of its work, and I declare that the receipt of the Secretary-General for the time being shall be a good discharge for the said legacy.

Is it not better to know that your possessions will be used for the Lord's work rather than be spent by those who have never honoured or revered His name?

Points for Preachers

An Outline

Christ's Habit of Prayer

IT is significant that He prayed at all, He who had every form of strength essential to manhood, yet "it belonged to the reality of His human nature that He not only walked on this earth with firm footsteps, but also knelt upon it" (Jesus Christ the Teacher, W. A. Curtis).

Six occasions stand out:

1. For an open heaven and the Baptism with the Holy Spirit (Luke 3:21; Bagster's Gk. & Eng. N.T.—"active voice");
2. Because of Pressures and Demands made upon Him (Mark 1:35).
3. Before great decisions were made (Luke 6:12,13);
4. Before His Transfiguration (Luke 9:28,29);
5. In the Garden of Gethsemane (Luke 22:44; Hebrews 5:7).
6. On the Cross of Calvary: seven utterances, three prayers.

He left us an example (1 Peter 2:21).

A Quotation

Are you a Shouter, Brother?

A MINISTER, once addicted to bawling in the pulpit, made the discovery that the low tones are the most effective. He wrote, "I once thought it was the thunder that killed and now I know it is the lightning that does the execution. I mean to thunder less and lighten more".

An Illustration

Forgetful Green

"FORGETFUL GREEN is the most dangerous place in all these parts!" (Greatheart, in Christiana, J. Bunyan).

"WHEN I was threatening to become cold in my ministry, and when I felt Sabbath morning coming and my heart not filled with amazement at the grace of God, or when I was making ready to dispense the Lord's Supper, do you know what I used to do? I used to take a turn up and down among the sins of my past years, and I always came down again with a broken and contrite heart ready to preach, as it was preached at the beginning, the forgiveness of sins. I do not think I ever went up to the pulpit stair that I did not stop for a moment at the foot of it and take a turn up and down among the sins of my past life. I do not think I ever planned a sermon that I did not take a turn round my study table and look back at the sins of my youth and all my life down to this present; and many a Sabbath morning, when my soul has been cold and dry for lack of prayer during the week, a turn up and down in my past life always broke my hard heart again and made me close with the Gospel for my own soul before I began to preach".

(Thomas Goodwin, a Puritan, in a letter to his son).

Trees and Testimony

by Archie Nicolson

What a beautiful sight is presented by the trees which line the streets in some of our towns and cities, especially when they are in their Spring garments. Each morning as I stepped out of the house I would look up and down the street and ponder for a few moments on the loveliness which nature had given to an ordinary and very busy road. The houses were just the same, the traffic still maintained its hurried way and there were even parts of the road being mutilated, but somehow there was a wonderful enchantment about our road. It was due to the trees being in their full blossom.

This reminds me of Christians whose roots have gone down deeply into the soil of God's Word and whose lives have been well watered by the Holy Spirit. Their presence brings a fragrance and beauty to the oft-times drab, dreary round of daily existence which is the common lot of so many today.

There is no blossom on the trees now. The enchanting beauty did not last very long and the change took place almost overnight. One night the wind was very strong and in the morning the glory of the trees lay on the green verge, a rather untidy mess, to be swept up by the men of the borough cleansing department.

There is a lesson here for us. It has something to do with life's winds on our testimony.

Margaret M. Laddow's page

"The fellowship of His sufferings"

"JESUS hath now many lovers of His kingdom, but few bearers of His Cross. He findeth many companions at His table, but few of His abstinence. All desire to rejoice with Him, but few are willing to endure anything for or with Him. Many follow JESUS unto the breaking of bread; but few to the drinking of the cup of His passion. Many reverence His miracles, few follow the ignominy of His cross. Many love JESUS so long as no adversities befall them. Many praise and bless Him so long as they receive consolation from Him. But they who love JESUS for His own sake, and not for some special comfort, bless Him in all tribulation and anguish of heart, as well as in the state of highest comfort. Yes although He should never be willing to give them comfort, They notwithstanding would ever praise Him and wish to be always giving thanks".

So wrote Thomas à Kempis almost 500 years ago. His words ring just as true today and down the centuries there have been those who have not hesitated to bear the cross with all its shame and suffering. Such a one was Sam Pollard, missionary to the mountainous region of South West China and particularly to the Miao tribe.

In the year 1907 round about Easter time Sam Pollard set off accompanied by three Miao preachers to visit a village which was hostile to the gospel. He was 43 years of age, and on the 25 mile journey he wrote "How well I felt and how strong. I walked nearly all the way and enjoyed it. Little did I think that this was my last day of strength for a long, long time". On arrival at the village the travellers were given hospitality in one of the few Christian homes and then the villagers crowded to hear the gospel story. Many were nervous because of threats and fearful of trouble from the local Miao leader who had already persecuted the believers. After the service Sam Pollard and his companions settled down to sleep around the fire and at midnight they were roused suddenly and the rest of the night was an experience of unspeakable terror and near death.

Sixty men brandishing swords, staves and rifles, some waving torches, surrounded the hut and when the four Christian messengers showed themselves they were set on and the three Miao preachers were beaten to the ground. Pollard they led away and in the darkness he attempted to escape. Leaping off the bank at the foot of the hillside away from the village, he ran as fast as his legs could carry him over the uneven bed of the stream. Like a pack of hounds the crowd of men were after him, consequently giving the other Miao preachers chance to escape. With shouts of fury his persecutors were upon him and fell on him in the stream and with staves and poles tried to beat him to death. Then a miracle happened! A Chinese peasant who had followed the crowd threw himself over the body of Pollard, there in the stream. Even then some men with spears tried to get at the missionary. At last he was pulled to his feet and dragged to a nearby tree where, to complete the madness and cruelty of the night, the leaders of the mob began to try him. Finally his life was spared on condition that he left the district never to return and the crowd dispersed leaving Pollard at the foot of the tree.

In the darkness some friendly Miao crept up to his huddled body and gently bore him away to the mud hut he had recently left. There he lay on a rough bed. His ribs were broken, one lung was pierced and his body was bruised and torn. He was tasting the fellowship of Christ's suffering and he was to know many months of pain and weakness before a measure of health returned.

Recounting this story of one who did not hesitate to suffer hardship to win souls for Christ, I feel that he was truly identified with the sufferings of the cross. Like his Lord he was captured at night by evil and desperate men who were afraid of his message. He was beaten and then tried and praise God his ready acceptance of danger and suffering brought home to them the very heart of the gospel of redeeming love.

As Easter gladness fills our hearts may we remember the One who went to Calvary for us, and all the "noble army of martyrs" who did not shrink from persecution and death. Our afflictions are certainly light in comparison and no word of complaint should ever come from our lips.

The Prince of Life

by Eldin R. Corsie, National Youth Director

THE discoveries of scientists never cease to surprise us. Electronic marvels, medical achievements and space travel are the order of the day, but they do not even think about returning the dead to life! That would be a "miracle"! But that's just what Christianity claims to do — and it provides convincing evidence in the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

The Apostle Peter, addressing a Jerusalem audience soon after Pentecost, told the Jews that it was the Prince of Life whom they had killed and whom God had raised from the dead (Acts 3:15). Only here in the New Testament is He called "The Prince of Life", and we do well to ponder the implications of that title. The Greek word rendered "Prince" has proved to be a difficult one for translators. It occurs only in Acts and Hebrews and is variously rendered "Prince" (Acts 3:15, 5:31), "Captain" (Hebrews 2:10), and "Another" (Hebrews 12:2), for which Moffatt, uses "Pioneer", and Darby "Originator". The root meaning of the word is "one who is the initiator of anything as its source of leader". It is Jesus who has blazed the trail and shown men the path of true life and who leads them to its ultimate goal.

Christ is the Teacher of the nature of true life. He sought to correct men's erroneous ideas. Many today are inclined to estimate life by what they have — health, wealth, position, friends, easy circumstances. Our Lord taught that a man's life does not consist in the abundance of his possessions, but rather in how he acts and what he is. The essence of His teaching is found in this — that the true life is the life of the soul, not just the vitality of the body.

Once He was speaking in Jerusalem. Around Him were religious leaders in their manifest animosity. In the city bazaars and homes men and women engaged in various activities. Yet it seemed to Him as though He were in a vast metropolis, for death to Him meant, not just the separation of the soul from the body, but also the irresponsiveness of the soul to God. So He cried, "He that heareth My word and believeth on Him who sent me... is passed from death unto life". The sine qua non of real life was right relationship with the living God.

Christ is also the Fount of true life. John, in his Gospel and Epistles, emphasises this: "In Him was life and the life was the light of men"; again, "We have seen, and announce unto you, the life, the eternal life, which was with the Father and was manifest unto us". Indeed, Jesus Himself claimed to be "the Life", and the characteristics which were predominant in Him were holiness and love, and submission to and dependence on God.

He is the Imparter of true life. Through Him has come to man, not only a new revelation, but also new moral and spiritual power. Hugh Redwood's autobiography Bristol Fashion affords illustration of this. He was led out into a larger sphere of service, empowered to fulfil it successfully, and strengthened also to endure trouble and sorrow. The life of Jesus embraces every aspect of human existence. He transforms the personality and adds a new dimension. Those who have read The Cross and the Switchblade will appreciate the complete rescue operation that Jesus undertakes. It is the life that He imparts that makes the difference! It is always "more abundant" life.

Jesus Christ is the Resurrection as well as the Life. For all men, at the end of their earthly existence lies the experience of death. Even Jesus underwent it and His foes thought that it would be to Him a lasting prison-house. They found out that in His case it was but a tunnel from which He emerged. Such, too, will be the experience of all who follow Him as their Pioneer. An impressive utterance of His was: "If a man keep My saying, he shall never see death" (John 8:51). That does not mean that he will never die. The word used is not the ordinary one for "see", but one which implies such physical seeing as involves attention. We go down a busy street and see many individuals, yet we do not really notice them, unless perchance one is an acquaintance. The others pass by unheeded. So to Christ's followers death will be but a passing episode to which he will pay no special attention.

What a contradiction in terms is: "You killed the Prince of Life". Praise God, "Death could not keep its prey". He is the Pioneer of Life having taught us the way to live, He died and rose again to purchase our eternal life, ascended to the Father's right hand to impart that life and will soon return to consummate it.

Testimony Time

I HAVE had a very serious accident to my head. I had a fall on December 12th and had to have twenty-seven stitches. The doctor says that I was, as he put it, very "lucky" to be alive, but I told the doctor that it was an answer to the prayers of myself and the friends at church and others.

I can say that I was completely healed in three and a half weeks. The doctor said that it was a miracle, for it would have taken much longer in the ordinary way.

I give the Lord all the thanks and praise for a wonderful recovery.

Luke 24:13-35

"Jesus himself drew near" (v.15).

THIS story of a sad couple who had gone to Jerusalem full of hope and expectation (v.21), but who now were homeward bound, disenchanted and sick with disappointment, highlights for us what life is like. Some are naturally pessimistic in their outlook, but there are times when all of us are aware of feeling sad and spiritually lonely. Our expectation cut off, we are uncertain, unsure. Is this your experience today? At just such a moment, Jesus Himself drew near and dispelled their doubts and fears. Today He knows how we feel, how bitter are our disappointments — nor is He far from us. As a spiritual song proclaims, "He's only a prayer away". Has He not said, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee" (Hebrews 13:5)?

Tuesday, April 16th

Luke 24:36-53

"Repentance and remission of sins should be preached. . . but tarry. . . until ye be endued with power" (vv. 47,49).

HERE is the function of the Church: every member an evangelist empowered by the Spirit of God and engaged in spreading the gospel of Jesus Christ. As much as we all love the upper room experience of the first verses of this portion, our job is to get out into the world, to call men to repentance and to offer them forgiveness in Christ. Someone has said, "We must evangelise or fossilise". We are all making contact from day to day. Make sure that we are making contact for Christ. As we work for God, remember to wait on Him, for herein lies the secret of our strength (Acts 1:8).

Wednesday, April 17th

1 John 1:1-10

"That your joy may be full" (v.4).

THE angelic message was: "Great joy" (Luke 2:10). Jesus came to do us good, to bring us the joy of sins forgiven, peace with God, a home in heaven, the joy of friendship and fellowship with God and His Son our Saviour (1 John 1:3). John tells us here the secret whereby our joy may be full and complete (vv. 5-7). It is dependent upon our living in the light of God's presence. True Christian joy starts in God and can be maintained and increased only as we daily come into His light and willingly put ourselves under the influence and control of His Word, His cleansing blood and His Spirit.

Thursday, April 18th

1 John 2:1-11

"Ought to . . . walk, even as He walked." (v.6).

TO know Christ is a great privilege: to follow Him brings a great obligation — to walk as He walked. To some Christianity is to be able to rattle off texts. To others it is to be at every convention. John reminds us that, if true love for God burns in our hearts, then it will be carried through into our lives to such a degree that we will want to do the things that Jesus did. Christianity is living as Jesus lived. He delighted in His Father's will (Psalm 40:8). He went about ministering to the needs of others, caring for the outcasts of society (Acts 10:38). The proof that we are united with Him is when our lives are copies of His.

Friday, April 19th

1 John 2:12-17

"Love not the world" (v.15).

THIS verse does not mean that we are to withdraw ourselves and live like monks, nor does it suggest that we are to become spiritually aloof and isolate ourselves from ordinary, unbelieving people about us. John is concerned with Christians being caught up with and allowing the spirit of those who are in the world to influence their lives. The ruling motives of the world are set out in v.16. They are: pampering to our own fleshly appetites regardless of God or His Word; being taken up with and captivated by the things which are seen, forgetting that which is unseen; living to promote ourselves. These things are not of God and the man who makes them his life has no future, for "they pass away" (v.17). The Christian has a world of his own where Christ is the centre and the glory and the will of God his guide. This man, says John, "will live for ever".

Saturday, April 20th

1 John 2:18-29

"But the anointing. . . abideth in you" (v.27).

JOHN's reason for writing is clearly stated (v.26). In these last days there are countless ways in which Satan would seduce Christians and divert them away from God and the purpose that He has for our lives. Even mature Christians sometimes ask themselves, "Are we being led of God or tempted by the Devil?". The situation had been foretold (Acts 20:29,30) and was present in John's day as it is now (cf. 2 Timothy 3:1,13). How wonderful it is, however, to know that we can have confidence in our Christian lives, for we have "an unction from the Holy One" (1 John 2:20). This refers to the Holy Spirit, whose ministry enlightens, sanctifies, comforts and teaches us of all things. How important it is, then, that we should "abide in Him" (v.28).

A solitary red poppy

by H. Burton-Haynes

"Christ the first-fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at His coming" (1 Corinthians 15:23).

MY brother, thirteen years older than myself, volunteered to join the Army in 1914, but was rejected owing to defective sight. At that time he was the mainstay of the home, my mother being widowed in 1912, when my father broke his back in a great storm on board ship off the coast of New Zealand. In 1916 my brother was conscripted from the Westminster Bank in London. Within one week he was in France. No more time for training was possible, so desperate was the situation with the Germans planning an all-out offensive. Serving in the Royal Engineers he had just withdrawn from the trenches to the quietness of a Belgian village. Covered in mud and slime he walked into the soldiers' mess or cafe and ordered a cup of tea. A lad from the village, five years old, wandered in and picked up a revolver from the table. Not knowing that it was loaded, he pulled the trigger, there was a loud report, and the bullet hit my brother Claude in the temple. He died immediately. My beloved brother lies buried amid the poppies of Flanders.

That flower reminded me of our farewell. On our arrival in Torquay where we are now residing in an Elim flat so generously provided for retired ministers and where we are so happy, to welcome us to our new home a solitary red poppy was waving in the breeze to be followed later by a host of scarlet blooms.

That solitary flower was the firstfruits of all that flourished for several weeks in our front garden. Similarly the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ is the firstfruits of that great resurrection when all those who "sleep in Jesus" will be raised to share with Him the glory of His eternal kingdom.

When studying botany at Chelsea Polytechnical College for my pharmaceutical degree we had to learn the classification of flowers in relation to their respective families. The poppy in my front garden was derived from the family papaver, which grows wild in English cornfields and hedges, having brilliant, beautiful scarlet flowers with black stamens on slender stems and twice pinnate leaves. This poppy is the one species which is free from opium and is harmless. Opium is obtained from the cultivated scarlet poppy throughout the world.

Like the red poppy in my garden, which sprang from seed carried by birds, so in Christ we rise to a new life the moment we receive Him as our Saviour. The new nature that we receive is devoid of all sin, for we become "partakers of the divine nature". From Adam we inherited a nature full of poison, but thank God, we have been delivered from the "old man" and now are we "new creatures in Christ". This new nature is the firstfruits of our resurrection, when we will be changed into His likeness "without spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing", perfect in spirit, soul and body.

The solitary red poppy spoke of victory over death and stood there as the firstfruits of all those gorgeous scarlet flowers which came up in what was once an allotment; they were surrounded by weeds and cabbage plants that had gone to seed. Christ has returned from the dead to assure our hearts and to bring "life and immortality to light through the gospel". He is coming to welcome us to our heavenly home. The message of Easter is no empty myth, no old-wives' fable. It stands on well-attested facts; facts which are substantiated by the laws of nature, revealing the power of God as Creator and Redeemer. What a day of rejoicing when we shall be raised "incorruptible", united to Him and to those whom "we have loved and lost awhile", in bodies beyond the power of death to destroy.

"a drop in a bucket, dust on the scales" (Isaiah 40:15)—and how ungrateful and rebellious we have been—"leaving God's paths to follow our own" (Isaiah 53, Living Bible), "children of disobedience" (Ephesians 2:2), we may well be amazed at a love that would admit us to such privilege, rank and dignity as described here. To be regarded and treated as the "sons of God" is indeed an honour. Today remember that it is the gift of God's love and make it a subject of grateful reflection and a cause of thankful rejoicing.

*Behold, what love, what boundless love
The Father hath bestowed
On sinners lost that we might be Now called the Sons of God!*

SECOND City evangelism was the theme of a recent Conference held in the Graham Street Church, Birmingham. It was well organised and well attended. Papers were given by President-Elect George Canty and by Desmond Cartwright. Ken Smith introduced the intensely practical afternoon session. Evangelistic Committee members and others made excellent comments. A fine rally was held in the evening with a contribution from P.S. Brewster and a telling address by W. Ronald Jones.

Strangely, perhaps, a clause from a Scripture reading by Edward F. Cole challenged me deeply. "Warn them from Me", God said (Ezekiel 33:7). This steely, pointed shaft penetrated my thinking. Really, this is too relevant for comfort. Our so-called permissive society does not realise it and no doubt would not appreciate it, but it needs warning. Even newspaper reports of some cases and kinds, which we treat as everyday, would have caused a furore if they had appeared even a few years ago. Features appear, government-sponsored adverts. proliferate, commentators pontificate on subjects which are intensely personal and matters for individual conscience.

The worst thing, however, must be the awful, awesome fact that our generation has lost its sense of the sinfulness of sin — if it ever had such a sense. Our sympathy and pity are readily and rightly aroused in cases where serious illness goes undiagnosed or undiscovered until it is too late to effect a cure. "If only. . ." we sadly say, the while wringing our hands. You can understand why.

"Warn them from Me" — it really is a demand — and what an obligation! Life and death, heaven and hell are the issues with which we treat. There is none more vital. You can have everything else, but, if you do not get these things right, you do not have anything, in fact you have less than nothing. You are like the man who had not who had taken away from him even what he seemed to have — which was nothing.

Are we doing it? Do we tend to warn the converted concerning other people's sins? Yes, we are people of unclean lips dwelling among people of unclean lips, but should we not be trying to get our warnings through to those to whom they apply?—Are we bothered enough about getting through — "coming over", as they say — to the lost?

The urgency of it is undeniable. We must do it. We have to give account. Their blood is on our hands.

"Warn them from Me". It is shattering, shaking, fear-making.
But we've got to do it.

THE HEALER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Healer of the body and that all who will walk in obedience to His will can claim Divine Healing for their bodies. 6. THE BAPTISER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Baptiser in the Holy Ghost and that this Baptism with signs following is promised to every believer. 7. THE COMING KING: We believe in the personal and pre-millennial return of our Lord Jesus Christ to receive unto Himself the Church and afterwards to set up His Throne as King. 8. THE FRUIT: We believe that every believer on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour should produce the ninefold fruit of His Spirit: Love joy peace longsuffering gentleness goodness faith meekness temperance. 9. A report to celebrate 21 great years –and the opening of the new Bristol City Temple

Research: P. G. Parsons

IT all started with an Elim Pioneer crusade in 1952 when evangelists P.S. Brewster and Willard Cantelon hired the Colston Hall for a series of revival services. The result was so tremendous that it was decided to open an Elim Revival Centre in Bristol.

In September 1952, W. Ronald Jones left the Elim Church at Caerphilly to shepherd the newly-formed Bristol Church, which started with eighty registered members who enthusiastically met to worship the Lord in any hall that was available. The first baptismal service was held at Broad Weir Swimming Baths where over fifty converts were baptised. This memorable occasion was witnessed by scores of people and was reported in both local and national newspapers.

The new congregation grew numerically and spiritually even though they met in hired halls. It became obvious, however, that these arrangements could only be temporary. A building was needed that could be called home. No suitable land or building was available, despite many enquiries. The new Church and Pastor were not daunted; God had marvellously blessed thus far, would He not provide for the future? After several months, three sites became available, the largest and most central being in Jamaica Street. This was a narrow strip of land adjacent to an electrical components factory, too small for a building of any size. "If only we could get the factory next door", observed Pastor Ron Jones, "the two sites would accommodate a sizeable building". This prayerful wish turned into a glorious reality. Mr. Jones visited an estate agent before going home at the end of an apparently fruitless day to find that the electrical components factory was for sale for only £1,000. This building had been on the market for over twelve months, but God had reserved it especially for His work, certainly a miracle.

Next to this newly-acquired property and land there was a partly-built church hall. Pastor Jones phoned the minister of the Church, introducing himself and his congregation as future neighbours. Within a few days the minister offered their premises to the Elim Church as they had accepted an option on another piece of land that was equally suitable for their needs. This acquisition greatly increased the facilities that would be available. The partly-constructed building was completed and used as a minor hall, seating about 200 people. The newly-formed congregation, now just one year old, used this hall for mid-week meetings and Sunday morning services, but still had to hire the Corn Exchange for the large Sunday evening congregations.

The next stage was to build the main hall, to be known as The City Temple, but apparently insurmountable difficulties blocked the way. There was the problem of obtaining a building licence. The war had ended only a few years before and towns and cities were still being rebuilt. The building of churches had no priority. Nevertheless application was made for the licence. The waiting list was long. The authorities said that nothing could be done for at least three years! Even then there would be a limitation on the amount of money that the church could spend on construction. This news, far from being a shattering blow to the faith of the Minister and members, served to deepen their dependence on God. Only two months later the Church was offered a building licence for £10,000! Another Church in the City had found it necessary to relinquish their licence as sufficient money could not be raised, so the licence was offered to the Elim Church and accepted despite the fact that it had to be used immediately.

Plans were drawn up and requests were made to builders to supply tenders, but one major problem remained. Where would the money come from? £10,000 was just the price of the main hall. The cost of the land, professional fees, the electrical components factory, a manse, church furnishings, and a host of incidentals brought the required figure to £20,000. A well-established Church had failed to raise £10,000; could this infant Church raise double that amount? It certainly needed another miracle.

Gifts started to trickle in. That trickle soon became a flood of gifts, large and small, and interest-free loans. Within months thousands of pounds had been given by the Church members, many of them still young in the faith.

Despite this marvellous answer to prayer a new problem arose. Winter broke upon the country. Freak snow storms, treacherous ice and killer smog had an adverse effect on this Church which was still in its infancy. The number of people attending the services diminished each week. Satan seemed to be sifting the Church like wheat. The faith of the people was being severely tested. Ron Jones says of that period, "I could see the whole thing slipping away".

As the sunshine warmed the frosty ground, so the revival flame was fanned again into a blaze of blessing. The building programme continued and eventually the time came for the opening. How many would be prepared to move from a public hall to a new church building in a different part of the City? These fears, however, proved to be entirely without foundation. At the opening the main hall was packed to capacity and some of the crowd had to be accommodated in the minor hall. On the first and succeeding Sundays the church was comfortably full.

The congregation gradually swelled so that extra chairs had to be placed in the aisles almost every Sunday night. Over the years hundreds have been received into fellowship; many have since gone to glory. Still more hundreds of people have given their lives to Christ, some having become enthusiastic members of the Church, others having moved to various places. Some having gone into full-time ministry.

As years rolled on, the modern City Temple became too small. What could be done? There was no room to extend. In 1969, after several months of prayer, a house that backed on to the Church property was bought for £2,200. This would provide a narrow site on which to extend the present building. Was this the answer to prayer? No, it was only part of the answer, for God operates beyond our expectations.

The house next door to this house had already been bought by a speculator who planned to convert it into flats. This, however, was not God's will, and the owner offered it to the church for the price he gave for it, just £1,000.

Within a few weeks, the owner of a cafe next door approached Pastor Jones, offering to sell his premises. This price was £11,000, which, though not then an excessive sum considering its commercial potential, was far too much money for the Church to find, particularly after buying two houses. Pastor Jones offered less than half this price, which, not surprisingly, was turned down. If God wanted the Church to have the site on which the cafe stood, then He would have to arrange for a price the Church could consider, then provide the money. Nine months later, the cafe owner accepted the church's offer of £4,500, most of this being payable on an interest-free basis over a period of five years. £1,000 had to be found immediately. God's people responded by providing £800 in gifts and £200 in interest-free loans.

Another nearby old house with a sizeable strip of land was required from the council at a very acceptable price. It was becoming obvious that God had great plans and was leading the Church, not to extend the present building, but to build a completely new main hall. Four houses and a shop prevented these plans becoming a reality.

The owner of one of the houses lived in America. He wrote that he would sell for £1,800 and, after further correspondence, settled for £1,400. One after another the remaining houses were purchased at very reasonable prices. The Church purchased the shop for a mere £1,000 after the owner, who formerly vowed that the Church would never have her property, had passed away.

As God miraculously provided more and more land, so the vision of the Minister and members grew, not only for a new main hall, but also for new Sunday school premises and a home for the aged. Something remarkable happened. Ron Jones tells the story in his own way:

At work turning the old building into a Sunday school complex

"As more and more property became available, I felt sure that God was not intending us to be the landlords of almost derelict buildings, but that there must be a wider purpose. There was now a very real possibility of a new church with special Sunday school facilities, a day nursery and a home for the aged, but where did I start to share the vision? I need have had no worry. One evening in December 1969, the Church Treasurer invited our family to his home. At about 8.30 that very same evening he brought out an amazing model, complete with a new church building, a Sunday school block and a senior citizens' home. He even had model people, cars and trees, all in place! It had taken him six months to prepare and he had not breathed a word to anyone. . . BUT IT WAS THRILLING TO ME TO FIND THAT AROUND THE SAME TIME THAT GOD WAS SHOWING ME THE POSSIBILITIES, HE WAS ALSO SHOWING THEM TO OUR CHURCH TREASURER. Who better to share this costly vision than the church treasurer? We knelt together and prayed in his lounge and decided that we would call the programme 'OPERATION 75', but God has moved so miraculously that our 'OPERATION 75' has become His 'OPERATION 73'. I took his model and our vision to the next Executive Council meeting and am grateful to God for a group of men who immediately saw the tremendous possibilities and gave me every possible encouragement. I believe that it was at that point that God began to do something bigger and more wonderful than Bob Helps and I had ever considered. A member of the Church told me of an architect who was interested in developing part of our site for flats for the elderly for some other association. Pastor John Smyth and I met him and discovered from him that the City Corporation might be prepared to sell land on the other side of the road, a possibility that we had never even considered. It now became a Movement concept and plan, but that is another story".

The Corporation agreed to sell this land to Elim for the purpose of a home for the elderly and consented even to block off the road to enable the project to be contained in one site instead of being split into two. About a quarter of an acre of land was sold to us for an astoundingly low sum despite its commercial value. A nearby piece of land about the same size was sold for £600,000!

The Lord has performed a modern miracle. The different properties have become available just when needed at prices that could be managed. Between them, the local Church and Headquarters have purchased twelve houses, one cottage and printing works, a cafe, a shop and about a quarter acre of land. The wonder of these miracles is doubled when one considers that all this has taken place so very close to the city centre with its large departmental stores and main bus station. By the way, the new church will be opened today, April 20th. The challenge will continue for many years as the Lord's people respond to the colossal demands of mortgage and interest repayments.

GOSPORT

Pastor: P.T. Niblett

DURING the past few months the Lord has richly blessed the activities of our Church. The last month of 1973 was to the non-Christian bleak and barren, but to our Sunday school teachers and Crusaders it was a challenge to present the true message of Christmas to our "parish". The Sunday school scholars responded well under the enthusiastic encouragement of the teachers; many parents came to hear their children take part in the Nativity story written by the Sunday Sunday school superintendant. Their efforts were rewarded by one parent responding to the appeal. The Crusaders did equally well the following week when they gave an up-to-date version of what Christmas should mean today.

The New Year was upon us and we realised that Pastor and Mrs. Niblett had been with us for just six months. We praise God for their faithful ministry and give our Lord the glory for the souls saved since their induction. In February, there was a baptismal service. Three teachers and several class friends were invited by one of the candidates to attend; they came and witnessed her stand for our Lord.

We look forward in anticipation for the Lord's blessing on our future programme which includes a youth weekend with the National Youth Director, our Easter Convention with Pastor J.C. Smyth and an evangelistic crusade during June. We know that you will pray for us as we seek to extend God's kingdom here at Gosport.

DAVID E. KNOX

BRIDGEND

Pastor: R.A. Holdstock

OUR Church has been experiencing the blessing of the Lord over this last two years. The Assembly has grown in amazing proportions. Many young people have found Christ as their Lord and Saviour and are very keen for the Lord. As a further step we had a special weekend on the subject, "The Christian's Commitment". It was a very full weekend which started on the Friday evening. The Saturday programme started at 9.30 and continued all day, ending in a rally at which there were over ninety people. Sunday commenced with a prayer meeting at 10 a.m. At the Sunday evening service there were over a hundred present. The weekend concluded at an after-church fellowship in the Y.M.C.A. where there was an attendance of nearly 200. We praise God for His goodness and blessing. The ministry of the Word by Pastor Brian J. Hayes was outstanding. The challenge of the Word moved every heart. The impact of the weekend has already made a difference in the Assembly. We express our thanks and Christian love to the twenty-one young people who travelled from Edinburgh on the Friday night and ministered to us in testimony and song throughout the weekend. It was wonderful to experience the unity and oneness which only the name of Jesus can bring. There was many a tear-filled eye as we sang, "Praise God from whom all blessing flow" outside the Y.M.C.A. and said our goodbyes to the young people as they set off through the night back to Edinburgh. We are looking with great expectancy to the Lord for the future of our Assembly.

Time to rise up

by Melvin Banks

"Peter sat down among them. . . and he denied Him"
(Luke 22:55-57).

THE most disappointing moment in the life of Peter was his denial of Christ in the high priest's house. In that moment of crisis, when he should have declared his uncompromising allegiance, he was in pitiful rejection, when he should have triumphed he was in defeat, when he should have met the situation with unwavering faith and loyalty he was in dismal despondence. Instead of bold confession he was in cold denial. Why, in this hour of trial, did he fail the One whom he claimed to love, the One whom he had given up his life to follow, the One whom he had declared at Caesarea Philippi as being, "the Christ the Son of the living God" (Matthew 16:16)?

Before his denial, he "sat down among them". He sat with sinners and Christ-rejectors. If you called on some friends and they invited you into their home, but kept you standing throughout a long conversation with them, you would feel as you stood and they sat, "How unfriendly!". But if they invited you to take a seat, you would feel at home, there would be an affinity, a sign of friendship, oneness, even courteous affection. Thus Peter "sat down among them"; it revealed an attitude of compromise with their ideals, of affinity with their godless purposes, and of affection with their worldly spirit.

Our Lord Jesus Christ sat down with publicans and sinners (Luke 15:29-32), but He did so to lead them to repentance and to the new life that He promised them. It was not so with Peter; his action was one of rejection and denial. Is this not the trouble with MELVIN BANKS was converted in a Billy Graham Crusade in 1955. He entered the William Booth Memorial Bible College, Denmark Hill, London, and served as a Salvation Army Officer for a few years. He was attracted to Pentecost through the earnest evangelism he saw at the Bethshan Tabernacle, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. He was baptised in the Holy Ghost and helped Pastor Herbert Harrison in the work there for four years. Since 1966 he has been Pastor of the Assembly of God in Spilsby, Lincs. Four new Assemblies have been pioneered from this work and many villages have been reached with the gospel through his successful village evangelism in this needy rural part of England. God has wonderfully blessed his crusades all over Britain, and in U.S.A., Canada, France and Germany. New churches have been founded, old ones revived and many assemblies have seen great increase. Some crusades have seen over 1,000 decisions for Christ and many miracles have been witnessed. He has crusades planned in Australia in 1974. His devoted wife, Lilian, in an invaluable help to him in the work. They have two children, Philip and Paul.

many Christians today? They are sitting down with the world, when they should be rising up in bold confession of Christ.

Regarding this Pentecostal movement of ours in this land today, where persecution and ostracism have failed to halt its progress, it may well be that an undermining from within could cause it to succumb. If sitting down implies a changed attitude to worldliness, a neglect of the vital means of spiritual nourishment, and the contamination of the lukewarm spirit pervading much denominational church life today, then we must not sit down, we must watch and pray! We must guard our inheritance. We must rise up! A fashionable lady, converted in one of Gipsy Smith's meetings, gave this testimony: "I was not saved from the gutter, but from an easy armchair!". God save us from sitting down with a careless spirit when we should rise up for God.

Will Durant said, "No great nation has ever been overcome until it has destroyed itself". This could be said of great revival movements that God has raised up throughout history. They were not crushed by their numerous enemies and opponents from without, but rather throttled by carelessness and compromise from within. This is a desperate hour in the history of our nation. It needs a new direction, a return to God, a revival of New Testament Christianity. For the Pentecostal movement it could be our hour of crisis. This nation needs our message. Never has the opportunity been so great. The people are hungry for God. The denominations are giving us a hearing hitherto unknown. The unconverted are coming to crusades in unprecedented numbers. Thousands are making decisions for Christ and enquiring and seeking God. Miracles are being seen. Charismatic groups and historic churches are calling for our evangelists for great healing and salvation crusades. We have the favour of the people, but what are we really doing? Are we sitting down when we should be standing up and occupying the land? Are we taking strongholds and pushing the satanic forces back in the name of Jesus our King? We can only fulfil God's holy purposes and plans for us at this hour if we are prepared to pay the price. There are four principles involved if the hour is not to be lost.

Pleading Prayer

We need a resurgence of intercessory prayer. Lord Attlee said, after the close of the last war, "To get this nation off its back, it must get on its knees". The prayer meeting should be the best attended meeting of the week in our churches. We must get before God, both together and in private, and plead for the souls of men, until showers of blessing are poured upon us. As Phillips Brooks said, "Prayer is not conquering God's reluctance, but taking hold of God's willingness". The Early Church took hold of God's willingness and were blessed. We must plead with God like the Early Church. We must not give in, not even when the answer comes. We must rise up and PRAY! James said, "Ye have not, because ye ask not". David said in Psalm 18, "In my distress I called upon the LORD. . . He heard my voice. . . my cry came before HIM. . . He bowed the heavens and came down. . . He delivered me". Daniel prayed, God heard and He sent the angel Gabriel. He declared: "I have come for thy words. . . THY WORDS WERE HEARD".

Purposeful Bible Study

We must continually search the Scriptures. We must learn and re-learn the "exceeding great and precious promises" (2 Peter 1:4). One preacher was called a "man of one book"; we need to be a people of one book; all other books must be eclipsed by the mighty Word of God.

Our ministers must make their preaching simple for the people to understand; we must help them through next week, we must give them what will really quicken them and set them aflame. Charles H. Spurgeon said, "The Lord taught me to feed my sheep, but some ministers have the idea that he said, 'feed my giraffes', so they put things so high that few can attain to them"! Keep it simple, but soul-stirring and penetrating. "For the Word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword". The Roman Empire was stirred by its authority, great cities were shaken by its declaration, multitudes were gripped by its glorious message. We must not underestimate its power. We need to be like Apollos, mighty in the Scripture.

Perpetual Power

We need a continual infilling of the Holy Ghost. The Apostles were endued with power from on high, but they needed to be re-filled (Acts 4:31), "and the place was shaken", on this occasion. Perpetual power, a constant source, an everlasting supply are awaiting us. Each must seek a fresh baptism of the fire that prevails. The fire of the Holy Ghost is possessive, powerful, makes men invincible, and produces divine conviction and passionate dedication for the cause of Christ. D. L. Moody said, "Get on fire and the world will watch you burn". Orin Gifford said, "Paul's preaching ended in a riot or in a revival". This is the impact made by Holy Ghost fire — perpetual power and truly divine anointing; this is the power that we need. We must not sit down and lose our destiny and purpose; we must not sell our birthright. It is time to stand up!

Passionate Evangelism

If we are not winning souls and adding to the Church, if we are not moving our community for Christ, then we must search our hearts, we must find out what is wrong. John Stott said recently, "We have the manpower to evangelise the country, but it is slumbering in the pews of our churches". King Saul had "a band of men whose hearts God had touched". O for a band of believers to arise from the shops, factories and colleges, people whose hearts God has touched to accelerate the evangelism of Britain, a band with hearts aflame with sacred fire and burning zeal! John Wesley in his Journal records: "I came into the town and preached CHRIST unto them". This was his constant message; he had no other. No wonder he got apostolic results. We must be dogmatic in our preaching and desperate in our efforts to grasp men from sliding into hell. It is time for every Pentecostal believer to arise. Our efforts are puny when they should be giant-like. This is no time to be cowardly at heart; this is no time to be sitting down!

We must show men that Christ is the only answer. We must tell the Church that a Bible Pentecost alone will meet the need of the hour. We must rise up with courage and faith. An Anglican bishop said to me a short time ago, "A minority group such as yours could change the course of this nation"! Pentecostal believers, we must not fail our Lord! IT IS TIME TO RISE UP!

The straight Race

Words and drawing

THIS athlete has just left the starting-blocks. He sets his eyes on the tape ahead and thinks of the prize that awaits the winner (1 Corinthians 9:24). He runs at a steady pace, careful not to use up all his energy on the first lap. He must reserve some strength for the finish.

The bell signals the start of the final lap and our runner is in the lead. The crowd rises to its feet, clapping and cheering and spurring him on. His legs are aching and his heart is pounding, but he fights on, straining every muscle in his body. At last he throws himself at the tape. He has won! The prize is his. All the hard training and self-discipline have paid off. The athlete has achieved his goal.

Jesus set His sights on a goal: Jerusalem. He had to go there to teach His gospel and He had to go there to die.

When Jesus arrived in the city and began to preach, His enemies tried to kill Him, so Jesus moved on to teach in the outskirts of the city. He would not let Himself be killed until He had preached His message and until it was God's time, a delay of perhaps six months. He finally entered Jerusalem at the Feast of the Passover. Then they crucified Him.

Jesus told His disciples, "I go My way to Him that sent Me. I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am you may be also".

This is His message to us. If we make a home in our hearts for the Lord Jesus He has promised we shall one day be with Him in His home above.

The athlete must train and practise hard in order to achieve his goal. Likewise, young believers must prepare to meet their Saviour.

We cannot afford to dawdle on the broad way. That leads to destruction and death. We must keep to a steady pace on the appointed course. This leads to life everlasting.

PRAYER & PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

IT is not easy to know when we are to wait and see the salvation of the Lord and when we are to do something that will bring the answer to our prayers. To the same Moses to whom God said that he was to stand and see God work salvation for Israel, the Lord also said that he was to go forward.

The Christian is a God-quickened person and is therefore spiritually alive to God. We should be sensitive to the prompting of the Lord. When are we to stand still? When are we to go forward in relation to the answer to our prayers? I think it is best answered by giving two illustrations of answered prayer.

A missionary I knew once needed a very large sum of money to purchase a building costing thousands of pounds. Assured that it was the Lord's will that he should have this building, he prayed to God to supply the money. A great peace came over him, so that he did not pray again for the money. Nor was there any worry that someone else would purchase the property. Some weeks went by. He told me that he actually forgot about the building. One morning included in his mail was a letter with the money that he needed. He bought the property and turned it into a thriving centre of evangelism.

My second illustration is about a young Army Officer from one of our Elim churches. War stories are rather popular just now and my story is about the last war. We will call the young Officer Henry. He was one day called before his Commanding Officer who briefed him on a Commando raid on the coast of Northern France. It was a particularly dangerous assignment. Before leaving that night with his small company of men, he went to a hut and prayed sincerely that God would protect him and his men from harm. They reached the French coast and, leaving half his men by the boat, went inland. At a certain point he went alone to a small town. He rendezvoused with the Resistance chief of that area and returned to his men. They had now only to cross the wide beach to the boat. Suddenly their path was criss-crossed with machine gun fire. It was impossible to get to the boat, so they waited. Some minutes passed. No German could be seen in the darkness. Then Henry had a prompting to run for the boat. He told the men what he was going to do. They started to run. Miraculously, the gun fire ceased. They made the boat and England.

Pause for Thought

by Trevor Partington,
Covenant Hall, Stafford

IN speaking about death the apostle Paul wrote: "Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Corinthians 15:57). Victory in death — does that seem odd to you?

Death is an enemy. It takes from us a partner, a parent, even a child. It has no pity for the young, it seems, nor does it have any respect for good living. Yet Paul could speak of death as victory.

In another place, writing about his own death, he said: "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand" (2 Timothy 4:6). In Paul's day, "departure" described, among other things, the untying of ropes when a tent was taken down and removed to another site. As a tent-maker himself, Paul would know all about this.

There comes a day when the tent in which we live, that is our body has served its purpose. It must move on. So it is taken down and made ready for a new location. To Paul, this was death — see 2 Corinthians 5 in The Living Bible, and this is true for every Christian.

Death is not something to dread, indeed we can even welcome it. The dying words of a famous preacher were: "This is my coronation day. I have been looking forward to it for years" (D.L. Moody). Is this your confidence? Because of the resurrection of Christ it can be. When you commit your life to Christ, then God gives you a quiet confidence in the face of death. To be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord (2 Corinthians 5:8)

How can we we have Revival?

"Neither will I offer unto my God of that which doth cost me nothing."

2 Samuel 24:24

by Alexander B. Tee

Notes of the Easter Monday afternoon message in the Royal Albert Hall, London.

IT is a great joy to know that, amid all the gloom and national chaos, there are hundreds of praying people who are crying out to God for a genuine heaven-sent revival. I believe that God will answer the earnest prayers of this remnant who are gripping the horns of the altar. My dear friends, I believe that revival is on the way! At the height of the depression in the nineteen-twenties, the Jeffreys' brothers, under God, swept across this country with a mighty revival. We are now on the verge of a frightening recession. As then, so now, we need spiritual leaders to rise up and repeat the words of the founder of the Elim Movement who said so many times, "Our need is to get back to the Bible and back to believing that it is the inspired Word of God". Only a spiritual revival can save our beloved nation at such a time as this.

May I, therefore, share with you my question: Can we have revival? We have splendid evangelists, equipment, literature and so on, yet we cannot say that we are moving in a real Holy Ghost revival.

One thing disturbs me in these days. There seems to be a lack of

A Conviction which is compelling.

Hundreds of people raise their hands in response to our gospel appeals, yet somehow comparatively few go on for God. There seems to be a lack of strong conviction which makes men tremble, weep and eagerly give their lives to Christ.

I speak to myself as well as to every other preacher and ask, are we preaching

An Evangelism which is easy?

People need to repent and it must be a real repentance. There can be no revival until a deep conviction of sin grips this generation. Only when people know that they are in the grip of God and with true contrition seek forgiveness of sin can we expect to see true revival. Are we presenting a message which is diluted or a message which is dynamic? It is not enough to ask people if they want forgiveness of sins and be ready for heaven to put up their hands, say a prayer and everything will be all right. They must understand that they are to repent with a godly sorrow for their sins and leave them! Here is what the Bible says: "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new". It also says: "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord". In another place it adds:

"Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in Him". We are not asked to entertain the world nor to attend its entertainment; we are told to leave it. Ours is not to amuse sinners on their way to hell, but to convict them of sin and of judgment to come. Our message must be clean cut. What is the meaning of baptism in water, which we are proud to teach on this Easter Monday? Is it not to die to the old life and to rise in newness of life? There must be a clean break from all that is worldly, even though there may be a popular brand of evangelism which does not take its stand on these fundamental things.

We need to put the Foursquare Gospel flag right at the top of the mast and continue to preach

A Separation which is Scriptural.

True revival has closed drinking houses, places of sin and worldly entertainment. When repentance is real it will be followed by a separation which is scriptural.

In the portion from which our text is taken, King David had sinned. Pride and affluence caused him to turn away from his humble trust in God, which he showed in his boyhood days as a shepherd. The result was that many were stricken down with a plague. No less than 70,000 funerals resulted from his spiritual slackness. As he began to realise that all these souls were going into eternity because of his foolishness, a great sense of responsibility seized him. Suddenly, he saw the angel of the Lord about to stretch out his hand upon Jerusalem. A pang of agony drove him to cry out: "Lo I have sinned, and I have done wickedly". He became gripped with

A Concern which is consuming.

Why does revival tarry? Has affluence crippled our concern? We may have a certain concern, but do we get gripped by a strong sense of responsibility? "Judgment must begin at the house of God", so be frank and ask yourself, does a sense of concern so grip me that I honestly have a concern which is consuming?

"David cried out, "Let Thine hand. . . be against me". He was anxious for his people and willing to bear his punishment. Do we know what it is to prevail in prayer, to continue to hold on to God until He shows us what we are to do? It was not long before God revealed to the King that he must raise an altar. That's it! We must get back to the altar. Watch with me as King David makes his way to Araunah's threshing-floor.

No sooner did Araunah hear of David's consuming desire to see the plague stayed that he eagerly suggested to the king that he should use his threshing-floor for an altar, his threshing instruments for the wood and his oxen for the offering. Immediately there could have flashed into David's mind the thought of accepting all this free material which was right to hand. Here was a sacrifice without cost and so convenient. This is exactly how Satan steps in with subtle suggestions. Did he not suggest to David's 'greater Son' that He should bow down and worship him in order to gain what would otherwise cost Him His life on a cross? Many in this generation have fallen into Satan's subtle snare. David gave an answer which was heard in heaven. "Neither will I offer. . . unto the Lord my God of that which will cost me nothing". Here is

A Consecration which is costly.

There is no easy way to blessing or to revival. We might as well face this fact: we must be willing to make sacrifices with real meaning and cost, or else we will be left in the valley of dry bones without any breath of God's Holy Spirit. This involves much more than giving an extra pound to home evangelism or to a special effort in the local church. Time, thought and energy must be given, yes, poured into God's work. Time which could be used to make money for ourselves must be sacrificed to God. A convenient Christianity is foreign to the New Testament. Cheap sacrifice is like cheap jewellery; it is worthless. David knew that he could not fool God and he earnestly, eagerly, genuinely wanted to see the plague being stayed. He was broken down before God because he felt a great sense of guilt. No slick behaviour was going to sidetrack him into a disastrous, make-believe act of spurious sacrifice. Even sacrifice paid for by another would not avail in this matter. I call you to record that we cannot fool God by offering an easy consecration and expect revival.

Are we just playing at this or are we deeply in earnest with a Brokenness which is blessed?

Surely we are well aware that we cannot successfully delude a holy God. The chapter closes with these wonderful words, "The plague was stayed from Israel". David had paid God's price! I believe with all my heart that we can have a real move of God in these days of crises. Already there is "a going in the tops of the mulberry trees", but God's conditions must be met by those who want to see another outpouring of revival blessing. There must be a conviction, a separation, a concern, a consecration, followed by a brokenness before the Lord.

God grant that we may yet see true revival in our time.

Thoughts from the Book of Exodus

2. Shiphrah and Puah (Exodus 1:15)

by F. Lavender,
Pastor of our Croydon Church

I HAVE never heard a sermon preached about Shiphrah and Puah, but they were very faithful, courageous women. Pharaoh had given them strict orders to destroy all the baby boys of Israel. To disobey him could have had deadly results for them, yet those brave women feared God above all others and, in order to obey Him, they defied Pharaoh. They refused to turn their maternity home into an abortion clinic and had to face the angry displeasure of Pharaoh as a result. Many mothers in Israel thanked God for them and, best of all, the Lord blessed and honoured them.

True believers down the ages have been faced with similar choices. Good, loyal citizens, the most law-abiding of people, but when the State has demanded what Christian conscience refuses, they have honoured the Lord by saying: "No!" to the State. Many believers are having to make such a choice today. For some it involves false charges and imprisonment. Others endure torture and death, but, having honoured the Lord now, they are assured that the Lord will honour them (Matthew 10:32).

Most of us have not yet been called upon to make such fundamental decisions, though we have no guarantee that we may not have to do so. In lesser matters, however, we all have to make our choice. People often expect us to do as they do, to fall in with their wishes, yet we know in our hearts that what they ask of us is wrong. Perhaps the choice we make will affect us in our home lives, our work or our leisure. It would be easier and more pleasant to do as they ask, even though it may compromise our Christian testimony, but remember that those who obey the Lord inherit His blessing and will be approved by Him at His Coming.

The Devotion of Unbelief

by F. Lavender

THIS passage of Scripture contains a record of several acts of devotion to the Lord Jesus Christ. Joseph of Arimathea, one of the Jewish counsellors, was granted the body of Jesus by Pilate and placed the corpse in his own sepulchre. Another Jewish leader, Nicodemus, brought 100 pounds weight of expensive spices to wrap in the grave-clothes around the body. After the Sabbath day, before daybreak on the first day of the week, several women hurried to the tomb to anoint the corpse with the ointments which they had prepared. When they ran to the disciples to give the news that thieves had stolen the body of the Lord, Peter rushed to see for himself. He was baffled by what he saw. Why had only the corpse gone? What sort of robbers would leave behind the only things of value — the spices and the grave-clothes? If the Jewish authorities themselves had done it, why should they take the trouble to unwrap the body when it would have been quicker, easier and more convincing if they had taken everything? Mary Magdalene stayed on at the grave when the others went sadly on their way. She was so obsessed with her grief, that when she saw two angels in the tomb, she took no notice of them and, when she saw the One whom she thought to be the gardener, she begged him to tell her where the body had gone so that she could bring it back. One thing characterised these acts of devotion — they all sprang from the unbelief of those who performed them!

The Lord Jesus had told the disciples that He would die by crucifixion at Jerusalem, but He had declared equally plainly that He would do what no-one else had done by rising from the dead. The Lord Jesus constantly connected His death with His resurrection on the third day. His teaching was so clear that the leaders placed a guard on the tomb for the express purpose of preventing the disciples from stealing the body, a precaution to stop any story being spread around that Jesus had risen again. The disciples, however, had not thought of stealing the body from the tomb and giving out a spurious story of resurrection was far from their minds. Both their actions and their attitude declared that they thought that He was dead and gone. They met behind locked doors because they were afraid that the Jews would arrest them and that they would share Jesus's fate. When Mary Magdalene and one or two other women came and said that the Lord was alive and that they had seen Him, they would not believe. Even when the grave proved to be empty, the possibility of resurrection never occurred to them. They just wanted to find the corpse and put it back decently into the tomb. Had they believed Jesus, or even had they carefully listened to what He said, they would have been waiting expectantly to see what happened at the tomb on the third day! When the risen Lord appeared to two disciples as they walked in the country, they saw Him as a stranger and their sadness of countenance together with their words showed their conviction that He was still dead: "We trusted that it had been He which should have redeemed Israel", they said, "but they have crucified Him". The message of the resurrection was dismissed as just a story told by some women.

This account of unbelieving devotion is being multiplied both in our own land and in other lands today. Over the Easter period there has been a great deal of devotion to the memory of the Lord Jesus Christ, for multitudes of folk have flocked to churches of many denominations to keep "the stations of the Cross" or to take Easter Communion. Yet the message of Good Friday that "Christ died for our sins", and the triumphant cry of Easter Day: "Christ is risen! The Lord is risen indeed!" have, in many cases, never sunk in. They have not reached the heart. There is not the real knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ as a living, mighty Saviour in the experiences of many who have joined in the formal services of Easter. People honour His memory, regarding Him as a good man and a martyr, but they do not personally enjoy His resurrection power in their lives. Because of this, men and women go away from the services and the ritual to find themselves still defeated by weakness in face of temptation and shamed by sin which they are unable to overcome. They do not share the life and power of which they have been singing. Yet the object of the Lord Jesus in dying and rising again was to give cleansing from sin, to restore men and women to personal fellowship with God, and to give them authority to live for the glory of God. Until people realise that Jesus is a present, living Saviour, they remain defeated in their lives, shamed by their sin. Yet the glorious, triumphant, wonderful message of Easter is that Christ is risen. He is with you now, ready to hear and to answer the cry of your heart.

There came a time when the first disciples knew the truth of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus. Then their acts of unbelieving, hopeless devotion were ended, the darkness of death and the tomb was passed and they lived in the glory and triumph of their risen Lord. They knew then that Christ was an ever-living, ever-present, mighty Saviour and, in fellowship with Him, they went all over the known world — sometimes at the cost of appalling sufferings and even death — to take to men and women the gospel of the resurrection. The same Lord Jesus still reveals Himself to us as a living, personal Saviour. He calls people to leave their hopeless unbelief and to know the wonder of a transforming faith. He offers to you and me the forgiveness of sins, acceptance by God the Father and power to live victoriously. I thank God and give praise to Him that, even in these days of indifference, many are finding a new, joyous life through the message of the risen Christ. This same resurrection life is being offered by Him to every person who reads these words.

Will you turn from the darkness of hopelessness and unbelief and put your trust in Christ? His word gives this great promise: "If you will confess with your mouth that Jesus is Lord, and believe in your heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you shall be saved" (Romans 10:9).

Will you prove this for yourself?

Revival when?

by S. E. Petts

"Then the fire... fell" (1 Kings 18:38)

REVIVAL doesn't depend on numbers, but on quality. On Mount Carmel there were hundreds of the priests of Baal, but only one Elijah. The hosts of Baal prayed all day without response, but the fire fell instantly on the word of Elijah.

Now look at what went on before God answered. Elijah repaired the broken altar. Perhaps we have broken vows that need solemn reaffirmation. He made a trench. Perhaps we need more separation from the world. He set the wood in order. Is our fleshly nature in line with God's priorities? He laid the bullock on the wood. How much do we sacrifice for God? He poured twelve barrels of water over all. Are we being cleansed constantly as God requires? Elijah did all these things in accordance with God's commands. Too often we make preparation for revival in our own way rather than God's. Finally Elijah cried, "Hear me, O Lord", and only then, after all this sanctified obedience, did the fire fall.

When we have hearts that are fully in tune with God, no matter how few we are, the fire of revival will fall.

Can you imagine?

Margaret M. Ladlow's page

by Irene White

CAN you imagine how sad and lonely the disciples must have felt when Jesus died? Jesus was their Friend, the person whom they loved most dearly in all the world, the One for whom they had forsaken all, the One whom they had seen perform so many miracles, the Person whom they knew to be the Son of God. Can you imagine the reproach that they felt when they knew that, after all that they had gone through with Jesus, they had forsaken Him and had left Him alone when He needed them most? Only one of His twelve closest friends saw Him through until the end.

Then again, when they knew that Jesus was dead, they must have thought about many of the things that they remembered His telling and teaching them. They must have recalled the promises that He made to them of eternal life with Him and His Father. Now, Jesus was dead. How final this must have seemed to those sorrowing disciples and the others who loved Him. Can you imagine the grief and shock that they felt to know that their only hope of salvation, the only begotten Son of God, the promised Messiah, was dead? They had forgotten what He had told them about His resurrection.

Then, after they had been sorrowing and mourning for three days, they discovered that the stone had been rolled away and that the tomb was empty. Jesus had risen from the dead. How thrilled they must have been to discover this wonderful news. They must have wondered where He was. Suddenly they remembered what He had told them, viz. that as Jonah was three days in the fish's belly, so would the Son of Man be in the earth. How happy they must have been to realise that hope was not lost, that Christ was still alive!

What a joy it must have been when Jesus appeared to them to show them just how alive He was. How wonderful for them to know that, though they had deserted Him, He had forgiven them and had not forgotten about them. How sweet the fellowship must have been which they shared with their risen Saviour. You only really discover how much you love someone when they have died. Then it is too late to do anything about your feelings; you can only be sorry for the missed opportunity of showing that loved-one how much you cared.

Those people had discovered their love for Jesus and were fortunate enough to have the opportunity of expressing their new-found feeling to Him personally. Can you imagine with what wonder and amazement they stood on top of the mount of Olives and watched their dear Friend, their Lord and Master ascend into heaven in the clouds? How glorious it must have been to know that Jesus was going to prepare a place for them and for us, that He was to sit on the right hand side of God, His Father, to watch over them and us and to make constant intercession for us.

They must have felt a little sad that Jesus had disappeared from their physical sight, but it was not many days before Jesus fulfilled yet another promise and sent His Holy Spirit, the Comforter, to fill His believers and comfort them.

We, too, can know Jesus in a personal way; He can be a true Friend to us. Jesus went to Calvary's cross willingly for you and me. Jesus was the sacrifice for all the sins which we commit. He fought a battle which put an end to death for He conquered death and hell. Because of what Jesus did, death no longer has a sting and the grave has no victory, for, though our earthly bodies may rot and decay, we live for ever and one day our bodies will be changed to incorruptible bodies which will last for ever like our Lord's.

If Jesus had not risen from the dead, there would have been no hope for mankind, but, praise God, He has risen! His tomb is still empty to prove it. No wonder the disciples were sad when their Lord died, for they thought that their God was dead, but our Lord showed them differently. His Word came to pass and Jesus rose from the dead and lives for ever. Any-one can know what it is to have their sins forgiven and the assurance of everlasting life. If you long to have Jesus as your Friend and constant Companion and to live with Him in eternity, you can do so by confessing your sins to Him and repenting of them. Jesus has paid the price!

Happiness is . . . refusing to star-gaze

HUNDREDS of people will sit down to breakfast tomorrow morning with their stars — not bad companions for the morning fare of cornflakes and toast! Starstruck? — yes, positively starstruck — they will busily sip coffee and examine the horoscope pages of their newspapers. “What are the prospects for the day?” is their anxiety. The stars appear to speak on all the major subjects in one’s life — marriage, business, happiness, the stock market or what have you — and affect for good or evil the lifestyle and destiny of everybody. The prognostications of these pages certainly influence the thinking and planning of thousands of people.

Jeane Dixon, a famous American Stargazer, has predicted with amazing accuracy many of the major happenings in her country, such as the assassinations of President John Kennedy and Senator Robert Kennedy. She is not always right, for thirty-five per cent of her predictions do not come true. The predictions of God’s prophets never fail to be fulfilled (Deuteronomy 18:20-22).

The predictions of horoscopes are couched in such general terms that there is little danger of anyone becoming disillusioned by what they read.

Astrology has its roots in the ancient world. Astronomy (the exploration of the stars) and astrology (the interpretations of the constellations of the stars) were once a single science. It all began in ancient Chaldea, in the region of the Persian Gulf. All the kings of Chaldea and later Babylon had astrologers to advise them regarding the future. In Genesis 11 we discover a remarkable statement about the first astrological observatory. After the Flood, the whole world had one language. The people settled in the Land of Shinar, which was near the junction of the rivers

Tigris and Euphrates. This was ancient Babylonia, one of the earliest centres of civilization. “And they said, go to, let us build us a city and a tower whose top may reach into heaven” (Genesis 11:4). The word for “tower” can mean ziggurat, which was the ancient observatory from which the priests would gaze at the stars. The words “may reach” in Genesis 11 are in italics. This means that they were not in the original Hebrew writings of the Bible. These Babylonians were not trying to build a tower to reach to heaven, but erecting an observatory tower from which to study the stars. The whole purpose of the ziggurats was idolatrous worship.

According to astrology each person is born under a certain sign of the Zodiac — the imaginary path across the sky on which the sun makes its annual journey. That path — also known as the Ecliptic — is divided into twelve “houses”, each named after a star constellation. The constellation rising in the east (and therefore in which the sun was positioned) at the time of one’s birth is one’s sign. One therefore takes on the characteristics of the mythological animal or other object after which this constellation was named.

What should be the attitude of Christians toward astrology?

Astrology is condemned in the Bible, which explicitly warns against following selfmade predictors of the future. Isaiah cast contempt on the astrologers of Babylon for thinking that they could save the people from disaster: “Let now the astrologers, the star gazers, the monthly prognosticators stand up and save thee from these things that shall come upon thee. Behold, they shall be like stubble; the fire shall burn them and they shall not deliver themselves” (Isaiah 47:13, 14). Astrology, unquestionably a form of fortune-telling, is clearly denounced: “Make use of neither fortune-telling nor witchcraft practice” (Leviticus 19:26). In the Old Testament (Leviticus 20:27) the death penalty was meted out upon fortune-tellers and mediums (“wizards” and “familiar spirits”). Fortune-tellers and mediums were condemned. The Bible warns: “Therefore when man will say to you, consult the necromancers and fortune-tellers. . . should not a people consult their God?” (Isaiah 8:19 Berk.).

If you want to know what life is all about and what the future holds, study the Bible. It has all the answers. Make sure your Bible is on the breakfast table tomorrow morning. The stars will fall and fail, but the Word of God abides for ever.

1 John 3:11-24

"Whoso . . . seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" (v.17).

THE evidence that God's love dwells in us is not what we say, but what we do. Love actually does things as a principle. On the other side of the world there is a Church where this principle operates. Should anyone have need, within hours a chain of help leaps into action. Prayer begins, washing is collected, children are minded, shopping is done, meals are prepared, cleaning is carried out — all involving self-denial and sacrifice, the marks of true love (v.16). There is a wonderful word in Psalm 41:1-3 concerning those who consider the needy. May our love be the kind that lays down its life for others.

Tuesday, April 23rd

1 John 4:1-12

"Greater is He that is in you, than he that is in the world" (v.4).

THIS is a comforting, stabilising truth. As in John's time, there are many opposing spirits in the world today. False teachers abound. The list seems to grow longer with the passage of time. Sensational and startling, they gather around them people having ears itching for something new. There is no need for our hearts to be disturbed or unsettled, for if we "are of God" (v.4), we have the answer within ourselves. Paul tells us that God is "for us" (Romans 8:31); John goes a little further and says, "He is in us".

Wednesday, April 24th

1 John 4:13-21

"Herein is our love made perfect" (v.17).

A TORMENTED, fear-filled soul, reading the latter part of this chapter, came to v.18: "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because love hath torment", and said, self-reproachfully, "Oh, I wish I had that, then I wouldn't be as I am". She is not alone. How can we have a love free from fear and torment? Not by self-reproach, for we cannot scold ourselves into love, nor by trying to work up good feelings; it comes when we really believe and are assured that God loves us, are really trusting in His love and every day demonstrate it to others (v.16).

Thursday, April 25th

1 John 5:1-12

"This is the victory. . . our faith" (v.4).

THIS verse doesn't say that faith is the means by which the world is conquered, nor that by faith are the battle and the victory won. What it says is that faith is the victory itself, for it lifts us up on to a higher plane and shows us eternal realities, putting things in perspective. It is the eye of the soul that beholds God on His throne, seeing the invisible powers available to meet man's need (cf. 2 Kings 6:17). It unleashes unlimited forces which make victory assured. "Faith sees the heavenly legions where doubt sees nought but foes".

Friday, April 26th

1 John 5:13-21

"Little children, keep yourselves from idols" (v.21).

IT is said that John wrote this Letter from Ephesus, a place full of idolatry, and that his concern prompted this plea that they keep themselves from idols. There can be idolatry without images of wood or stone. We can make idols of our life's partner, our children, even ourselves, if we become so absorbed in them so as to shut out God. Anything that so commends our affection that it usurps God's place in our life is an idol. To "keep ourselves in the love of God" (Jude 21) is a sure protection from this insidious enemy.

Saturday, April 27th

Ezra 1:1-11

"All they that were about them strengthened their hands" (v.6).

PART of the proclamation made by Cyrus concerning the exiles returning to build the house of the Lord related to those who for some reason were not able to make that journey. Their duty was to "help . . . with silver" etc. (v.4). This ministry was accepted and greatly assisted those going up to build. What a great, much-needed ministry this is today. Paul describing his deliverance (2 Corinthians 1:11) expresses its value: "Ye also helping. . . by prayer". It is one of God's gifts to His Church (1 Corinthians 12:27). Is this the ministry God is waiting for you to undertake?

Sunday, April 28th

Ezra 3:1-13

"They offered. . . unto the Lord" (v.3); "and. . . they . . . set forward the work of the house of the Lord" (v.8).

THE exiles had returned to Jerusalem to build the house of God, but first they set up the altar of their God and offered sacrifices (v.2). Then they tackled the work of laying the foundation of the Temple: first the worship, then the work. This was the pattern with God's people then and it has not changed. Jesus brought this out when He answered the cunning of Satan: "Thou shalt worship the Lord. . . and Him. . . shalt thou serve" (Matthew 4:16). What will be the pattern of our lives today? Let us make sure that, not only will we worship at His table, but also that we will work to win souls into the kingdom.

1. Living the Life

by Ian R. Hall
Pastor of our Ryde Church

CHRISTIANITY is more than a creed to believe; it is a life to live. God is as much concerned with how we have lived as with what we have believed. Paul sternly warned the Corinthian Christians: "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, so that each one may receive good or evil, according to what he has done in the body" (2 Corinthians 5:10).

Today we see little difference between the way some Christians live and the way respectable unbelievers live. The former clear, strong distinctions have been largely eroded. The chief differences lie in what we believe, but "a bare faith without a corresponding life is useless and dead" (James 2:17, Phillips). Demons have right beliefs — like that there is one God, that Jesus is His Son and that His triumph is assured (James 2:19; Matthew 8:29) — but their knowledge of the truth in no way affects their conduct.

There must be no divorce between our faith and our deeds, for we are expected to "be holy in every department of our lives, for the One who has called us is Himself holy" (1 Peter 1:15, Phillips).

Christlike

J. Rowe's chorus: "Be like Jesus, this my song, in the home and in the throng", simply reflects the Bible's declaration: "Anyone who says he is a Christian should live as Christ did" (1 John 2:6, Living Bible). The concept of Christ as our Example may not be fashionable today, but this is what it really means to follow Jesus. He set Himself forth as the pattern and standard for our lives, stating: "Learn of Me; for I am gentle and lowly in heart" (Matthew 11:29). His perfect life is the measure for our own.

To sing gaily "Some day I shall be like Him" does not absolve us from conformity to Him now. If Christ is not seen in our actions, He will not be heard in our witness. A sceptic once remarked: "What you are speaks so loudly that I cannot hear a word you say!". A Christlike life really amplifies our testimony.

Complete

"You are complete in Him" wrote Paul (Colossians 2:10). The full, satisfying life is not the one replete with all the essential commodities promoted by the advertising media, but the one found in Christ. "He who has the Son has life; he who has not the Son of God has not life" (1 John 5:12). The contrast is so plain. Having so many aids to living, it is possible to miss real life itself. "My purpose is to give life in all its fullness", declared Jesus. (John 10:10, Living Bible).

For too many, holiness is largely a negative approach, but the concept includes wholesome, healthy aspects too. The holy life is one of love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness and self-control (Galatians 5:22,23). These positive virtues make life vibrantly vital and exhilaratingly exciting.

What a contrast Christianity ought to make to this world which accepts greed and selfishness as the norm! As our lives are steadily transformed, this contrast will become increasingly apparent. The blurred distinctions between the Church and the world will be brought back into sharp focus. We will thus show Christ to this godless generation.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir,

AS a born again Christian who is still young in the faith may I tell you what happened to me recently.

I had been feeling over-tired for some time, but now I was feeling depressed and I felt cut off from the Lord. I was reading a book about what sin can do to a Christian and a passage struck me. It said, "Have you asked the Lord to forgive your sins today?". It went on to stress how important it is to ask God's forgiveness for our sins every day. Well, as a newcomer to the faith I had not realised how important this was. I had been asking God's forgiveness when I thought I should.

I went down on my knees and I asked God to forgive me. I told him how truly sorry I was and that I would ask His forgiveness every day. As I knelt, I could feel that my depression had lifted from me. I felt so close to the Lord. I wept.

How I thank God for His love and His mercy to all who love Him.

Yours in His Service,
M. Dean (Mrs.)

EASTER Monday was a cold, somewhat blustery day in London. It was chilly in Trafalgar Square as Brian Garrard commenced the great open air rally. The way our Elim folk supported, listened and joined in set the tone for the whole day, however. There were warmth, joy and a grand sense of togetherness. T.J. Stevens and H.W. Greenway preached the age-old but up-to-date gospel with fervour. It is always moving to realise that Elim has the privilege of preaching the message in the very centre of the world's greatest city (which it surely still is, though other centres may have overtaken it in population). To see and hear our members standing throughout the meeting, singing, responding, sharing was outstanding, to say the least.

We are delighted to say that numbers attending the Royal Albert Hall services appeared to be even more than last year's. The participation of the congregation was again a really prominent feature. The old favourites took pride of place, and rightly so. "Christ the Lord is risen today" thundered forth. "Up from the Grave He arose" double-forted its way among those peculiar mushroom sound baffles up in the roof. Every hymn and chorus went with a swing and, more so, seemed to catch up the crowd in a holy rapture of praise.

Alexander Tee and John Lancaster (our beloved President) preached their hearts out. I detected a thoughtfulness, a conviction, a concern in both addresses. Here was no rabble-raising. These were servants of God deeply moved and fundamentally troubled by the sad situation of our nation. The desire for revival really came from both preachers as an underlying theme and challenge, though the messages were so different in style and presentation, as befits the ministries of the two men.

Missionary Vera McGillivray and prospective missionary-nurse Joy Bath were presented by the E.M.S. Chairman, R. B. Chapman. Applause had thankfully been absent, but spontaneous appreciation was thus roundly expressed.

Thank you very much to the musicians, to Selwyn and Shirley Cox, to the Gospel Four from Southampton, to Douglas B. Gray, the London Crusader Choir and the massed choirs, to the conveners and to the many others who worked on and before Easter Monday. Your efforts were well worth it. It was a wonderful day.

A TRIBUTE TO PASTOR AND MRS. H. BURTON HAYNES

by Gordon A. Wright, a lifelong friend

Pastor and Mrs. H. Burton Haynes, together with their friend, Miss M. Inkpen, passed into the presence of the Lord as the result of an accident on April 8th. Mr. Haynes had a heart attack while driving and in trying to pull in to the curb veered off the road and hit a lamp-post. Mrs. Haynes died immediately, and Mr. Haynes and their friend died on the way to the hospital.

WHEN the news of the tragic accident that claimed the lives of two of my lifelong friends was broken to me, I must confess that at first I felt nothing; my mind did not register the information. It was unbelievable, how could it have happened to them? But as the ghastly reality became clear to me, I felt shattered and was glad to sit down.

I first became acquainted with Mr. Haynes forty-four years ago at the time of the Elim revival and divine healing campaign at Kingston-on-Thames, but I knew Mrs. Haynes (nee Goodchild) many years before as we lived in the same road and attended the same Church of England. Her brother, Jack, was my closest friend as a boy and teenager. We were converted on the same evening through the personal witness of Mr. Haynes' mother. Long before the campaign, one of my future sisters-in-law became a close friend of a sister of Mrs. Haynes and is to this day. So in those far-off days, four families forged links that were to strengthen into lifelong friendships. The Pentecostal revival of those days in Kingston made God so real to us and somehow made us all feel that we belonged to one another.

Harold led the singing on Sunday evenings, for which he was particularly gifted, and brought much blessing to the congregation with his solos. This ministry in song, sometimes with the assistance of Vera, continued throughout his ministry. The highlight was in one of our great Conference meetings when he sang in other tongues and then sang the interpretation. He commenced the Sunday school at Kingston with my brother as his first scholar. Harold also took the Bible class. Vera became our first Crusader secretary and encouraged both my wife-to-be and myself in serving the Lord.

Because several people attended the Kingston Church from Twickenham, Harold commenced a week-night service there. About this time, he invited me to his home one night a week for instruction in preaching. He gave me my first opportunity to preach (other than at Crusader meetings) at Twickenham. Later, after Sunday services had been commenced there, he asked me to fill in for him when he was invited to other churches.

Eventually, Harold accepted the call to the full-time ministry, and held the pastorates of Yeovil, Letchworth, Springbourne, Croydon, and Clacton, respectively. He served as the District Superintendent of the Bournemouth, South London, and Eastern Presbyteries. In 1960 he was elected to the Executive Council and served until 1971. He was a member of the Bible College Synod as well as a regular lecturer at the college. For the year 1959–1960 he had the honour of being President of the Elim Pentecostal Church. He lived a full, active life for the Lord he loved, a life that was gladly shared by Vera and to whom he willingly and sincerely gave credit for much of his success. If I have said more of Harold than of Vera, it is because she would have wished it so, though she herself ministered the Word with great blessing and shouldered all the responsibilities that fall to the lot of a consecrated minister's wife.

Harold was one of the godliest ministers of our Movement and one of the loveliest characters I have been privileged to know. He and Vera were kind, loving and gracious. They were loved and admired in return by so many and their passing has left a gap in the kingdom of God that others must fill. I have no compunction in likening Harold to Barnabas, the son of consolation. Through the years his ministry and writings have brought comfort and inspiration to a great many. They were always ready to write letters of encouragement to their acquaintances and friends who were passing through difficult times. Their devotion to God that characterised their early Christian lives deepened with the passing years so that when you were in their company you became aware that you were in the company of people who had been and were still being taught of God. I remember Harold's mother saying years ago that she prayed for her son to be a man of grace. How well God answered that prayer!

It was always a joy to have them in our home, so it was with sadness that in recent years we noticed the waning of their natural powers. They had found the balance between a deep spirituality and a love for the natural things of life that God provided for our enjoyment. They were full of fun and laughter, but they had their sorrows too and out of these was born a deeper understanding of human nature. They were devoted to each other all their days, so there seems to be a most merciful element in what appears to us to be the tragic circumstances of their passing. When I heard the sad news, there flashed into my mind the words of David concerning Jonathan and Saul, which I feel were used by the Spirit by accommodation: "Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in their death they were not divided".

Are we tempted to question why two such godly characters were taken this way? Why could they not have passed peacefully to heaven during their morning prayers or as they sat relaxing in their lounge rather than by a car crash? Life is full of perplexity that mystifies us and challenges our faith. We want explanations. They are so important to us. But when earth's shadows give place to the radiance of heaven, I doubt if we will be interested in that vaster life in explanations of what will appear by comparison mere trivialities of this transient scene. Is there not the possibility that our clamouring for explanations suggests a suspicion of doubt in the supremacy and sovereignty of Love? Calvary is the overwhelming evidence of the love of God for us. It dispels the doubts that arise from every inscrutable experience. I am confident that my dear friends would concur in this sentiment. I can muster no interest in mental pictures of their begging God for explanations. I see them bowing in humble adoration before the Lord of glory, exclaiming with incredible wonder, "The half was never told me". I see them mingling with the vast multitude of "just men made perfect", casting friendly smiles in all directions, eagerly looking for those whom "they had loved and lost awhile". I see their radiant faces as they join in the song of the Redeemed with an even greater fervency than when they sang here. I see them eager for any service that God may allocate to them in that better sphere.

*Now with triumphal palms they stand
Before the throne so high,
And serve the God they love amidst
The glories of the sky.*

STIRCHLEY, Birmingham Pastor: J.B. Coleman
THE new Starchley Elim Pentecostal church — the former Institute in Hazelwell Street — was officially opened and dedicated by Rev. Jack Osman, who in the 1950s was minister at Selly Oak Elim Church, during which time he conducted the wedding ceremony of the present Starchley minister.

The opening, attended by about 250 people, was marked by Mr. Osman turning a key in the door of the premises. Scriptures were read by Rev. F. Weaver, of the Assemblies of God, and prayers were led by Rev. Desmond Cartwright.

Mr. Harold Gurden, MP for Selly Oak, said how pleased he was to see such a joyful demonstration of Christian faith, and mentioned that he was responsible for arranging Christian meetings among MPs in the Commons.

Nearly 300 people attended a rally in the evening. Mr. Osman preached and the programme included the Selly Oak Male Voice Choir.

With a mixture of outside specialist and "do-it-yourself" enterprise by members, the old Institute has been renovated and re-decorated for church use at a cost of about £1,000.

For many years, the Selly Oak Elim Church, had had a branch Sunday School in Starchley school, Pershore Road, run by church members.

Members living in Starchley wanted a more local church and eventually house meetings took place before Mrs. Eva Base began similar meetings in the Institute.

Just over three years ago they transferred to the St. Andrew's Methodist church, for Sunday evening worship.

Rev. John Coleman came some little time later. Birmingham-born, he was full-time minister of a church in Caerphilly, Wales, but returned to this city to complete a two-year teacher-training course at St. Peter's College, Salford.

Afterwards he became religious education specialist at Brandwood secondary school, King's Heath, also pastor of the Starchley Elim group of about a dozen ELIM steps out again! A recent Saturday night saw the first of a series of rallies which precede a pioneer campaign to be held in Epsom in September.

At this first meeting a good number were present, many going forward for prayer for healing after the Word had been preached. The message left no one in any doubt that all need Christ and that He alone is the answer.

After the meeting many filled in slips requesting information about future meetings. Sharing the evening's experience with others I confirmed that there was a real assurance of the presence of the Lord and His blessing on the meeting.

people. At that time their funds amounted to about £700.

But the group worked hard fund-raising and by the time they started negotiations with Cadbury-Schweppes for the Institute, they had reached £6,000. Mr. Coleman described this achievement as a "real miracle".

Eventually, Cadbury-Schweppes sold the Institute to them for £13,500 and the group got to work to get the building into its present state.

Mr. Coleman is assisted by a committee of Mr. Sam and Mrs. Ann Lacey, Mr. Fred Evans and Mrs. Base (Secretary), the four original group members, and Mr. John Williams (treasurer).

"We don't propose to start any more meetings just yet. We will build up what we have going now, then gradually begin new ventures", Mr. Coleman said.

"We hope to encourage use of our premises as a conference centre for our churches. Facilities here are ideal for this purpose with the many rooms in the building".

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Brother Walker,

THE loss of my dear wife has emphasised the wonderful family spirit of our Elim movement. Her brother, Len Groves, Secretary of our Ealing Church, and his mother join me in heartfelt thanks for the lovely, comforting letters sent by many friends and churches. Neighbours have expressed their sorrow, but they can't go any further. Loved-ones in the Lord go on to give wonderful and real words of comfort. Yes, it's the one with understanding, with the Spirit of Christ within, who gives such lovely outward expression.

So, as we are in the last of the Latter Days, for all Christians who lose their beloveds it is: "See you soon, dear!" Amen!

Yours cordially in HIM,

J.J. Way

3. "Beginning again"

by Adrian L. Hawkes, Pastor of our Grange town (Teesside) Church

ARE you one of those very efficient people who know exactly what's what all the time, or are you one of those scatter-brained sorts who leave everything to the last minute? Do you do those things that really need doing or do you just let your problems drift by? Are you always planning to turn over a new leaf and start afresh, to take yourself in hand and be different from what you were? Well, we are what we are and to pretend to be different is to pretend.

Jesus said, "Which of you by worrying can make yourself grow taller?". The honest answer is that we can't, though we often try. The direction to which we try to change isn't always the best anyway: to have more money, to live in a big house, to have two cars and a colour telly.

It's almost like chasing soap bubbles. When we catch them, they burst. The trouble is that someone always blows another one for us to chase, just as pretty and just as useless as the first. It's almost like being in an endless race for a non-existent prize: But they're the rules of the game — aren't they?

We claim to agree with the rules that Jesus laid down and we say how great they are, but really we're living only by our own rules. For instance, Jesus said, "Whoever loses his life for My sake shall find it", yet to us that seems to be stupid. We try and hang on to the life that we have already.

Then Jesus said, "Don't spend all your time worrying about what you are to eat, drink, wear and have" — which is just what we do. Instead, He says, "Look first to God. He knows all the everyday things that you need and He will supply them and see that you get them". Again that doesn't seem to make logical human sense. It's more natural for us to go our own way, as young people put it, "do your own thing".

Yet Christ said, "No, look for Me first!". This means that we must find out what His will and way are for our lives — where He wants us to be; what He wants us to do; to ask Him to put His life in us; to be in charge; to see what are the demands of the kingdom of God. Before you do anything else, find God. . . and when you've found Him, then everything else will begin to fit into place.

Being a Christian is not just using your learning power, nor is it following a set of rules, or even going to Church only. It is finding God and learning to trust Him absolutely, because He knows the things that we really need. Have you learned to trust God? Being a Christian is not going our own way, but going God's way, allowing Him to live his life through us.

Whether we consider ourselves to be scatterbrained or efficient, we all go through the stage of trying to turn over a new leaf, even if the last time that we tried it was New Year's Day. I would like you to turn over your life again, but this time do not just rely on your own will-power and tenacity. Turn your life over to Jesus Christ and ask Him to take charge of it. You will find that He is the one who gives the power to live right.

That's the amazing thing about Christianity — it's not just what we are able to do, but what Christ is able to do through us. It isn't how strong our will-power is, but it's His power being made strong in our weakness. What you will be able to do from now on is to take Jesus Christ and his power into every situation.

Are you seeking Him? If so, you are on to the answer for the whole of life.

college column

TENSE but rewarding moments have been experienced with the Elim Singers by H. Douglas Fincher, B.Sc., Music Director of ELIM BIBLE COLLEGE.

For one staggering minute it looked as if we were to follow a performance by Cliff Richard. Our hearts were in our throats. Cliff sauntered down the aisle toward the front of Guildford Baptist Church, but then turned and took a seat in the congregation. We breathed a huge sigh of relief, for in just three short weeks we would be on that platform singing. It turned out that Cliff was attending the Sunday evening service as a regular church-goer, but the whole episode jarred us into a great deal more preparation for our actual appearance at the church at the invitation of the Rev. David Pawson.

What an experience in worshipping the Lord it turned out to be for our thirty-voice Elim Singers! All the long hours of rehearsal were soon forgotten as we spontaneously opened our hearts in song to a huge, receptive congregation in the Millmead Centre.

One week prior to the Guildford Baptist Church appearance, the Elim Singers had presented a full evangelistic programme in the Windmill Theatre, Littlehampton, under the auspices of Ian Smale. The thought of singing in the Windmill Theatre brought a chuckle to some of our singers at first, but when we saw the open-hearted, spiritually hungry young men and women crowding inside, all knew that we had to get on with our Father's business. It seemed that every member of the team was under a special burden and the evening was a wonderful venture.

The programme of music for the Elim Singers is different from that of the Elim Bible College Choir, or from any of the College's ten or so smaller evangelistic music teams. The Elim Singers present a repertoire of contemporary gospel music ranging from beautiful melodic ballad-style songs by Len Magee to the urgent rhythms of "Come Together".

Most of the music is arranged specifically for this group and its soloists, including Trevor Harris (Romford), Christine McCaig (Cardiff), Gaynor Whitton (Ellesmere Port), Paul Raper (Johannesburg), Mildred Thompson (Belfast), Jeff Powell (Newton Abbot), Ursula Coulter (Belfast), Derek Hocking (Filey), and Maureen Robson (Croydon).

The Singers are backed by a talented instrumental ensemble consisting of John Barton (Sheffield), piano and organ, Vivian Fisher (Southend-on-Sea), drums; David Palmer (Horley), bass guitar; Malcolm Hathaway (Bradford), lead guitar; Jeff Powell, solo guitar, Eduardo Cino (Brussels), rhythm guitar; and frequently John Cooke (Bradford), bongos; Mildred Thompson, tambourine; and Paul Raper, harmonica.

A major project presently under way is learning the entire score of "Come Together", by Jimmy and Carol Owens, for several area performances, including one in Guildford Cathedral. Pat Boone's part is being taken by Raphael Okafor, a second-year theology student from Nigeria.

'Pop' Choir surprises Baptists

Guildford Baptists, expecting a visit from Elim Bible College Choir at their Sunday evening service, at Millmead Centre, were surprised to see a display of guitars, drums and microphones that would have done justice at a pop concert.

They were not disappointed. The "choir" had arrived and, after opening with an exciting drumbeat, displayed their virtuosity by changing to a classical rendering of a hymn which did credit to their American conductor.

2. Living it out

by Ian R. Hall
Pastor of our Ryde Church

"I DON'T understand myself at all", lamented Paul, "for I really want to do what is right, but I can't. . . No matter which way I turn I can't make myself do right. I want to but I can't. When I want to do good, I don't; and when I try not to do wrong, I do it anyway" (Romans 7:15, 18,19, Living Bible). For many of us holy living is like shooting at stars with a water-pistol. We know exactly what Paul meant. Our problem is not knowing right, but doing it.

Behind the wrong deed lies a wrong disposition, a sinful nature. It is the man who does the deed and his deed shows the kind of man he is. The Lord Jesus pointedly remarked: "No good tree bears bad fruit, nor again does a bad tree bear good fruit; for each tree is known by its own fruit" (Luke 6:43, 44). Our problem is internal, spiritual, and any solution must be effected there.

When Paul found the answer to the problem, he wrote: "When someone becomes a Christian he becomes a brand new person inside. He is not the same any more. A new life has begun! All these new things are from God" (2 Corinthians 5:17, 18, Living Bible). Because he is a new kind of man, the believer lives a new kind of life that corresponds to the new nature that is his. This transformed situation is entirely of God's doing.

God's Workmanship

Most religions consist of regulations, things to do, but Christianity is based on what is done for believers. Salvation, forgiveness and acceptance with God are offered on the grounds of the atoning death of God's Son Jesus without any consideration of the merits of the recipients. Their part in being saved is described in language that emphasises how completely this is the work of God.

Jesus declared to Nicodemus: "You must be born anew" (John 3:7). The picture of birth stresses the role of parenthood. No-one enters life physically as a result of his own efforts or will-power; he is entirely dependent on others for his birth. So it is in this spiritual birth. The Scriptures declare of the sons of God: "Their birth depended not on the course of nature nor on any impulse or plan of man, but on God" (John 1:13, Phillips).

Similarly Paul wrote of this salvation: "This is not your own doing, it is the gift of God — not because of works, lest any man should boast. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works" (Ephesians 2:8-10).

God's Workmen

The counterpart to being the workmanship of God is being His workmen. Just as we are born to live, so we are reborn and remade to new life. The tragic still-birth has its spiritual parallel. Too many, despite early indications of life, lapse into a comatose state, giving only the barest signs of existence. They have to be fed, tended and sustained like the smallest infant. God does not intend that we should just exist, but that we should really live on the highest level and to the fullest degree.

His expectation is not excessive or exhausting, but simply that we should live what we are. That spiritual life that we received from God finds expression in spiritual service. In an old Quaker meeting-house young Benjamin Franklin was told: "The service begins when the meeting ends". We must work out our Christianity in service. "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling", wrote Paul; "for God is at work in you, both to will and to work for his good pleasure" (Philippians 2:12, 13).

Holy living is not something to live up to, rather is it something to live out!

BOOK REVIEWS

Know what you believe, by Paul E. Little, published by Scripture Union, price 50p, postage and packing 7p extra.

AS a digest of basic Christian doctrine this book should prove as popular as its companion volume, Know why you believe, especially among university age groups. While little space is devoted to refuting error, differing views are presented in clear, positive terms. Mr. Little's own evangelical Calvinism does not greatly colour his comments.

The work is marred by printing errors and incompleteness, e.g., divine healing, is omitted and the gifts of the Spirit receive three lines. He limits inspiration to "the text as originally produced by the writers", ignoring that guidance of the Spirit whereby copyists and translators are kept from inadvertently introducing doctrinal error into the Bible.

Although Hammond's In Understanding be Men covers similar ground more fully and is the better buy, Little is easier to read.

The Church and its Glory, by Dr. D.H. McDonald, B.D., Ph.D., published by Henry E. Walter Ltd., price 90p, postage and packing 6p extra.

THIS book, the latest from the pen of the Vice-Principal of London Bible College, is a verse by verse commentary on Paul's Letter to the Ephesians. The style is clear and lucid. It is not only a work of obvious scholarship and learning, but it is also a volume which conveys the feeling of spiritual sensitivity and warmth. Gems of thought are on every page.

For ministers and all students of the Word, whether engaged in public ministry or not, it is a mine of information which will enrich the mind and warm the heart. It is a rich little volume dealing in a masterly way with one of Paul's richest writings. We heartily recommend it.

Christ is coming, by Alfred F. Missen, price 10p, postage and packing 3p extra.

HERE is a good, inexpensive book. These eight chapters first appeared in the "Study Hour" and, as one who was helped by them in the past, I am grateful that now they have been put into book form.

The first chapter assures us of the certainty of the Second Coming, removing from the scene all "fallacious beliefs" as to what the Bible means by this truth. Chapter two deals with "foregleams of the day", to quote another writer, and is very well documented and substantiated. Dealing with the coming of Christ "for" and "with" His saints, chapter three does what it sets out to do, to "clearly distinguish" between these events. Such subjects as Judgment, the Antichrist and the Millennium are all dealt with and the final chapter enforces the end of all prophetic study, namely, the definite link between hope and holiness. I have much pleasure in recommending this book for such days as these.

"CAN I have one?" will be the obvious reaction when five, six or seven year olds see this new range of brightly-coloured, hard-back picture story books. The pictures are bold, semi-cartoon and very modern in style. The stories are well told, though some of the age group concerned will find difficulty with some of the words if they are reading themselves. These are useful additions to the already large range of children's books. I have found them useful to use as flashcards while telling the stories in our day nursery.

Questions and Answers on Spiritual Gifts, by Howard Carter, published by Assemblies of God Publishing House, price 60p, postage and packing 10p extra.

THIS is not an in-depth study of the subject, but a practical approach, as is usual with the question and answer method. It would therefore be most useful to those seeking guidance on the operation of the gifts of the Spirit. The usefulness would have been greatly increased by an index. I could not accept some of the points of interpretation, e.g. equation of the word of wisdom with predictive prophecy, p.23. Surely wisdom is more concerned with application than communication. One might also question identification of some gifts in operation within the Bible record, e.g. that Jonah exercised the gift of faith when he was in the great fish. The price is very reasonable for a good quality hard-back.

One hundred Days with Matthew, by J. Oswald Sanders, published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott, price £2.50, postage and packing 10p extra.

HERE is a book which I warmly recommend to every Christian. It comes from the pen of a gifted writer and it a veritable gold mine of inspiring spiritual perception. To use it as a book of daily readings would result in an enriched Christian life, but this would not exhaust its usefulness, for these articles were originally a series of Bible studies, so that the book is also expositional in its presentation of the majestic figure of Christ, as disclosed in Matthew's Gospel. Preachers and Bible class leaders will profit from reading this book. Step by step one is taken on a most refreshing exploration into the first Gospel.

Family Prayers 1974, published by Scripture Union, price 60p, postage and packing 7p extra.

AN integral part of every Christian home should be the Family Altar. In a world where sin permeates society, exerting its evil power over impressionable children, it would seem impossible to overestimate the important influence of the family upon individual members for God and for good. Family Prayers 1974 sets out in a clear pattern a balanced diet of daily readings and prayers, together with thought-provoking questions or statements. Written by a group of ladies with families of their own, they show a good understanding of the basic needs, problems and joys of the average family. Their comments and questions are savoured by practical but sound advice. The Editor concedes that parents of the very young may need to simplify the readings if the younger members are to understand them. This is true. Nevertheless, this book provides a fine foundation for daily family worship.

In today's world, where the family unit faces increasing threats from the incursion of blatant or often subtle attacks from society and evil influences, perceptive parents who recognise the need for a daily family meeting with God around His Word, will find this a valuable little book.

My personal Experience of receiving the Holy Spirit, by Wm. F. Burton, price 2p, postage 3p extra.

THIS testimony from a Pentecostal pioneer is well worth 2p. It would be a useful gift to any Christian friend who is enquiring about the Baptism in the Holy Spirit.

The Gifts of the Spirit, by Harold Horton, published by A.O.G. Publishing House, price 60p, postage and packing 7p extra.

I LIKE Harold Horton's exposition of the gifts and can thoroughly recommend this book. Judging by the number of editions published it would seem that many others have liked it, too. With more than 200 pages of informative, readable matter it is worth 60p.

When preparing my own studies on the gifts I found it useful and thought-provoking.

Partners in Pain, by May Culley, published by Coverdale House Publishers Ltd., price 50p, postage and packing 6p extra.

THIS is almost a life-story commencing in 1919, when a teenage girl with a spinal complaint was pronounced incurable, and continuing to the present. For some time she had to wear a special steel-reinforced support, but she eventually discarded it, although she was never completely restored to health. The writer attributes her partial healing to God. The partial suffering which remained is interpreted as being instrumental in keeping compassion toward other sufferers alive. This in turn was a vital factor in a ministry of healing to them. Here is interesting reading in which the power of God to heal is illustrated, but which also raises some of the problems associated with divine healing.

Everybody can know, by Francis and Edith Schaeffer, published by Scripture Union, price £1.95, postage and packing 19p extra.

THIS book takes 345 pages to elaborate on incidents from the New Testament record of the life of Christ! Most of these mediocre comments could be dispensed with by a direct reading of Luke's narrative in the Authorised Version of the Scriptures. Suggestions intended to add interest for the reader are in fact juvenile and boring. The introduction informs us that the "book is written to help people of all ages". We are further offered the trite remark that we can read it either "silently" or "out loud", which underlines the kind of treatment provided from chapters one to twenty-seven. No doubt children's leaders will find help in these pages. Titles of chapters are much better than their contents.

SPRE-E 73, by David Coomes, published by Coverdale House Publishers Ltd., price 45p, postage and packing 5p extra.

READING this book is probably the next best thing to having attended Spre-e, as the challenge "To make Christians more useful... excited about their faith... able to articulate what they believe and why" is presented within its pages. It is easy, enjoyable reading, reporting each day's proceedings and alternating with chapters on the vision and planning which brought Spre-e into being. I was impressed with the honesty with which criticisms are faced, shortcomings acknowledged and errors admitted. One cannot quarrel with the four spiritual laws upon which the witnessing instruction is based, but Pentecostals will view with some concern the teaching on the Holy Spirit and the reference to the "gift of discernment" — an obvious misnomer. Nevertheless I trust that the book will have a wide circulation and make a great impact on non-witnessing Christians.

The Way we care, by Gilbert Kirby, published by Scripture Union, price 50p, postage and packing 7p extra.

MINISTERS and youth leaders are often pressed to find topical subjects for discussion in youth groups and after-church fellowships. This book meets that need. Twenty-two chapters cover a wide range of subjects on moral and ethical issues. Modern problems are dealt with, such as race relations, pollution, industrial life, wealth and poverty, war and peace, crime and punishment. The chapters are short, complete in themselves and easy to read. They were first given as lectures to students at London Bible College by the Principal. They are scripturally based and evangelical, the Christians answer to current problems. This book will be referred to time and time again. All ministers, school teachers and students should have copies.

A final letter from the President,

JOHN LANCASTER

My dear friends,

IT hardly seems possible that the time has come for me to write this last letter. I do so with gratitude to God for His goodness over the past months. By the end of my Presidential year I shall have travelled well over 20,000 miles and had the privilege of visiting 160 churches and ministering in every Presbytery. I have been greatly blessed by the warmth of welcome extended to me and would like to take this opportunity of saying "Thank you" to those who have given me such warm hospitality in their homes and the many who have assured me of their prayers. Not least am I grateful for the many sacrifices made by my wife and family and for the way in which my assistant pastor and the church at Eastbourne have faithfully maintained the work in my absence.

One of the happiest occasions of this special year has been the visit to my home town, Petersfield, Hampshire. In a small upstairs hall in the early 'thirties, the late Pastor V.J. Walker and my father, as secretary and treasurer respectively, commenced the Elim work in the town. Beneath the splendid statue of William of Orange, who sits bestride his horse in the centre of the market square, I preached my first open air sermon as a boy of fourteen. It was good to be back again to share in a meeting conducted by my brother, who led me to the Lord, and to renew fellowship with those whose faithfulness has stood the test of time and whose prayers have followed me through the years.

The work in Petersfield is typical of many others, where small but faithful groups of believers have maintained a consistent testimony through the years, where people who might have easily been tempted to opt for greener pastures have stood true to their convictions and faithful to the task that they believe that God has given them. Visiting my home town again and being reminded of the opportunities that small assembly gave me as pianist, Sunday school teacher, Crusader and open air preacher, I am thankful to God for His goodness and for the kindness — and patience — of those who encouraged me.

All this underlines for me afresh the importance of the local church. This is one of the themes that I have sought to stress in my visits to the churches. What Elim is as a Movement depends on the quality of her ministers, deacons and members in the local setting. Many of you will remember the little couplet I have quoted on many occasions. I make no apology for quoting it once again:

If every member were just like me,

What kind of church would my church be?

How many would be at the Lord's Table if they all came as frequently as you? In some cases there would be none! How much praying, giving, witnessing would there be if your kind of Christianity were the standard for your church? What would the fellowship be like? Brethren and sisters, the kind of people we are individually will determine the character of our churches collectively. If we are on fire for God personally our churches will reflect the glow. If we are cold and indifferent our individual loss of warmth will affect the overall temperature of our assembly. Some years ago a heating expert examined our church and I was amused but impressed to discover that, not only did he measure the output of the boiler and radiators, but he also wanted to know the size of the congregation! Why? — because the human body has its own output of heat and in order to be accurate his calculations had to include the "heat potential" of the congregation. I leave the spiritual implications to you!

Many of you have asked what impressions of the work I have formed following my extensive travels. To be candid, I find it difficult to give a generalized answer. So many different factors influence the life of the local church that there are sometimes wide differences between churches which are only a few miles apart. As a Movement we may be thankful for many thriving churches, but we would be less than honest if we did not admit that there other churches where the name "Pentecostal" on the outside does not seem a very good description of what goes on inside. It seems to me, therefore, that every church must take a good look at itself to see whether it is measuring up to the opportunities and challenge of these tremendous days in which we are living. I believe every pastor, deacon, church officer and member ought prayerfully to examine his personal life and the life of his church and honestly measure what he finds by New Testament standards.

I believe that Elim is a comparatively small Movement with a comparatively large potential. The full gospel message which we preach is "custom-built" for the needs of the twentieth century and the power available to us through the Holy Spirit is more than sufficient to meet the challenge of our day, but we must recognise that our job in the world is not to shout slogans, organise projects, or indulge in denominational empire-building, but, as a group of God-fearing churches, to reach out in compassion to the struggling sinner that we find all around us. Unless we are moved by the love of God and enabled by the Holy Spirit, unless we preach the gospel in its full, Biblical terms and unless every one of us is alive to his personal responsibilities as a member of the local church, we shall fail to truly serve our generation.

WE MUST NOT GO BACK ON PENTECOSTAL TRUTH. In spite of the shortcomings in the realm of spiritual gifts and in spite of some of the foolish things that have been said and done in the name of "Pentecost", we must not retreat from a genuine New Testament experience of the presence and power of the Spirit. Nowhere is there a greater need for humility and sensitivity than in the realm of the supernatural. We must guard against excess and unscriptural practice in this matter of the gifts of the Spirit and this will take courage and grace. Some ministers have been greatly discouraged because those whom they have sought to teach in the right use of spiritual gifts have proved to be resentful and sometimes proudly unteachable. Some assemblies have been put off the exercise of the gifts because of the foolish things that have been said and done at times. None of these things ought to move us from seeking a genuine Pentecostal experience. In these last days we need all the resources that God has made available to us. We must not allow the foolishness of men or the subtlety of Satan to rob us of our heritage.

WE MUST OPEN OURSELVES TO THE AUTHORITY OF THE SCRIPTURES. The time for neat sermon outlines and clever spiritualising has gone. We preachers must seek for more than a "short word"; we need a word from the Lord. There is only one place where that can be found! There is a crying need for sound Bible exposition and for positive application of Bible truth to everyday life. Congregations must come in the spirit of the house of Cornelius: "Now therefore we are all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God" (Acts 10:33). A great deal of nonsense is talked about "deep teaching" — that special brand of involved super-spirituality that reads highly imaginative interpretations into what are really simple, practical, spiritual truths. Our real need today is to let the Bible talk to us and influence our motives, attitudes, judgments, relationships, church life, and life at home and at business. Too often we hold the Word of God at arm's length and when it challenges us we say, "Yes, but. . .". We need to face the Master's words: "Why do you call me 'Lord, Lord', and not do what I tell you?" (Luke 6:46, RSV). Some churches would be transformed if the pastor, or one of the deacons, or some of the members would begin to obey the Word of God. We need not only to believe the Bible from cover to cover, but to obey it from day to day.

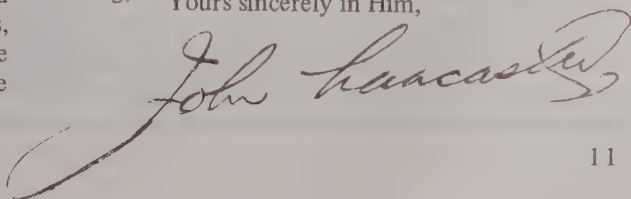

WE MUST OPEN OURSELVES TO THE POWER OF GOD. All of us must recognise that our experience, know-how, natural resources, knowledge of the Scriptures, and every other advantage that we possess are utterly, absolutely inadequate without the enabling of the Spirit. We must not only pay lip-service to this truth, we must obey it. That means that every one of us — pastors, deacons, deacons, wives, youth workers, church officers, members — must be willing to seek God's face in earnest, determined, self-abandoning prayer, not only during special times of prayer, but continuously and regularly. There is no substitute.

WE MUST OPEN OURSELVES TO EACH OTHERS' NEEDS. Our churches are not clubs for Pentecostal perfectionists. They must be spiritual homes where very ordinary Christians can find extraordinary love and understanding. They must be places where lonely people find genuine friendship, where discouraged people find new inspiration, where enthusiastic people find the fire "hotted seven times hotter", where "righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost" (Romans 14:17) provide a wholesome, happy atmosphere in which the Christian virtues will flourish and the things that are foreign to true spirituality will wilt and die. In this harsh, godless world there is a tremendous need for our churches to provide relaxed, really helpful fellowship; and this is where every individual member plays a vital part. "Consider one another to provoke unto love and good works: not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together. . . and so much the more as ye see the day approaching" (Hebrews 10:24, 25).

WE MUST OPEN OURSELVES TO THE REALITIES OF A DYING CIVILISATION. Every church and every individual member must recognise that a solemn responsibility is laid upon them. Evangelism is not a matter of building bigger movements or achieving success in terms of the numbers attending our churches, for it is not a thing to be measured by statistics; evangelism is the Church so moved by compassion towards those who are without hope and without God in the world that at every level — individual and collective — and by every legitimate means she is giving time and energy to making contact with sinners in order to tell them of Christ and love them into His kingdom. This is your task and mine. This is Elim's mission in the world. This is the Four-square Gospel worked out to its logical conclusion.

It only remains for me to wish you all God's richest blessing, stopped one of these cars at the roadside and just could not start it up again. He lifted up the bonnet and did this and that but it would not start. Along came a big, sleek, shining limousine which stopped and out stepped a man who was immaculately dressed and who offered to help. Within a few minutes he had the engine running more sweetly than ever before. The owner was very surprised and, after thanking the gentleman, asked him who he was and how he knew so much about cars? He replied: "I am Henry Ford; I made that car. I know all about its workings".

Yours sincerely in Him,

God made us and He can adjust our lives so that we can be sweeter and better even when we are on the road driving a car or riding a scooter or a bicycle. Paul, that great Apostle, put it this way: "Not I, but Christ". Let Jesus take over our lives and selfishness will give place to love and consideration for others, not only on the roads, but everywhere.

Cars

Words: A. A. Biddle

THERE are eighteen million motor vehicles on the roads of Britain at this time and that number is sure to increase as the years go by. I can understand this happening, for you boys and girls will be looking forward to the day when you can drive a car of your own. The more cars there are, the more accidents will take place and the more people will be hurt and killed. It is said that one of the major causes of accidents is selfishness on the part of the drivers.

Now what can anyone do to alter selfish people? Here is a true story which gives the answer. The first mass-produced car was the Model T Ford which became popular some sixty years ago. One day a man

Royal Walkabout

by A. Nicolson

DO you recall the Silver Wedding of Her Majesty the Queen and Prince Philip? The service of thanksgiving in Westminster Abbey was, as it should be, a grateful acknowledgement of God's goodness to our Queen and her husband over twenty-five years of married life.

One of the highlights of that day was the royal walkabout, during which the Queen and members of her family met and talked with her subjects in the Barbican housing development in London.

The Apostle John wrote, "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth" (John 1:14). For thirty years He spent His life as the son of Joseph and Mary to the people round about. Born in a manger in Bethlehem, He grew up in Nazareth, where the people knew Him and loved Him. Then came the greatest walkabout that the world has ever known. For three and a half years the Son of God walked and talked with the people day by day, blessing the children, healing the sick, giving sight to the blind and raising the dead. It is recorded that the common people heard Him gladly.

It began at Bethlehem so many years ago. His ministry is still going on through His Body, the true Church, made up of all who have been born again by the Holy Spirit.

Pause for Thought

by Trevor Partington,
Covenant Hall, Stafford

THE story is told of a missionary who was translating the Gospel of John into an African dialect. He had great difficulty in finding a word for "believe", which occurs many times in this New Testament book. In the end he had to leave it blank.

One day a native came from another community with a message of great importance. He had been running through the tangled undergrowth for hours and was completely exhausted. Blurting out his message at the very end of his endurance, he threw himself on a nearby hammock. As he went limp, he breathed a sigh of relief and uttered a word in the African dialect that the missionary had never heard before. When asked what the runner had said, one of the nationals replied, "It means, 'I am resting all my weight here'". This was just the word that the missionary needed to express the Biblical concept of belief.

"I am resting all my weight here". When we learn to trust in God like this, placing the full weight of our problems on Him, our Christian life becomes much more joyous. Too often we try to carry God, instead of letting Him carry us.

The Lord says: "I have made, and I will bear; even I will carry, and will deliver you. . . for I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like Me" (Isaiah 46:4, 9).

Gleanings

Daniel at Prayer

by S. E. Petts

"When Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; and his windows being open. . . he kneeled. . . three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God as. . . aforetime" (Daniel 6:10).

WHEN King Darius set the Israelite captive Daniel in authority over the princes and presidents, they sought to depose him. They knew that he worshipped the God of heaven and would not acknowledge any other, so they flattered the king into making a law that any person who asked a petition of any God or man other than the king himself should be thrown into the den of lions. Daniel saw through their plot to kill him, yet he courageously continued to pray to his God.

What was his secret? He was not ashamed of his God for he prayed before open windows. He reverently knelt showing his belief in the almightiness of his God. He prayed three times a day, testifying to his regular dependence upon his God at all times and in all situations. He even thanked God for the coming trial of faith that would prove that his God was supreme.

This unquestioning assurance in the power and the righteousness of God caused him to fear nothing and no-one. The lions' mouths were shut until the king brought him out of the den.

This kind of confident faith in Daniel's God will always work miracles, providing that we have accepted him as our God too.

Points for preachers

An Outline

Symbols of the Word

What the Bible says about the Bible

IT is:

1. A Critic or Judge (Hebrews 4:12). It judges us, not we it.
2. A Lamp (Psalm 119:105), giving illumination, guidance.
3. A Mirror (James 1:23) in which to see ourselves, the Word, and the Lord (v.25; 2 Corinthians 3:18).
4. A Laver or Bath (Ephesians 5:26, RV; Psalm 119:9; John 15:3).
5. Seed (Luke 8:11), living; germinal; reproductive.
6. A Fire (Jeremiah 3:29), destructive; cleansing; purifying.
7. A Hammer (Jeremiah 3:29), mightier than mighty Babylon (Jeremiah 50:23); dynamic (Romans 1:16).
8. A Sword (Ephesians 6:17; Hebrews 4:12) for defence and offence.
9. Food (Jeremiah 15:16; Matthew 4:4; 1 Peter 2:2; Hebrews 5:12-14).

An Exhortation

Pentecostal Rallentando

PASTOR H.W. Greenway mentioned it in a recent EVANGEL article. Rallentando is a musical sign, rall., sometimes, which indicates a gradual slowing-down of the tempo at that part. Congregational singing is often spoiled by the bad habit of introducing rallentandos where they are not indicated. Pastors and leaders are often most to blame, since they lead the people in song. To use a rallentando on the last line of the last verse of a hymn can be fitting and a satisfying conclusion — but every verse!

This habit is most evident in our chorus singing. Since we began the practice of hand-clapping (we didn't used to, you know!), many a good rhythmic clap is spoiled, cut across, by an unnecessary rallentando which the chorus-writers never intended, at least they didn't so indicate. Take that grand resurrection chorus, Elim Choruses no. 904, where we usually slow-down at the word "triumphed", cease clapping since the tempo becomes slower and slower until we come to "crown", after which we start clapping again (or only some do!) to the end. Why break the rhythm? Try the rhythmic beat throughout, as the music indicates. It's much better.

Apropos clapping, and shouting, there is a hymn in our book which enjoins both, but the writer has never heard it sung except in one Elim Church (Redemption Hymnal No. 192).

A Quotation

The Sins of the Ministry

SOMEONE said that the sins of the ministry are whining, shining, and reclining. In his memoirs, Duncan Matheson tells of a lay-preacher, who with others was entertained sumptuously at a gentleman's house. After the dinner they had a meeting. One of the younger men said, "The Spirit is not here. He is grieved. I feel it". His whine was in contrast to his previous obvious enjoyment of the lovely meal. "Nonsense", replied Matheson, who hated all morbid spirituality, "Nothing of the sort. You've just eaten too much dinner and you fell heavy". He was right.

Thoughts from the Book of Exodus

3. The Cry of a Baby (Exodus 2:6)

by F. Lavender,

Pastor of our Croydon Church

IT is a common saying that "great doors swing on small hinges", for great issues are often decided by small happenings. One of the most remarkable illustrations of this in the Scriptures is described in our text. The Lord had commenced His work to deliver Israel from Egypt and, in His infinite wisdom, He made their deliverance hinge on the cry of a baby. That baby boy should have been killed, like so many others, but his cry aroused the pity of Egypt's princess. She took him for her own child and called his name "Moses", not knowing the wonderful purpose for which he had been spared.

Our minds turn from Moses to the Child of Bethlehem. God had a greater purpose than the delivering of Israel from slavery; He had determined to provide salvation from sin for all mankind. The Lord had foreshown in His Word that salvation would flow from the birth of a baby to a virgin (Isaiah 7:14, 9:6). Accordingly, Jesus was born of the virgin Mary in Bethlehem. The Lord made man's salvation hinge upon the birth of a Baby!

Satan knew what the Bible said, but he could not prevent it happening, indeed every attempt made by Satan to destroy or to corrupt Jesus was frustrated, until He offered Himself for our sins on Calvary.

Do you sometimes feel that you are an insignificant

"Be ye steadfast"

"BE thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life". These words occur in the letter to the Church at Smyrna (Revelation 2:10). Remarkably, the message from the Lord foretells tribulation, suffering and imprisonment for the early Christians and there is not a single promise to them that they would escape these trials. I think that we all admire faithfulness. It is frequently commended in the Bible, nor does it go unnoticed in everyday life and business. Most of us know someone who has been rewarded for long, faithful service in industry or in some profession.

When we consider the army as a career, absolute loyalty and faithfulness are demanded. We cannot but admire the steadfastness of the Japanese soldier, Hiroo Onoda. This man finally stopped fighting the second world war at the age of fifty-two after thirty years service in the jungle territory on Lubang Island, seventy-five miles south of Manila in the Philippines. He finally surrendered on the orders of his commanding officer, now a civilian, and came out of the jungle carrying his war sword. In 1944 Hiroo Onoda and four other officers were sent to Lubang to collect strategic intelligence information which they had to accomplish even when their units had been destroyed. He was still faithfully carrying out this task when he was met by a student who told him that the war was over. If loyalty to his country and Emperor can inspire such devotion, what of our devotion to the kingdom of God, the Lord of lords? Surely our faithfulness should at least equal that of this soldier. I become very disappointed at times by the "wishy-washy" attitude of some Christians, who almost condescend to serve the Lord. These people think that they are doing God a favour by enlisting in the army of the Lord and that they have the option to withdraw their allegiance and retire gracefully if things do not suit them. We are called to "endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ". "The holy War", as John Bunyan named it, is a life-long conflict and there should be no turning back or cowardly withdrawal.

When God commissioned Isaiah and sent him on a great campaign, Isaiah inquired how long the spell of duty on active service was to last. God answered him in no uncertain tones: "Until the cities be wasted and without inhabitant and the houses without man, and the land be utterly desolate". What an enterprise, what a bleak prospect! — yet Isaiah obeyed God and we rejoice in and benefit from his faithfulness to this very day.

In contrast to the examples of faithfulness I have given is the story of a sailor who deserted his ship in 1920. After fifty-four years he boarded Prince Charles' ship Jupiter at San Deigo, U.S.A., and, standing stiffly to attention, blurted out his secret: "I jumped ship in 1920. Now I want to clear my name, get rid of the shame that has haunted me all my life. I'm a deserter. I've come to give myself up". Thus is borne out the painful thought that a deserter is never truly happy or at peace. This sailor, after escaping to California, eventually joined the American Navy and served in World War II yet it must have been a second best allegiance and regret must have plagued him.

Let us search our hearts today and check our service for God and examine our attitudes. Do we rank among the "Faithfuls" in the army of the Lord or are we tempted to desert when conditions are difficult? That veteran campaigner Paul the apostle could write to young Timothy: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith". There speaks a true soldier and a Christian justifiably satisfied with his endeavours. Are you satisfied with your service, and is God?

nobody? Do you ask how God can possibly use someone like you? The Bible says that God takes foolish things to confound the wise and those who are nobodies to confound the somebodies (1 Corinthians 1:26-29). He uses little things to fulfil mighty purposes and He will surely use us if we give ourselves to Him. If we were somebodies we might become proud and rob God of the glory, but, because we are nobodies, God will have all the praise.

by Barry J. Killick

AS I walked into the room I saw one of the most amazing sights I have ever witnessed. A fire was burning in the hearth, but the place smelt damp and musty. The only other light came from a lamp with a red psychedelic shade. Posters of Jimmy Hendrix and Alice Cooper were pinned on the walls and a stereo was playing the contemporary music of Joni Mitchell. Sitting around on tattered cushions, a ragged sofa, hard-backed chairs and a shredded carpet was the freakiest bunch of young drop-outs I had seen.

Here were some real live drug addicts. In my mind I could see my name up in lights — another Dave Wilkerson or Frank Wilson. I imagined articles in all the Christian magazines head-lined: “Hippy Revival in Derby”.

I felt nervous all the same and wondered whether anything had been put into the coffee that I was handed. But no, I was warmly welcomed. The spokesman of the group began to tell me their story. Only two months before each one of these freaks had been addicted to heroin, LSD or other drugs. Then, in different parts of England, they had each been confronted with the claims of Jesus Christ and by the grace of God they had been saved. They were released from the bondage and shame of drug taking and were being transformed and renewed by the Holy Spirit, although they still had plenty of problems. They asked me to help them and to give them Bible teaching. These young Christians had tried to join in with local churches, but because of their long hair and unconventional dress they had been regarded with suspicion.

Our first meeting took place ten months ago now. The road has been hard for these young people. Converted ex-addicts have very different problems to overcome even after being filled with the Holy Spirit. For example, many are prone to flash-backs to earlier LSD trips and may have hallucinations which are sometimes confused with spiritual experience. Much wisdom is needed to guide these young people. Often physical damage takes time to heal. There is, too, a strong psychological pull to go back to the old life, to give up when things get rough, a temptation stronger than many of us have to face.

But, praise God, “by His stripes we are healed”. We believe that this is often brought about through a natural process of rehabilitation.

The whole world cries out for love and yet it is only in the Lord Jesus Christ that the need can be truly met. These brothers and sisters especially need the sort of love that expresses itself in action and real understanding as much as in words of advice. Converted drug users and drop-outs are not a special breed of human beings. Many have commented that others tend to put them on a pedestal just because they used to take drugs. This does more harm than good.

We praise God that the majority of this particular group of converts have settled into the church fellowship and are eager to taste more of the things of the Lord. Sadly, though, the leader of the group has slipped back to his old habits. It is the fruits of conversion which are more important than any initial experience we may have.

We have all been saved from the same penalty of sin and death whether we were drug addicts or not, but “if anyone is in Christ, he is a new creature, the old has passed away and behold the new has come!”

Pray for these young people that God will grant them a special portion of faith and strength in Jesus. (Barry J. Killick is the Assistant Minister of our Derby Church)

BOOK REVIEWS

Susan leads the way, by Christine Courtney, published by Victory Press, price 35p, postage and packing 7p extra.

I FOUND this book quite readable, but I cannot say that it had me gripping my seat with excitement. The book does not inform the reader of the ages of the principal characters, but I think that one can assume that they are not yet in their teens. From this point of view it is encouraging to note that they are Christians who pray about everyday matters and who praise God when He answers their prayers.

Ezra 4:1-24

"The adversaries. . .weakened. . .and troubled them . . .and wrote an accusation" (vv.1, 4, 6).

THE building of the temple was no sooner begun than it was being hindered. Note the pattern: promises of help (v.2) with purposes of hindering (cf. Psalm 55:21); discouragement (v.5); false accusations (v.6). This has all the marks of the Devil's treatment of all who seek to promote God's glory: to misrepresent, weaken and accuse. He is a liar (John 8:44); a hinderer (1 Thessalonians 2:18); the accuser (Revelation 12:10). The consequence of all this was "the work ceased" for a time. Do not blame the Devil for everything, however, for Haggai 1 suggests that the indifference and coldness of the exiles was as much the cause of the House of God lying waste as the work of the enemy.

Tuesday, April 30th

Ezra 5:1-17

"We are the servants of God. . .and build" (v.11).

AFTER fifteen years of neglect, God stirred the hearts of the Jews through His prophets (v.1) to build His house. A church notice advertises: "Wanted for the New Jerusalem — more builders, fewer architects". Plenty think that they know what should be done; few get down to doing it. We need that rare virtue, possessed in some measure by these exiles: a sense that we are not our own masters, that we are God's servants and have a job to do.

Wednesday, May 1st

Ezra 6:1-22

"Let the house be builded. . .let the expences be given out of the king's house" (vv.3, 4).

LIKE the house the returned Jews were building for God, the building up of each Christian life into a temple of the Holy Spirit (1 Corinthians 3:16) is firmly planted on a sure foundation (Ephesians 2:10). All the material is adequately provided by the limitless resources of the King. With the apostle we can say: "My God shall supply all your need according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:19). There is no need for any unfinished "life-buildings"!

Thursday, May 2nd

Ezra 7:1-28

"Ezra prepared his heart to. . .seek. . .do. . .teach" (v.10).

EZRA was remarkably blessed of God, who prospered him and made the king grant him all he requested. Ezra knew the reality which we so much covet for ourselves and for our Christian testimony. What was his secret? Was it because "he prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord"? God blessed this man not because of his accomplishments, but because of his aspirations. For Ezra it was the principle set out in Psalm 1. He delighted in God's Word, made a practice of obeying it as the rule of his life and became fruitful and prosperous as he communicated it to others.

Friday, May 3rd

Ezra 8:15-36

"The hand of our God was upon us" (v.31).

EZRA had been witnessing to the king of God's ability to help those who seek Him. Now he had to prove his own words as he journeyed to Jerusalem with his little ones and his substance (v.21). Danger faced him, but because of his testimony he would not ask for soldiers and horses. Rather, he fasted and prayed (v.32). God brought him safely to his destination. In the face of danger, here is a good example for us to follow. The psalmist does not say in vain: "Blessed is the man that trusteth in thee" (Psalm 84:12). As Peter says: "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly" (2 Peter 2:9).

Saturday, May 4th

Ezra 9:1-15

"I arose up from my heaviness. . .I fell upon my knees" (v.5).

THE servant of God grieved over Israel's sin, for they had found affinity with the strangers of the land, marrying, mixing, meddling with the ways of the unclean inhabitants of Caanan, which God had forbidden (vv.11, 12). Yet Ezra's grief drove him to his knees to intercede on their behalf (v.5), ever the pattern of a loving heart (Luke 19:41). Do we feel pain over those who once ran well, yet how have turned to find affinity with the world? Is it such that drives us to the throne of God on their behalf? Does what we see and hear make us criticise, condemn, or pray?

Sunday, May 5th

Ezra 10:1-17

"Be of good courage, and do it" (v.4).

THIS word to Ezra was not out of place. He needed courage to undertake a very necessary but unpleasant task. After much prayer and heartsearching, he called the people to separate themselves from their sin and return to God. This was no easy task, for husbands, wives and children were involved, but it was vital to their well-being. Ezra courageously set the wheels turning and the work of reformation got under way. It takes courage to point out the sins that offend. God is holy and His Word (2 Corinthians 6:17) leaves no doubt as to what we must do with unlawful associations — and that takes courage, too!

Midlands Evangelistic Conference

"GOD... doth devise means that His banished be not expelled from Him" (2 Samuel 14:14), was the text used by Pastor G. Canty to introduce his paper on evangelism at the Midlands' evangelistic conference at our Graham Street, Birmingham, Church. This is what our Conference was about: the devising of means — God's means — to bring men, women, boys and girls back to God through our Lord Jesus Christ. Appropriately, our first speaker, Pastor D.W. Cartwright, emphasised the content of the evangelistic message, linking this with the New Testament practice of evangelism, thus focussing our attention at the outset on the God-ordained means for the proclamation of the gospel.

Following our mid-morning break, Pastor Canty stimulated our thinking about Pentecostal evangelism in general and Elim evangelism in particular. Both morning speakers emphasised that our evangelism must be Christ-centred rather than socially-orientated, while recognising that our gospel must influence man where he is — in society. These papers were followed by a stimulating hour of discussion, when both speakers answered questions.

Following an excellent lunch prepared by the ladies of the Graham Street Church the Conference re-assembled at 2 p.m. to consider such topics as pioneer evangelism, financing evangelism, personal evangelism, youth evangelism and church campaigns. This session was introduced by Pastor K. Smith who spoke about Elim's evangelism in the Midlands, obviously a burden on his heart. Members of our General Conference Evangelistic Committee made valuable contributions to this session, including Pastor Ron Jones who shared with us the ways in which the West of England Presbytery has increased the number of churches in the district over the past ten years, and Pastor R.B. Chapman who spoke from 1 Thessalonians 2:7, 8 on the preparation of a local church for a campaign and to receive new converts. In the discussion Mr. R. Smith of Fishers' Fellowship, speaking of the way in which people regard personal evangelism with fear and trepidation, suggested that we should adopt the slogan of the Anglers' Association: "Relax — Go Fishing"!

Exhibition and bookstalls were set up by various evangelistic agencies who had been invited for the occasion, including the Birmingham Bible Institute, Birmingham City Mission, Mr. C.W. Smith of our Swindon Church with his video tapes, Fishers' Fellowship, Open Air Campaigners International, Scripture Gift Mission, Victory Tract Club and our own Elim Church Bookroom.

The climax to the day was the evening rally. Pastor P.S. Brewster stressed the urgency of the days in which we are living. He urged that we should not slow down or slacken off in the face of difficulty and opposition, but that we should engage in evangelism even more. The concluding message of the day was brought by Pastor Ron Jones. He reminded us that men's priorities often seemed to be methods and money, but that God's priority is men. It would seem that in recent years more and more evangelism has been done by less and less evangelists. Both Mr. Brewster and Mr. Jones seemed to be making a plea for more evangelists. Matthew 9:38 teaches us that this should be the prayer of the whole church. As Mr. Jones was concluding his message, his words were punctuated by the explosion of bombs in the City centre of Birmingham, giving us a stark reminder of the urgency of our task and reminding us of the courage of our brethren in Ulster who are faithfully proclaiming the message of the cross in face of the continual threat of bomb and bullet.

Before the Conference we wondered how well it would go as it followed so soon after the National Evangelistic Conference held in Birmingham eighteen months ago. We need not have wondered. The fresh impetus that it has given to our evangelistic vision and outreach must surely have made all the work that went into the arranging of this Conference worthwhile.

Credit must be given to Pastor Ken Smith, Evangelistic Secretary of the Birmingham Presbytery, for the energy and enthusiasm with which he made all the necessary arrangements for the Conference. It was good to see men present from the West Midlands Presbytery, the Potteries, Shrewsbury and the West of England Presbytery as well as from Birmingham and district, which well reflects our love for the gospel of Christ and the souls of men. We would also express our appreciation to the Graham Street Church for the excellent facilities for the Conference and to the ladies who prepared such excellent meals.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Pastor Walker,

I would like to say how very much I have enjoyed and appreciated Pastor F. Lavender's weekly series entitled, "Thoughts from the Book of Genesis", which have been a real inspiration and source of uplift to me. I eagerly awaited each copy. I was so relieved to read of the new series on the Book of Exodus.

The story of Joseph was so beautifully portrayed and so graphically described. I read and reread it slowly so as not to miss one word. I cut them out and am keeping them for future reference — Thank you, Pastor Lavender!

Yours sincerely in Christ,
(Miss) C.V. Bradbury

Editorial

IT'S Conference time again! That annual reunion and spiritual tonic begins this very day at Middleton Towers, Morecambe, Lancs. We ask those who are not privileged to be present to remember the Conference in your prayers.

The theme this year is: "JESUS IS LORD". This surely puts the accent just where it ought to be. As our Movement lifts Jesus higher, as we so enthusiastically sing, and crowns Him Lord of all, there must follow blessing and increase. If there is one thing about the ministry of the Holy Spirit which is undeniable, it is that He reveals the Lord Jesus Christ. This is His special and particular manifestation. It follows that any church or movement which takes to itself the name of "Pentecostal" must do the same. Critics accuse us of being, as they say, "Jesucentric", which, in crude terms, must mean that we are always "on about" Jesus. We take that rebuke as a compliment! He is Lord, hallelujah! Of course we praise Him, concentrate attention on Him; there's no-one like Him.

We yield not one inch in our avowed belief in the blessed Trinity, but to glorify Jesus is completely Scriptural and of the essence of the New Testament revelation. After all, did it not please the fulness of the Godhead bodily to dwell in Christ? Is it not so that anyone who is "in Christ" must therefore be one with Him and with the Father? John 17 clearly indicates this. Yes, Jesus IS Lord and we want to proclaim it and practise it with all the power and grace that we can.

We thank the retiring President, John Lancaster, for his ministry during his year of office and would specially express appreciation for his pen ministry. Despite his exceedingly busy itineraries and his continued involvement during the year in the life and work of the Church at Eastbourne, our readers have benefitted greatly from and have been deeply challenged by our brother's writings.

We also welcome our new President, George Canty, and pray that God will mightily anoint him. We look forward to his contributions to our official organ as well as to all the other aspects of his versatile ministry.

FUNDAMENTAL BELIEFS OF THE ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH — 1. THE BIBLE: We believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God and that none may add thereto or take away therefrom except at their peril. 2. THE TRINITY: We believe that the Godhead eternally exists in three persons: Father, Son and Holy Ghost and that these three are one God. 3. THE CHURCH: We believe that the Church consists of all persons who have been regenerated by the Holy Ghost and made new creatures in Christ Jesus. 4. THE SAVIOUR: We believe that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God and that through the death and risen power of Christ all who believe can be saved from the penalty and power of sin. 5. THE HEALER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Healer of the body and that all who will walk in obedience to His will can claim Divine Healing for their bodies. 6. THE BAPTISER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Baptiser in the Holy Ghost and that this Baptism with signs following is promised to every believer. 7. THE COMING KING: We believe in the personal and pre-millennial return of our Lord Jesus Christ to receive unto Himself the Church and afterwards to set up His Throne as King. 8. THE FRUIT: We believe that every believer on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour should produce the ninefold fruit of His Spirit: Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. 9. THE GIFTS: We believe that the Church should claim and manifest the nine Gifts of the Holy Spirit: Wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discernment, tongues, interpretation. 10. THE MINISTRY: We believe that God has given some apostles and some prophets and some evangelists and some pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry for the edifying of the Body of Christ. 11. THE FUTURE STATE: We believe in the eternal conscious bliss of all true believers in Christ and also in the eternal conscious punishment of all Christ rejecters. 12. THE ORDINANCES: We believe in the following ordinances: Partaking of bread and wine in memory of our Lord's death, baptism by immersion for believers, the laying on of hands and the anointing of the sick with oil.

Trafalgar Square 1974

Our reporter: John Fry

H. W. Greenway preaching to the crowd in Trafalgar Square

AS we arrived at the great historic Square, we discovered that a barrier had been erected to keep crowds a short distance away from the plinth. Immediately I thought: "Praise God, there is no barrier between God and His people".

A vast crowd of folk who love the Lord had gathered from all over the country with one purpose in mind — to praise the name of the risen Lord. Pastor B.R.J. Garrard, who very ably convened the rally, asked us to sing, "Amazing Grace", after which he spoke to the Lord in prayer.

Seven lovely young ladies from Kensington Temple, London, delightfully sang, "Isn't the love of Jesus something wonderful?". Only because of His love could we testify to His salvation.

"Up from the grave He arose" is a great chorus. Pastor Garrard led us in singing it, after which he asked "Did you enjoy that?". A resounding "Yes" came from the congregation.

The soloist for this great occasion was Mrs. Moody from our Selly Oak Church. She very beautifully sang, "I believe in Miracles". Her message in song paved the way for the introduction of the first speaker, Pastor T.J. Stevens.

The people listened intently as he clearly spoke from Philippians 3:10, "What is the resurrection about?" asked the speaker. "That you may know Him!". He referred to a poster that he had seen, "Are you lost?". Jesus said "I am the Way". "Are you confused?"; Jesus said "I am the Truth". "Are you bored?"; Jesus said "I am the Life". He spoke of the boulder of unbelief in the lives of people and called upon them to let Jesus remove it. "Many," he said, "fail to see the Lord, because they neglect, putting off the call of Jesus, but He is willing to save you today".

The girls from Kensington Temple sang again. It was a joy then to sing, "He's alive" and "Christ for me". This led to the introduction of Sydney Smith from the Midlands who gave a lively, one minute testimony of how he had invited Christ into his life and how the Lord had instantly delivered him from smoking and alcoholic drink in a godly Minister's house. He finished with the words, "God is real. Accept Him!".

Mrs. Moody sang, "I have no song to sing, but that of Christ, my King". Her lovely voice came over the vast audience in a crystal clear manner.

The time had arrived for the final speaker, Pastor H.W. Greenway. For twenty-eight years our esteemed brother had convened the rallies in the Square. It was a pleasure to listen to him this year as he ministered God's Word. He said, "You would not expect to read a Biblical quote in a comic paper". He had come across such a magazine with the phrase written across it, "Jesus is coming". Inside the paper there was a competition advertising a "grand wickedness contest". Seven deadly sins were named, with an invitation to the competitors to name the eighth deadly sin. "Only fools mock at sin", said Pastor Greenway. "You would not play with a deadly thing, but people are doing just that". He reminded us that London was becoming known throughout the world as a city of sin. He told us of the country's official measure which could be seen in the Square. "We must consider the divine measure", he said. "'All have sinned'. 'The soul that sinneth it shall die'". He spoke of the signs in the world, which were setting the scene for Christ's coming. In a gripping manner Pastor Greenway applied his message to sin-broken lives. He asked every believer to raise his hand as a witness to God's saving grace, to which hundreds responded. Our brother made an appeal to people to accept Christ. It was thrilling to know that several people responded.

Pastor Garrard called upon us to sing, "All hail the Power of Jesus' Name", and, as he closed in prayer, our hearts were filled with wonder at the majesty of His name and His saving power. We came away from the Square thanking God for the privilege of witnessing for Him.

A. A. Biddle convening the afternoon service in the Royal Albert Hall

The Royal Albert Hall —Afternoon Report

by Mervyn J. Tilley

THE opening chorus was a timely reminder that Elim has played a vital part in the spreading of the Pentecostal message in this twentieth century. From very small beginnings, the faith and courage of the early pioneers has reproduced in such a way that "all over the world the Spirit is moving". It is just as the prophet said it would be and we have a part in it; hallelujah! With Archie A. Biddle leading the singing, we sang, "Jesus is Alive", and then the hymn "Look, ye saints, the Sight is glorious". It was encouraging to see such a good gathering to crown the Saviour, King of kings.

As we went to prayer, the presence of God was very real as we sang, "He touched me". Many stood, desiring to be included in the prayer as Pastor W. Ron Jones committed everyone and everything to God in prayer.

Our guest from the Assemblies of God, Selwyn Cox, ministered in song and posed the question, "Who am I?" causing us to consider afresh the amazing grace that makes us "His people".

The Royal Albert Hall is almost a second home to D.B. Gray and as he led the choirs he couldn't resist turning around to conduct the congregation and we in turn couldn't resist singing those lovely words, "I do believe, I will believe that Jesus died for me".

We sang, "To God be the glory", after which the Gospel Four from Southampton sang two songs in close harmony, the first of which reminded us that our faith is not just a matter for time, but for all eternity. The massed choir sang two songs, one of which was "Jesus is the Answer". Archie Biddle led the congregation in the chorus "He's alive". Selwyn and Shirley Cox sang beautifully, "Thirty pieces of Silver". Practically every song or hymn that was sung uplifted the Lord Jesus. Leading to ministry of the Word, we sang, "Wonderful Name He bears". Then the London Crusader Choir sang two songs of testimony, "Happiness is the Lord" and "Do you know my Jesus?".

Pastor Alex B. Tee is no stranger to the Royal Albert Hall, although this year he must have been preoccupied with the message because he omitted to sing "his" chorus, "The Lion of Judah"! His message on revival has already been reported in THE ELIM EVANGEL.

The closing hymn was very fitting, because it called on the Lord to send the fire to meet our need. After the hymn, the gifts of the Spirit were manifested, then Joseph Smith prayed fervently that God's blessing would remain with us. For one day, the Royal Albert Hall was the house of God. It was good for us to be there, because He was there.

leaving for Rhodesia in July. May God bless her, and may we pray for her!

Pastor W. Ron Jones spoke about the "Forward the Faith Foundation", a scheme to make possible the expansion of the Pentecostal testimony in the British Isles. The London Crusader Choir sang, "The King of Love my Shepherd is" and "Shepherd of Love". This was, we were told, the 156th time that Mr. Gray had led the choir in the Albert Hall. Just before the preaching, Selwyn and Shirley Cox sang. Selwyn had been asked (by certain members of the Executive Council - the "young in heart" he called them!) to sing the song "My Lord has set me free" in which he yodels in the chorus. We were glad that he didn't ask us to join in!

Our President, John Lancaster, then stepped forward to preach the Word of God. His text was Romans 14:9. Concisely, with great thought, and deep insight, Pastor Lancaster expounded this portion of God's Word (see pp. 10,11).

The service came to a close with the singing of the hymn, "When the Trumpet of the Lord shall sound", followed by a number of choruses. Clearly, in spite of the fact that many had distances to travel, we were loathe to leave. This great hall, the scene of many wrestling bouts, had witnessed wrestling of another kind this night. Satan had been wrestling in human hearts, but many had reached out in faith to the risen, ascended Lord, and touched Him for a life of victory. "For to this end Christ died, and rose. . . that He might BE Lord!"

E.M.S. Chairman R. B. Chapman and Elim missionary Vera McGillivray look on smilingly as newest prospective missionary Joy Bath greets the congregation in the evening service

IT has been suggested that Easter is a "kind of seasonal vitamin pill, a spiritual shot in the arm for the lifting of flagging spirits", but it is far more than these. As the Secretary-General, J.T. Bradley, led our opening hymn, "Jesus Christ is risen today", my prayer was, "May this service be more than just a reviver of flagging spirits; may it be a deep expression of our faith in God".

In his opening prayer, T.W. Walker spoke of the Holy Spirit's manifestations in creation, throughout history and right now. The Executive of the God-head was here. Following this prayer we listened to the anointed music of the Gospel Four from our Southampton Church. Then came the reading of God's Word. Pastor J.C.Smyth directed us to Romans 14:4-12, after which we sang the hymn that is becoming a firm favourite at many of our united gatherings, "Hark 'tis the final Trumpet pealing through the Skies". What a thrilling chorus it is: "Glory, glory be to Jesus". Mr. Bradley asked us to read out the last verses, and, having done so, he then added, "Now you can all say that you've actually spoken in the Royal Albert Hall!"

"Singing along the Way" and "Still with Thee" were the two pieces sung by the massed choirs. For the missionary spot, E.M.S. Chairman R.B. Chapman read telegrams from Missionary Secretary Leslie Wigglesworth, who was in Guyana for Jubilee celebrations, from Miss Frieda Grossen (Transvaal), and from Rhodesia. Miss V. McGillivray was introduced to us. For thirty-four years she has served the Lord in the Far East and at present she runs twenty-five Bible Classes a week and teaches 650 young people every year. Miss Joy Bath, from our Salisbury Church, was then asked to step forward. Miss Bath will be

3. Living for Him

by Ian R. Hall
Pastor of our Ryde Church

"If a man has a WHY for his life he can bear with almost any HOW", declared the philosopher Nietzsche in one of his lucid moments. The problem of Meaning haunts many. Why should I be moral, kind, honest, faithful? Why can I not live as I please, or even end my life? What does it all amount to? With no purpose outside himself, modern man often finds himself incapable of bearing the inevitable pressures of life. Having neither anchor, compass, charts or rudder, his ship is driven before the wind until the rocks and reefs claim their victim.

In 1969 Herman Kahn, the brilliant American thinker, in an interview with Bernard Levin on A.T.V. remarked: "My greatest hope is that the problem of meaning and purpose will be satisfactorily solved and in a way which gives life a kind of significance, and a taste, and a savour". The apostle Paul proclaimed the solution nearly two thousand years before: "None of us lives for himself only, none of us dies for himself only; if we live, it is for the Lord that we live, and if we die, it is for the Lord that we die. Whether we live or die, then, we belong to the Lord" (Romans 14:7, 8, TEV). The Christian life is the life lived for Christ; therein lies its power.

The Reason for it

The Bible is emphatic regarding the reason why we should live for Him: "His purpose in dying for all was that men should cease to live for themselves, and should live for Him who for their sake died and was raised to life" (2 Corinthians 5:15, NEB). Our lives were condemned to death because we had disobeyed God the Creator. "The wages of sin is death", pronounced God (Romans 6:23), but by sending His own Son to die in the place of every man He is able to offer us all the gift of life.

The price that He paid entitles Him to expect holy living from us. "You do not belong to yourselves but to God; He bought you for a price. So use your bodies for God's glory" (1 Corinthians 6:19, 20, TEV). We show whose we are by how we live — and by redemption we are His!

The Result of it

The Biblical corollary to "The Lord knows those who are his" is "Whoever says that he belongs to the Lord must turn away from wrongdoing" (2 Timothy 2:19, TEV). Because we belong to Him, we should live for Him. This means living a life acceptable to Him, as T.O. Chisholm sang: "Living for Jesus a life that is true, striving to please Him in all that I do".

Pleasing God requires a life of faith, i.e., implicit trust in and dependence on God. "Without faith it is impossible to please Him" (Hebrews 11:6). It also requires a life of faithfulness to God, for He declared: "If any of them turns back, I will not be pleased with him" (Hebrews 10:37, TEV).

The perfect Example is He of whom God declared: "This is my beloved Son, with whom I am well pleased" (Matthew 3:17). His life was one of utter dependence upon His Father and of unwavering faithfulness to God's will. "It is the way the Master went, should not the servant tread it still?" (H. Bonar). If he would please God, he should! Not only has God told us what He expects of us, but He has also shown us how it works out in practice.

The Christian has the answer to the problem of Meaning — he lives for Jesus. That is holy living.

Thoughts from the Book of Exodus

4. Moses rejected (Exodus 2:14)

by F. Lavender,
Pastor of our Croydon Church

MOSES was brought up as a prince of Egypt, but he was clearly aware that he was an Israelite. In manhood he was deeply troubled by the distress of Israel, so he tried to deliver them in the only way he knew — by his sword! He thought that Israel would understand that he was their saviour, but they would not have him. As a result he was forced to leave Egypt and Israel's bondage lasted another forty years.

Stephen used Israel's rejection of Moses in his defence to the Jewish rulers (Acts 7) to underline their rejection of the Lord Jesus. He showed how the nation constantly resisted the Holy Spirit, yet he declared that their wickedness could not prevent the fulfilment of the plan of God. Though Moses was rejected by Israel, he was chosen and exalted by God and was used by Him to save the very people who had scorned him. In the same way God has gloriously exalted the Lord Jesus Christ and has made Him the only Saviour for both Jew and Gentile.

Israel finally accepted and respected the leadership of Moses. Similarly, many of us who were once rebels have acknowledged the Lord Jesus as our Lord and Saviour. The Word of God says that all must one day bow before Him. Most of us would like to be accepted and well thought of by our fellow-men, but this Scripture shows that this is not of great importance; what really matters is to have the approval of our Lord. Men may refuse and reject both us and our convictions, we may be ignored, reviled and forgotten by those whom we try to help, yet, if we obey the Lord, He will cause our way to be established. He may use us to bring salvation even to those who would not listen to us. Above all He will use our lives to bring honour to His own name.

Healed through a Handkerchief

Pastor Emanueli Kazimoto remembers

IT was during the days when Hamisi killed 'his' pig. Bwana Bulu gathered us few Wakweli believers at the now harmless demon tree to learn more of his God and Yesu Kristo in whom we had believed. Often we witnessed at the clinic where Mama Bulu was drawing many to seek her help. "How much were you paid for speaking?" I was asked. "Is it true that Bulu marks his followers with a branding iron?"!

Hamisi was spending the nights in his maize field, for the destructive pigs were numerous. Hearing a noise and investigating, he said to himself, "What pig is this — a pig that breaks off the cobs and carries them away? Lo, this pig is carrying a sack". The two following nights the thefts continued and then Hamisi discovered that the thief was a lazy neighbour. "Tonight", Hamisi told himself "will be the last".

The night was partly moonlit. As he heard the movements of the thief Hamisi carefully measured out a full charge of gunpowder, poured it into the gun, tamped down the shot on top of it, checked the primer and waited. The thief filled the sack and began to steal away. Hamisi fired shouting: "Pig! Pig! Pig!". The thief ran, fell, and died.

In the morning the neighbours asked Hamisi about the night. "Good", said Hamisi, "but I killed a pig". "Where is it?" they answered, "Let us see". They followed the path until they found the sack of maize cobs. "This pig was cutting corn like a man!" they said, "What sort of a pig is this?". "I don't know" answered Hamisi, "but I saw that it was a pig". A little further on they lay the dead thief.

Escorted to the court, Hamisi was questioned by the chief. "I saw a pig breaking off my corn. I shot it. Lo, it was a man!". "That is how it was", the chief replied. "You have done well". To his servants he said, "Give him some more powder and shot for his muzzle loader. What is worse than a thief?"

Because my wife was very sick I had to return home daily. Bwana Bulu said, "We will come with you and pray for her". "Thank you", I said. But the days went by without an opportunity. I was despairing. Finally Bwana Bulu said, "Again today we have no time to come with you. Joseph, read Acts 19:11, 12". When Joseph had finished reading the Scripture, Bwana Bulu explained the meaning to us. He then took a handkerchief out of his pocket. Putting his hand on it, we put our hands on top of his and prayed. He gave it to me saying, "Put this handkerchief on the afflicted part of your wife". "Yes", I assented, but I was disappointed that they did not go with me.

When I got home I found my wife very ill. I said to her, "I have come with a thing from Msolwa; it is prayer. The prayer itself is this handkerchief. Bwana Bulu said that they prayed over these things in God's Book and that miracles are possible today. Do you believe?". "I believe" she answered. I put the handkerchief on her head.

My wife began to talk naturally, got up, dressed, went to fetch water, cooked some food and we all sat down to eat. She was instantly, fully healed. Truly, if you can believe, God has all the power. My wife was healed by the putting on of a handkerchief. (Pastor Emanueli Kazimoto is a member of our Tanzania Executive).

The Quiet Time

by S. E. Petts

"In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength" (Isaiah 30:15).

QUIETNESS and stillness come first in everything that lasts.

Jesus was silent for thirty years before His final few years of intense activity. In Psalm 23, "He maketh me to lie down" precedes "He leadeth me". Without rest first, there is no progress, no strength.

Isaiah puts quietness and confidence before strength. Only in the stillness can we feel the presence of God that gives confidence in Him. The seed must lie still in the earth before it can root and grow. The hen must sit still on her eggs if they are to hatch out. If we are regularly still in God's presence He will do the rest.

The Psalmist says that we must be still in order to know God. If we keep in touch with the Father, God's presence within us will be manifested.

The quiet time each morning is born of the wisdom of God.

Slowcoach

John 11:46

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

PETE is never on time. He keeps everyone waiting. At eight o'clock each morning his mother calls up the stairs, "Pete! It's time to get up!". Pete rubs his eyes, yawns, stretches, then turns over and goes straight back to sleep. He finally gets up at half-past eight. He picks his way through his cornflakes, then collects his satchel and calls for his friends, but they have long tired of waiting for him and have gone on. Pete dawdles along the street, stopping here and there to look in shop windows. He just manages to reach the school gates in time to hear the bell.

Pete arranged to meet his friends at five o'clock, but it is half-past five before Pete arrives. His friends have started the game without him. As usual, they are tired of waiting for him.

Pete keeps Jesus waiting, too. He knows that he really ought to ask Jesus to come into his heart, but he says, "I'm young yet. I've plenty of time ahead of me. I'll decide for Jesus when I'm older". This is what Pete said last year and the year before that, too. Each time Pete puts off his decision for Christ, it becomes harder for him. It's sad, because Pete is missing so much. Slowcoaches always do.

Matthew wasn't a slowcoach. When Jesus called him to be His disciple, he immediately gave up his tax collecting business to follow his master.

Zacchaeus wasn't a slowcoach. When Jesus called him, he immediately came down from the tree. When he heard Jesus call his name, Zacchaeus burst through the leaves, grasped the tree-trunk and slid all the way to the bottom of the tree!

Bartimaeus wasn't a slowcoach. When he heard Jesus call, He responded straightaway. He threw off his old coat and hurried to Jesus' side. Bartimaeus had been blind all his life. The only world that he had ever known was one of darkness and despair. When he came to Jesus he discovered a world filled with happiness and light. This is what salvation brings to all who respond to the call of Jesus.

Are you a slowcoach? Is Jesus waiting for your answer? David says, "Early will I seek Thee" (Psalm 63). Will you seek Jesus early? Will you respond to his call today?

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

THE list of Elim Ministers called home to their reward grows longer as the years pass by. Many have left widows who have stood by their husbands in the work of the Lord. These wonderful women have not only kept home for them, but have also laboured in the work of the Lord.

Maybe only a few knew how these widows have served the Lord in the ranks of the Elim movement. I can recall staying in the home of one of our ministers who has recently passed away. In the course of conversation I discovered how much his wife did in the way of visiting. They pastored one of our larger churches in those days and from Monday to Friday it was their custom to have an early lunch, then each set out to spend the afternoon visiting. On arriving home they had tea before leaving for the evening service.

Why am I writing this about the widows of Elim ministers? First we should pray for them. It is so easy to forget them. "Out of sight, out of mind" should never apply. Pray, too, for all widows. God has a special love for widows. In both the Old and New Testaments we are exhorted not to forget the widow and the fatherless. Second, visit them, for God tells us to visit the widow and the fatherless. If you cannot pay a visit, a letter would be most welcome.

We remember you, all the widows in the Elim Movement. May the Lord bless you!

Jesus Christ is Lord

"To this end Christ both died, and rose. . .that he might be Lord both of the dead and the living" (Romans 14:9).

Notes of John Lancaster's
Easter Monday address in London's Royal Albert Hall

IN his book, The Shaking of the Foundations, Paul Tillich tells the moving story of a group of Jews hiding from the Nazis in a Jewish graveyard in Poland. One of their number, a young woman, gave birth to a baby boy while lying in a freshly-dug grave. The eighty-years-old grave-digger gave her what assistance he could, and then, hearing the baby's first cry, he exclaimed: "Great God, hast Thou finally sent the Messiah to us? For who else than the Messiah Himself can be born in a grave?" But, three days later, the little child was thirstily sucking his mother's tears, for she had nothing else to give him, and so far as is known he died, and with him the grave-digger's hopes of a new age.

Yet in a far greater sense the old man was right! The Messiah was, in one sense, "born in a grave". This is why the New Testament calls Jesus "the firstbegotten from the dead". The tomb of Jesus was the cradle from which has come a new race of men over whom death and hell no longer have any power. This is the meaning of Easter. God has broken into the graveyard of human failure and despair and through the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ has brought "life and immortality to light through the gospel". The cross of Christ is not merely the "emblem of suffering and shame"; it is also the sword of the Lord thrust into the heart of hell. The empty tomb is not merely a deserted grave; it is the opening through which God has poured his resources into the human situation.

This is why Easter is so meaningful for our modern world. Here, where men hide among the tombstones of their own failure, where the shadows of despair deepen, where sin and death reign, stands One who lives in the power of an endless life, One who has come from His own tomb victorious, travelling in the greatness of His strength, mighty to save. Thus the New Testament proclaims that Jesus is Lord both of the dead and the living, for to this end He both died and rose again.

He is the Lord of every Dimension

"Whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's. For to this end Christ both died, and rose. . . that he might be Lord" (Romans 14:8,9).

In the context of Romans 14 Paul sees the drama of Good Friday and Easter Day as the crucial struggle through which Christ asserted His right to be Lord of all. The cross and the empty tomb proclaim that He has overpowered Satan and established His own authority over life and death.

Two dimensions of human experience are in view here: the world of the living — "The World Today"; and the world of the dead — "Tomorrow's World". Within these two dimensions — the here and now and the hereafter — every human being lives out his existence. Moreover, the Bible solemnly warns us that what happens in the here and now will determine what will happen in the hereafter. "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment" (Hebrews 9:27).

Here lies the human dilemma. The world today is a world lying in the power of the evil one (1 John 5:19), a world in which men are blinded (2 Corinthians 4:4) and are motivated, not only by their own selfish lusts, but by demonic forces over which they have no control (Ephesians 2:2,3; 6:12). This accounts for the savage contradictions of our modern society. This is why the race that has walked on the moon fills its own global village with obscenities. "Viet Nam", "Bangladesh", "Ulster", "Poverty", "Hunger", are the words which modern man has scrawled on the wall of history. For all our scientific progress we are still living among the tombs where our ideals rot and our hopes are buried.

But this is where Easter comes in! The death of Christ was a frontal attack on those very powers of darkness which have held men in slavery. It was Christ coming into the graveyard, as He once did at Gadara, coming to drive out the demons that have tormented us and to restore us to our rightful minds. What He refused from Satan as an apparent gift (Matthew 4:8-10) He wrested from him by His triumph on the cross (Colossians 2:15). He came to re-establish His rightful place in the universe, to "destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; And deliver them who . . . were all their lifetime subject to bondage" (Hebrews 2:14,15). By right of conquest He has regained what was His by right as Creator. Those who acknowledge Him as Lord discover that He is indeed Lord of every dimension and that nothing can separate them from the sovereignty of His all-powerful love (Romans 8:35-39).

He must be Lord of every Detail

"None of us liveth to himself".

The Lordship of Christ is more than a beautiful idea. It must be worked out in the actual details of everyday life. This is why Paul introduces this theme in the context of Romans 14. In this chapter he is dealing with the problems of living as Christians in a pagan society, where there are conflicting ideas, even among Christians, as to what is acceptable and what is not, and he emphasises two principles.

In the first place, every human life affects other lives. In John Donne's famous words, "No man is an Island entire in itself . . . Any man's death diminishes me, because I am involved in mankind". I must take that involvement into account in my attitude to the whole of life.

In the second place, and more important still, I am also involved with God. Even the non-Christian faces this involvement, because in the end he is answerable to the Almighty. For the Christian, however, the implications are even greater. To be a Christian is not merely to have escaped from the consequences of sin, it also means becoming a disciple of Jesus Christ. It is not enough to sing, "He is Lord . . . He is risen from the dead and He is Lord". This truth has to be worked out in the day-to-day details of a man's life, in his attitudes, decisions, relationships. Both the individual believer and the Church as a community must submit to the Lordship of Christ and this divine control must be known in the pastor's study, in the deacons' meetings, in the youth work and outreach of the church and in the personal conduct of the members.

How is the Lordship of Christ to be expressed? The answer is twofold: it is made known through the Word of God and through the activity of the Spirit of God. The tragedy of the Church is that it has sung about His Lordship, but too often "taken His Word with a pinch of salt", as Pastor G. Wesley Gilpin recently remarked to me. Unless we take the Word of God seriously and obey it in the details of life, both as individuals and as churches, we are frustrating the purposes of the resurrection of Christ. Likewise, unless we are sensitive to the moving of the Holy Spirit, unless, that is, we are truly Pentecostal, in experience as well as in name, we are repudiating the very lordship we delight to sing about. Unless we obey the Word and respond to the Spirit we are not truly disciples of Christ.

The crying need of our desperate age is for a Church that will be honest with the Bible and open to the Spirit. The Word and the Spirit brought revival to the valley of dry bones and they are still the only channels through which the authority of Christ can be experienced in the space age.

He is Lord of Ultimate Destiny

"We shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ" (Romans 14:10).

This solemn truth clinches Paul's argument. Our whole attitude to life, he declares, must be governed by the fact that Christ is Lord, not only because He has broken the stranglehold of hell, but also because God has appointed Him to be the Judge of all. His very resurrection is God's way of ratifying His appointment as the final Arbiter of human destiny (Acts 17:31). From His waist swing the keys of death and hell (Revelation 1:18) and, because of His perfect obedience to the will of God, He has been given a name which is above every name, a name before which angels and devils, saints and sinners must bow in humble submission (Philippians 2:10,11).

For the unconverted man this is the moment of final truth. No glib lie can deceive this Judge, no clever subterfuge deflect His unerring assessment. The "books will be opened" and every man judged according to his works (Revelation 20:11-15). Men who have despised and rejected Him will await His sentence. Men who have ignored Him will await His awe-inspiring appraisal of their own life. The self-righteous and the utterly corrupt will alike stand before Him in mutual guilt and receive the just recompence for their sins. These solemn facts add urgency to the call of the gospel: "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand"!

But there is urgency for the Church, too! We who say that we are His disciples must also give account, not for our sins, but for our stewardship. As he looked down upon the seven Churches of Asia and saw the truth about them, so He looks upon us and knows the truth. "I know thy works, thy labour and thy patience . . . nevertheless I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love" (Revelation 2:

2-4). That is as true of some Christians and churches today as it was of Ephesus in the first century — busy but loveless. For some of us, as for Sardis, we have a name that we live, a reputation for being “live” churches, yet are spiritually dead. Some of us, like Pergamos and Thyatira, have gone back on the faith once delivered to the saints, and some of us, in this madly materialistic age, have become uncomfortably like Laodicea. We are rich and increased with goods and have need of nothing, but spiritually we are bankrupt. The risen Lord who moves among the lampstands which symbolise the Church, knows the truth about us and our churches and to Him as ministers, deacons, workers, members, we must give account.

“To this end He both died and rose again”.

Jesus Christ is Lord — in every dimension, in every detail and over the ultimate destiny of every living thing. It is the Lordship of an almighty love, the authority of uncompromising holiness. By that Lordship we shall finally be judged, but under that Lordship we find life. He who is Lord of all stands amid the graveyard of the modern world and calls us to Himself. He has come that we might have life and have it more abundantly. Let those who do not know Him come to Him in repentance and faith and receive Him as Lord and Saviour. Let those of us who say that we are Christians kneel before Him afresh and, with Thomas, say from the depths of our hearts: “My Lord and my God!”.

Bhabua, India

YOU might have come across the column “India Challenge?” in the February 8th EVANGEL? I believe that many people prayed for the campaign at Bhabua. I would like to tell you how God heard and answered prayer.

Our Lord of “NOW” is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we can ask or think. The meetings brought a tremendous blessing to that heathen town. The impact created by the meetings can be witnessed still in the bazaars and market place. Bhabua, famous for its wickedness, saw there is power in the living name of Jesus as signs and wonders followed the preaching of the Word. Hundreds of people attended the meetings; about 99% were non-Christians. More than 100 received a touch of healing from our Saviour’s hand. The blind began to see, the lame walked, lepers were healed.

The faith-creating messages given by Rev. Shipley of Delhi, although spoken in fluent Hindi, were so clear and simple that all could understand. During those days we began to realise what it must have been like in Bible times.

Not only in the evening meetings, but also in the morning instruction meetings many attended, on average sixty to ninety. The team was kept busy throughout the day. It was hard sometimes for Mr. Shipley to take even a cup of tea between his early breakfast and 1-30 p.m. We were reminded of Mark 6:41.

The nett result is that many were delivered from sin and sickness and a little church, consisting of some converts from Hinduism and a revived Christian family, has been established. Now these people are being instructed in the Word of God. A wide open door is before us to enter and preach the gospel. Praise the Lord, He has done all things well. All expenses were met.

Now we need a place of worship. A man who was impressed by the power of our living Saviour has promised to donate a piece of land. Another brother has promised to supply bricks.

I hope you will uphold this ministry in prayer because greater things are yet to come (John 1:50).

D. Augustine Jebakumar

OLIVE JARVIS and I were able to spend only one day in Bhabua, but we rejoiced to see what God was doing. We were able, after the evening meeting, to talk to some of the lads who had committed their lives to Christ, and they really seemed very keen. One thing Augustine did not mention in his report was that some of these young men, themselves new believers, were going in and out among the sick folk talking to them in their own village dialect, exhorting them to have faith in Jesus.

We are expecting a retired Oraon evangelist. He will leave with Augustine for the Rohtas hills where they will spend a week working among the tribal people. In other parts, the Oraons have been very responsive to the gospel. A young Oraon convert may also be coming but so far we have received no confirmation of this. Augustine has visited this area three times before, but language has been the problem, although the people were very friendly, and enjoyed the film strips.

We are expecting another young man to arrive from Madras. He feels God is calling him to work in the north, but he knows neither Hindi nor English, so he will need much prayer. One of our Christians, a headmistress, says that she will teach him both languages. She helped Augustine with Hindi.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Mr. Walker,

I READ the recent letter from Mr. Peter Brake with great interest. Some twenty years ago Peter was a member of my congregation. My concern is that other, less informed people might draw the wrong conclusions from his letter. A full detailed examination would need an article.

What Mr. Brake is saying is that in Greek, it is possible to introduce the definite article "the" where it does not exist, as for example in Hebrews 10:31: "into the hands of the living God". Again it is quite fair to introduce an indefinite article "a" though there is no such thing in Greek. To quote an example: John 4:24, God is "a" spirit. What he fails to say is that, if John had wanted to say "The God was the word" or "The word was God", then he would normally have been expected to use the definite article twice. In fact John did not write in this way because that is just what he did not mean. The New World Translation falls far short ("the word was a god"). If John had meant what Jehovah's Witnesses read into this verse, he could have used the word theios (divine). But Mr. Brake suggested that translation goes too far in the other direction. The Scriptures clearly teach that Jesus is God, but not that the whole of the Godhead is Jesus, and thus it could be constructed if we were to follow the implication of Mr. Brake.

Over the past twenty years or so I have read most of the authorities who have written on the various ways of translating this verse; not one of them has translated as Mr. Brake has done.

Yours sincerely,
Desmond W. Cartwright

Dear Mr. Walker,

HOW much I welcome Mr. Cartwright's letter and the opportunity to clear up any misunderstandings about what I was trying to say.

Remember the occasion of the letter. It was a debate with some Jehovah's Witnesses about the person of Jesus. My aim was to point out that the noun theos in John 1:1 is definite and the verse teaches that Jesus is God, and not "a god". Hence my translation — "the word was the God", i.e. the noun is definite. Note that the word "the" is italicised in the January 12th edition of the EVANGEL. Mr. Cartwright takes exception to my translation and seems to suggest that I teach that the whole of the godhead is Jesus (Jesus only?). I must clearly affirm that this was far from my intention. Of course, Jesus is not the only person who is God. My translation only seeks to show that Jesus is nothing less than God.

I trust that this is a satisfactory reply and saves me from the name of "heretic". The whole of the misunderstanding rests on the inclusion of the article, "the", but it was only included to show that the noun, theos, is definite.

Yours sincerely in Christ,
Peter D. Brake

The Church at Chifambe, Rhodesia

MANY articles have been written about great church rallies and wonderful conventions. This is not one of them. I am going to tell you about the little church at Chifambe, about seven miles from the church in Inyanga North Reserve, which I attend on Sundays. To get there we drive along a narrow winding road jutting with rocks, or at least it was so. As soon, however, as I had learned where the rocks were, they were taken away leaving deep sand, so that now instead of bouncing along, we get bogged down, and everyone has to get out and push.

We all know not to build a house on sand; well building a road on sand isn't too good an idea either.

When we arrive, Mr. Chikadzi (the school boarding master and church leader) bangs a metal bar hanging from a tree to signal to the people that we are waiting for them.

The area is a sad one, the soil very poor, and so are the people. It is a hard life for them. The children especially are dressed in little more than rags and are grey with dirt. They herd the cattle and goats and stay in the fields to chase away baboons which eat the crops. The school that was there is closed and we use the building for the Sunday services.

It is an unusual building — quite the opposite to the lovely church buildings we see in Britain. The walls are whitewashed mud brick and the roof is thatch. It is waterproof, but, when the wind blows, the rain comes through the windows and doorway, for there is no glass and no door. The floor is made of compressed cow dung on dried mud and the benches are moulded

The Art of Meditation

IT is not surprising in a world of rush and bustle where the pace of life is ever accelerating that the increased pressures cause many people to express a longing to be able, at least for a while, "to get away from it all".

This commonly stated desire is no doubt the explanation for the resurgence in recent days of the ancient practice of meditation and the rise in the western world of eastern mystic religions, with their emphasis on transcendental meditation, and the popularity of the teachings of psychologists on this subject. The value of being able to withdraw from the world at regular intervals and in some quiet place or relaxed position to seek to look detachedly at oneself, the whole compass of life and the great world in which we live, is being increasingly recognised. Such meditation, we are told, not only produces calmness of spirit and enables one to see life in its true perspective, but it also brings a deeper appreciation of the great world at large. As one writer has expressed it: "If we think long and lovingly about the world, we find ourselves plunging into it, feeling it, sensing it and even the very stones and hills seem vividly alive. We find a meaning in everything — the seed in the ground, the bark on the tree, the sound of the cricket".

For the Christian, however, there is a form of meditation which is far more valuable than that advocated by psychologists and eastern mystics. After my conversion when I was just a schoolgirl, the Book of Psalms became a favourite part of the Bible. I read and re-read the prayers and praises it contains. I remember ploughing through Psalm 119 and feeling very virtuous when I reached the end of its 176 verses! Even then, as a young Christian, I was impressed that David — warrior, man of action, administrator — laid such emphasis on the need for meditation.

Seven times the psalmist writes in a very personal way of his meditation. There is nothing abstract or remote in his approach. When he says, "I will meditate", he uses the Hebrew word which means to bow down, to muse. So we have the picture of Israel's greatest king delighting himself in the discipline of meditation. In Psalm 1 his heart delights in the law of the Lord as he muses. His meditation extends to contemplating the works of the Lord (Psalm 77) and His Word (Psalm 119) and he reaches the peak of it all in Psalm 104:34: "My meditation of HIM shall be sweet". Surely this must be the end product of all meditation in the Bible — to lead to a lovely, joyful appreciation of the Lord.

In these days of confusion and uncertainty, life can be very hectic and demanding. Meditation as practised by David can be a wonderful therapy. The discipline it entails is good for mind and body. The soul is nourished and strengthened by feasting upon God's precepts and contemplating all His greatness and His love.

I learned to my surprise that the politician, Mr. Peter Walker, who became a millionaire at 32 years of age and a cabinet minister at 38, has one rule for success. He spends one hour a day in silent meditation. He says, "It can, if you are a religious person, become something of a religious experience and it happens that I am a religious person". If a successful, famous man advocates this Bible practice we do well to do likewise and make the words of Psalm 19:14 our prayer: "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in Thy sight, O LORD, my strength and my redeemer".

Forward the Faith Foundation

The task of evangelising our country is near to the heart of every Elim member. Over the years God has enabled the Elim Pentecostal Church to conduct an effective evangelistic programme and has blessed the campaigns with the saving of many precious souls followed by the establishing of Churches.

Soul saving, church founding evangelism continues to be the policy of the Evangelistic Committee formed by the Elim Conference.

Today there are many obstacles to be overcome when an attempt is made to conduct a pioneer crusade. Difficulties in finding suitable halls for the initial effort, purchasing or renting buildings for the follow-up work and, not least, the costs involved require careful investigation. Recently many opportunities have presented themselves and some are still being explored. The future promises much if a regular and consistent income can be obtained for the work of evangelism. The committee, after carefully considering various means of raising resources, is happy to introduce the Forward the Faith Foundation. Details of this scheme are enclosed in this Evangel and it is believed that you will give careful and prayerful consideration to the details in the brochure.

We thank you for your prayers and previous support. We look forward to hearing from you. The Scriptures say "How then shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent?" (Romans 10:14, 15). Help the movement send more preachers, evangelists, to the needy of our nation. Consider what God will enable you to do, now!

"HAVE a body like mine in seven days" was what the old advertisement used to say; maybe it still does although I haven't seen that advert. for a long while. To become powerful and strong still seems to be the aim of so many, from the schoolboy proving his strength to the sportsman and even the politician. Power and strength provided the ability to dominate and have the final say, and, so often in the world, power seems available to anyone with enough cunning or money.

The Bible has many surprises in store for us; perhaps one is regarding strength. "But the LORD said to Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the LORD seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart" (1 Samuel 16:7). God wanted a strong man to become king, but He wanted heart strength rather than physical power. God's choice was right.

Not too long afterwards, when David was still young, his faith and courage put his brawny brothers to shame. "Why don't you go and fight the giant? Why are you afraid?" he challenged them. He knew that God was right there with him. With his muscles of faith bulging and rippling with confidence, he stepped out against Goliath. His faith was so great that he knew that God would guide that stone right to its target. As that insignificant stone was guided to achieve a special purpose, so also was David's life. It was a life of usefulness because his heart was strong in his Lord.

You too can be strong, not with the practice and exercise of the gym, but with spiritual exercise. 1 Corinthians 1:27 says that God chooses the foolish, weak things (in the world's eyes) to confound (amaze) the wise and the strong. The very plan of salvation — that Jesus should die on the cross — was horrific to the Jews, yet it was God's way. In 2 Corinthians 12 Paul speaks of how weak he was; he was nothing, except for how God used him, a NO-ONE, except that God was with him. He became a channel for the power of God to flow through. "I am glad to be a living demonstration of CHRIST'S POWER. . . The less I have the more I depend on Him" (Living Bible).

Hebrews 11:32, 33 is a great help. Speaking of David and others, the writer says that they did their mighty deeds by faith. Are you young, weak, insignificant? How about indulging in a bit of spiritual exercise? Claim the blessed promises of God and step out in faith. Tune up your spiritual muscles and get stuck into the fight. Remember that God looks upon us in a different way. Don't look into the mirror and be afraid. Don't worry about what others think. Be a spiritual strong man. Do the seemingly impossible by letting God's power flow through you.

out of the same material. I couldn't help noticing last Sunday that the church had been "redecorated". The odour of a fresh layer of cow dung was quite distinctive and prevailed throughout the service.

Yet we worship the same Lord here in a primitive church in the African bush. He loves the rich and poor alike no matter what their race or culture. He is no respecter of persons, for He died for all.

The people arrive and we all greet each other at length, shake hands and clap hands. Then the service — singing, praying, praising God, listening to His Word.

I leave with the Sunday school before the message and we go outside and sit on a rock under an enormous wild fig tree. Some of the children from the Secondary school on the mission help with the teaching and also take part in the meetings. Before the cattle and crops needed tending we had over thirty children, sometimes a few goats, and a dog which falls asleep during the story.

I go to Chifambe on Fridays for a women's meeting. We sit on the rock, sew and chat and then have a devotional time together. It is a challenge to present spiritual truths in a way that these village women can understand. Yet it is the Holy Spirit Himself who is the Teacher and Revealer of God. Without His ministry we work in vain.

Nehemiah 1:1-11

"I asked them concerning the Jews. . . and Jerusalem" (v.2).

CONCERN for others was a beautiful feature of Nehemiah's life. Though safely settled in the palace of the king, and cushioned by the position of great trust and honour placed in him, he could not forget his less fortunate brethren who had returned to Jerusalem. He could not shake off the thought of the distress that they were in. Such a deep interest in and a real concern for his people and their work are fruits of genuine love for God and true devotion to His cause.

Nehemiah 2:1-10

"So I prayed. . . And the king granted me, according to the good hand of God upon me" (vv.4,8).

WHAT a predicament Nehemiah found himself in! He could not hide his concern from the king. Asked for the reason for his sadness and what he required, he prayed (v.4) before answering. It was "a secret, sudden ejaculation", just a whispered prayer, but it resulted in God moving the heart of the king in his favour, allowing Nehemiah leave of absence to further God's cause in Judah. When problems overwhelm our souls with sorrow and we begin to fret, remember that there is always one door open — heavenward. A whispered prayer sets God to work on our behalf.

Nehemiah 2:11-20

"I arose in the night. . . to do at Jerusalem" (v.12). GOD had put into Nehemiah's heart to undertake the work of building the wall (v.12). His concern for the work made him sensitive, alert and willing to rise in the night to look over the task. It was not straightforward, either. Even the vehicle of his transport had to be abandoned in order to fulfil his mission (v.14). God longs to use His people. "The eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show Himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward Him" (2 Chronicles 16:9). Are we sensitive to His promptings, ready to sacrifice at any hour, and willing to press forward when our props have had to be abandoned?

Thursday, May 9th

Nehemiah 4:1-23

"Every one. . . wrought in the work. . . and. . . held a weapon" (v.17).

THE progress of God's work always angers the enemy and brings opposition. Notice the scorn and ridicule (vv.1-3). The plan was to discourage the people in their work, ever the Devil's weapon against the children of God. Nehemiah didn't run or argue; he prayed and continued (vv.4-6). The enemy was really incensed and prepared to fight (vv. 7,8), but the servant of God had a heaven-inspired philosophy — prayer (v.9), watchfulness (v.9), weapons (v.13), and encouragement to fight (v.14). We must not lose heart in our labours. Ours is a great work and God is on our side (v.20). Make sure that we have on "the whole armour of God" (Ephesians 6:11) and commit our way to Him.

Friday, May 10th

Nehemiah 5:1-19

"Ought ye not to walk in the fear of our God?" (v.9).

AN unpleasant situation had arisen. Some of the more wealthy were taking unfair advantage over less fortunate brethren who had to mortgage lands, houses, etc., in order to live (vv. 3,4). It divided the people. We have among us people like them. They want to enjoy the advantages of others' efforts in prayer, sacrifice and work, but they have no intention of becoming involved themselves. Nehemiah made sure that this practice stopped and the matter was put right. Should not we do the same? There is a better way: "To walk in the fear of our God".

Saturday, May 11th

Nehemiah 6:1-19

"So the wall was finished. . . wrought of our God" (vv. 15,16)

EVEN in the final stages Nehemiah was subtly opposed by the enemy (vv. 1-8), this time in such a way as to undermine his confidence in his motives. It was even suggested that he left the wall to take refuge in the Temple (v.10). Yet Nehemiah stood firm, trusting in God until the job was done. Note how he reasoned (v.11). He soon had confirmed that it was a good decision, for "he perceived" etc. (v.12). Do not be afraid of the enemy of our souls. "Resist the Devil" and seek only to finish the work God has given us to do.

Sunday, May 12th

Nehemiah 8:1-18

"For this day is holy. . . neither be sorry; for the joy of the Lord is your strength" (v.10).

EZRA ministered the law to the people with wonderful results (vv. 5, 6). It was well for Ezra that he had so many willing helpers to assist in enlightening the people (vv. 7, 8). God's law caused the people to weep and mourn (v.9), but they were told not to weep; it was an occasion for joy (v.10). The feast of tabernacles which followed was a time of great gladness (v.17). Do not mourn over our unworthiness. Rather rejoice that Jesus has atoned for all our sins. May it be our joy to worship Him today.

Editorial

VIOLENCE is one of the worst symptoms of our age. Some of its aspects are almost unbelievable. How people can plot the destruction of property and the deaths and terrible injuries of often innocent victims baffles many of us. Can you imagine actually being a person who has deposited a bomb and there you are 'phoning the police to tell them that there is but a five minute delay and an explosion will occur in the centre of a large city? Yet people do it, often in the name of politics or anarchy, and even of religion sometimes. I have seen Royal Avenue, Belfast, and many other places in Ulster. I cannot say other than that this bomb business is devilish.

The problem is apparent in other ways, though. From crowds at professional football matches invading the pitches and preventing play, to vandals damaging public property, to passengers wrecking trains, to children at school wantonly defacing and destroying equipment and even parts of the buildings (and, horrifyingly, I heard the day before writing this of eight-year-old, yes, EIGHT, children having been found responsible for such grotesque happenings in one area), violence is with us everywhere.

What can you expect when television is full of it? What can you expect when war is continually brought before us in the most harrowing detail? What can you expect when newspapers glory in filth and highlight idiots (like streakers) and play-up the seamy side of life? What can you expect when wholesale numbers of us are "conned" into watching it, reading it, letting it pass before our eyes and enter into our minds? Doesn't it all build up a scarifying cumulative effect?

I wonder whether the recent mass march in London against the abortion laws marks a watershed. Is there coming a revolt by the so-called silent majority? Wouldn't it be nice if a newspaper or a television reporter actually said something nice about Mrs. Mary Whitehouse! You never know. . . After all, men did reach the moon. . .

Don't you think, though, that if ever there was a time when we should be pushing Sunday School and children's work in general, that time is NOW? The teaching and example of some day school teachers are shattering. The home life of too many children is unsatisfactory. The Church must be about its business of counteracting the rising tide of evil. It can be slow, dogged, painstaking work, but what a work it is.

"SUFFER the little children to come unto Me". . .

Father, Son and Holy Ghost and that these three are one God. 3. THE CHURCH: We believe that the Church consists of all persons who have been regenerated by the Holy Ghost and made new creatures in Christ Jesus. 4. THE SAVIOUR: We believe that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God and that through the death and risen power of Christ all who believe can be saved from the penalty and power of sin. 5. THE HEALER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Healer of the body and that all who will walk in obedience to His will can claim Divine Healing for their bodies. 6. THE BAPTISER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Baptiser in the Holy Ghost and that this Baptism with signs following is promised to every believer. 7. THE COMING KING: We believe in the personal and pre-millennial return of our Lord Jesus Christ to receive unto Himself the Church and afterwards to set up His Throne as King. 8. THE FRUIT: We believe that every believer on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour should produce the ninefold fruit of His Spirit: Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. 9. THE GIFTS: We believe that the Church should claim and manifest the nine Gifts of the Holy Spirit: Wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discernment, tongues, interpretation. 10. THE MINISTRY: We believe that God has given some apostles and some prophets and some evangelists and some pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry for the edifying of the Body of Christ. 11. THE FUTURE STATE: We believe in the eternal conscious bliss of all true believers in Christ and also in the eternal conscious punishment of all Christ rejectors. 12. THE ORDINANCES: We believe in the following ordinances: Partaking of bread and wine in memory of our Lord's death, baptism by immersion for believers, the laying on of hands and the anointing of the sick with oil.

CLYDEBANK

Pastor: I.G. Clarke

WE have so much cause for rejoicing as we send this report of our Pastor's first anniversary services. What a wonderful service we had on the Saturday. At 5 p.m. we sat down to a lovely tea, prepared by the ladies of the Assembly, and at 7 p.m. our meeting commenced. The preacher was Pastor T.W. Walker from Headquarters. The presence of the Holy Spirit was so precious throughout the whole service, that one could not begin to impart to the reader what it meant to be in such an atmosphere. As guest soloist Sheila Walsh, stood and began to sing with upstretched arms and shining face "Holy, Holy", we knew and felt that God was there.

Many souls have been saved during our Pastor's first year with us and the most touching part of the service was when a recent convert was asked to present a cheque to the Pastor on behalf of the members. He began to thank the Pastor for pointing him to Christ, then broke down and ended up praying and thanking God for sending His servant to us! He wasn't the only one weeping; there was scarcely a dry eye in the hall, even among the platform party.

One of the outstanding things about the work here is the love of the members one for the other, that permeates the place. This was noticed and remarked on by Pastor Walker and we believe that this is the secret of the strengthening of the work. Mrs. Clarke and her mother, Mrs. Thomas (lovingly known among us as Nana), also received gifts. They are a great asset to the work here.

Then the precious book was opened and we listened spellbound as Pastor Walker led us into the truths of the precious scripture. The District Superintendent, Pastor F.W. Jones, closed the service in prayer.

On Sunday morning we had a precious time as the Lord met with us in a real way around His table.

The special weekend finished with the evening rally and, after being blessed with the anointed singing of Mr. Raymond Wylie, whose solos dove-tailed entirely into the message, Pastor Walker opened to us the Scriptures and revealed many precious nuggets of truth.

We look forward to another year under the ministry of our dear Pastor and his wife and are believing that signs and wonders will follow the preaching of the Word.

PONTYPRIDD

Pastor: Ray Hughes

WHEN we saw the film, "The Chinese are Coming" we were challenged to think of 800,000,000 communist dominated people for whom Christ died. The new Mao Script, understood throughout China, with its former 200 different languages, has opened the way for extensive literature evangelism. Hearing of a teenager swimming through shark-infested waters patrolled by communist gunboats to escape from China and then offering to swim back in order to take portions of God's Word to evangelise humbled us all.

The visit from the eighty-four years old veteran of Elim, Joseph Smith, provided living evidence of the fire that burns. Three decisions, a number of restorations, two baptised in the Holy Spirit and a spiritual uplift for all were the result.

Our special week finished with the film, "The Shield of Faith", which depicted a 'plane disaster which cost the lives of eighty people from a Welsh mining community. An agnostic science master found faith because he saw real faith in the life of a man of God who was hammered with the hammer of adversity.

Whether from China, or an Irish farmer's boy who has lived a long, fruitful life, or a Welsh minister surrounded by sorrow, the clear message of faith with works makes men alive and brings God glory.

Quotable quotes from Joseph Smith: (Telling of a church that had five prayer meetings every week) "They didn't give the devil a nail to hang his hat on"; (of David and Goliath) "He didn't say 'He's so big I'm frightened of him', he said, 'He's so big I'll never miss him'"; (of George Muller in a ship off Canada in thick fog with a pressing preaching appointment) "Captain: 'You will never get there in this fog'; to which Muller replied, 'I'm not looking at the fog, but the most high God'. The fog cleared within the hour"; "God's way is to test His people, but never to fail them".

BRIGHTON, The Lanes

Pastor: F.A. Hodge

ONE person from each local radio station in Britain is being appointed to attend an advanced radio and T.V. course, which includes scriptwriting, producing and presenting programmes, interviewing and compilation of programmes. B.B.C. Radio Brighton have chosen our Pastor to attend this course, which occupied the first week in April, all expenses being paid by Radio Brighton. This is a national event and it may well be that Pastor Hodge will be able to use the knowledge and experience gained in this course for the benefit of Elim.

Our Pastor regularly arranges and takes part in various programmes over B.B.C. Radio Brighton.

"Lord"

A digest of the Presidential address to the Conference on May 4th, 1974

by George Canty

READING today's theological weather chart, my developing instinct is to prepare for dull days when abstract propositions blow up. "If there are two things that John Bull hates," said Prime Minister William Gladstone, "they are abstract propositions and the Pope". Leaving the Pope out of this Conference (so far as I know he has not booked in) — we do seem to be faced with an abstraction for our theme. "Jesus is Lord". I didn't choose it. The most vaguely Christian denomination within the World Council of Churches subscribes to that very same thing.

That was my momentary reaction: a theme received by tradition from the elders attesting our religious respectability. Abstractions are disembodied truths and truth without a body is not natural. The Bible always clothes truth in solid history and flesh and blood. Elim people like it the Bible way. We are pragmatic folk.

However, we need not look at it as an abstraction at all, but as concrete fact, as a summary of a million pieces of practical evidence. I'll tell you why we say Christ is Lord. We have seen Jesus at work, and it is the only conclusion that we can come to. THAT Jesus must be Lord. He can be none other. We also draw the corollary conclusion that He should control our lives.

Contemporary religious thinkers find God by cerebral processes. They pile speculation on speculation. God isn't so much Lord as the Great Subliminal. "The Lord's Prayer" would have to be "The Evocative of the Subliminal, and would run something like this; Process of becoming, hallowed be thy continuum. Existential involvement in the world-context come. Thy otherness be validated in my creaturely courage-to-be. Give us this day acceptance of acceptance...". I can really see a new turning of the Daily-Mirror-reading masses to God once we re-write more of the Bible in Honest-to-God terms. Yes?

Then we have the mystics spinning marvels out of their own subconscious, like Buddha beneath the Bo tree. They tell us to tune into the Infinite, or to identify ourselves with the World Soul, or to learn the ancient secrets of the Eastern Yogi, or to realise the power of mind.

Against it all we say, "Jesus is Lord". Every attempt to achieve peace by the practice of transcendental meditation, every resort to the occult for spiritual experience, every effort to discover God in the ground of being, is a rejection of the Lordship of Christ: "We will not have this man... let us build our own tower to reach heaven". Current religious search among the Eastern contemplatives, or in the circles of witches, Satanists, and occult experimenters, or in the latest fundamentalist sect may be thought of as a hopeful sign of returning religious interest — but it isn't. It is rebellion against Christ. It is a further mark that even under the pressures of spiritual deprivation, people will go anywhere for the words of life except to the One with whom alone they are to be found.

The Bible makes abstractions concrete, but modern religionists turn them back into abstractions. That "which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, whom we have looked upon and our hands have handled, of the Word of life... that... declare we unto you", said John. Elim's theme is not truth, but Christ the truth. The Greeks concocted an idea called The Word, a spiritual entity far beyond the touch or knowledge of human beings. Their Word was too refined in essence, too much pure spirit to be approached. Then John flung a defiant challenge to their Word of untouchable spirit and declared: "The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld His glory".

When Moses met God in the wilderness at the burning bush, he learned God's name: "I am that I am", — meaning "You will know what I am when you see what I do". That's how the Bible was written — by men telling us what God did by which we know what He is. Noah saw God in the breaking up of the fountains of the deep and in the sky-spanning rainbow. Abraham knew God in the genetic miracle of Isaac, Joseph as he seated himself at the right hand of Pharaoh, Joshua as the walls of Jericho slid down the hillside, Israel as the fire fell and they cried, "The Lord, He is God".

We Pentecostals have seen, heard, handled the Word of Life. On the basis of the power of God, sweeping our age with signs, wonders, miracles, the transformation of human lives, homes, classes and communities through the preaching of the Gospel, millions of answered prayers, millions of instances of providential guidance, revelations, blessings, visions, the opening of the Scriptures, the provision of needs, the rivers of joy and peace — ON THAT BASIS WE SAY THAT HE IS LORD!

Elim exists because Christ is Lord. Otherwise it couldn't. That is what Elim is — a demonstration of Somebody seated on the right hand of God. Because He's there, we're here, and we believe that, because He is here, we'll be there also. That Christ is Lord is the greatest political, spiritual, philosophic and practical challenge that anybody can name.

Opening the New Testament, the first Book, Matthew, is the Gospel of the Lordship of Christ. It confronts us immediately, not with the outline of a mystical system, but with a list of people. Some are women and the rest are mostly lords who preceded the Lord. On the whole they're anything but a saintly lot. The women, for instance, include incestuous Tamar, immoral Rahab, adulterous Bathsheba, alien Ruth. Among the men are that wicked old man Manasseh, Jacob the trickster, Judah, Ahaz, and their like, and most to be noted, Coniah, of whom God said that he would snatch him off his finger if he were His own signet ring. God rejected Coniah and said that the entire dynasty ended with Coniah. In fact, this was David's dynasty. No king could inherit through that line again. But while no man could stand up and claim the throne as the heir of David and Coniah, Christ the son of David would reign, according to the prophecies. How could Christ, the son of a rejected dynasty, claim the throne? Claim it He did! He claimed it not by right of inheritance, but by His own right. Christ did not draw His authority from anybody. He drew it from Himself. He was BORN King. Nobody made Him king, no army, no electorate, no supporters; His own arm gave Him the victory. Jesus didn't come into this world seeking support, He came to give it.

He went through Jewry not to enlist backers for His cause. He is not a cause, He is Lord, coming to save us, to save the world. If the local council and the mayor in his chain of office do not like Him, too bad, but neither that, nor strikes, nor persecutions, nor laws can do much about Him. You can't apply sanctions, or stop His income; He is risen from the dead and He is Lord, and that's that!

Matthew describes His triumphal progress in chapter after chapter. His sermon on the mount establishes His religious and moral authority, healing the paralytic as Lord of the helpless, the centurion's servant as Lord above all authority, Peter's wife's mother as Lord of the home, bidding people to follow Him while the dead bury their dead as Lord of all society's customs, stilling the storm as Lord of the elements, delivering the Gadarene maniac as Lord over all devils, forgiving the paralysed man as Lord of judgment, associating with sinners as Lord of all traditions, stemming a woman's haemorrhage as Lord of health, raising a child as Lord of death: and that's only two chapters of the story! Subsequently Matthew describes the Lord giving authority to His apostles, as Lord of the prophets, of wisdom, of the Temple, of the kingdom of God, of Jerusalem, of history, and of the future, and concludes by saying that "all power in heaven and in earth is given" unto Christ, with the addendum that Christ said that it would always be so for "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the age".

"The Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to His Temple". That day came. We ought to remember that Jerusalem was not part of the original sharing out of the promised land to the twelve tribes: it was David's own city by conquest later. It had been the city of Melchizedec, the king-priest. As Lord of Jerusalem, David was a priest "after the order of Melchizedec". So were all other kings of Jerusalem. But the Temple belonged strictly to the order of Aaron. When Jesus came, He came as Jerusalem's King-priest, and He literally took over the Temple for Himself and cast out those who abused and desecrated it. The Temple emptied in panic, but the children didn't leave, or the crippled and blind. So, when He had stormed that citadel of religious privilege and monopoly, He became its Lord and healed the sick. When the blind saw and the cripples walked and the children cried "Hosanna", He had demonstrated the pattern of His Lordship. That's our Lord, and "He abideth for ever, after the order of Melchizedec".

The theme of Lordship is too big to be expounded in one Gospel. John takes it up also and, in a little-understood but amazing passage (John 14), reveals this Lord as having his "friends" who obey Him. When they obey they are not servants, but His confidees, knowing "all things which the Father has shown Me", and this Lord makes the most incredible, beautiful statement of all time, that He, the King, dies for His friends, not His friends for Him. No warrior, dying with streaming heart wound, raises himself on an elbow to gasp out that he has conquered his Lord's enemies. Our Lord dies for the warriors, conquers their enemies, and delivers them. We owe everything to Him; He owes nothing to us. He alone is worthy, Christ the Lord. He gives His glory to none other. We have not chosen Him, He has chosen us. That's our credentials, our power, our authority, our guarantee, not the gifts of men nor their personalities.

Elim depends on Christ the Lord.

4. Living by the Rules

IN many circles law-breaking has assumed an aura of respectability. The motorist caught speeding receives the condolences of his fellows. The political assassin plies his trade worldwide with the approval of his sympathisers. The businessman cuts legal corners to get an advantage over his competitors. All are symptomatic of the current wave of lawlessness that is fast turning the civilised world into a jungle.

That some limitations on human conduct are essential is obvious to all except the maniac. As law-breaking increases so do laws, but legislation alone cannot change conduct. In this fast-changing age, the rules of yesterday appear irrelevant to many. Some were tied to outworn concepts and attitudes. It is more convenient occasionally to ignore others. The situation determines when the rules are to be kept and when they are to be disregarded. The old absolutes seldom apply and never in every case, or so they say.

Previous generations knew right from wrong. Even if they acted wrongly, they were not foolish enough to call it right. God pronounced: "Woe to those who call evil good and good evil, who put darkness for light and light for darkness, who put bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter!" (Isaiah 5:20). God has set absolute standards for our conduct and we depart from them at our peril.

The Rules

The Ten Commandments are basic to the morality set forth in the Bible. They are a summary of the lives believers are expected to live. John Eddison described them as "God's Frontiers" and remarked: "Some people speak as though God had given us 'Ten Suggestions' instead of 'Ten Commandments'". The Commandments are not offered for our approval, but for our obedience. To the rich young ruler's question regarding the way to eternal life Jesus answered: "If you would enter life, keep the commandments" (Matthew 19:17). True faith in God leads us to keep the commandments; as Paul declared: "Do we then overthrow the law by this faith? By no means! On the contrary, we uphold the law" (Romans 3:31).

The first four commandments expound our responsibility towards God. He is to be given His rightful place of supremacy in our lives. Jesus Christ is the only true representation of deity, so man-made images are an insult to Him. We are to realise the dignity, integrity and authority of His name and thus use it reverently and sincerely. We are to set apart special

by Ian R. Hall
Pastor of our Ryde
Church

times for worship and fellowship with God.

Our responsibility to our fellows always takes second place, but nevertheless it is important. Our attitude towards home and family determines the kind of people we are. Murder and adultery may never darken the Christian's heart, but their children — anger and lust — may be regular visitors (Matthew 5:21-30). Similarly, few would steal, but many feel justified in fiddling their income tax or cheating. The plain old lie has been modernised as "the credibility gap", but God's standard is still truthfulness. Our age is plagued by covetousness, which the Bible pointedly identifies as "idolatry" (Colossians 3:5).

The royal Rule

To sum up the Commandments in a word is to speak of love, for "love is the fulfilling of the law" (Romans 13:10). James described this as "the royal law" (James 2:8). Love finds its expression in obedience and obedience issues in love. If we truly love God our relationship with Him will live up to His expectations and love for our fellows will keep us from failing in our responsibilities to them. "God is love, and he who abides in love abides in God, and God abides in Him" (1 John 4:16).

BOOK REVIEWS

Take this Child, by Cyril Davey, published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott Ltd., price 50p, postage and packing 6p extra.

WHEN I read a book of this nature, I expect it to inform, inspire, challenge, captivate, enfire and enforce. Cyril Davey's book does all these. Throughout it breathes conviction, concern and compassion. To quote the cover comment: "It is the story of a family who made a new town and stirred up the conscience of half a country". Love, resulting in service without any strings attached, is the dynamic which started a caring ministry toward two children. From that small beginning has developed a ministry to children in orphanages, schools and hospitals that has spanned the years and survived the ravages of war. This is absorbing, compelling reading. It opened my eyes to view my own city, not as a place consisting of huge blocks of flats and suburban estates, but as the dwelling-place of little children who will never have a chance to face up with Jesus Christ unless somebody cares like this. If you want an eye-opener, read this book.

J.E. Moore

Israel, A Prince with God, by F.B. Meyer, published by Lakeland, price 45p, postage and packing 7p extra. EVERY Christian should read this interesting, inspiring challenging book. It tells the story of the patriarch Jacob. It reveals that God loves, not because we are good, but to make us so. It is the story of a crafty, mean, cheating man, one like ourselves, a man of like passions, not always a saint, who sinned, murmured and rebelled, yet his character was purified by tremendous discipline. He stands among the peers in the kingdom of sorrow. Though the past is irrevocable, it is not irreparable. The writer deals with the difference between worldly prosperous Esau (typical of men today) and Jacob the man with spiritual insight. There are no trifles in Christian living, everything is great. The greatest harvests for good or ill spring from the tiniest seeds.

There is a good comment on Election and whether it is possible not to find repentance, like Esau. Some wise advice on love, marriage and witnessing in home and business is included. There is also a warning to parents as to the end of the pathway on which they may be encouraging their children to tread - backsliding. The way to blessing is submitting oneself to God - the God of Jacob. He is the same today.

This book is for all ages. You won't want to put it down until you have finished it!

Talk about the Devil, by Peter Anderson, published by WORD Books, price 45p, postage and packing 5p extra.

IN this paperback of 108 pages, Peter Anderson has packed startling, fearful facts about the occult and the Devil's powers that few know. He has done a great service to every Christian teacher and worker in exposing the whole range of spiritual phenomena from ouija boards to the horrific cult of satanism, with which multitudes of young people all over the world are experimenting (for excitement and life?) with appalling results to mind and body. From Scripture, practical ways of helping and counselling are simply, clearly set out. This book is a must for help and instruction in an evil day. Get it and get one for your friend.

Jenny at Durrington Grange, by Doreen Smith, published by Pickering and Inglis Ltd., price 55p, postage and packing 12p extra.

THIS exciting story will captivate and thrill any girl of eleven to twelve years who delights in reading school tales. From the opening paragraph to the final one, the writer reveals a vivid, imaginative style which is most impressive. The manner by which she weaves the gospel into her story is natural and appealing. I look forward to hearing more about Jenny and her adventures in the writer's next book.

The Person and Work of the Holy Spirit in the Life of the Believer, by George B. Duncan, published by Lakeland, price 50p, postage and packing 5p extra.

THIS small paperback is based on a series of Bible studies given in his church, St. George's Tron, Glasgow, by a well-known Keswick speaker. The author's commendable purpose is to help to dispel some of the current confusion among Christians about the doctrine of the Holy Spirit, but in all charity one has to confess that he seems only to add to it. Perhaps it is the brevity of the book that causes Mr. Duncan to make some astonishingly unqualified statements, but this reviewer found his eyebrows raised a number of times. For instance, in support of his belief that the disciples were not regenerate before Pentecost, Mr. Duncan says that, although they believed in the deity of Christ, they were not truly Christian and he adds: "But so is the Devil-believer in the deity of our Lord". Surely, the faith Christ commended in Matthew 16 and John 17 was an advance on the Devil's? The author seems to confuse the supernatural Gifts of the Spirit listed in 1 Corinthians 12 with the more general ministry gifts and for him, therefore, every Christian is a "charismatic Christian" whether or not he has had a personal Pentecost according to Acts 1:8. There is the wearisome repetition of the contention that Paul treated the Gift of Tongues as being of comparatively little importance - a quite unscriptural and unjustifiable slur on one of God's "good and perfect gifts" to the Church - and the astonishing statement that "God doesn't care tuppence what gifts you have, but He is concerned with how and why you use that gift". One wonders why God bothered to give gifts at all. More surprising is Mr. Duncan's warning to those who do not agree with his interpretation of Scripture. If he is correct, he says, then they are not speaking by the Spirit of Christ, but by the spirit that Christ rebuked when He said, "Get thee behind me, Satan".

The sections on the person of the Spirit and the Fruit on the Spirit are helpful, but on the whole the book makes little fresh contribution to the current debate on the doctrine of the Spirit. One gets the feeling that, with wary eye, Mr. Duncan is erecting a fence round his flock to prevent their straying into Pentecostal pastures. Unfortunately, or otherwise - depending on which side of it you are - the fence doesn't look too secure.

Your Turn to Lead, by Margaret Parker, published by Scripture Union, price 80p, postage and packing 9p extra.

HERE we have a very useful book to help busy leaders to put variety into their Bible study classes. The thought and experience which have gone into the book are obvious. After trying some of the methods suggested, I have found that they work. Sixteen different methods of involving people of all ages in group study are discussed and advantages and disadvantages of each method are shown. About half the book consists of live examples pointing out good and bad points.

The only adverse comment I have is that the preface to the section on live examples is in the middle of the book and I found myself being referred to these examples from the main chapter on the subject before reading the preface. As the book is laid out - with the example on one page and comments on the other - I found the whole thing a little confusing until I found and read the preface, which, I would suggest, should be included at the front in future editions.

I would certainly recommend it for all ministers, youth leaders and teachers of teenagers or adults. Perhaps you might like to treat your minister to a copy!

Pause for Thought

by Trevor Partington,
Covenant Hall, Stafford

APPARENTLY a bird can go for nine days without food, a dog can go for twenty days, a turtle for 500 days, a snake for 800 days, a certain fish for 1,000 days, and some insects for 12,000 days! For man, however, a few weeks is about the limit. Sooner or later food is necessary to us all.

To a Christian, the Bible is food. By reading it we grow in the Christian life. There are some Christians, however, who go for days without having a real good feed on the milk and meat of God's Word. It is not enough merely to have the Scriptures read to us at church; we must also read them for ourselves, and regularly. The seriously minded Bible reader will make a very real effort to digest what he reads. When we read the Scriptures in this way, the Holy Spirit beings to apply them to our lives. "When I read the Bible", said one man, "it reads me. It repairs my spiritual clock, winds it, corrects it, and then sets it going. And that's what Bible reading is all about".

Physical maturity is not just growth; it is also the result of experience. Maturity in the Christian life is the same. It will never come to anyone by just being a Christian for a long time. He must feed regularly on the Word of God and daily relate himself to Christ.

From a Pastor's Study

A strange Contradiction

by A. Nicolson

FROM the mountains of Wales to the flat countryside of Essex may seem quite a drastic change in topography, but each has its own particular beauty. I have discovered some delightful spots in Essex.

Thaxted is a charming, historic town with a population around 2,000. It was at one time a very prosperous community and a centre of the wool trade. The timber-framed Guildhall dates back to 1475. The Church of St. John the Baptist is about 500 years old and has a very tall spire, 180 feet high.

I entered this lovely church and was fascinated by its beautiful seventeenth century screens and exquisite stained-glass windows, fragments of which are medieval. At one end of the north aisle there is a memorial to the saintly martyr John Huss, who defied the might of the Roman Catholic church and spoke fearlessly against the sale of Indulgencies. Not many steps away there is a statue of Mary and beside it a printed "Hail Mary".

Reflecting on this strange contradiction within this beautiful church, I could not help thinking that it typifies the formal religion of our time, which can harbour a veneration of the martyrs of the faith and yet a form of the very system which put the martyrs to death.

May God grant to us all a clear vision of the faith once delivered to the saints – with no contradictory idols!

Thoughts from the Book of Exodus

5. Common Curiosity (Exodus 3:2,3)

by F. Lavender,
Pastor of our Croydon Church

A BUSH catching fire would be an ordinary sight in the heat of the wilderness. Moses would scarcely notice it at first. Then he realised that the fire was not going out and that the bush itself was not burning away. This puzzled Moses; his curiosity was aroused. He left his sheep to investigate the strange phenomenon. His common curiosity led to the encounter with God which was to change the course of his life and of the history of Israel.

Curiosity is often used by God to attract people to Himself. How many folk have been led to Christ by curiosity? Perhaps their interest has been aroused by seeing how a godly Christian lives and works, or by hearing of someone being remarkably saved or healed. Maybe a passer-by wondered why people in church sounded so happy, or perhaps another received an invitation to a special meeting or rally. Whatever means the Lord used, because their common curiosity was aroused, they were brought into contact with the living Christ, they became Christians and their lives were changed.

God brings many men and women to Himself through Christians. He speaks to folk through our lives and causes them to want to know more. Our lives may be as ordinary as that bush in the desert, but, if they are filled, "lit up", by the Holy Spirit, they will attract others. The Lord will make our lives the channels of His glory. He will bring people into contact with Himself through us. By means of such ordinary men and women as we He will reveal His wonderful Son to this age and will change the course of human lives.

"I have missed it at last"

"THESE words", said a speaker at a prayer meeting, "fell from the lips of a young man who died last night". A doctor was sitting at the bedside of this young man; he had just told him that he had but a very short time to live. The young man turned to the doctor and said, "So that is that; I have missed it at last". "What do you mean?" enquired the attentive, kind-hearted physician. "Doctor, I have missed securing my salvation". "How are you so sure?" the medical man asked. "It is a sad story", the youth went on to say, "I was awakened not long ago; my conscience told me what a wretched, wicked sinner I had been. The Holy Spirit was strong within me and I was in deep distress of soul. I know what I ought to have done, but I dismissed the thoughts from my mind. The Holy Spirit urged me to make sure of the day of grace by repentance and faith in Jesus Christ. I begged to postpone the subject for a little time, but I promised myself that I would take it up again when it would be a more favourable time to attend to it. But now I know that I have missed it".

The doctor, a Christian, said, "It is not too late even now. Remember the thief on the cross; it was not too late for him". "Yes, I remember him, sir, but he never said to the Holy Spirit, 'Go Thy way for this time', but I did, and I know that my eleventh hour is gone. That was my last chance", the distraught patient rejoined.

Looking around as if earnestly, yet vainly, seeking for some desired object, then burying his face in the pillow, he cried in an agony which rang with a groan through all the house, "Oh! I have missed it". So he died.

This story, told so long ago, could be repeated again and again as I sit here at my desk. Faces from the past come flashing before my mind's eye. There was the young man who sat with me in a gospel meeting, tears running down his cheeks as the Holy Spirit convicted him. He died by his own hand not long after, without Christ.

How well I remember the woman who came to every one of my campaign meetings, leaving before anyone could speak to her, afraid, convicted. She died without ever making her peace with God.

Out of all the thousands who read the EVANGEL, it could be that the Holy Spirit is speaking only to one. . . just to you, dear friend. I say to you, "Sin not against the Holy Spirit, sin not against the voice of conscience, sin not against the offer of eternal life, lest, finally, you be compelled to cry out in despair, 'I have missed it!'".

If you refuse God's offer of mercy now, you have no Scriptural warrant that an offer of mercy will be extended to you tomorrow. "Now is the accepted time". Myriads of souls are lost by delay, by neglecting to yield their hearts to God when He calls. As R. Burdsall sings:

*The voice of free grace cries, Escape to the mountain,
For Adam's lost race, He has opened a fountain;
For sin and uncleanness and every transgression;
His blood flows so freely in streams of salvation;
Hallelujah to the Lamb who has brought us a pardon,
We will praise Him again when we pass over Jordan.*

Man of God

"And man became a living soul" (Genesis 2:7)

by H. W. Greenway

WHEN man first came, a brand-new product from the hand of the eternal God, he was an inanimate form moulded from the dust of the ground, without sight, knowledge, movement, or feeling. It was when the Creator breathed into him the "breath of lives" that Adam became a "living soul". God thus brought into being a vital personality, a complete man. From that moment the man God made demonstrated intellect, emotion and will. He was capable of thinking, feeling, deciding, and communing with his Maker.

It is obvious from this description of his origin that man is a complete being. In 1 Thessalonians 5:23 Paul refers to him as spirit, soul and body. The tripartite nature of man is therefore defined as providing a consciousness of God through the spirit; a sense of self through the soul; an awareness of the physical world through the five senses of the body. Man is a living entity as a consequence of the harmonious working of all the parts of his being. From the moment of his awakening to living reality he became aware of God: he had sweet fellowship with his Creator. Then, having been told to develop the garden, he exercised his intellect in discovery and skill, from the simple forms of understanding until, in this twentieth century, he has probed and explored the potential of the world's smallest atomic particle.

That spiritual part of man's makeup lost its association with the Creator when he used his will in defiance of the limitations which had been imposed upon him. Driven out of the Garden of Eden, he found himself alienated from God; he was a dead soul. Ephesians 2:1 describes the unregenerate as "dead in trespasses and sins" and confirms the warning given to man at his beginning: "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" (Genesis 2:17). The same warning is contained in other parts of Scripture, e.g., "The soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezekiel 18:4,20). In asserting his will against the will of God man lost his innocence and with it his communion with God. This was death: in the spiritual he ceased to live towards God though living in the natural or carnal, a condition described as one of enmity against God: "For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. Because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be" (Romans 8:6,7).

Jesus Christ came into the world to give us life: "He that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live" (John 11:25). These words of Jesus are amplified by Paul: "And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness" (Romans 8:10). James adds further testimony: "He which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death" (James 5:20). The saving of the soul is the impartation of life; man is quickened to spiritual reality. The unseen world is no figment of the imagination, for by receiving Christ man becomes a child of God possessing divine life: "But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name" (John 1:12); he lives in a new dimension, he knows his real Father and communes with Him daily.

This relationship was purchased at immeasurable cost, nothing less than the blood of Christ: "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things. . . But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot" (1 Peter 1:18,19). From when man saw an animal slain to cover his nakedness and the blood of an innocent victim flowing on the altar of sacrifice to make an atonement for his sin, he saw in both history and law his value in the economy of God.

As a new creation the whole being of man as a son of God is quickened and directed by the Spirit of God. There is no part of the regenerate being now removed from the influence of that divine Spirit, who activates the physical body just as He enlightens the mind: "If the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you" (Romans 8:11). The Christian experience is an integration of the whole human personality, which affects our emotions just as much as it directs our minds. The mind of Christ thus becomes the process to final exaltation (Philippians 2:5-9). The carnal mind, as we have noted, is opposed to God, a fact which is borne out by the degenerative effect of intellectualism. The modern insistence on the authority of mind over spirit, the cult of rationalism, has led the world to infidelity and ruin. The dictionary defines rationalism as "the practice of explaining the supernatural in religion in a way consonant with reason, or of treating reason as the ultimate authority in religion as elsewhere; the theory that reason is the foundation of certainty in knowledge (opposite to sensationalism)".

We must not fear the criticisms of those who accuse Pentecostals of being too emotional. Man has mind and feelings. It is therefore not surprising to find many emotional experiences in both Old and New Testaments. When King David in his exuberance danced before the Ark for sheer joy that this dwelling-place of God was brought back from the Philistines, his wife, Michal, sneered at him for what she considered undignified behaviour. That presuming woman was judged for her impiety and remained barren for the remainder of her life (2 Samuel 6:14-23). The man who was healed at the Beautiful Gate of the Temple proceeded forthwith to leap and praise God within the sacred precincts, an event which attracted the crowds and gave opportunity to Peter to preach the Gospel, and resulted in the conversion of 5,000 men (Acts 3; 4:4).

Said Charles Finney: "A revival will cease whenever Christians become mechanical in their attempts to promote it. When their faith is strong, and their hearts are warm and mellow, and their prayers full of holy emotion, and their words with power, then the work goes on. But when their prayers begin to be cold and without emotion, and they begin to labour mechanically, and to use words without feeling, then the revival will cease".

There is no doubt that the Evangelical Awakening saved England from the evil results of rationalism, for we are told by Somervell that when Whitfield burst upon the moribund scene and commenced his great campaigns, "It was an age when reason was glorified as the highest of faculties and enthusiasm condemned as the worst of follies. A similar state of affairs in France ended towards the close of the century in the French Revolution. That no such terrible event occurred in England is largely due to the work of the evangelical reformers of the movement largely pioneered by George Whitfield and the Wesleys".

In like manner today we are endangered in our witness by exalting the mind over the power of the Spirit. Nothing is more depressing to our endeavours than an artificial respectability, expressed in a general attitude of hostility to emotionalism in the Church. Affront the so-called dignity of many orthodox religious people and the door of fellowship is closed. It is the spirit that motivates racism in society and promotes class levels among Christian assemblies. "In every religious belief," writes Ribot in The Psychology of the Emotions, "there are of necessity two parts, an intellectual element, a knowledge which constitutes the object of belief, and an emotional state, a feeling which accompanies the former and expresses itself in action. To anyone deficient in the second element, the religious feeling is unknown, inaccessible; nothing remains to such persons but abstract conceptions. The study of religious sentiment. . . cannot dissociate these two elements".

Quickened by the Spirit of God, with a mind governed by the mind of Christ and a heart in tune with the Infinite, the born again man of God is fully equipped for Christian witness, an example of dignity without stultifying pedantry on the one hand nor excessive excitement on the other. Empty self-display for the sake of promoting what may be considered spirituality can only lead to rejection by those who seek truth.

Many people live in a realm of emotional conflict, others in an atmosphere of emotional surfeit, overlooking the fact that intellect and emotion combine to make a harmonious personality. To rely solely on feeling can bring us to defeat. Such was the experience of Elijah. His commission from God was an important one: he stood before the people on Mount Carmel to vindicate Jehovah's sacred name. By the test of fire the nation put away evil prophets and turned again to God. It was a victory such as few prophets had enjoyed, but it was short-lived delight. The ecstasy of that crowning moment of triumph was turned into dark despair. The voice of Jezebel frightened him. Violent king Ahab, the prophets of Baal, an apostate nation had all been faced with amazing courage — but this woman! Elijah ran for forty days and forty nights, the victim of an emotional reaction that outran his faith in God or his knowledge of God's power in past deliverances.

We must never forget the importance of the will, nor are our emotions to be locked away in cold storage. Our wills must be subject to the Master's will; we must weep with those who weep and laugh with those who laugh; our whole nature must be dedicated to the command of our Lord and applied to our service for Him in an evil generation.

Thousands of Christians are convinced that a revival is the only answer to our tragic world situation, and no doubt our conferences and committees will continue to occupy their time talking about evangelism. But here we must observe caution, for, in studying the mechanics of campaigning, we can overlook the true heart of the preacher, for, as one has written, "The proper training of the emotions that make men and women do as they should in a world of conflict, is certainly of more importance than learning how to weigh the planets or give the correct dates of the Napoleonic campaigns". Writing in Joyful News some years ago, Rev. R. Pyke said, "A few years ago, when the leaders of the Church were more given to analysing revivals than of promoting them, they often arrived at the ponderous conclusions that revivals were too emotional. Well, were they? I do not know, but I do know that we could do with a little more of it today in our worship. We have ridiculed hymns with a chorus, and silenced the 'Amens' in the congregation. All is subdued, refined, and 'faultily faultless'".

Paul said, "It is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing". Our Lord Himself was not embarrassed to bring joy to His disciples, and that more

Gates

Words: A. A. Biddle
Drawing: John Gregory

HAVE you ever noticed the various types and designs of gates in your street? They are made of various materials, like iron and wood. Some even have inserted panels of reinforced glass or plastic sheeting. They are painted in various colours, which adds something to the general appearance of the property that they front.

There are not only the humble gates of ordinary houses, but also those massive ornamental gates of places like Buckingham Palace, the Houses of Parliament and many of the stately homes throughout the country. Yes, there are millions of gates all over the world and in some ways they tell us what kind of people we are and how we live.

The story of Samson carrying the posts and gates of Gaza up a sandy road to the top of a mountain always leaves us breathless. Then there is that great story of Peter's deliverance from prison (Acts 12). The angel woke him up, his chains fell off, he followed the angel and then came to the final barrier to freedom, a great iron gate, but the Lord caused it to open of its own accord and Peter went through and was free.

The Scripture which thrills me is Psalm 9:13, 14. The writer tells us that the Lord lifted him "up from the gates of death", to sing praises in the gates of the daughter of Zion where he rejoiced in the salvation which the Lord provided. This is our experience if we love Jesus. We were dead to Him, but He forgave our sins and brought us resurrection life, lifting us up to the glad, lovely place of Zion, the city of song and praise, where we rejoice in His salvation.

Whatever you do, keep lifting up your heart to Jesus and keep giving Him all praise for His great work in your life. Praise ye the Lord!

An Outline

The Light of the World
"Behold, I stand at the door, and knock"
(Revelation 3:20).

Waiting. Dr. D. Livingstone's "perfect Gentleman" awaits our invitation.

Coming. "The Dayspring from on high hath visited us" (Luke 1:78,79).

Dwelling. "That Christ may make His home in your hearts" Ephesians 3:14, T.E.V.

Communing. "And the joys we share...".

Controlling. The Guest becomes the Host, as in the Emmaus home.

Think of the home of our heart with its several rooms and what they represent: drawing-room (social life and friendships); dining-room (appetites); study (intellectual life, plans, decisions); "thy closet" (the secret life known only to God). Dr. F.B. Meyer "gave Him the keys to all the rooms of his heart save one", but he never knew the joys of the Spirit-filled life until he yielded that one!

Maxims of the Mud
("Idylls of the King", Tennyson)

JOHN Ruskin, walking the wet streets of an English manufacturing town, thought that he would have some of that black mud analysed. It was found to consist of sand, clay, soot and water. Musing, he thought, "These are the very substances from which our precious gems are formed. From sand, or silica, come the onyx, chrysolite, agate, beryl, cornelian, chalcedony, jasper, sardius, amethyst; from the clay, the sapphire, ruby, emerald, and topaz; from the soot is formed the diamond; and the water was the same as that which, as a dewdrop, sparkles in the heart of a rose".

"Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners".
From the worst of society He builds His kingdom fair.

An Incident

"I felt the Hand of the Lord one Day"
(Psalm 139:10; Elim Choruses No. 876)

"ONE morning I felt that I must call upon a certain woman. The visit seemed rather a nuisance for it was in the opposite direction to which I had planned to go and meant sacrificing other possibilities. However, I went. Her pale face shone with surprise and bewilderment as she opened the door. 'Fancy you remembering!' she exclaimed. I remembered nothing, and admitted it. She reminded me that a year ago to the day, I had buried her husband. This morning she felt like rising and running from the house and every stabbing memory, but some urge pressed, as she prayed, to stay indoors. God must keep a calendar". Dr. Sangster was certain that it was the hand of God upon him.

Education without Faith

by S. E. Petts

"In the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be. . . Ever learning, and never able to come to a knowledge of the truth" (2 Timothy 3:1,7).

DANIEL said that knowledge would increase just prior to our Lord's second coming. In the last century there have been nine times as many inventions and discoveries as there were in all the preceding years. Progress in the field of science and technology in our lifetime alone proves that we are in the last days.

We are very clever, but we are not very wise. We have given attention to everything that concerns the growth of body and mind, but have forgotten the spirit. Moral progress has lagged so far behind mental advancement that it has been almost totally ignored. The wise have not let this happen, but they are in a great minority.

To educate without faith is to breed clever criminals. Humanists would have us delete religious education from the school curriculum. This would be disastrous. Diminishing faith brings moral decline. Christ demanded faith in God above all else. To ignore this message from the omniscient God is to perform the great sin.

Paul's word to Timothy is truly prophetic of these last days: "Ever learning, and never able to come to a knowledge of the truth". The time is short. "Have faith in God"!

Love, the perfect Bond

SOME folk do not like stories in serial form, and "to be continued" or "more next week" are most infuriating phrases to them. Nevertheless here is a further episode of a story that I told in a previous article.

You may recall that, when describing the blessing of God on the "Come together" rallies, I told of the loving concern shown by Christians in the Liverpool gathering to an Asian couple from Uganda. Their ministry of praying and sharing the burden of sorrow, loneliness and need developed into practical caring and £300 was given to the Asians at the close of the service. Today, the husband, Mr. Desai, has a steady job in the civil service (he had been a civil servant in Uganda) and, out of the blue, official word has come from Uganda advising them of the release of their bank funds and of a pension payment for all the years of his service. At last they have a home, also given in answer to prayer, and, best of all, Mr. Desai has become a really born again Christian. He thought that he was a Christian when he left Uganda, but that was before he met the real Christians whom he's found in Britain. As one young man from Liverpool said, "The Lord sent us the Desais to teach us how to love a little more". I think that you will agree with me that my second instalment has a most satisfactory ending.

Another glorious "Come together" was held recently in our Motherwell Church when over 300 people participated in fellowship and worship. Both my daughters were present and have written to tell me of the rich blessing, of the shining faces of the choir, of the sharing of burdens during the time set apart for believers both to minister and to be ministered to. Hearts and hands were joined together, tears flowed, prayer was vital and urgent, and, when the appeal was given, twenty-two people responded to the gospel call.

Again may I emphasise the importance of an awareness of so many people with desperate needs. This was brought home to me very forcibly on Easter Monday at the Royal Albert Hall in the divine healing service. Many anxious people came for prayer and their needs were not entirely physical. A considerable number sought deliverance from mental disorders, depression, nervous breakdown and a fear of the return of schizophrenic tendencies. If we are what we claim to be, we cannot dismiss these pleas for help with callous indifference or with a casual, superficial attitude. Sick and sad folk can sense whether we really care and when genuine Bible compassion moves us to love, to sympathise, to help, to pray, to comfort. It should never be that the harsh ways of the world invade our fellowship. Christian love still has meaning and relevance. We must not merely love in theory or speech, but in deed and in truth. We can never err too far in this direction; loving and caring should know no limits, according to 1 Corinthians 13.

I feel this very deeply and in particular because of a tragedy of which I read concerning the harsh treatment meted out in an Exclusive Brethren assembly. The discipline or punishment given caused the deaths of a wife, three children and the husband, not far from the area where we live. The term referred to at the inquest is a diabolical one, the very opposite of "come together": an erring brother must be "shut up", banned from the fellowship of other believers, from all social and family life. This poor, tormented man killed his family and took his own life, leaving instructions that all memory of the family of such a "wicked man" should be obliterated and their house destroyed. What a warning this is to us all to beware of passing judgment, of inflicting mental torment, of the cruelty of isolation. We need each other and must "With all lowliness and meekness, with longsuffering, forbearing one another in love" endeavour "to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace" (Ephesians 4:2, 3).

abundantly; He was not embarrassed to weep at the tomb of a friend, as one original translation has it, "He burst into tears"; He did not hesitate to show anger at the hypocrisy of Pharisees and scribes; He was not embarrassed when mothers brought their babes for His blessing. While fully God, He was yet fully Man.

There is great significance in Paul's word to Timothy: "But thou, O MAN OF GOD. . . fight the good fight of faith" (1 Timothy 6:11).

NEWS FROM NEW ZEALAND

LET me give you a bird's eye view of our work here over the past few months. There is a real spirit of expectancy and an atmosphere of blessing in the various centres, for which we praise God. However, most of the churches have recently felt the loss of key people who have moved to other centres or have gone to serve the Lord. In one church it was the youth leader, in another the Sunday school superintendent, in yet another the Bible class leader, and in a fourth a deacon, but, praise God, He is filling the gaps.

In Wellington (Pastor: M.J. Frith), a Canadian brother, John Murdock, has just concluded a series of meetings on evangelism, faith and the kingdom of God. A number of lives were really touched. In the Sunday services in particular the sweetness of the presence of the Holy Spirit was wonderful.

In Hamilton the folk are at present without a pastor, but they are enjoying a wide variety of visiting ministry. Special outreaches are planned for May and June and we are praying for them as well as for the Lord's provision of the right pastor.

In Christchurch (Pastor: G.T.S. Dunk), evangelist Barry Smith, who brought such blessing in the Blenheim church last year, has just concluded a wonderful series of meetings on the Second Coming. A number were saved and restored to the Lord. A packed church each night indicated the interest.

In Nelson (Pastor: L.W. Covic) over recent months, a number have found the Lord in camps and services, and some have been baptised in water. There has also been a precious moving of the Holy Spirit among younger people. We are believing for much fruit this year from the Friday evening coffee bar outreach in the town.

In Blenheim (Pastor: I.W. Bilby), the work last year went from strength to strength. As a result the Pastor will shortly be entering the ministry full-time. Recently during a brief visit to New Zealand by Philip and Diane Dunk, four were baptised in the Holy Spirit, and others were also greatly blessed. A forthcoming visit from Pastor Des Short, Principal of Faith Bible College, is the focus of our prayer that it will result in a new and even greater move of God in this town.

In Tokyo, Japan, the Lord is giving our missionary family, the Bickertons, much fruit before their furlough later this year. A pilot of Japan Air Lines was gloriously saved just before Christmas and last month a Japanese wife was saved from suicide. Now she and her American husband are opening to the gospel. Doors of ministry keep being flung open by God, so much so that each day we must believe for sufficient strength for our friends in their great labours for the Lord.

Prayer and Politics

by H. Burton Haynes

"First of all . . . supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks. . . for all men; for kings" (1 Timothy 2:1, 2).

THE duty of a Christian towards the State is defined in our Lord's words: "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's and to God the things that are God's". The State has its rights. A Christian citizen must conscientiously discharge his obligations to the State to the limit of his conscience. This requires an honest appraisal of one's heart before the Lord.

When the command of the State clashes with duty to God, another principle emerges. It was declared by Peter, when the Jewish authorities forbade him to do any more preaching, "We must obey God rather than men". A balanced relationship with God and man produces a full-orbed Christian life.

We are exhorted to pray for all those who hold positions of responsibility. "I exhort therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; For kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty" (1 Timothy 2:1, 2). The members of the Early Church, to whom these words were originally addressed, were despised and persecuted. They had no prestige, no franchise, no industrial status, no social privileges, for in the main they were slaves, possessed by their masters and owners. In giving themselves to prayer on behalf of their rulers, however, they wielded a powerful influence which vitally affected the social and political conditions of their time in a way that cannot be measured in words.

The principal factor in politics is the character of the politician. "Political insight", says a writer, "can be blunted by self-interest, by ambition for place and the love of power, by class prejudice, by personal antagonisms, by the fear of changes. . . Pride, greed, self-interest and the love of power operate consciously or unconsciously in all parties". Thus, we can imply, we are bidden to pray that they might "be saved, and . . . come to a knowledge of the truth". It should be the ideal of human government to express the rule of God in all its laws. That ideal can only be attained by politicians who recognise God as Sovereign.

Christians can use their influence in national affairs in various ways. They can express their point of view to their local M.P., sign petitions, organise deputations to influence the political machine, but the most vital influence of all is prayer. These things are not diametrically opposed, for "Faith without works is dead". If you believe something passionately with all your heart you will earnestly pray, then you will arise, go forth and do something practical about it. That is the teaching of the whole Bible.

"More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of". Prayer reaches the Throne of the Eternal and lays hold of resources which cannot be explained in words. Prayer changes men and policies, affects the destiny of nations (read the Book of Esther) and releases spiritual forces which will ultimately defeat all the sinister forces of evil.

The British Government is confronted with great problems at home and abroad. The satanic fantasy of the atomic armaments race is a problem of the first magnitude.

With such heavy burdens of responsibility resting upon their shoulders, our statesmen urgently need our prayers. May God grant them wisdom and guidance in all the affairs of State.

(This last article was written by our brother not long before his sudden death. EDITOR).

Mormons also claim that only after baptism by full immersion can one start on the road to salvation. The dying thief on the cross (Luke 23:42) said, "Lord, remember me when you come into your Kingdom". He had not kept any such laws or ordinances and yet Jesus was able to reply "I tell you this, you shall this day be in Paradise with Me". The only step needed was the step of faith.

I would ask all Christians to pray for the young Americans and others who are engaged in missionary work for the Mormon Church. They may be sincere, but it is possible to be sincerely wrong. Christ is their only solution; only through Him can they receive salvation and come to a true, deep fellowship with God. Pray that they may be confronted by the truth which lies in Jesus Christ.

Editorial

TWO reports appeared in the same column of a newspaper recently. One dealt with a report by the Churches' Council on Gambling which, among other penetrating things, revealed that the number of uncontrollable gamblers in Britain exceeds several hundred thousand and quotes Gordon Moody as saying: "Nine out of ten of these have come up through the betting shops".

Here are the two quotes which struck me very forcibly:

"Britain's 14,000 betting shops had a £1,655 million turnover last year".

At the foot of the same column appeared:

"More than £3 million, the most ever, was raised for Christian Aid last year".

The point must be made that the £1,655 million does not, of course, take in the astronomical sums spent on other forms of gambling, like football pools, bingo, horse and greyhound racing, the rich man's flutters, like roulette and the Stock Exchange, and even — perish the thought — on who should succeed Dr. Ramsey as Archbishop of Canterbury.

We talk about inflation and the threats it brings, but we might well ask, "Whence this waste?". When you think about tobacco, drink and other useless — and worse, highly dangerous — forms of wanton spending, there is no wonder that demands are made which the nation cannot really carry. When you further recall that money is raised for Christian Aid by all manner of means like jumble sales, school giving, cheese and wine sessions and so on, the figure of £3 million is really so tiny. What a parable it all is.

I thought about this when I visited the Royal Albert Hall with a colleague just before Easter Monday. We were there to check on arrangements for our Elim meetings. Preparations were being made for a three-nights' visit by a semi-pop orchestra. We were told that it was a complete sell-out. We overheard the telephone switchboard operator answering a query concerning a concert to be given later by the singer Andy Williams from U.S.A. The operator said that there was only standing room at the top of the balcony left, at the price of £1.

It makes you think. Christian giving in Pentecost is good, but is it as good as it might be? Is it as good as we think it is?

FUNDAMENTAL BELIEFS OF THE ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH — 1. THE BIBLE: We believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God and that none may add thereto or take away therefrom except at their peril. 2. THE TRINITY: We believe that the Godhead eternally exists in three persons: Father, Son and Holy Ghost, and that these three are one God. 3. THE CHURCH: We believe that the Church consists of all persons who have been regenerated by the Holy Ghost and made new creatures in Christ Jesus. 4. THE SAVIOUR: We believe that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God and that through the death and risen power of Christ all who believe can be saved from the penalty and power of sin. 5. THE HEALER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Healer of the body and that all who will walk in obedience to His will can claim Divine Healing for their bodies. 6. THE BAPTISER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Baptiser in the Holy Ghost and that this Baptism with signs following is promised to every believer. 7. THE COMING KING: We believe in the personal and pre-millennial return of our Lord Jesus Christ to receive unto Himself the Church and afterwards to set up His Throne as King. 8. THE FRUIT: We believe that every believer on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour should produce the ninefold fruit of His Spirit: Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. 9. THE GIFTS: We believe that the Church should claim and manifest the nine Gifts of the Holy Spirit: Wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discernment, tongues, interpretation. 10. THE MINISTRY: We believe that God has given some apostles and some prophets and some evangelists and some pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry for the edifying of the Body of Christ. 11. THE FUTURE STATE: We believe in the eternal conscious bliss of all true believers in Christ and also in the eternal conscious punishment of all Christ rejectors. 12. THE ORDINANCES: We believe in the following ordinances: Partaking of bread and wine in memory of our Lord's death, baptism by immersion for believers, the laying on of hands and the anointing of the sick with oil.

Impressions of the Afternoon Service at Bristol City Temple opening

by J. B. Coleman

"THEY"VE taken over Bristol again!" a woman called to her neighbour in the block of flats near the Temple. There was little need to ask what caused the comment as hundreds of Pentecostal Christians converged on Jamaica Street. Even the policemen seemed to be worried!

At last the moment arrived when Pastor W. Ron Jones and those who would be taking part in the celebrations came to the main door for the opening ceremony. We sang "Amazing Grace", we said a fervent "Amen" to the prayer of Pastor Eastman (from America), we chorused "Praise the Lord" at the bidding of Pastor H.W. Greenway after he read it in Isaiah chapter 12. Our hearts were stirred as Pastor P.S. Brewster recounted (and some of us remembered) how he, in dependence on God, hired the Colston Hall and with Willard Cantelon pioneered the Elim work in Bristol. After Mr. Brewster turned the key and prayed a prayer of dedication, we moved into the new City Temple. No member of the congregation is very far away from the preacher — a great advantage for worship and ministry. Glenys Jones and the New Creation opened the service with a piece appropriately entitled, "Thank You" and what an afternoon of thanksgiving to God it was. Greetings by telegram arrived from believers in this country and abroad. Two of the original members of the campaign party were unable to join us, but both sent telegram greetings—Alexander Tee and William Plowright. Pastor J.T. Bradley, our Secretary-General, was prevented from being present, but he was extremely well represented by his wife.

Speaking on behalf of Headquarters, Pastor John Smyth (whose help and advice is always appreciated by those who have building projects) said how thrilled he was to see this vision becoming reality. Robert Fairnie brought a message of goodwill on behalf of Assemblies of God. I liked his quotation from De Witt Talmage, that each has his own God-given ministry; God does not make duplicates. "Ron Jones", said Brother Fairnie, "is unique!". But behind every successful man is a good woman and Mrs. Kathleen Jones was literally behind her husband on the platform. She thrilled us as she read the Scriptures. I praised God for the joy of seeing the whole Jones' family involved in this great project.

Assistant ministers have always played an active part in the life of the Temple. Peter Upton was kept busy. David Woodfield expressed the feelings of all the former assistants. He had thought, he said, of designing an assistant's tie bearing the motif of a motor-cycle or "banger" accompanied by a visiting list "as long as your arm!"

Ron Jones has been ably helped in crusades by Len Magee who blessed us as he sang about the Holy Spirit coming upon us. Musical items by the New Creation were also a source of inspiration. What can one say about the poetic contribution of Bob Helps (who wrote it) and Rhiannon Jones? This was the story of the project in verse, full of humour, fun and yet with a spiritual challenge at the end.

Pastor P.S. Brewster brought the afternoon message concerning truth. He reminded us that we must hold fast to truth and not allow it to "fall in the street", nor permit it to be strangled or stifled but open our hearts to Christ, the embodiment of Truth.

While we enjoyed a grand tea served by the ladies of the Church — to whom a great debt of thanks is due — and renewed fellowship with friends from as far apart as Blackpool, Salisbury and Wales, we felt that the chorus that we had sung more than once during the afternoon summed up our feelings: "This is the day that the Lord hath made, We will rejoice and be glad in it".

GLEANINGS

Changing Standards

by S. E. Petts

"Woe to them that call evil good and good evil; that put darkness for light and light for darkness that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter" (Isaiah 5:20).

OLDER folk remember the days when life was not so free, but they felt happier, for they were more secure. Today everything is uncertain and man's heart fails him for fear. The reason for this change lies in altered values. Once evil was called evil and was dealt with as such, but now evil is permitted and pronounced good. Can we not see the devil tempting us just as he did Eve? "To eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil isn't wrong, it will do you good" he seems to suggest. As a result sexual and other perversions bring added troubles.

Today light is called darkness, the wisdom of God is called foolishness and is replaced with ideas that will meet men's baser desires. Ungodly, blind men lead others to their destruction. To call the bitter sweet does not change its nature. Indeed today, many who have tasted drugs, the so-called sweets of desire, have found them to turn bitter.

New philosophies, permissive national laws and changed ethics cannot alter the eternal moral laws of God any more than propounding a new natural law that flames will not burn will make it painless to put a hand into the fire. Even eternal security depends on our recognising bitterness as bitterness, darkness as darkness and evil as evil, and walking only in the truth of God.

Bristol's New Creation

*Report on the evening rally at the opening of the new Bristol City Temple
by Ray Hughes*

SELDOM has a religious gathering sung in the open air in Bristol in recent times. This was the scene as nearly 1,000 people heralded the opening of the City Temple Elim Pentecostal Church, in Jamaica Street, Stokes Croft. Police kept traffic flowing and coaches brought the congregation for the opening service. At the heart of the celebrations — on the day of his 26th wedding anniversary — was the Minister, Rev. Ron Jones.

The new church is the third stage of a project which will ultimately provide a church, accommodation for young and old, Sunday school facilities, and a car park all on the same site. — Evening Post

A BEAUTIFUL building, whose austere exterior belies the spacious, pleasing interior, is a new creation of which not only the local congregation together with its minister, but also all Elim, can be proud. Others, no doubt, will write on the fantastic facilities encompassed within its walls, but I would like to say that, on entering the main church building a visitor is readily made aware of the Christian message. The cost of making man a new creation is symbolised by an empty cross and the standard of doctrine for the safety of the soul is depicted by an open Bible. Add to this moving music, committed Christians, Pentecostal preaching and a happy though holy atmosphere and you have a church on the move.

of a complete choir, uplifted us all with skilled, spiritual singing, while Pastor Len Magee, a new creation from the darkness of drug addiction to the delights of discipleship, sang a number from his exciting L.P. and everyone knew why it is a best seller. The man of the day, Pastor W. Ron Jones, led the meeting with flashes of humour together with deep spiritual power. Church secretary, Gordon Lovell, representing the faithful believers who had made this day possible, prayed during open worship and we rejoiced that, with such a good captain and an excellent crew, the new creation would go on from strength to strength.

Pastor P.S. Brewster preached with his usual high standard and there were many more new creations as men and women responded to the gospel challenge all over the crowded congregation.

I was glad I was there, thankful to share in the crowning moment of twenty-one years of faithful service, agreeing with the chorus adjusted for the occasion, "This is the House that the Lord has made... We shall rejoice and be glad in it".

Water

by Peter McCann, one of our missionaries in Rhodesia

FOR many Rhodesians 1973 will be remembered as the Year of the Drought. With last year's rainy season a dismal failure in most areas and a disaster in others, a pattern of failing crops, starving cattle and severe water restrictions was established.

Equally, though, 1974 must be remembered as the Year of the Deluge. It started last October — a rainy season Noah might have approved of; it rained and rained and rained. Dying rivers became swirling torrents, barren bush put on a new green dress. In places the maize is so high that ladders may be needed to harvest it! So much has changed — and all because of a few drops of water.

Water — how often do we give it a thought? We bathe in it, drink it, use it in our gardens; generally we shamefully waste it. We take it for granted.

Yet water must rank as one of the most marvellous substances in the world. Everyone knows that water is a liquid, yet chemically with all its relatives gases, it is only a fluke of chemical bonding which prevents it from being a gas. We do not have far to search for the world's best solvent; water dissolves almost anything. Water is the earth's thermostat, making equatorial and Temperate Zones alike fit places to live in. Water moves mountains, fashions caverns, lays fertile plains. Water may be common, but its properties are far from common.

Water is essential to life. "Life began at the bottom of the ocean," say the evolutionists, "and even now, water is essential to life". Whatever we may think of the first part of this statement (noble ancestry indeed! If we accept it, the Scriptural concept of man as a God-moulded, God-inspired son of the earth is far superior and vastly more reasonable) there is little to be said against the second. Our bodies are about sixty per cent water. We could survive several weeks of fasting, but a few days without water would madden us with thirst. Can there be any more compelling sensation than severe thirst to any man? Certainly, the Lord Jesus well knew what He was saying when He uttered the great invitation of John 7: "If any man is thirsty"; and who isn't? Our thirst craves satisfaction. Like the Samaritan woman (John 4:15), we say, "Give us this water!" How sad that so many are as blind as that woman as to the true Source of living Water.

What did Jesus mean? Ezekiel 47 tells of a vision seen by the prophet of a sparkling, swelling river of life flowing out from the temple of God. If only we will put our trust wholly in Christ as Saviour and allow the Holy Spirit to enter our lives, we can have a spring of living water, whose source is God, right inside us, a well of true, eternal satisfaction that cannot fail. Truly this water is something to be desired.

Flooding has been reported in many parts of southern Africa. The rain which has blessed us has been shown to have power. Tiny drops of water, falling on a place over millenia of time, can erode the hardest rock. Flowing rivers can move tons of rock, burst dams, or drive turbines to make electricity. The awesome power of the hydrogen bomb is locked away securely in the humble water molecule.

What happens if this power is misused? The River Rhine starts as a glacial torrent in the Swiss Alps, serves as the main sewer for the heart of industrial Europe, and ends its life as a filthy, sterile canal that the Dutch avoid if they can. There is a modern parable here! The Early Church well knew the power of living water. The Holy Spirit working through them "turned the world upside down" in a few short years. The Church grew; thousands were attracted because they could see that the Church had something real and wonderful.

The Church should have the same power today. We have the same Saviour, the same Spirit, but all too often the Church has become sluggish, stagnant, channelled. Seekers after true satisfaction go away, still seeking. What is wrong?

Before the rainy season began in Rhodesia, our rivers were hardly flowing; it took much rain to get them started again, and it took much prayer to bring the rain. God is willing to give His Spirit and His resources are unlimited. He waits for Christians to ask (Luke 11:13)!

Memories

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

THE old man still preached in the little church in Ephesus. He was a lonely man, for all his old friends were dead, but the children in the Sunday school loved him and his stories. He told them of the old days, the happy times that he had shared with his friends, especially those wonderful years that they spent with Jesus.

"Did you really know Jesus?" a little girl asked him one day.

"Oh yes", the old man replied, "I knew Him very well. We were good friends and I loved Him with all my heart".

"Is it true that you were the disciple whom Jesus loved?"

"Yes", the old man said,

"You must have been very sad when He was crucified".

"I was heartbroken when I saw that He was dead", the old man told her. "I did not want to believe that such a terrible thing had happened to my beloved Master. It seemed that there was nothing to look forward to any more, nothing at all for me to hope for".

"But He rose again, didn't He?" the girl asked.

"Oh yes!" the old man exclaimed, and his eyes lit up as He remembered the occasion. "I heard that His grave had been found empty and I ran as fast as my legs would carry me and saw for myself the empty grave and the folded grave-clothes inside. My heart leapt for joy!"

"Did you see Him after that?"

"Many times", the old man said. "I remember one time especially. My friends and I were fishing on the lake one morning and suddenly, there He was, waiting for us on the shore! Before He died, he had promised to meet us there, but we had all forgotten about His promise. It was a wonderful surprise to see Him there. I shall never forget that morning!"

"Surely you were sad when He went back to heaven!"

"Oh, I could not be sad! Before He returned to His Father He said, 'Lo, I am with you always', and I believed Him. I trusted Him. I knew that He was my Friend for ever".

"What did He say before He left you?"

"'Love one another', He said, 'as I have loved you'".

"How do you spend your spare time?" the girl asked.

"I am writing a book", said the old man.

The old man finished his book just before he died. Have you read it? It is called "The Gospel of John".

Thoughts from the Book of Exodus

6. The ever-present Lord (Exodus 3:12)

by F. Lavender,
Pastor of our Croydon Church

MOSES was faced with a staggering challenge. He had been originally trained to lead men as a prince of Egypt, but for forty years he had been a lonely shepherd. He was no longer a good speaker and had only led sheep. He was simply looking for a quiet, peaceful old age, when his peace was shattered by the call of God: "Come now, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh". Moses was bewildered and shaken, but when he queried the word of God, the Lord assured him: "Certainly I will be with thee".

The Lord gave signs which Moses was to show to Israel and to Pharaoh, miracles to prove to them that the Lord had called him. The Lord also declared that Moses would call terrible judgments on Egypt to compel Pharaoh to release Israel. It was, however, the assurance of the Lord's presence which gave him courage in every situation. Miracles were occasional, but the presence of the Lord was constant. The signs and wonders simply confirmed to others that the Lord was with Moses.

The Lord gave His promise to Moses in connection with his calling. We, too, have a divine calling to be witnesses for Christ (Matthew 28:19) and He has promised His constant presence (Matthew 28:20). Many of us have answers to prayer and see miracles from time to time, but the most wonderful fact of the Christian life is our Lord's unchanging nearness, for even when we do not see or feel anything He is still with us. This knowledge strengthens us in time of temptation, challenges us when we begin to be slack or careless, and encourages us when we have to pass through sorrow and distress. The assurance of His presence transforms the whole of life.

Moses, God is our God and the promise which He gave is our promise, for all the promises of God are given and confirmed in the Lord Jesus Christ. Hallelujah!

From Communism to Christ

I WAS saved when I was thirteen and baptised in the Plymouth Brethren when I was eighteen, but, I became separated from God as a result of worldliness and indifference and went into a completely back-slidden state. I joined the Air Force, but was invalided out after seventeen years. For a number of years I went on living in the same Godless way, but had many inward struggles and many times realised that God was speaking to me. Then I got deeply interested in politics and philosophy, which led to my interest in communism. I later joined the communist party and eventually became secretary of the local branch. I was very fervent. The local secretary is quite an influential position. He has to make recommendations and what he says is rarely questioned. I arranged and spoke often in public meetings and street meetings. I came to see, however, that this Godless philosophy with its denial of personal liberty and of the spirit of man was contrary to beliefs that I realised I still clung to.

I left the communist party in 1970, but was still far from God. Until recently I was as far from Him as it's possible to be.

Then one of my sons had a nervous breakdown and was in hospital. He was visited by someone from the Elim Pentecostal Church. Later he went to a service and was converted. I was sceptical about the reality of it, but, when he was discharged from hospital, he joined with the young people at Neath Elim and witnessed with them for Christ in the town. Later, in September 1973 he was baptised along with other young men who had been saved in a tent campaign conducted by Pastor A.O. Johnson. He gave a clear testimony to salvation and I remembered something of the joy that I had felt when I was baptised all those years ago and found myself earnestly hoping that it was genuine with him. Unfortunately he began seeing his old unsaved companions again and his interest in the church waned. Then he had to go back into hospital. During this time the members and Pastor of the Neath Church visited him. A lovely group of young Christians regularly took my wife and me to the hospital in their car.

I remember one evening. They were sitting in a line in my house. I told them: "It is no use them trying to convert me. I have tried it all". One of them — God be praised said, "I believe that God was going to save you and we are going to pray".

I was doing a great deal of thinking at this time and decided that, when my son came home, I would support him by going to church with him. It's strange how the Lord works. Two days before going to the church the Lord came to me. It was a wonderful revelation of Jesus Christ to my soul. On the Sunday evening when I walked into the church I was immediately aware of the presence of God. It was so real. I was greatly blessed by the service and I knew that none but Christ could satisfy. I came fully back to the Lord.

Two weeks later Pastor Johnson gave me opportunity to give my testimony at the gospel service and immediately afterwards, when I had returned to my seat, God baptised me in His Spirit. I was drenched in the Spirit. Now I cannot understand how I lived all these years without the Saviour. He fills my life.

I believe, too, that the Lord has touched my body. I had an infirmity which caused very severe physical pain and was being treated with a dangerous drug. I have only had one slight attack since that night. I took it immediately to the Lord and have not had any recurrence.

The front window of my house used to display communist posters, now it displays texts. On the fly leaf of my bible at the age of fifteen I wrote, "I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me". Pray for me that this may be my daily experience.

Praise God for the endless joys of salvation!

Pause for Thought

by Trevor Partington,
Covenant Hall, Stafford

LAST Thursday was Ascension Day, when the Christian Church remembers that Jesus Christ went back to heaven forty days after His resurrection.

To many people that is more or less the end of the story. Jesus was a good man who lived on the earth, but now that is history. He has gone back to heaven so now in some way we must try to live as He did. The Ascension of the Lord means far more than this, however. Because Christ ascended we now have Someone to represent us in heaven. "There is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus" (1 Timothy 2:5). This is why we pray through our Lord Jesus Christ.

If you had the misfortune to be summoned before a crown court, a barrister would act on your behalf. He would be your representative before the judge. Jesus Christ is our Advocate. In 1 John 2:1,2 we read: "If you sin there is Someone to plead for you before the Father. His name is Jesus Christ. He is the One who brings us into fellowship with God, and is the forgiveness for our sins" (Living Bible).

Solicitors and barristers help us when we are in trouble or when we need advice. Jesus Christ can be that sort of help to us. He requires no fee — just our faith. His business hours are around the clock and right now He's waiting to hear from you.

PRAYER & PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

ONE of the last things which Jesus commanded His disciples before He ascended to heaven was to tarry or wait in Jerusalem until they were clothed with power from on high

It is not easy for some of us to wait. We feel that the King's business is urgent and requires all haste. The believer is limited as to time as well as to strength, and is anxious to do God's will, so to wait is not easy. One shudders at the thought of what would have happened if the disciples had not waited for the day of Pentecost and had gone out in their own strength to proclaim the gospel. What different results there would have been! Have you waited on God to fill you with His Holy Spirit as He did His disciples on that Pentecostal day long ago?

One has heard it said that we do not want waiting meetings for the Holy Spirit, but receiving meetings. Of course we need to receive, but I think that God keeps some people waiting for the promise of the Father. Some Pentecostal people claim to know all the "techniques" of receiving that Holy Spirit, but it is Jesus who baptises in the Holy Spirit, not men.

I can think of two men in the Pentecostal movement in Britain who had to wait for years for Jesus to baptise them, but how wonderfully God used those men, one as a mighty evangelist and the other as a great Bible teacher. I can also recall others who waited for long periods for power from on high and in that waiting period God did much cleaning up in their lives. One man told me that he waited for months and could not understand the delay. Then one night in a waiting meeting he remembered that he had quarrelled with a member of his family and as a result had not spoken to him for years. He repented before God and sent a letter asking for his forgiveness. That night this man was filled with the Spirit.

Those who wait on the Lord will receive His blessings.

CHURCH REPORTS

ROWLEY REGIS

Pastor: D.W. Cartwright

AT our Sunday school prizegiving over fifty children were present. It was encouraging to see so many parents coming under the sound of the gospel. Our attendance now reaches over fifty children each week. This represents a 100% growth in two years. We now have a minibus with which to collect the children. We want to reach a target of 100 children by the end of 1974.

The following week four candidates were baptised in water and there was a great spirit of blessing in the meeting. As the Pastor spoke on believer's baptism, we felt that we could all dedicate our lives to God afresh. The Lord has really blessed us over the last few months. We have seen a soul saved, baptised in the Holy Spirit and in water in less than six months. We have also seen lives spiritually deepened.

This year will be a great challenge. May the Lord enlarge our vision that we may never hinder His work. In this day of material ambitions, it is our desire to be ambitious for the name of Jesus Christ, that His cause may be extended and souls won for Eternity.

NEWCASTLE

OUR young people were privileged to take a recent Wednesday evening meeting. Eleven took part. Two of our young men preached on the theme of love. There were testimonies, two solos, and readings. The Lord was very precious and we received a blessing. There was a message in tongues given by one of our young ladies. It is wonderful to see God moving in these days, especially among young people. We can go out to tell others about what Jesus means to us. Pray that God will use us for His service in these days of 1974.

IN February a young man from New Zealand came to our meetings. Recently he expressed his desire to be baptised. Our minister's ten-year-old son also wanted to be baptised. A memorable service was held when Gerry and Alistair testified and witnessed together.

The following Saturday a presbytery rally was held in our church. Pastor E.F. Cole was the preacher. The church was just about full, with several ministers from nearby Elim churches taking part. Next day, Pastor Cole continued his ministry to us at the morning and evening meetings. His wife testified of the Lord's goodness and healing power.

SUSAN PRAIL

Ascent to the Throne

A message on the Ascension

by H. W. Greenway

"He raised Him from the dead, and set Him at His own right hand in the heavenly places, Far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come: And hath put all things under His feet" (Ephesians 1:20-22).

WITH a group of wondering followers for His audience and a cloud as His vehicle, Jesus Christ ascended to the Father's presence, away from the vision of His disciples, but not from their experience, to direct the further expansion throughout the world of the evangelistic campaign initiated by the Almighty Godhead for the emancipation of fallen Man.

It was in keeping with the divine revelation of God's Son that He should have a naturalistic supernatural birth and that He should also demonstrate His supremacy over the natural creation by a miraculous exit from the world. He came to us through the physical womb of an earthly mother, yet without the intervention of an earthly father, thus providing the paradox of natural and spiritual forces combining to bring to men a Saviour. When His time came to leave the world, He did so by reversing the gravitational hold on His physical body. His mode of departure after accomplishing His mission demonstrated His authority over the laws of creation.

That the force of gravity is universal and commanding we learn from the time we tumble out of the cot in babyhood or fall down the stairs in childhood. Which all brings us to the terms used in relation to the experiences of Christ. "Up" and "down", tied as they are in our vocabulary to a directional movement, present a serious problem to the critical scientist. For instance, New Zealanders go down to us if they go up in their own hemisphere, dwelling as they do on the opposite side of our terrestrial ball. What is equally strange to many of us, we are upside down to them, so that when we go up on our side of the world we go down to them. It follows, therefore, that to go up on any side of the world, be it on their side or our own, is to go away from the world's common centre, and to go down in any part of the world is to be drawn to its common centre. The pull of the earth is so commanding that it is impossible for any of us to jump above our own height, which, measured in astronomical terms, indicates that we are tied strictly to our world. We are held captive by an invisible attraction which baffles experts, but which can thrust out mysterious unseen fingers across billions of light years to hold spinning segments of the universe in orderly circuits.

Is it not here that we understand the mystery of God's saving achievement? The very misery of a fallen world attracted God's Son. He was drawn by its need to a dark centre of depravity. There He threw aside the enslaving bonds of sin and death and delivered us from their victimising thrall. It is thus in Christ that the dimensions of God's activity cross the threshold from the spiritual to the material, and from the material to the spiritual, from the unseen to the seen, and from the seen to the unseen. When Jesus rose from the Mount of Olives He went from their sight, but they were soon to learn of His universal authority. How else can the mystery be explained?

Writing to Timothy, Paul draws attention to the ascension as the final act in the mystery of godliness: "And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory" (1 Timothy 3:16). Quite obviously Christ's ascent, observed as a physical act, has a spiritual design. Jesus Himself said, "My kingdom is not of this world" (John 18:36). He went up to take possession of that kingdom. The supernatural, being outside the area of the material, is thus projected away from the world, so that, in whatever sphere it occurs, whether up, down, sideways, or any other direction, it is a realm beyond the discernment of our normal, finite senses. The recognition of this provides a key to Christ's ascent from the natural to the supernatural, and explains His seemingly enigmatic words: "No man hath ascended up into heaven, but He that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is in heaven. . . He that cometh from above is above all: he that is of the earth is earthy, and speaketh of the earth: He that cometh from heaven is above all" (John 3:13,31). He is supreme over all laws operating throughout God's wide domain, crossing at will the impenetrable barrier between the natural region where man's knowledge of his world is discovered through the five senses, and the unseen domain which is spiritually discerned. Paul touches upon this aspect of the Christian experience in writing to the Corinthians: "For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. . . the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned" (1 Corinthians 2:11, 14). Jesus spoke with simple certainty when He said He came from the Father and would return to the Father (John 16:28), and any attempts to pinpoint the area of that meeting at a specific zone in space are entirely irrelevant. We must accept its meaning in the spiritual exaltation of the Son of God.

On the Day of Pentecost Peter told the multitude that Jesus not only rose from the dead according to the prophecy of David, but that He also ascended to be exalted as Lord and Christ, an event confirmed by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit: "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses. Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, He hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear. For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit Thou on My right hand, Until I make Thy foes Thy footstool. Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ" (Acts 2: 32-36).

The ascension of Christ brings into focus the true meaning of the rites and ceremonies of the Old Covenant, revealing that the importance of a priest to stand as a mediator for his people is now fulfilled in the One who appears for His people as both priest and sacrifice — "Thus is my acceptance told". The Tabernacle of the Old Testament enshrined deep meanings that have their counterpart in the work of Christ. The writer to the Hebrews deals with this at length in chapter 9: "The priests went always into the first tabernacle, accomplishing the service of God. But into the second went the high priest alone once every year, not without blood, which he offered for himself, and for the errors of the people: The Holy Ghost this signifying, that the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing: Which was a figure for the time then present. . . But Christ, being come a high priest of good things to come. . . by His own blood He entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us. . . For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us" (vv 6-9, 11, 12, 24). As our priest He makes intercession for us: "Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us" (Romans 8:34).

It is important to note the order of Christ's priesthood, which is an unchanging ministry, providing a permanent guarantee of our eternal salvation. As a priest after the order of Melchisedec He provides our sheet anchor within the everlasting domain: "Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and stedfast, and which entereth into that within the veil; Whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made a high priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec" (Hebrews 6:19, 20). Melchisedec was the king-priest, indeed, "King of righteousness" and peace (Hebrews 7:2). From serving as priest and sacrifice during His earthly ministry (9:11-14), Christ now ascends to become priest and king: "We have such a high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens" (Hebrews 8:1), thus ensuring for us an established heritage.

Christ came from heaven to be humbled and to die on the cross, but He is now exalted far above all (Philippians 2:5-11), and has resumed the seat of authority and power (Hebrews 1:2, 3; Psalm 110:1). Even the fisherman-disciple waxes lyrical on the theme: "Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God; angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto Him" (1 Peter 3:22).

The ascension of Christ introduces us to an extension of His ministry, and the miracle of that event is confirmed by the coming of the Holy Spirit. He promised the Holy Spirit to give effectiveness to the witness of His Church (Acts 1:8), and the coming of the Comforter gave proof that He was in glory. "It is expedient for you that I go away," he said, "for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart I will send Him unto you" (John 16:7). He is not so far from us that He cannot come into our affairs. His activity in a new experience is discovered by faith, which will be consummated when He comes in visible form as He went away: "THIS SAME JESUS . . . SHALL SO COME IN LIKE MANNER AS YE HAVE SEEN HIM GO INTO HEAVEN". Then will He be revealed in all His glory (1 Timothy 6:14-16), to take over a government which is an ever-expanding one (Isaiah 9:7). He will come back, the visible Potentate, to reorganise our bankrupt society, and every eye shall see Him.

Meanwhile, He holds us firmly during our earthly pilgrimage, so that when He comes He will take us into that everlasting precinct of service and glory.

A new look at an old Parable

by Keith W. Munday

“...according to his several ability” (Matthew 25:15).

THERE are various aspects of truth in this parable. Some expositors see the three parables in Matthew 25 as a composite picture showing the attitude of the Church (the virgins), the Jews (the talents) and the Gentiles (sheep and goats) at the coming again of the Lord.

Others interpret the meaning of the talents in a broad way. Every man, they say, is gifted for his place in life. The great of the earth – statesmen, scientists, artists etc. – are the five-talent people, the middle-grade represent the two-talent folk, while the ordinary man in the street has one talent. They stress that we are all stewards, responsible to God for the way in which we conduct our lives. The great should not use their abilities for self-aggrandisement, nor exploit them for mere mercenary ends, but rather in service for the welfare of their fellow-man.

There is an element of truth in all interpretations, but the difficulty with most of them is that they treat “ability” as a natural or intellectual asset, whereas we know that this is no criterion in gauging spiritual success. If we are to interpret the parable in a spiritual way, we must regard the talents as spiritual rather than natural endowments.

In v.15 the original word for “ability” is dunamis, the word used in Acts 1:8: “Ye shall receive dunamis after that the Holy Ghost has come upon you”. In this light, therefore, it would appear that spiritual endowments are given according to the dunamis that is working in us. Ephesians 3:20 confirms this: “God is able to do exceeding abundantly... according to the dunamis that worketh in us”.

If this view is correct, it upsets the usual interpretation and takes away the complaints of some Christians that they are only one talent people. The Scripture might well retort, “Then let God move mightily within you by prayer and consecration and you may become a two- or even a five-talent Christian”!

It is true that God gives severally as He will, but it is also true that He gives in accordance with divine laws: “according to the power (dunamis) that worketh in us”. That working is very much up to us.

A young man once heard a preacher say that the world has yet to witness what God can do with a man who is utterly surrendered to Him. He decided by God’s grace to be that man. Judge for yourself: that young man was D.L. Moody! We all know that it was not D.L. Moody’s intellect or cleverness that won souls, but the evangelistic gift imparted to him by the Head of the Church. We cannot always label the various endowments given to the Church. Some are blessed in working with the young. Some excel in personal witness. Others are veritable fathers and mothers in Israel. Some, we know, have a ministry in prayer and intercession, and what glorious results they achieve. All are quite removed from human ability.

The imparting of spiritual gifts is certainly not due to human intellect; they are based on spiritual power. They follow the baptism in the Holy Ghost, the divine dunamis. How we need spiritual gifts today, especially discerning of spirits, healing, miracles, the word of wisdom and the word of knowledge. The question is: “How much power is working in us?” The power grids across the country supplying the nation’s needs are not fed from a twelve-volt battery!

The Lord worked with the Early Church because He first worked in them and our great need is to get back to the upper room attitude of waiting on God for a fresh endowment of His power. Then and only then as the divine dunamis comes upon us will God be able to gift us with the spiritual endowments we so sorely need!

BOOK REVIEW

Prophet of Royal Blood and Prophet of Assyria’s Fall, both by F.A. Tatford, published by Prophetic Witness Publishing House, price 35p each, postage and packing 5p each extra.

“THE Day of the Lord” is one of the awe-inspiring Scriptural ascriptions. It conjures up visions of deity and destiny. Zephaniah, the Prophet of Royal Blood, was preoccupied with it. F.A. Tatford’s book is a fine approach to the subject, which, as the Preface declares, “has more than average pertinence to the present day”.

“I am against you” are the dread words of the Lord of Hosts concerning Nineveh, the capital of ancient Assyria. Against this terrible “city of bloods” Nahum’s scathing prophecy was directed. Dr. Tatford’s Prophet of Assyria’s Fall is a splendid study aid. Nahum is a neglected field and the book will help you to turn it over!

"A Hive of Activity"

A report by David G. Butcher on outreach in S. Africa

LOOKING back on last year's efforts, I find that on average 150,000 tracts per month went out from Emmanuel Press, Nelspruit, Transvaal, S. Africa. What happens to them? Have we any knowledge of their effectiveness? The records show that over 1,000 decision slips are returned as a result, but how real are these decisions, and what happens when the slips come in? I went to the LIFE follow-up office to try to find some answers.

Bill and Gwen Kirby staff the office, leading a team of four African clerks. The office is a hive of activity, but I stopped Bill for a moment to ask him a few questions.

"Bill, will you please explain the studies and how they work?"

"Our first study is 'Wonderful Lord Jesus', which is printed in twelve languages and is a very simple lesson. This gives the enquirer basic facts about Jesus Christ and helps us to see if they are capable of further study. Shortly we will have two new courses in the 'Wonderful' series, 'Our Wonderful Salvation' and 'Our Wonderful Life'. These are followed by three more comprehensive studies, which give our students much hard work and a sound knowledge of the Word of God".

"How many have taken the LIFE studies, Bill?"

"Since 1968 some 12,000 Africans have completed the course, considerably more having started." Gwen added: "At the moment some 1,000 per month are receiving their first lessons as their slips are received through the post."

We talked about costs which rise ever higher; with cutting corners where possible, the postage alone is still about £15 per week. New packing for the courses has been devised and the printing style has been altered so that weights fall into a lower postage bracket.

"What about achievements Bill?" I asked.

"That's hard to answer when you hardly ever meet your students. Certainly through the courses many have truly found the Lord, many converts have become burdened for their own people and some have felt the call to full-time service. One man came to this office last week. Nkosi was serving fifteen years in jail. He had been a 'hit and run' driver. There were drugs in the car when it was located and he was smuggling diamonds. In jail he found the Lord through tracts and the courses. Now he is out and came to see the office — 'where the light came from'. Then this week we had a letter from another prisoner telling how Nkosi had led him to the Lord. He also wanted lessons. In the same prison there are now numbers of other prisoners taking our courses and in one packet received yesterday, studies from thirteen prisoners arrived.

"Would you say that all the effort, time and money is worthwhile, Bill?"

"Certainly! God has richly blessed and precious souls are being won for Jesus day by day".

More than conquerors

Lord had said to the Devil, 'Enough, enough' and the peace of God flooded my soul.

"How blessed He is! How He ministers to the troubled mind and soul! Although this illness has left me with angina, for the heart has been damaged, yet, when I look back, I sincerely thank God for the experience. He is more precious than ever and anything, no matter what, that brings me into closer relationship and fellowship with Him should be measured by an eternal rather than a temporal outcome or result".

There is no doubt at all that the Christian faith can triumph over suffering and is superior in every aspect to the philosophies and theories of worldly religions. Ideas, blind hopes, fatalism, stubborn endurance and frantic placating of the gods are poor substitutes for the life of faith. God and only God has the power to use suffering. Both in the Acts and the Epistles, the pioneers of the faith wrote serenely of suffering and bodily weakness. They spoke in glowing terms of glorying in infirmities and of rejoicing in suffering.

God is in command of every situation in the lives of consecrated Christians, so we can in Him triumph over sickness, suffering and trials. I am so sure of this because, even as the first disciples and early Christians found the secret of the overcoming life in God, so today, almost 2,000 years later, believers, myself included, are proving and enjoying "the hidden source of calm repose, the all-sufficient love divine".

You will remember the healing testimony of another Elim member, Mrs. Carol Horner. Here is another proof of the triumphant grace of God in her letter to me:

"During my illness and the times of anointing and prayer there seemed to arise in my mind a state of confusion regarding healing. It was then that the Lord reminded me that He was not a God of confusion, but a God of peace and as this peace flooded my soul it seemed to bring a new understanding and a fresh conception of Christ's healing power. 'As for God, His way is perfect' (Psalm 18:30) and it was only as I looked and searched out His way that I found day by day the joy of passing through a period of sickness. Our faith may be strong, the church's faith may be strong, yet there are times when the Lord does not choose to intervene and heal. The human question is, 'Why?' I feel that the spiritual answer is that, when Christ asked His Father 'Why?' from the cross, He took away our whys just as I believe that He took away our sins and our sickness. Our yardstick surely is the witness of the Holy Spirit within our hearts as to what is His will for us as individuals".

GOD has many ways of blessing His children and of sending them comfort and not the least of these is through the medium of letters. Many people find a greater freedom in expressing themselves through the written word than by the spoken word. Having learned that I hadn't been well, a longstanding friend wrote to me and opened up his heart and recounted some sacred moments of communion with his Lord. All that the letter contained was a wonderful proof of the power of God to help and sustain in the darkest moments of life. My friends, I'm sure, will understand my desire to let others know of the consolation in God that he has experienced. After all, as Peter and John once said, "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard".

Here is an extract from the letter:

"It is in times like these that God becomes a greater reality and this in itself sometimes makes even the dark experience fade into insignificance in the splendour and glory of another revelation of His wonder and grace.

"I just want to share with you the peace and joy that He gives when a seeming tragedy turns into inexpressible blessing. I suffered a severe heart attack a year ago April 14th. It was a coronary thrombosis and I was critical. My wife and the pastor stayed most of the night in hospital over the critical period. However, the Lord be praised, I have got over it and I have just restarted work although I cannot take on the same duties as before. So my position as far as employment is concerned is one of fluidity; I just don't know what will happen.

"But you know I do thank the Lord for the experience, for I never will forget the reality of His presence in that hospital ward. I was prostrate in my illness and yet He ministered to me so blessedly. I remember one vivid moment of dark mental anguish and of spiritual darkness that seemed to engulf me. 'The prince of this world' is ever ready to attack, especially when we are physically ill. Then suddenly I seemed to be in a huge cathedral and I heard a soprano voice above a choir backing, with beautiful organ music sing forth Handel's Messiah solo 'I know that my Redeemer liveth'. I shall never forget this experience and from then it almost appeared as if the

Crusader Jubilee Celebrations

Snap -- get into the picture

Photography Competition

AS you will know, our Crusader Movement is engaged on several projects to celebrate our Jubilee Year, one of which is a photography competition. Many young people are keen photographers. Some even do their own developing and printing. Here is an opportunity to make a worthwhile contribution to our special year. One picture is worth a thousand words. We live in the day of the visual; more than ever, people communicate through what can be seen, like T.V. and visual aids of all descriptions. It is said that we remember 10% of what we hear, but 50% of what we see. So we invite you please to send us —

PICTURES OF ACTION. Please do not send photos of social gatherings, like the cutting of a birthday cake. Don't even send photos of your dear pastor and his wife (or of your pastor and his dear wife). We don't want posed groups of your friends at church. What we desire is pictures of young Pentecostal people in action for Christ: young people at camp, at an open-air meeting, on door-to-door work, barbecues, youth evangelism in coffee bars, children's work, marches of witness, in fact as long as young people are doing something for Christ, snap it! Carry your camera and be ready for the unusual and the exciting. You know how busy your church and Presbytery will be this summer; be ready. What a fantastic album could have been made of Paul's exploits for Christ!

PEOPLE WHO WILL ADJUDICATE. Will you please send the photos to me at the address below. Do let me have them as soon as possible. The best ten will be selected by myself, and the final first, second, and third, by the Youth Committee. We will be using these in our souvenir brochure and in the ELIM EVANGEL, so good size photos are best for reproduction. If you feel you have something really worthwhile, an 8 inches by 6 inches or 10 inches by 8 inches would help. We hope to display all of them at the National Youth Rally and also at the 1975 Conference.

PRIZES AWARDED. We will award a camera of quality to the winner and prizes to the runners-up. These will be presented at the National Youth Rally in September. I know the greatest enjoyment will be in participation, nevertheless we shall be encouraging Christian enterprise in this worthwhile manner. So, not only snap into action, but snap the action!

Proverbs 3:1-18

"Honour the Lord with thy substance. . . So shall thy barns be filled" (vv. 9, 10).

THE first fruits of the increase were given to God in acknowledgement of what He had done for them (Deuteronomy 2:1-10). They honoured God with their substance out of sheer appreciation and gratitude. Can we do any less than they? Redeemed at such tremendous cost, can we deny His claim upon us (1 Corinthians 6:19, 20)?

To honour God with our substance is not only a mark of our appreciation of His love and goodness, it is also a guarantee of our own plenty, the outworking of that promise in Luke 6:38. Much of our poverty and that of our churches is self-inflicted.

Tuesday, May 21st

Proverbs 3:19-35

"He giveth grace unto the lowly" (v.34).

A LOWLY spirit is ever the receptacle for God's grace. A spirit empty of self and pride filled with an awareness of the worthiness of God and a sense of its own personal nothingness brings upon it the abundant blessing of His grace. (James 4:6). Someone has written: "His sweet showers of grace slide off the mountains of pride and fall on the low valleys of humble hearts, making them pleasant and fertile". If we would be objects of His gracious favour we must humble ourselves, for humility has a glory all its own: "He giveth grace to the lowly".

Wednesday, May 22nd

Proverbs 4:1-27

"Take fast hold of instruction. . . she is thy life" (v.13).

MANY well-intentioned Christians come to grief here. They fail to "take fast hold" of the truths of the gospel. They receive them only in their minds; they never become the daily nourishment of their souls. There must be a real, personal, living faith, a continuing in "the things which thou hast learned and hast been assured of" (2 Timothy 3:14). Jacob said, "I will not let thee go" (Genesis 32:26). The maid of Solomon's Song "held" her beloved and "would not let him go" (3:4). Just so must we, despite the struggle entailed, "take fast hold" of that which in very truth "is our life".

Thursday, May 23rd

Psalm 24:1-10

"Who is this King of glory?" (v.8).

TWICE the question is asked. Twice the answer is given. Earlier, the qualifications had been laid down for those who would ascend into the hill of the Lord and receive his blessing. These qualifications excluded us all — until Jesus came. Undoubtedly, He is the King of glory, and this Psalm refers to His glorious ascension into Heaven. Having finished His work of redemption for the sins of the people and having obtained authority, He demands entrance. The everlasting doors must open to Him, but not for Himself alone. As our Forerunner He has entered and opened the kingdom of heaven to all who believe.

Friday, May 24th

Psalm 102:1-28

"He will regard the prayer of the destitute" (v.17).

THERE is speculation as to the circumstances surrounding this Psalm and when it was written, but none as to its message. It is the prayer of a much-afflicted soul and there are lessons for us all. In our troubles, we must pray (James 5:13). God has singled out one day and specially pledged Himself to hear us then, the "day of trouble" (Psalm 50:15). God always has a gracious welcome for the soul who seeks him, but the soul in trouble has a special welcome at the throne. We must not dwell overmuch on our affliction and allow ourselves to lose sight of God. We must remind ourselves that, though we are in dire straits, God is not (v.12). We must make Him our confident hope (v.13). "He is faithful that promised" and He will perform what serves our best interests and cause us yet to praise Him (v.18).

Saturday, May 25th

Psalm 103:1-22

"Bless the Lord. . . and forget not all His benefits" (v.2).

IT has been said: "God speaks and the echo is praise; God blesses us and the response is that we bless God". Here we have the grateful heart's response to God's bountiful gifts of grace. George Matheson said: "We often begin our prayers with requests for God to bless us; the Psalmist begins by calling on his soul to bless God". Try this today. Contemplate the multitude of God's mercies to us (Psalm 40:3) and bless Him. These tokens of His love surround us as fresh, real and sure as ever.

Sunday, May 26th

Psalm 104:1-23

"Bless the Lord. . . the clouds His chariot" (vv. 1, 3).

IN these momentous days, there are many dark clouds of depression and despair arising from the circumstances that come our way. Here the thought unfolds that such experiences have God in them. He rides upon the clouds, making them His vehicle to bring new treasures into our lives. The prophet describes them as "treasures of darkness" (Isaiah 43:3). We can "bless the Lord at all times" (Psalm 34:1). His praise can continually be in our mouth for He has said that He is working all things together "for our good" (Romans 8:28). "Standing somewhere in the shadows you'll find Jesus".

5. Living in Fellowship

by Ian R. Hall
Pastor of our Ryde
Church

"LIVE a holy life surrounded by the hurly-burly of modern society? Impossible! The hermit's cave and the monk's cloister seem to be the only places for holy living, particularly today!" might well be the rejoinder to such a demand.

Pressured by the demands of family, friends and work-fellows, many find it almost impossible to devote even one day a week to the earnest pursuit of holiness. With David they long: "Oh that I had wings, like a dove! for then would I fly away and be at rest" (Psalm 55:6).

If the highest Christian living is impossible in the city, it is equally so in the cloister, for we live what we are. "By the grace of God I am what I am" testified Paul (1 Corinthians 15:10). That grace is effective whatever our circumstances. Solitary religion is not especially conducive to holiness, nor is it scriptural. True Christianity is essentially a corporate religion. This life is to be lived in fellowship with others if it is to be lived at all.

All the New Testament illustrations of the Church suggest communion, e.g., the body, the vine, the family, the building. Professor Leon Morris defined fellowship thus: "The basic idea in fellowship (Gk. koinonia) is that of possessing something in common, i.e., of partnership and sharing". The point of evangelism is that others might share in the corporate life of believers. Thus John wrote: "That which we have seen and heard we proclaim also to you, so that you may have fellowship with us; and our fellowship is with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ" (1 John 1:3).

The Scope

Christian fellowship has both horizontal and vertical aspects. While the vertical may be the primary relationship, the horizontal is not unimportant. By God we were "called into the fellowship of His Son, Jesus Christ our Lord" (1 Corinthians 1:9) and that relationship is not only with Him, but also between all His people. "In union with him," wrote Paul, "you too are being built together with all the others into a house where God lives through his Spirit" (Ephesians 2:22, TEV). The real ecumenicity already exists between the household of faith and the Lord. We are one because we are one in Him.

The Condition

In proffering this fellowship, John declared: "If we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship with one another, and the blood of Jesus His Son cleanses us from all sin" (1 John 1:7). The condition of "walking in the light" is fulfilled as we live in obedience to the Word of God, which is described as "a lamp to my feet and a light to my path" (Psalm 119:105). In Christ we see perfect obedience perfectly revealed, hence He is "the Light of the world" (John 9:5). If we are to have fellowship with Him, we must live as He lived. "Walk in love, as Christ loved us. . . walk as children of light" exhorted Paul (Ephesians 5:2,8). John emphasised the same theme: "He who says he is in the light and hates his brother is in the darkness still. He who loves his brother abides in the light" (1 John 2:9,10).

The Maintenance

Fellowship can only be maintained as anything which disrupts the harmony and unity is dealt with by forgiveness. We need the constant cleansing of the blood of Christ if we are to enjoy fellowship with God and with His people. While there is unconfessed sin in our lives, we feel ill at ease and out of fellowship, but once this has been put right the barrier vanishes. Thank God, there is still power in that blood to keep us clean from sin stains!

True holy living is a constant walk in fellowship with God in His family and a continuing experience of the cleansing power of the blood of Christ His Son.

Guest Editorial

THE Editor has invited me to contribute an Editorial to coincide with changes that will take place in Headquarters Offices due to recent Executive Council and Conference decisions. Consequent upon my retirement, P.S. Brewster has been elected by Conference to the office of Secretary-General. Following the appointment of our present Field Superintendent to supervise our missionary work in Rhodesia and South Africa, T.W. Walker takes over again as Field Superintendent, and D.W. Cartwright has been elected ELIM EVANGEL Editor and Director of Publications.

The appointment of R.B. Chapman to Rhodesia was unanimously agreed by the Missionary Council, and is heartily endorsed by our colleagues on these Fields. Mr. Chapman concludes a period of six years brilliant administration as Field Superintendent; now these gifts of administration, though lost to us at home, will be of inestimable value to the South Africa and Rhodesia fields. Please pray for Pastor and Mrs. Chapman as they adapt to a completely new sphere of service that they may be a blessing, not only to our own missionaries, but also a means of bringing salvation to many in Rhodesia and South Africa.

My successor in office needs no introduction to our readers, nor indeed to Pentecostal people in many parts of the world. His thirty-five years as Minister of Cardiff City Temple, his gifts of pioneer evangelism, his activities in connection with world Pentecost all bear witness to his dedication to the extension of the work of God. All our readers will wish him well in his new appointment.

T.W. Walker needs no introduction to our readers either. Under his editorship the ELIM EVANGEL has gone from strength to strength in spite of all the problems that beset publishing today. As Director of Publications new series of tracts, as well as books and pamphlets have flowed from Grenehurst Press. He is not new to the office of Field Superintendency, having held this office previously, and we wish him well as he takes up the onerous post again.

D.W. Cartwright replaces Mr. Walker as Director of Publications and Editor of ELIM EVANGEL. He is new to Headquarters, but his capabilities, literature wise in particular, will prove of inestimable value in his new post. Mr. Cartwright has been in the Elim ministry for twenty-two years and is a lecturer at Elim Bible College.

While we acknowledge the dedication and gifts of those who come and go we also remember those who continue in office: our highly-esteemed Missionary Secretary, L. Wigglesworth, who was voted President-elect last week; G. Wesley Gilpin, whose work at Capel is so widely acclaimed, and last, but not least, J.C. Smyth, our Administrative Secretary, to whose dedication and capability our Movement owes so much. Nor must we forget the dedicated staff in each department, their dependence, loyalty and cooperation in the great work of administration of such a Movement as ours.

Finally I would express my appreciation to all who have helped to lighten for me the burden of the office of Secretary-General.

The forty-first Annual Conference, Morecambe 1974

The opening Weekend

Saturday

by Philip J. Thompsett, Pastor of our Merriott Church, Somerset

WITH a sense of increasing excitement and expectancy we travelled the last few motorway miles of a 300-mile journey to Morecambe. What would Conference be like this year? There were a new venue, new places to see, new speakers and people going to Conference for the first time. The week could not be fully judged by the first two days, but first impressions are very important. Our expectancy soon gave way in a comfortably full hall to enthusiastic singing of our opening hymn, "My heart is fixed eternal God, fixed on Thee". The induction service of our President George Canty had begun, led by our President John Lancaster. The theme of the Conference, "JESUS IS LORD", was echoed throughout this and succeeding meetings.

In his introduction, our retiring President, in thanking all whom he had met during his tour of office covering 160 churches in all Presbyteries, mentioned the warmth, depth of fellowship and kindness that he experienced. John Lancaster's words of exhortation to Elim were: "Let us not lose our Pentecostal experience. We are Pentecostal by name. We are Pentecostal by theology. May God help us to be deeply and completely Pentecostal in experience".

George Canty was then introduced to the Presidency of the Elim Pentecostal Churches. In convening the rest of the meeting he introduced his wife and daughter, who then taught us the chorus, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord". E.F. Cole and John Barton led us in prayer for Elim. Mrs. Koornstra, the wife of one of the guest speakers, read from Philippians 2: 1-11, after which the Presidential Address was given, amplifying the theme, "JESUS IS LORD".

A tiring day of travel was rounded off for some who were still fresh enough to attend the Late Night Special led by W.J. Maybin (Southampton), in which we got to know each other.

Sunday

The Ministry of this new day commenced at 7.45 a.m. when J.T. Bradley convened the Morning Ministry. T.W. Jacobs (Cradley Heath, Birmingham) preached from Psalm 139:8, "Thou art there". We were exhorted to consider "the vastness of God's presence and then to recognise its apparent limits". "God's presence is seen in heaven but felt on earth", he said. We were reminded of the "influencing power that He has upon each one of us". Knowing that Jesus is near to us, His presence keeps us from sin, gives us a pattern for behaviour with each other, comforts and strengthens us through trials, gives us incentive for service and is absolutely essential for prayer and praise.

The incoming Secretary-General, P. S. Brewster

In the Communion service the Word of God was ministered to us by Hans Koornstra (Belgium). The challenge of 2 Samuel 6 was clearly applied by the Holy Spirit. Man's way of imitating God's presence and blessing was compared with God's way of obtaining the genuine move of the Spirit.

Many of those attending Conference made their way on Sunday afternoon to the promenade at Morecambe for an open air meeting.

After returning to Camp for our evening meal, we gathered for the evangelistic rally which was convened by the President. Much praise rose to God when George Canty asked those who had been healed of deafness, blindness, cancer, and illnesses needing internal surgery and arthritis, to raise their hands. Many raised their hands to identify themselves with those not at Conference who needed to be healed. Prayer was made on their behalf and it will be thrilling to learn how many were delivered.

Pastor T. Gordon Hills (High Wycombe) was the preacher at the gospel service. He read from Luke 18: 18-30 and later preached on the rich young ruler. We were thrilled to hear Pastor and Mrs. James Hunt sing a chorus medley. This meeting was concluded with prayer for the sick. With mixed feelings we saw a long stream of folk climb the steps to the platform, where they were prayed for. It saddened us to see so many of the Lord's people suffering, but we were thrilled by their trust and expectancy as they went forward to receive a touch from the Lord Jesus Christ.

Hundreds wanted more fellowship even after such a full day and went to the Singalong Special led by Pastor Ron Williams (Rochester), where many took part including a song for the young in heart by Lionel and Ruth Currie (Long Eaton) about Noah and Daniel, "I'd rather be on the inside looking out".

While I was writing this report, God's blessing, healing and baptism in the Holy Spirit were being experienced by many and we're not halfway through Conference yet!

Monday

by J.M. Reeve-Baker, Pastor of our Mosborough Church

ONE of the most precious aspects of Conference week is the sense of fellowship and caring experienced by all.

At Monday breakfast this was demonstrated most pointedly by the wave of sympathy throughout the dining room following an announcement that a young sister had lost her engagement ring. Just a few minutes later, when we heard that the ring had been found and returned, a spontaneous burst of applause expressed the joy and delight of all.

This incident aptly captured the spirit of oneness which had grown day by day since the first arrivals on Saturday.

Prior to breakfast many attended Morning Ministry conducted by Pastor R.B. Chapman when Pastor B.C. Richardson addressed us on Luke 6:38. He began by quoting the Conference Theme, "JESUS IS LORD", and reminded us that this would mean nothing less than revolution for the world is totally opposed to Christ. The world would have us to GET, but the Lord has commanded us to GIVE. In the realm of finance, energy and prayer we must be prepared to GIVE, in order to receive our own good measure from Him. A wholehearted giving of ourselves to God is called for in the light of His glorious giving of Himself to us.

Monday also saw the first in a series of Bible studies given by Pastor Hans G. Koornstra. The subject was "Spiritual Gifts — How to obtain them" and our brother began with the text, "Follow after charity and desire spiritual gifts" (1 Corinthians 14:1). "Hunting after love", (as the Dutch version has it) is necessary to the operation of spiritual gifts and growing in grace is directly related to our hunger and love for God. The operation of spiritual gifts in the life of the believer should be constantly working toward a more Christlike character.

In the area of desiring spiritual gifts we should fix our target high and go for the best gifts. Brother Koornstra said, "We are in a poor way regarding spiritual gifts and have not yet touched the potential. We ask for a crumb of grace when God has provided a loaded table".

The great evening convention rally, conducted by Pastor E.R. Corsie, featured the youth section of our movement, and what a blessed meeting it was.

First the boys and girls filed on to the platform to sing choruses under the guiding hand of Uncle Archie Bidle and from the first it was clear that the Lord was present to bless in a real way. Time and space will not permit adequate comment on all who took part — the teenage sextet and duet, the Conference choir, the testimonies from our Dutch friends, the ministry in song of Pastor Len Magee (superbly backed by Geoff Cooper on the organ) but each one bore the stamp of the anointing of the Holy Spirit.

Pastor J.H. Dick, bringing a message from 2 Timothy 1:7, began by reminding us of the many instances in Scripture where we are exhorted to "fear not". "Power, Love and Balance (a sound mind)", said Pastor Dick, "have been united by the Lord in this text in order to ensure that all three elements are exercised in the Spirit-filled life. Power without balance will encourage fanaticism. Love without power will become sentimental. The fully developed, Spirit-filled believer will experience power in his public life, love in his assembly life and balance in his personal life". We were reminded that in the Holy Spirit God has provided a source of energy that can never be exhausted and that He is looking for ordinary people to fill with this power. There is no higher quality of man than the man full of the Holy Ghost. The purpose of this power, which was the hall mark of the Early Church, is to edify the assembly and to evangelise the world. The speaker listed three characteristics present in the type of love referred to in the text: It is able to operate when there is nothing to love; It will continue to operate even when rejected; it is a new kind of love — God's love. A world that cannot understand Christian theology will respond readily to this kind of love. A sound mind means a disciplined, balanced mind, one under the control of the Holy Spirit.

Pastor Dick concluded with a declaration that Elim's future lies in the works and power of the Holy Spirit: "There is latent power in Elim sufficient to turn our nation upside down", he declared.

Late Night Special was conducted by Elim Bible College students who had already held a College Workshop earlier in the day. It is always a joy to hear testimony in word and song from these young people.

Still the blessing was not spent, for in the late receiving meeting conducted by Brother Koornstra, many were brought into the wonderful experience of baptism in the Holy Spirit.

As we returned to our chalets our hearts were filled with a great sense of thankfulness to the God who doeth all things well.

Tuesday

by William G. Mullan, Pastor of Elim Pentecostal Church, Townsend Street, Belfast.

ANOTHER lovely day dawned and what better way to commence it than in the morning service convened by Pastor A.B. Tee. Our hearts were gratefully humbled as the truth of "Only a Sinner saved by Grace" was borne in upon us. Pastor Hans Koornstra preached on the great privilege of the converted sinner of being "sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise" (Ephesians 1:13). We were reminded of our great value in God's sight, because we are purchased by His precious Blood. By the Holy Spirit, we were stamped with His authoritative ownership and thus called to reflect His grace.

At 10 a.m. the Literature Workshop commenced and here there was much evidence of the increasing interest in the varied, Bible-based literature. Pastor John Seaman was in charge. A constant throng perusing the different display stands revealed how attractive the items were.

The first full day of Conference business for all delegates commenced at 10.15 a.m. and continued in the afternoon. Each session was introduced with singing and fervent worship. Among the various items and reports examined and voted upon, the elections for Executive Council appointments and the President Elect received, perhaps naturally, particular attention. Two new members were chosen for the Executive Council, Pastors D.J. Ayling and A.A. Biddle, while warm tributes were paid to the retiring members, Pastors J.T. Bradley and R.B. Chapman. These appreciations were enthusiastically reiterated during the evening service. Pastor L. Wigglesworth, Elim Missionary Secretary, was elected to the office of President-Elect and proved a very popular choice. His humble rejoinder to the subsequent public announcement was that the honour accorded him reflected the warm affection of Conference for the missionary work.

Another happy feature of the day's business was the acceptance of a number of churches into our fellowship. Much discussion and consideration were given to the subject of Headquarters Offices nominations, new incumbents being proposed upon the retirement of others. Nominees were duly confirmed by Conference.

Children are never neglected at the Elim Conference and the zealous work of Pastors E.T. Carter and R.M. Kingsbury, with their co-workers, was rewarded by the spontaneous response of the children. Both morning and evening sessions, with their wide variety of activities, were attended by excellent numbers.

The morning Bible Study was convened by Pastor E.F. Cole, and Pastor H. Koornstra ministered on the subject of divine healing. Hundreds gathered to listen and, as many of the precious old truths were expounded under the anointing of the Holy Ghost, faith was strengthened to receive healing from the living Christ.

During the afternoon, ministers' wives met together. This was a time for introductions and closer fellowship when closer bonds were forged. Discussion followed on the possibility of further, extended communion, different possibilities being proposed. A rich time of prayer concluded this meeting.

The evening service was attended by an expectant, capacity congregation, and they were not disappointed. After the opening exercises, the Elim Bible College Singers, who had arrived in the camp earlier, commenced their contribution to a full evening's programme. Their presentation of excerpts from the modern musical, "Come Together" was received with warm-hearted approval. This was excellent ministry, forceful affirmative and Biblical. There was sincere and joyous expression with the challenge to shine for Christ and to reach the needy as the coming of the Lord draws near. Two students, introduced by the Principal of E.B.C., Pastor G.W. Gilpin, the convener for the evening, gave stirring witness to the saving grace of God in their lives and to His call upon their hearts. A challenging message from Pastor H. Koornstra followed the students' ministry. Basing his message on Matthew 14:15-21, he delivered a fervent call to renewed consecration. At the conclusion of the address, many publicly signified their determination to dedicate themselves afresh to God. A blessed sense of God's presence rested upon the scene.

Further activities continued at the close of the evening rally. Hundreds packed and overflowed the Children's Theatre for the students' production of "Crux", originated to reach souls in a modern manner with the Gospel message. Reaction to this unusual presentation was, expectedly, mixed. All were agreed on the devotion and sincerity of the cast and upon certain sections of the play but many had sincere reservations on other aspects. This service was arranged for evangelistic outreach. The alternative meeting was an "Overseas Night", and was related to missionary work. Mr. Harold Berry, former Congo worker, now residing in South Africa with his wife, was the special speaker. Mr. and Mrs. Berry have been a tremendous help to some of our Elim missionaries and it was rather disappointing that many more did not avail themselves of the opportunity to hear God's servant, especially after the great response in the evening rally.

While the above-mentioned activities were claiming much interest, other sincere believers were seeking God for the mighty baptism in the Holy Ghost. Through the ministry of Pastors A.V. Gorton and H. Koornstra many received. God was moving and what a blessed reflection to realise this was the day He had given in which we had rejoiced and been glad!

Wednesday

Report by John Whitehead, Pastor of our Rugby Church

THE sight of two young proud fathers facing in chariot style with their push chairs (with babies inside!) reflected the happy, relaxed atmosphere of Conference, but this was no ordinary Conference. As we were reminded during the morning ministry by Pastor R.L. Currie: "Once you were no people, but now you are God's people" and thus "lively stones". This set the scene for the day.

The morning continued with a personal evangelism workshop conducted by Pastor F. Lavender and the Bible Study by Pastor Hans Koornstra. Meanwhile the delegates continued with their business session during which the appointment of Pastor P.S. Brewster as Secretary-General was announced, a truly eventful moment for Elim.

After lunch came the annual scramble for a place on the Conference photograph. Fortunately the weather was bright which helped to produce the smiles so necessary for that occasion.

As the delegates religiously pursued their activities the ladies enjoyed a superb sisterhood rally led by Mrs. G. Canty with anointed ministry by Mrs. B.C. Richardson.

The evening missionary rally proved to be as exciting, challenging and surprising as any could expect. Five new missionaries were introduced: Miss Joy Bath (for Rhodesia), Pastor and Mrs. S.D. Huntly (for Brazil) and Pastor and Mrs. R.B. Chapman (for Africa). The visiting missionaries included Miss O.M. Jarvis (India), Miss A. Stephenson (Transvaal) and Miss V. McGillivray (Hong Kong). They told of their extensive work and the urgent need for more workers overseas. The Church of Jesus Christ is surely striding forward. A magnificent offering of over £900 was received at the close of the service.

At the end of the day one must look back and ask what was achieved. In the final analysis only God knows, but there were two miraculous healings reported, involving a partially blind lady and a man with a paralysed arm. Five young people were counselled during the late night coffee-bar and from the outset of the Conference at least fifty were baptised in the Holy Ghost. There is no doubt that Christ is Lord!

Thursday

by Bernard L.T. Wall, Pastor of our Huddersfield Church

A DAY of blessing and challenge commenced with Pastor A. Wilson leading morning devotions. Miss Pauline Wilson sang "Jesus gives me Something worth living for". At his final Conference prior to embarkation for Brazil probably early in 1975, Pastor S.D. Huntly reminded us of the Lordship of the Holy Spirit from 2 Corinthians 3:17 and Ephesians 5:18. Our brother stressed the Emphatic — "Be being filled" with the greatness of our God for mighty exploits; the Ecstatic — being the outward expression in our experience (Ephesians 5:19) while avoiding the danger of allowing our liberty to supersede sound doctrinal teaching; the Ethical — in our everyday relationships toward people in church and home. Mrs. Black of Ulster Temple thrilled our souls with "The Christ I love is coming soon", a truly moving solo.

The Communion service was a highlight of the Conference. We were inspired under the able convening of our President, Pastor G. Canty, and the rich ministry of Pastor H.W. Greenway. Our Lord laid a banquet-feast before us from 1 Corinthians 11:23-28. Brother Greenway reminded us that it is not so much the Lord's Supper, but the Church's Feast which Jesus gave to us, not the Last Supper, but the first of many. Our thoughts were directed in a backward vision in remembering Jesus's confrontation of and victory over death and sin on Calvary's cross (Hebrews 2:14; 10:5,7; Isaiah 53:10). The lovely, tender face of Jesus was contrasted with those of men. His transforming glance won people like Zacchaeus and the woman at the well. We were exhorted never to obscure the Cross. Our thoughts were turned inward to examine ourselves as the Holy Spirit directs, in the light of the vision of Christ relative to His great sacrifice and not at other people. In quoting "they journeyed toward the sunrise" from Numbers, our thoughts were transferred to the future "till He come". The awareness of our terrible days bringing a constant reminder that, when Jesus comes in glory and power, the blazing demonstration of God's great love will usher in the New Day.

As a special feature of the Communion Service several retiring ministers and their wives were introduced. Pastor and Mrs. J.T. Bradley, Pastor and Mrs. E.F. Cole, Pastor F.H. Coleman, Pastor and Mrs. I.R. Moore and Pastor and Mrs. T.W. Thomson reminisced on God's abundant blessings in their lives. Mention was also made of Pastors R.C. Brien, F. Shadlock and W. Kelly. Our prayers go with our highly-esteemed and much-loved fellowlabourers in Christ.

The evangelistic service focused our attention on the primary task of soul-winning. Pastor I.W. Lewis enthusiastically convened the meeting and introduced five of our fellow-workers, Pastors Brian Grist (Broadstairs), Paul A. Epton (Birkenhead), Vivian I. Thomas (Middleton), David G. Holmes (Sunderland) and K. John Cave (Peterborough). Our hearts rejoiced with the news of God's mercy and love in souls reached and saved. A "stop press" was given of a young man's sight restored in Pastor J. Osman's crusade at Bexhill. Jesus heals today! Hallelujah!

The choir, under the able directorship of Leslie Wigglesworth, brought great blessing to all.

Pastor W.R. Jones challenged our lives in a message based on Ezekiel 3:17-19; Matthew 9:35-38; John 4:35. Our world is in a state of moral collapse. Our task is to warn men from God and win them to Jesus; "knowing the terror of the Lord, we persuade men". Our message is Christ (Luke 4:1-4; Acts 8:4), not just Pastors preaching, but church members reaching out with Christ (Acts 11: "the hand of the Lord was with them"). Our opportunities are there. "Not many mighty, not many noble" are called. It was encouraging to be reminded that Jesus takes the "are-nots", the opportunity-makers, and uses them to win souls. Our dangers are relative to ourselves. We must avoid coldness, compromise and mediocrity, but desire and receive Holy Ghost power.

This was a glorious day of anointed ministry in word and song confirmed by the Lord as about 200 people went forward to dedicate themselves to the task of soul-winning for Jesus.

Friday

by D.D. Phillips, Pastor of our Weoley Castle Church in Birmingham.

THE sun was shining outside the Berengaria Theatre, while we felt the warmth of God's love inside. Pastor P.S. Brewster led the congregation in the opening hymn, "Wonderful Story of Love". He then welcomed the preacher, Pastor P.D. Prosser (A.o.G.) to the Conference, and our brother ministered to the congregation, taking for his message Psalm 23.

After breakfast there was a busy morning ahead.

The Youth workshop created a great deal of interest. Pastor E.R. Corsie opened with prayer and introduced the Youth Committee to the congregation. Different members of the Committee spoke and all present were deeply impressed by their work. It was wonderful to hear that many young people were still being called by God into our Bible College. Each activity which was to take place during the Jubilee Year was explained. Many questions were asked and these were answered very fully by members of the Committee.

The Ministers' wives gathered for a time of prayer and waiting upon God, while their husbands made their way to another session of business.

As mid-morning came, crowds began to gather in the ballroom to hear Hans Koornstra minister God's Word. Pastor E.F. Cole opened this meeting with the hymn, "Praise, my soul, the King of Heaven". After a time of prayer Hans Koornstra read Matthew 8:5-13, and took for his subject, "The Mystery of the Ministry of Jesus Christ discovered by an Outsider". As the Holy Spirit began to confirm God's Word, many stood for healing and, as Brother Koornstra pronounced them whole in the name of Jesus, many miracles and healings took place. Before the close of the meeting many were touched by the appeal made by Mrs. Koornstra for prayer regarding their ministry in Belgium.

While some children played under the supervision of Pontin's staff, others attended a children's feature led by Pastor B.J. Hayes.

As 1 p.m. approached everyone made their way to the dining hall for lunch. The afternoon was free except for ministers and laymen who attended a business session.

Our closing convention rally was held in the Berengaria Theatre. A great spirit of expectancy filled the air. The mixed choir sang under the leadership of Pastor L. Wigglesworth, while the congregation were gathering. When Pastor T.W. Walker stood to announce the opening hymn, "Let earth and heaven agree", the Holy Spirit began to move across the meeting, as we realised that Jesus is Lord.

Pastor H. Castle from South Africa led in prayer and it seemed as if heaven and earth kissed each other. The reading by Mrs. Corsie was from Philippians 4.

Pastor Paul D. Prosser (A.o.G.), and David Newington Chairman of Emmanuel Press (S. Africa), were welcomed. Mr. Newington inspired the congregation regarding the printed word, and all praised God for his dedicated ministry.

There was a sad note when we reflected that seven colleagues in the ministry had been called home to their eternal reward during the last twelve months. Pastor G. Canty, our President, extended the sympathy of the Conference to those who mourn and, as the congregation stood in the presence of God, he prayed the blessing of God upon each relative.

Pastor J.T. Bradley, the retiring Secretary-General, thanked all those who had helped in any way during the week. After another hymn, Pastor Wigglesworth sang a solo, "What is He to you?"

Pastor Paul D. Prosser ministered God's Word and took for his text, Philippians 4:19. His message was rich and challenging. We sang a closing hymn, "To God be the Glory" and Pastor D.W. Cartwright, the new Director of Publications, closed in prayer.

The evening children's meeting was led by Pastor E. Garner and it included many surprises.

Late Night Special was in the Ballroom. It was conducted by Pastor H.W. Greenway. His topic, "I was there", brought back the memories of the first Elim Church in Belfast, the time when George Jeffreys baptised 1,000 people, and when Sister Aimee McPherson shook London with the message of Jesus. Pastor F.H. Coleman also took us down memory lane.

In the Berengaria Theatre, Hans Koornstra conducted the prayer and tarrying meeting. After exhorting the congregation in his effective way, there was a time for receiving, when many instantaneously received the fulness of God's Spirit and spoke in tongues as he said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost".

Pastor D.G. Woodfield conducted Coffee Bar Evangelism in the Pontinental Bar, where scores of young people met to hear music and testimonies. Many came to their decision to ask Jesus to forgive their sins, and we give God the glory.

Saturday

THE final devotional service had arrived. Pastor F.G. Evans announced the opening hymn, "The dear loving Saviour hath found me", and Pastor F.H. Coleman brought us God's Word based on "The multitude as they left the Lord" and "Not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit".

We all appreciated the accompaniment of Geoff Cooper on the organ.

After breakfast it was time to say goodbye to each other and to Morecambe until next year's Conference. As we departed in various directions, our prayer to God was that the power of the Holy Spirit, which rested upon us during the Conference, might rest on each individual, and each church continually.

We give God the glory for all that He did for us.

6. Living in the Spirit

by Ian R. Hall
Pastor of our Ryde
Church

FOR the early believers the normal Christian life was life in the Spirit. The New Testament divides men into those who live on an earthly level and those who live on a spiritual level. The true Christians, Paul declared, "Walk not according to the flesh, but according to the Spirit. For those who live according to the flesh set their minds on the things of the flesh, but those who live according to the Spirit set their minds on the things of the Spirit. To set the mind on the flesh is death, but to set the mind on the Spirit is life and peace" (Romans 8:4-6).

The Bible knows nothing of intermediate grades of Christian life as taught in later centuries. In the earliest years it was all or nothing, with no "in-betweens". When a man identified himself with the Christians he knew the kind of life expected of him. The idea of slotting into a comfortable niche somewhere between the highest spiritual life and his old worldly ways was unthinkable. He had had an experience of the Spirit of God that made anything less than the normal Christian life unacceptable.

Born of the Spirit

The Holy Spirit is at work convicting us of sin and speaking to us of the Saviour before we actually turn in repentance and faith to Christ. When we do that, however, we are made members of God's family; we are "born of the Spirit" (John 3:8). Our new life on the level of the Spirit has begun.

"The Spirit has given us life", stated Paul; "he must also control our lives" (Gal. 5:25 TEV). As both astronaut and diver are dependent upon the portable atmosphere they take with them into an alien environment, so the realm of the Spirit is the atmosphere of the child of God. Outside our native environment we die: life in the Spirit is the only hope of those born of the Spirit.

The Power of the Spirit

The purpose of our redemption, according to Paul, is that we might be indwelt by the Holy Spirit. "Do you know that your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit within you, which you have from God? You are not your own; you were bought with a price. So glorify God in your body" (1 Corinthians 6:19, 20) "The Spirit who dwells with you", Jesus promised his disciples, "will be in you" (John 14:17). "When the day of Pentecost had come. . . they were all filled with the Holy Spirit and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance" (Acts 2:1, 4). As well as the Evidence of Glossolalia, this infilling provides Enduement for Witnessing: "They spoke the word of God with boldness" (Acts 4:31): and Enthusiasm for Worship: "Speak to one another with psalms, hymns and spiritual songs. Sing and make music in your heart to the Lord, always giving thanks to God the Father for everything, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ" (Ephesians 5:19, 20, N.Int.V.).

Because we are indwelt by the Holy Spirit, holiness should be our standard. Thus Paul reminded the Christians: "Do you not know that you are God's temple and that God's Spirit dwells in you? . . . God's Temple is holy, and that temple you are" (1 Corinthians 3:16, 17). The cause of Christ has been done great disservice by those claiming to be Spirit-filled while living unholy lives. "You will know them by their fruits", declared the Lord (Matthew 7:16). "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, self-control" (Galatians 5:22, 23). There is no better life than life in the Spirit and that should be the normal Christian life!

I EXPECT that you are wondering what is the meaning of the word which is the title of our column this week! Really, it means that God is everywhere at the same time. In Psalm 139:7 this question is asked: "Whither shall I flee from Thy presence?". The rest of the Psalm answers that very question. Read it for yourself and count all the places where you can find God.

There is an amusing story of a man who determined to get away from God, but things did not turn out as he intended. As he walked down the street, a Salvation Army band was playing. Then he got on a train which was filled with children and teachers from Sunday school who were going on their annual outing. At last he got to the seaside and chose what he thought was a quiet spot. Soon after, a group of young people gathered and held a gospel open-air meeting. He moved from there and sat on a seat in a nearby park, when suddenly a minister came and sat next to him and started to read his Bible.

This story is a good one, too.

He was just a little lad, and on a Sabbath day was wandering home from Sunday school and dawdling on his way. He scuffed his shoes into the grass; he found a caterpillar; he found a fluffy milkweed pod and blew out all the "filler". A bird's nest in the tree o'er head, so wisely placed and high, was just another wonder that caught his eager eye.

A neighbour watched his zig-zag course and hailed him from the lawn, asked him where he had been that day and what was going on.

"Oh, I've been to Sunday school". He carefully turned the sod and found a snail beneath it. "I've learned a lot of God".

"Mm, a very fine way," the neighbour said, "for a boy to spend his time. If you'll tell me where God is, I'll give you a brand new dime."

Quick as a flash his answer came, nor were his accents faint. "I'll give you a dollar, Mister, if you'll tell me where God ain't."

Righteousness

by A. S. F. Home, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

HOW many have said, "Why does not God do something about it? How can He be a God of love and allow suffering, injustice, war, and a thousand other such things?"!

Little do they realise that righteousness is saving our country and the world at the present moment.

The "reds under the beds" are unrighteous. "Treasures of wickedness profit nothing: but righteousness delivereth from death" (Proverbs 10:2). "Righteousness defends" (F.F.). Two great forces are at work: righteousness, defending and delivering; unrighteousness, causing the downfall of man and the world, "sunk down in the pit" (Psalm 9:15), caught in a net of their own making.

Ancient civilisations all perished by the same poison. Greece and Rome did not fall until they were permeated by unrighteousness. God spoke through Hosea: "You have cultivated ungodliness" (B.T.).

Righteousness saves. Listen to Abraham at prayer: "Are You really going to destroy the just man with the sinner?" (Genesis 18:23, Jer.). God's answer is still the same: "I will not destroy it for the sake of ten". This is why the judgment of God has not fallen on this God-forsaken, sinful world of ours. The righteousness that God has given through Christ is holding back His judgment. A few earnest, determined, righteous men and women can save a city, our country, the world. God's desire is to save all His creatures and He punishes only because it is necessary in order to save. If anything can accomplish the same purpose, if the work of faith of the good can lead others to good, if their self-sacrifices to save men from sin can touch hearts, then God will work in this way and spare all the punishment that He can. In Proverbs 14:34 we see the effects of sin and holiness: "Righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people".

How can we save our country and the world? There is a way — by earnest prayer and by the use of means. If all God's people prayed as earnestly as did Abraham for Sodom, he would answer, but, as of old, He would answer in a way that he would not expect. The hymnwriter puts it this way:

The prayers I thought unanswered once Were answered in God's own best way.

In God's answer, first the righteous were delivered from the city. God's righteous people always come first. Next the prayer was answered in the destruction of the city. By that destruction righteousness was promoted. Sin was bringing forth death; it always does. The longer it is left, so more and more destruction is entailed. Such vile cities contaminated and corrupted the race. The cancer must be cut out lest the whole be destroyed.

God "now commandeth all men everywhere to repent: Because He hath appointed a day in the which He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom He hath ordained" (Acts 17:30, 31); "Appointed for that task and He has made this credible and given conviction and assurance and evidence to everyone by raising Him for the dead" (Amp.).

God help us, like Abraham of old, to save as many as possible before the awful day of judgment comes.

The Devil's Cataract and the Bridal Veil

by A. Nicolson

TWICE as high and one and a half times as wide as the Niagara Falls is the proud boast of Rhodesia's Victoria Falls. You begin at the Devil's Cataract and walk your way round to the Eastern Cataract with its Bridal Veil. On your way you will pass through the rain forest where the spray from the main falls gives the impression of continual rain.

Beside the Devil's Cataract is the statue of David Livingstone, missionary, explorer and friend of the slaves. In a way it is fitting that the statue should be there, right beside the Devil's Cataract. It is where every missionary ought to be, in this country or overseas.

Between the Devil's Cataract and the Bridal Veil there is the main fall, 273 feet high, a glorious, thundering spectacle of water at its most powerful, awe-inspiring display.

Water poured upon the thirsty, floods on the dry ground, rivers of living water pouring out from the innermost being — these are the fulness of the Spirit. It is not a bath, but a baptism, an immersion in the Spirit. Let us not belittle a mighty experience by calling two or three words in unknown language, often after much persuasion and vocal encouragement, the baptism in the Spirit. It is akin to comparing the slender ribbon of water of some local waterfall to the turbulent torrents of the Victoria Falls. The mountain waterfall may be very pretty, but it won't give you a perpetual rain forest. On my way from the Devil's Cataract of Sin to the Bridal Veil on that great and glorious day of the Marriage Supper of the Lamb, I need the rain forest of the Spirit, don't you?

GLEANINGS

Love and spiritual Gifts

by S. E. Petts

"God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work" (2 Corinthians 9:8).

THIS verse and similar Scriptures simply say that in God's provision there is a perfect answer to each need of the Christian. This is not to say that there is one perfect panacea for all needs. We must have "the whole armour of God", for to wear the helmet and not the breastplate leaves us vulnerable. In the same way we are not completely safe from Satan's attack if we have all the armour except the helmet. God has made each piece of armour to meet a particular need. We cannot use any piece for a different purpose and we need it all for victory.

Is love, the foremost fruit of the Spirit, able to solve every problem? Will the possession of all nine spiritual gifts meet every contingency? The Holy Spirit sent fruit and gifts, so we must need both. Paul says, "Follow after love and desire spiritual gifts".

We must avail ourselves of every item of God's provision in order to be fully useful. The degree to which we omit any determines the extent of our vulnerability.

An Outline

"Thy faith hath saved thee"

"SAVED and "faith" are two great words of Christian confession, sometimes used of physical restoration, but mostly of spiritual recovery. Luke instances four people, all nameless, to whom Jesus spoke the wonderful words.

1. The Gratitude of Faith (Luke 7:50). The woman who was a sinner.
2. The Touch of Faith (8:44); a woman having an issue.
3. The Obedience of Faith (17:14): ten men who were lepers.
4. The Persistence of Faith (18:35): a certain blind man.

A Quotation

The Glory of the Latter Rain

"ANOTHER great work of the Holy Spirit which is not accomplished is the bringing on of the latter-day glory. In a few more years, I know not when, the Holy Spirit will be poured out in a far different style from the present. There are diversities of operations and during the last few years it has been the case that the diversified operations have consisted in very little pouring out of the Spirit. Ministers have gone on in dull routine, continually preaching, and little good has been done. I hope that perhaps a fresh era has dawned upon us and that there is a better outpouring of the Spirit even now. For the hour is coming, and it may be even now is, when the Holy Ghost will be poured out again in such a wonderful manner that many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased — the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the surface of the great deep, when His kingdom shall come and His will be done on earth even as it is in heaven. We are not going to be dragging on for ever like Pharaoh with the wheels off his chariot. My heart exults and my eyes flash with the thought that very likely I shall live to see the outpouring of the Spirit, when 'the sons and daughters of God again shall prophesy, and the young men shall see visions, and the old men shall dream dreams'. . . For that let us pray, let us continually labour for it, and seek it of God".

Preached by Spurgeon at New Park Street Chapel, Southwark, June 17th, 1855, while he was but a youth. He died in 1892 and did not live to see the beginnings of the present-day outpouring of the Holy Spirit which began around the turn of the century and is now world-wide in its increasing flow.

Singing

From a great Singer and Composer

"LET us sing words which we feel and love, sacrificing everything to clearness of enunciation, and looking up to meet His smile all the while we are singing; our songs will reach more hearts than those of finer voices and more brilliant execution, unaccompanied by His power".

F.R. Havergal.

Thoughts from the Book of Exodus

7. Moses the Unwilling (Exodus 4: 10-13)

by F. Lavender,
Pastor of our Croydon Church

MOSES' response to the call of God was: "They will not hear me", so the Lord showed signs and wonders to encourage him. He changed Moses' rod into a serpent and back into a rod. Then He made his hand leprous and afterward restored it to health. Finally He told Moses to pour water on the ground and turned the water to blood. The Lord then told Moses again to go to Egypt and perform these signs before Pharaoh. Moses' response was: "O Lord, I am still not eloquent", and "Send by the hand of him whom You will send". He really meant: "Anyone but me"!

Moses' reaction was not the outcome of his humility, but rather an evidence of his unwillingness to obey. He had found peace with Jethro and with his wife and family and sheep. This tranquillity was threatened. The call of God would shatter his peace. He would know constant trouble and conflict as Israel's leader. All he wanted was to return to obscurity, but the difficulty was that the call of God had renewed and sanctified his original vision of Israel's deliverance. If he had returned to the outward quiet of a shepherd's life he would never again know peace of heart; this would only come by obeying God and doing His will.

In my teens I gave my life to the Lord Jesus for the ministry and, when He asked: "Will you go anywhere for Me?", I said: "Yes!". Then He pointed to a particular task which was extremely unpleasant to me and He said: "Are you willing to do that for My sake?". This led to several weeks of distress as I fought the will of God. I had deep unhappiness and

With the Spirit and with the understanding

WHITSUNTIDE is with us once more on June 2nd. To the average church-goer and maybe the man in the street it is, in a vague way, associated with the Day of Pentecost and the coming of the Holy Spirit. To the truly Pentecostal believer, however, Whitsuntide is celebrated as one more glorious reminder of "a way of life and a spirituality founded on the belief that the Holy Spirit can be known in love and power by the Christian now, as in the apostolic age". (John Gunstone in Greater than These).

At Whitsuntide therefore we revel in the new, wider dimension of worship and prayer given to us by the Holy Spirit. I never cease to delight in this freedom of expression. Paul speaks roundly of the distinctive gifts, ministrations and operations bestowed on the Church and avows that they all function for our good. How assuring this can be when we consider the gift of speaking in tongues. The tongue, the vehicle of speech, has always been the unruly member capable of great evil, so it is wonderful to realise that the Holy Spirit takes control of it. The Spirit, too, led Paul to give detailed instructions for the use of this gift of tongues (1 Corinthians 14-16). His statement in v.15 concerning inspired worship in unknown tongues and with the understanding gives us the perfect balance.

We were shocked to receive the news of the tragic deaths of Pastor and Mrs. H. Burton Haynes, two truly Spirit-filled believers. Our dear brother maintained just such a balance in the exercise of the gifts of the Spirit. He will be lovingly remembered for his use of the gift of tongues and of interpretation. In his fine tenor voice he would sing in an unknown tongue and then sing the interpretation. He certainly excelled in edifying the church. Similarly, when rendering a solo, or a duet with his wife, it was always evident that he was singing under a conscious anointing of the Holy Spirit. When he and his dear wife visited the Ulster Temple, when my husband held the pastorate there, they sang together. It was the Annual Convention and the afternoon baptismal service. Such was the anointing upon the duet by God's servants that, as they sang, eight more believers there and then came down the aisles to present themselves for baptism in response to the challenge that my husband had felt led to make. How rich and diverse are the gifts of the Holy Spirit, how blessed and beautiful their operation; nothing is formal or stereotyped.

Spirit-filled believer, enjoy your inheritance, pray with or by the Holy Spirit in tongues that He imparts and pray with your renewed mind and intellect also. Do likewise as you express yourself in song, as suggested in Ephesians 5:19. The Lord Jesus, who sent the Holy Spirit from the Father (John 15:26), told the woman at Jacob's well that His Father has ever sought for true worshippers who would worship Him in spirit and in truth. Jesus stated that God is a Spirit and this must have been a revelation to the Samaritan woman. Her religion was a superstitious worship of the true God, coupled with an emphasis on the place of worship and the need for animal sacrifices.

We know that God is a Spirit and our gifts to Him must be gifts of the spirit. A man's spirit is the part of him which is God-conscious; it is the highest part of his nature. How glorious, then, that, empowered, led and enabled by the Holy Spirit, we can pray, worship, sing, and operate the vocal gifts and thus fulfil the great desire of our heavenly Father. Surely this is one of the supreme blessings of Pentecost — our spirits given over to the gracious control of the Holy Spirit. Do you long to be lost in wonder, love and praise? Do you long to encourage and edify your fellow-believers? Desire the gifts of the Holy Spirit and allow Him to fill you to overflowing!

no peace of heart until I said: "Yes!". My experience is not unique; many others have gone this way. Are you having a time of trouble because of your unwillingness to obey God, not necessarily because of a call to full time service but perhaps to do something else in your life? The all-wise God loves you dearly, so why do you resist Him as though He wants to hurt you? Why not say "Yès!" to His will? This is the only way of peace and joy for you, of blessing and usefulness to others, and of fulfilling the purpose of God in your life.

Teaching Babies to talk

THE advent of a new baby to a home is a source of great joy. The wonder of new life grips the parents and, not without some anxiety, they watch over the life with which they have been entrusted, caring for it and willing it to develop into a normal, healthy, bouncing infant. In the course of the early years, the little one will be spoken to in a language which is completely unintelligible either to the adult using it or to the infant himself. What does, "Diddums den", mean anyway? But this is an effort to communicate. Consider the joy of the parents on detecting the first smile and the happiness when baby speaks his first word. Communication is really established on a verbal level then, but it must grow and develop alongside physical growth.

The processes through which we develop to adulthood have been clearly defined in terms of infancy, childhood, adolescence and maturity, but not all infants develop normally to adulthood. Unfortunately, things can appear in childhood which hinder the expected progress and, though the joy of the new life may be dimmed, the love for it is no doubt increased.

What is true of physical birth is equally true of the new birth. In the new birth, there is travail followed by the joy of the new life. How wonderful that the angels of heaven rejoice over the sinner who repents and is born anew of the Spirit of God! The need for the new birth takes us back to the Garden of Eden where Adam and Eve shared such glorious communion with the Creator. Their sin severed the sweet fellowship; communication, which must ever be a two way process, was destroyed. In the spiritual re-birth, that communication is re-established. As in the natural, so in the spiritual. It is essential that the new babe in Christ learns to talk, a process which must begin as early as possible. Workers in child care indicate that retardation in learning to talk occurs where parents do not spend much time talking to their children. By the same token, God speaks to us all the time through His Word. Hence the injunction of 1 Peter 2:2: "As newborn babies, desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby".

The new baby learns to say words by repetition of sounds. As father or mother speak, so baby responds, at first with scarcely understandable sounds and later by putting words together. It is significant that in the early stages a mother can distinguish the sounds to understand their meaning. Many new Christians feel inhibited concerning public prayer because they feel that the sounds they produce will not be intelligible. God understands and rejoices when His children talk to Him.

We hear much of autism and dyslexia. There are

by Peter Smith,
Pastor of our
Rotherham Church

times when these conditions affect the Church and even more so the new babe in Christ. Autism is the inability to conceptualise. It interferes with the ability to learn. Regrettably, it is sometimes a voluntary condition for the believer. Dyslexia is word-blindness, which can be overcome by long, patient work with those affected. The answer for the Christian must be to please himself where God can communicate, where blindness to His Word is replaced by spiritual insight. Failure to understand the concepts of Scripture can be dealt with only by a willing yieldedness to be taught by the Spirit of God.

It all comes back to this: In the first instance, the language of the Father is the language of the child. For our prayer life to be effective and for it to develop, we must listen well during God's conversations with us. A poor relationship to the Word results in a meagre prayer life in which spiritual adults of long standing continue to lisp the words of spiritual childhood. How exciting it is for the church to listen to the halting prayer of the newborn believer, "Thank you Lord, for saving my soul". It is less than exciting if his prayer life never goes beyond that stage. Arrested development in the natural is not regarded as normal; why should it be considered so in the spiritual? Instead of excusing our inability to pray, let us give ourselves to the Word of God and to prayer. "The people that do know their God shall be strong, and do exploits" (Daniel 11:35). The need of the hour is for those who really know God, who communicate with God. We need to be strong in God through intimate knowledge of Him and the exploits, which too often take pride of place in our thinking, will follow.

Spiritual babes need to be encouraged to pray, even in the simplest terms until, with developing maturity, their prayer lives grow in the same measure. The disciples asked the Lord to teach them to pray. While the hymn suggests that "Prayer is the Christian's vital breath", it doesn't come as naturally as breathing. It has to be learned. It requires work and effort for it to develop into meaningful, two-way communication with God. Rather than stay away from fellowship, we should "exhort one another", the more so because Christ is coming soon (Hebrews 10:25) and, we should "exhort one another daily" (Hebrews 3:13).

Psalm 104:24-35

"My meditation of Him" (v.34).

HERE is a vital art, though it is lost to many of us, the art of getting alone with God, of thinking deeply and long on the unseen and eternal. It is so easy today to lose this quiet, unhurried contemplation, this communion with God. With them go much spiritual attainment and success. As sleep looses a man from his labours, worries and pains and is essential for his bodily health, so meditation frees a man's soul and enables it to soar into the mountain of God and, pondering His goodness, love and power, to kindle that flame within.

Tuesday, May 28th

Psalm 105:1-22

"He sent a man" (v.17).

WE often think of Joseph as being cruelly sold into captivity by his brothers. Here we are reminded that he was sent by God, allowed to suffer humiliation, false accusation, imprisonment and hurt that he might finally be made great, do good in an hour of need, and bring blessing and help to his own. He is a figure of our Saviour, who "humbled himself" and allowed Himself to bleed that others might be blessed. Both submitted meekly to the strange ways of God and were used and blessed. Can you accept the adverse circumstances in your life to be part of God's plan to bless you and others?

Wednesday, May 29th

Psalm 105:23-45

"Praise ye the LORD" (v.45).

WELL they might, for the history recorded here of the people of Israel when they grew into a nation is one of God's continued goodness, faithfulness, consideration and care. He blessed them with wealth and health (v.37), protection and guidance (v.39); He sustained them and satisfied them (vv.40, 41); His word was his bond and he brought forth His people with joy and gladness and gave them an inheritance of their own (vv.42-44). This final, thankful acknowledgment is right and fitting, not only for His people Israel, but for us also who trust Him and keep His Word, for all the favours bestowed and the blessed intentions are for His own (Ephesians 1:3).

Thursday, May 30th

Psalm 110:1-7

"Thy people shall be willing" (v.3).

LUTHER liked this Psalm. He said: "It is very fine. It describes the Kingdom and Priesthood of Christ, and declares Him to be king of all things and intercessor for all men". It also describes a vital quality of the true subjects of the willingness. The Psalm mentions this as the great characteristic of those who will rally about God's King in a coming day of power. Does it describe your attitude to Christ? God is not looking so much for your ability, as for your willingness to serve (Romans 12:1).

Friday, May 31st

Acts 1:1-14

"Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto Me" (v.8).

"THE servant is not greater than his lord" (John 13:16). How Jesus entered and accomplished His great ministry is the way that he would have us continue it. Emerging from Jordan at His baptism, He prayed, and the Holy Spirit came upon Him (Luke 3:21). "In the power of the Spirit" he served and laboured (Luke 4:1, 14, 18). His earthly ministry was effective and far reaching from the first, for it was in the power of the Holy Spirit. This great Book opens with the important message to all His disciples that this is the only way that it can effectively continue. There is no substitute.

Saturday, June 1st

Acts 1:15-26

"The reward of iniquity" (v.18).

THERE is only one end for those who pursue a path of sin (Romans 6:21, 23; James 1:15). This verse sums up the treachery and tragedy of Judas. Why did he do it? Many suggestions have been made — disappointment, greed, to save himself in a crisis. Whatever it was, we have some idea how it began; a suggestion from the devil was listened to and allowed to develop (John 13:2). To harbour an evil thought is to give place and opportunity to the devil (John 13:27) and, whatever seeming temporal rewards are suggested, sin has only one real reward—a place in that lake which burns with fire (Revelation 21:8). Let us safeguard our souls by taking heed to James 4:7: "resist the devil" and "draw nigh to God".

Sunday, June 2nd

Acts 2:1-13

"All with one accord. . . they were all filled" (vv.1, 4).

FROM this portion we learn the priorities required for receiving the mighty gift of the Holy Ghost. The preparation of the early disciples was not in theological scholarship, cleverness, or great holiness. Their only claim to the special blessing and experience of that day was that they loved Jesus with a love that made them believe and want to obey Him implicitly. Love, trust, obedience are the things that brought them together with one heart and mind and kept them unitedly and believingly in prayer. These qualities breed open hearts, harmony, earnestness, patience and expectancy and lead to the fulness of the Holy Spirit. May this day see a revival of these things in our hearts.

Presidential PERSPECTIVE

by George Canty

WITHIN a few seconds, in the first service of the forty-first Annual Conference, I found myself saddled with a multitude of responsibilities not all officially listed. The President, it soon became obvious, is expected to do something about quite a lot of things, from stopping draughts to getting people seated comfortably in the services. Being of an organising disposition this suited me. If folk like to be organised, I like organising them! However, without facetiousness, and after a year of mental and spiritual preparation, I hope that I can in some way or ways take hold of the entire Elim situation, and I welcome the opportunity whether it touches the trivial or the vital. I want to do more, if possible, than deliver rousing addresses in a couple of hundred places.

There is something happening. Spiritually, we could have a glorious explosion. Every President is held in respect by thousands of people across Britain and beyond, and might, at the right moment say the word, or take the action, or show the lead, to touch off that explosion. The greatest anxiety I have had was not being chairman of the business sessions of the Conference, which, unexpectedly, I found to be a most enjoyable experience once I had found my feet. My fear was that in the present potent situation, with changing national conditions, and obviously surging spiritual interest, I might fail to do the thing necessary to precipitate revival, or that my lack of perception or laggardly leadership could hold back a new tide of blessing.

Perhaps this anxiety ought not to leave me, and it hasn't. Nevertheless, there were two things which gave me real hope that, if the key lies to any degree in the hands of the President of Elim, I shall receive the prompting of God and the power to use that key. One of them was the astonishing and touching sincerity of many people who have gone out of their way to assure me of their daily prayers and of their enthusiastic expectations from another year of Presidential activities. This was a lovely legacy from the accumulated work of past Presidents who have obviously added lustre to the office and have impressed people everywhere with its importance and possibilities.

The other encouragement was an event in Conference. The first business session began with a hymn and I made no comment whatever except, after we had sung, to say, "Let us remain standing, brethren" — mundane enough, that. But instantly a great roar of worship and praise arose and the Spirit of God moved the hearts of all, and for perhaps twenty minutes the Spirit rested upon us as we sang in the Spirit and responded to the rhythm of the divine music. Nothing for me could have been a greater confirmation that God would do for me and through me exactly what he wanted, whether I studied my words or not. The spontaneity of this outburst of Pentecostal joy was the greatest reassurance that God will just do it, Himself, if we trustingly do the job He has given us.

After the Conference, with the details as told in other pages of the ELIM EVANGEL, I set off immediately for my first Presidential visit, to Weston-super-Mare. It must have been the most unique arrival of any President's first call, as I was taken to the service in a police car, after they had driven me into the town and around until they found the hall for me. It was certainly appreciated! The truth was that a leaking hose on my car had left me stranded on the motorway and the police offered to co-operate in getting me to the church on time.

Weston is a three-year-old church and is a thriving baby. Despite having to use two different halls for their services, not being able to do youth work (other than Sunday school in yet a third hall) or use a musical instrument in the mid-week meetings, Jim Ritchie and his wife, Thelma, have the solid regard and support of their Elim folk.

For my visit, a tremendous amount of work had been put in. Several brought friends with them and one lady brought twelve visitors, which shows what can be done when you try. If everybody tried. . . . Elim figures would soar! — and converts! My first evening service produced five decisions for Christ and many fine contacts also.

So, while we wait for that spiritual explosion, we could all do a great deal, if we followed the Weston example. After all, God's appointed method for world change is evangelism — preaching the Gospel to every creature. It is hard work, but it's God's method.

Editorial

PENTECOST is here again!

We firstly refer to the date on the calendar, of course, but what inspiration can be gained from this statement.

It does your soul good to read Acts chapter 2 again and again. The sheer brilliance of Peter's words, his marvellous exegesis, his confidence, his pointed boldness—why, it's glory all the way!

Now that's Pentecost!

The demonstration, the fire, the power, the sense of God, the dynamic preaching, the conviction, the conversions, the unified apostles, the whole tremendous move of God characterised the arrival on the scene of time of both the Holy Spirit in His new ministry as Comforter, Advocate, Paraklete, and the Church of Jesus Christ. It was a genesis to be emulated.
It was a fanfare of glory to be desired. It was a demonstration to be repeated. It was of God. It was God.

We speak and write of "the Early Church", giving capital letters to the two words, but really there is no difference in the Church whatever the date on the calendar. God's will is to reach the whosoever will through the Church in the power of the Spirit throughout the Age of Grace. This ministry began on the day of Pentecost and will reach its fabulous climax at the second coming, that scintillating convention in the air!

I am simply trying to say that Pentecost not only was, it is! We need not look back with nostalgia and longing, crying, "O that we were there!".
There is no need.

Pentecost is here and now.

"The Promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call", declared Peter on the first day of Pentecost.

Hallelujah!

A modern gospel song describes Gethsemane and Calvary and challenges,
"If that isn't love. . .!"

Well, if Pentecost isn't power, what is?

And it's for you. . .

FUNDAMENTAL BELIEFS OF THE ELIM PENTECOSTAL CHURCH — 1. THE BIBLE: We believe that the Bible is the inspired Word of God and that none may add thereto or take away therefrom except at their peril. 2. THE TRINITY: We believe that the Godhead eternally exists in three persons Father Son and Holy Ghost and that these three are one God. 3. THE CHURCH: We believe that the Church consists of all persons who have been regenerated by the Holy Ghost and made new creatures in Christ Jesus. 4. THE SAVIOUR: We believe that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God and that through the death and risen power of Christ all who believe can be saved from the penalty and power of sin. 5. THE HEALER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Healer of the body and that all who will walk in obedience to His will can claim Divine Healing for their bodies. 6. THE BAPTISER: We believe that our Lord Jesus Christ is the Baptiser in the Holy Ghost and that this Baptism with signs following is promised to every believer. 7. THE COMING KING: We believe in the personal and pre-millennial return of our Lord Jesus Christ to receive unto Himself the Church and afterwards to set up His Throne as King. 8. THE FRUIT: We believe that every believer on the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour should produce the ninefold fruit of His Spirit: Love joy peace longsuffering gentleness goodness faith meekness temperance. 9. THE GIFTS: We believe that the Church should claim and manifest the nine Gifts of the Holy Spirit: Wisdom knowledge faith healing miracles prophecy discernment tongues interpretation. 10. THE MINISTRY: We believe that God has given some apostles and some prophets and some evangelists and some pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry for the edifying of the Body of Christ. 11. THE FUTURE STATE: We believe in the eternal conscious bliss of all true believers in Christ and also in the eternal conscious punishment of all Christ rejectors. 12. THE ORDINANCES: We believe in the following ordinances: Partaking of bread and wine in memory of our Lord's death baptism by immersion for believers the laying on of hands and the anointing of the sick with oil.

The Holy Spirit convicts

by W. J. Maybin, Th.D.
Pastor of our Southampton Church

The verses that high-light this subject are John 16: 7-11. They reveal the primary aspect of the Holy Spirit's ministry among men. If, as Oswald Chambers suggests when writing of the Spirit's ministry of conviction, it is "the threshold of an understanding of God", then we must begin here. We must view this threefold conviction as the requisite preliminary to the impartation of the divine nature, what Harold J. Ockenga described as "the perennial miracle demonstrating the supernatural —regeneration".

The Holy Spirit's work is to show me myself and then to show me my Saviour. When I see myself I cry despairingly with Paul, "Who will free me from my slavery to this dreadful lower nature?". When He shows me my Saviour, I exclaim also with Paul, "Thank God! It has been done by Jesus Christ our Lord. He has set me free" (Romans 7:24, 25, Living Bible).

There can be no salvation apart from the person of Christ, but it is equally true that there can be no salvation apart from the power and person of the Holy Spirit. At Bethlehem the Word became flesh. At Calvary the Word became vicarious. At the resurrection the Word became victorious. At Pentecost the Word became dynamic.

Before Christ outlined the nature of the Holy Spirit's ministry towards the world and the Church, He clearly, concisely wrapped up several very important aspects of this great doctrine in a few, well-chosen words.

The Pre-requisite of the Ascension (John 16:7). As a commentary on this verse Jesus stated lucidly that the arrival of the Holy Spirit among His own depended upon His "glorification", which, in Johannine thought, means His death, resurrection and ascension (John 7:37-39). In this sense "It is the glorified Christ whom the Spirit mediates to men" (Wycliffe Bible Commentary).

The Personality of the Spirit is the fundamental consideration, for clarity of thought on this issue makes it possible fully to comprehend the Spirit's mission and work. Nothing can be more disparaging to the Spirit than lack of recognition. The Holy Spirit is not merely a diffuse "influence" in the Church; He is always classified as a Person. Indeed the Scriptures demand from us an acknowledgement of the unity of the Godhead, and at the same time those interior characteristics between Father, Son and Spirit which we can only state by our word "Person".

The Procession of the Spirit became an ecclesiastical issue and divided the Eastern and Western churches in the late sixth century. The Western Church (under the influence of Augustine) at Toledo, in 589 A.D., added to the Latin Creed the clause that the Holy Spirit proceeded not only from the Father, but also "from the Son". If we examine John chapters 14-16 it becomes evident that the blessed gift of the Holy Spirit to the world and the Church was from both the Father and the Son, while the impression is also given that He came of His own initiative "When He is come, He will reprove the world" (16:8).

The main teaching of these verses, however, has to do with THE PARTICULAR NATURE OF THE HOLY SPIRIT'S WORK AS IT RELATES TO THE WORLD.

While the Holy Spirit has come to indwell and empower the believer, He strives with the non-believer, "as a spirit of conviction, of reasoning, wooing him in patience to the way of God" (Dr. C. Morgan). It seems clear also that through the Holy Spirit coming to the disciples, i.e., the Church, He would exert this ministry of conviction among men. In the lives of those who compose the Church men must see what Dr. Wheeler Robinson calls "reality rendered in terms of life. . . Truth must become incarnate to become power as well as truth". Is the lack of conviction an indictment against the professing Church, against you and me?

Look at this word "reprove" or "convict". A convincing unto salvation demands first a convicting unto condemnation. Before God can help the sinner He has to diagnose and probe, and this can often be severe, but the revealing leads to recovery, unless man refuses to follow the light. As Westcott avers: "Truth seen as truth carries with it condemnation to all who refuse to welcome it". As Jesus stated: "And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light" (John 3:19).

It is generally accepted that "convince" has the atmosphere of a court of law with the presentation of evidence that carries with it the demonstration of guilt. It suggests a cross-examination with a view to leading to conviction, which in our case leads to conversion.

The first work of the Holy Spirit is to expose sin and reveal its true nature in terms of unbelief: "Of sin, because they believe not on Me".

One writer says: "A jury may convict me of crimes; conscience may convict me of sins, but only the Spirit of God can convict me of sin". This conviction will show that sin, as God sees it, is more than a violation of His law; it goes deeper, to the root of all sin, i.e., unbelief. This takes us back to Eden. But with the coming of Jesus Christ into the world sin became a new thing — refusal to believe in Christ. This means a refusal of the divine remedy for mankind's ills. In the light of Calvary, unbelief becomes the sin of sins. When Christ in His redeeming love is proclaimed, as Spurgeon put it, "Another advocate appears in court, whose pleadings make it hard for men to resist the truth".

See how this conviction was evident in Apostolic days. Peter's sermon at Pentecost brought God-honouring results because he accused them of the sin of not believing in Jesus, announced His righteousness by reason of His exaltation to glory, and argued for the certainty of judgment. God honoured the truths and the Early Church was multiplied beyond all recognition.

The next work of the Spirit is to vindicate the righteousness of Christ. The world is just as ignorant of true righteousness as it is of true sin, and it is the work of the Spirit to reveal the truth about righteousness. Man's idea of righteousness is as devoid of true judgment as his idea of sin. He imagines that external morality is sufficient; it takes the Holy Spirit to show him that his best is but filthy rags in God's sight. Until God works in his heart, man is satisfied with mere outward presentableness, content to judge himself as compared with others and boast, even in the sanctuary, "Lord, I thank Thee that I am not as other men". As soon as Jesus told this story the listeners had decided the hero of the piece, but He reversed their verdict. The publican was better than the Pharisee because he saw himself as a sinner and begged for mercy. I understand in the richness of the Greek text that he prayed: "O God, be propitious to me the sinner". Ivor Powell comments: "He saw his own unspeakable guilt, the magnificent mercy of God, and the simple faith that could bring both together".

The world judged Jesus Christ to be a criminal and sent Him to the cross. God reversed the world's verdict and vindicated His righteousness, and that righteousness can be ours through faith.

The crowning operation of the Spirit is a conviction in the realm of judgment, not a future judgment, but one that is past. Calvary was the devil's Waterloo and the victory of the empty grave is the guarantee of his final overthrow. His powers have been despoiled and his kingdom finished. It is but a matter of time until heaven re-echoes with the words: "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of His Christ; and He shall reign for ever and ever" (Revelation 11:15).

The choice of mankind is clear: embrace Christ and share in His ultimate triumph, or elect to serve sin and Satan and share his final doom. Those who pin their faith on Jesus Christ are released from condemnation (Romans 8:1). Even now the believer, however weak, may share that triumph and overcome by the blood of the Lamb and the word of his testimony (Revelation 12:11). The devil cannot win!

WE were travelling back from London in our church coach. We were doing well, having covered about two-thirds of our journey in good time. Then the trouble started! We began to lose power, until eventually we came to a standstill. The trouble was fuel shortage caused by dirt on the gauzes of the fuel pump. When this was dismantled I could hardly believe my eyes. The dirt seemed so little, but it was sufficient to rob us of much of our power.

There can be little things in our lives like that. They are so small, but they prevent our living powerful Christian lives. In the Song of Solomon we read of little foxes that spoil the vines (2:15), a warning about the little sins, secret sins, which rob our lives of the fruit that the Holy Spirit is waiting and wanting to produce through us. Our progress in the Christian life can be good, but then there comes a hindrance, the sin that we will not give up.

Gladstone held that the tiniest sin that settled on his soul gave God as much pain as a speck of grit blown into his own eye. That's why those little sins in our life must be dealt with. But here is a word of warning. Don't try to deal with your sin, for you are sure to lose. Go to Christ; let Him deal with your sin and you are sure to win. This means confessing to Him those little sins in your life and, with His help, turning from them.

Thank God, we can touch Jesus for lives of victory!

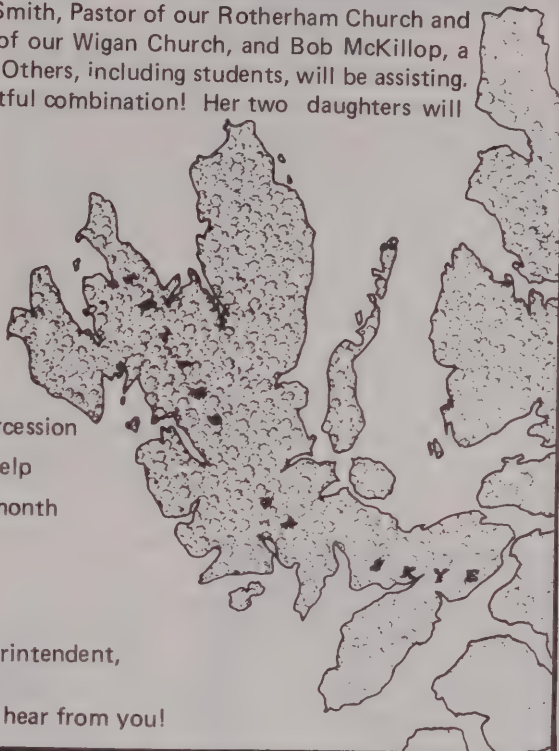

Skye's the Limit?

A challenge—outreach in an area new to Elim

DURING September an Elim team will be going to the Isle of Skye, you know — the one you go over the sea to!

It is felt that a month's in-depth evangelism must produce results to the glory of God and the extension of the kingdom. Leading the team will be Peter Smith, Pastor of our Rotherham Church and a Scot. Sharing with him will be John Seaman, Pastor of our Wigan Church, and Bob McKillop, a police inspector and a deacon of our Motherwell Church. Others, including students, will be assisting. Mrs. McKillop will help with music and catering — a delightful combination! Her two daughters will join in the personal work.

The aim is to seek to reach the whole Island and to contact as many as possible individually.

You can help!

Please stand behind our colleagues in prayer and intercession

You may feel it laid on your heart to send financial help

Perhaps you can spend some time — even the whole month
— in Skye giving support to our team.

All offers of help, please, to: Field Superintendent,
Elim Pentecostal Church Headquarters,
P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham. He'd love to hear from you!

GLEANINGS

River of Life

by S. E. Petts

"He brought me through the waters" (Ezekiel 47:3).

THIS passage talks of things at the coming of Christ, but it also speaks of the fulness and fruitfulness of a life baptised in the Holy Spirit.

Every head teacher of a secondary school interviewing possible new entrants wants to know how far they intend to go in the field of education with the help provided. The pupil may have great potential, but possess little desire to go all the way.

With Christians it is often the same. At first "the waters were to the ankles". At conversion we began to walk God's way. Did we stop there? The water got deeper — "to the knees". Have we got as far as regular attendance at the prayer meeting? Was this our halting-place? Later the waters were "to the loins". Skirts were tied around the loins to make running possible. Are we on the run for Christ, evangelising whenever possible, our lives full of activity in the things of God, yet with little result for all our efforts? Was it then that we decided to go no further?

The waters got deep enough "to swim in": immersion depth. This speaks of the baptism in the Holy Spirit, the gateway to the spiritual gifts of enabling. If we go this far we find that God gives us increase for our labours — souls won for him, bodies healed and an inner joy that transcends all.

God must feel like a head teacher, looking at our exceeding great potential with the Holy Spirit's aid and willing us to go all the way.

However far we go, He has promised to bring us through.

Thoughts from the Book of Exodus

8. Aaron (Exodus 4:14)

by F. Lavender,
Pastor of our Croydon Church

THIS is our first introduction to Aaron, Moses' elder brother, but from this time onward he is constantly brought to our notice. It is clear that he was a fine talker; the Lord Himself said so. As a preacher he must have left Moses far behind. He seemed to be just the eloquent speaker needed to put Israel's case, so why didn't the Lord choose him from the beginning? Why did He bother at all with tongue-tied, stumbling Moses?

The fact is that Pharaoh would never have been persuaded by an eloquent speaker, but only by a power greater than his own. Had deliverance depended on Aaron's silver tongue, Israel would still be slaves! In fact, Aaron had both a weak personality and was spiritually defective. Within days of being put in temporary charge of Israel while Moses communed with the Lord on Mount Sinai, he failed by obeying the wishes of the crowd and leading the nation into idolatry (Exodus 32:1-6). He was all right while Moses was present to lead and to deal with the troubles, but he wanted to be popular, so he could not stand on his own.

Moses and Aaron teach us a very important lesson, one that is repeated again and again in the Scriptures: The Lord does not see as man sees and His call does not depend on natural brilliance or dullness. For instance, Apollos was an eloquent preacher and Paul was dull by comparison (Acts 18:24-28; 2 Corinthians 10:10), yet each was steadfastly devoted to the Lord and He used them both. Just as surely He will use you and me if we are steadfast with Him, not necessarily as preachers, but rather to reveal Him to the world. It is not a question of natural talent or lack of it, but of our humble willingness to let Him have His way in our lives and our readiness to give all the glory to Him.

Do not envy the few who are truly brilliant; consecrate what you have and are to the Lord and let Him use you however He will.

An appreciation of

by Edward F. Cole

WILLIAM EDWARD PHILPOTS LOVSEY was called home on the 9th April. The loss sustained by the passing of this Christian gentleman surpasses description. The son of Christian parents, he became the principal partner in a long-established firm of Birmingham solicitors. His Christian influence and amazing generosity were outstanding traits in a character that overflowed with love and kindness. Affectionately known as Ted Lovsey, he practised what he believed, and proved to be a strong arm to many who consulted him about their business and domestic problems. Since his passing, many have told how, by his excellent wisdom and professional guidance, he became a true friend.

The Elim Movement, Churches and Members have expressed their indebtedness for such a good man, who was ever ready and willing to offer sound advice and counsel in the business of the kingdom of God.

His funeral service, held at our Graham Street Church, was crowded with members of the professions, members of Parliament and a host of friends.

Our prayers are with Mrs. Hazel Lovsey, Angela and Rosemary and the family that God will continue to comfort and strengthen their hearts.

New Missionary Zeal

THE troubled period since World War II has given birth to a new missionary movement. This movement has emerged especially within the revival-orientated groups and accounts for the fact that, during the last two decades, despite many drop-outs, the total number of Protestant missionaries has risen from 35,000 to 50,000.

We are witnessing a revival of religious interest among the young. This is true in many countries of the world, irrespective of political and confessional background. In many Asian countries, student Bible unions of largely first-generation Christians have become the main forward movements of evangelism.

Even more thrilling: countries governed by militant atheistic communism have experienced a new spiritual revival in their churches. Communist newspapers are compelled to complain that especially educated and young people indulge in Christian practices again. This is a real marvel. It confirms that God's Word proves its power even against hatred and suppression. It is an eschatological sign that world history eventually will end with the conquest of the returning Lord!

Time to Spend

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

AFTER breakfast, Brian and Carol laid out their pocket-money on the table and planned how to spend it.

"I think I'll spend all mine on lollipops and bubble-gum," Brian said.

"What a waste of money!" Carol exclaimed. "Why don't you spend your money on something useful?"

"What do you suggest?" Brian asked his sister.

"Well, first of all, I will keep five pence for Sunday school," Carol told him, "and I will put five pence in my savings bank towards the summer holidays. With the rest I will buy a bar of chocolate to eat after tea and an exercise book to practise my sums in."

"You are certainly making your pocket-money go far!" Brian said.

"So can you, Brian, if you spend yours sensibly. After all, mummy and daddy work hard each week to give us pocket-money. The least that we can do is to use it wisely."

"Yes, you are right, Carol."

Time, just like money, is given to us to spend. How do you spend your time? Some folk waste their time being selfish, greedy and spiteful to one another. It is far better to spend our time being helpful, kind and loving to one another. Each day is a precious gift from God. If we want to be really sure of spending it wisely, then we can dedicate our lives to Him and use our time and our talents in His service.

One day we will meet our Saviour face to face. He will want to know how we spent the precious days He gave us. We need not be afraid if we fill our days with good, noble thoughts and deeds in the service of our Lord and Saviour.

Mama Bull, Tanzania

MY first picture shows me with half the Bible study group which meet in our garden twice weekly. Only one of these women is converted.

The other photo shows Frieta and her husband, Eliseta. Both recently converted, they sought God's will concerning marriage and He gave them guidance when they were in church. I received similar guidance in the same way many years ago!

Eliseta and his wife are zealously witnessing for their Saviour. He persuaded a Landrover load of soldiers to come to the meetings. Freitas is thrilled as she hears of weekly increases in the number of women coming to hear more of God. She remembers them daily in prayer, knowing that some drink too heavily and act immorally. Some have God in scarcely any of their thoughts. Most come from drunken, brutal households. Some know the grip of drugs. Freitas longs to have more Christian fellowship in this area, but we may have to move away.

Pray for her and her husband. Intercede for the women of the Bible study group that they might come to know Christ as Saviour. Twenty-eight meet regularly, of whom you see fifteen in my photo.

Pentecostals, where is your Power?

by Alexander B. Tee, Pastor of our Southport Church.

WITH the world-wide upsurge of Pentecostal experience, there is no longer any theological stigma attached to those who belong to a Pentecostal Church, but the enemy of Christianity is still very much at work. If he can, he will lull us to sleep in the velvet cushion of respectability. We must beware. There are more important questions to ask ourselves than do we speak in other tongues? We thank God for the many blessings that we enjoy when we speak in other tongues or hear someone else doing so. Hundreds of times we have been thrilled by the ministry of the blessed Holy Spirit when He has used the mighty vocal gifts of the Spirit in a truly Pentecostal meeting.

The main reason for receiving the baptism in the Holy Spirit is not to speak in other tongues, however; it is much greater than this. In every major town and city throughout the entire world there are thousands of men and women speeding headlong to hell. Today the word "hell" is not very popular, but this does not change the dreaded truth of its existence. If we believe the teaching of our Lord, we must believe that there is a place of "weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth". Have we ever taken time to think what this means? It is said to be a place "where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched". Do we honestly believe that there are people in our community who, right now, are heading for such a place? Do we believe that this might be their eternal destiny, from which there is no return? Do we believe that the precious gospel of full, free salvation could rescue them from such a destiny and give them a happy home in heaven? Do we believe that the baptism in the Holy Spirit will empower us as we talk to the unsaved?

Have we become so used to believing these things that they make little or no impact on us? If we only believe them theoretically, we are in a very dangerous, disgraceful position.

If we really believe that men and women who are not saved are going to hell, why, oh why, is it that we do not contact them and explain the position to them? It is utterly inconsistent and virtually a criminal offence to have in your hand the precious soul-saving gospel and stand by silently watching people go headlong into an eternal hell. It would be altogether wicked for a man to stand with a life-belt under his arm and watch people drown in front of his eyes.

The wicked, cunning, foul, devil has lulled us to sleep hugging our doctrines to our bosom, like a child lying in bed cuddling her favourite doll. There are thousands of so-called Pentecostals who have never witnessed to a single soul in the last six days. Are YOU in that sad category? Even worse, some churches which call themselves Pentecostal have not seen a soul saved during the last six months! Is your church in this sad category? Sunday after Sunday night your pastor preaches a good gospel sermon, yet the combined efforts of the entire congregation seldom see half a dozen sinners present to hear his message. What an indictment this is, but worse, nothing is being done about it. Action speaks louder than words. I challenge YOU personally to go alone somewhere and drop down on your knees, and spread this article before God asking the Lord Jesus Christ to give you such a baptism in the Holy Ghost that you will rise up from your room and within ten hours speak to someone about their soul. Face this direct challenge. The hour in which we live demands action as well as unction. Paul said, "It is high time to awake out of sleep", after giving twelve chapters of excellent doctrine to the Church at Rome. The Ephesian Church was in good shape doctrinally, but in chapter 5 of the Epistle we read, "Awake, thou that sleepest". Later John was told to write to them: "Thou hast left thy first love. Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent". These Pentecostals were told to repent, not because of sinfulness, but because of slothfulness. If you have left your first love, this message comes directly to you from the One who still bears the love-marks received on Calvary. He suffered because He loved sinners and He has given to us the responsibility of telling people their true position and how they can get right with God. How can we possibly hope to hold our heads up when we stand before the Judgment Seat of Christ knowing that we have not used the one talent which was given to us? You remember what happened to the slothful servant who did nothing with the one talent which was given to him.

Our Southport
Church

There are areas where the Pentecostal Movement is sweeping forward like a prairie fire, but it is equally true that there are areas where it is not doing so. The Holy Spirit is still well able to do a mighty work in these modern days. The power of the Holy Spirit has not diminished. Why are there areas where Pentecostal people and Pentecostal churches are not seeing a forward move? Has the cancer of affluence eaten its way into our prayer lives? Do we hunger for more of God or more of television? Has our private Bible-reading shrunk to pecking a crumb from a promise box or reading a paragraph from "The Daily So-and-

So"? Are our meetings full of faith and fire? Are vibrant meetings when you hear splendid hallelujahs a thing of the past? Has the fire in our individual lives so diminished that we seldom get enough steam up to shout a glorious "Praise the Lord"? No-one is blessed by empty noise, but many will be blessed when the Holy Spirit falls on a meeting and people express their praises to the Lord.

The fire of the Lord will never fall on an empty altar. Dedication is a pre-requisite to a true outpouring of Holy Ghost power. It is easy to put a finger on the basic reasons why the Pentecostal Movement is not making glorious inroads in certain places. If our spiritual zeal is dying, it does not need any special study in depth to explain what is wrong. Half an hour on our knees in audible prayer will soon set us on the right road. Show me the church which will spend time in fervent prayer followed by personal witnessing to the lost and I will show you a people who will soon be in glorious revival.

I plead with you again to go alone and spread this article before the Lord and cry to God with passionate prayer until Holy Ghost power sweeps over your broken spirit. Then rise and, with all wisdom, witness to someone this week. Invite them to come with you to your church next Sunday. You will soon know power from on high as you keep on doing these very things.

FIGHT EVIL

WITH A WILL!

Do not leave the distribution of your estate to chance. Here are some reasons why you should make a will:

1. It prevents misunderstanding over your intentions about your estate.
2. It provides opportunity for you to continue to exercise Christian stewardship.
3. It helps to avoid heavy expenses, which can sometimes drain away valuable assets.
4. It gives you opportunity to designate who shall benefit from your possessions.

You can show your gratitude for blessings received and also continue the fight against evil by making a gift to the Elim work in your will.

The following wording can be incorporated in a will or codicil:

I bequeath to the Elim Pentecostal Church, of 117 St. George's Road, Cheltenham, Glos, the sum of £ free of duty for the general purpose of its work; and I declare that the receipt of the Secretary-General for the time being shall be a good discharge for the said legacy.

Is it not better to know that your possessions will be used for the Lord's work rather than be spent by those who have never honoured or revered His name?

The Baptism in the Holy Ghost

by I. G. Clarke,
Pastor of our Clydebank Church

WE live in the age of demonstration. We are told that it does not matter what we believe, as long as there is demonstration. Many are saying, and particularly those who are associated with unorganised companies, that experimental manifestations are everything and doctrinal standards are nothing. It is said that what are required are demonstrations of supernatural power and fellowship with all professing Christians, regardless of personal beliefs. As long as a man or woman speaks in tongues or prophesies, it matters not if their doctrines come from the pit of hell.

I believe that many speak in tongues who are not baptised in the Holy Ghost. Jesus said, "Many will say to Me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name? and in Thy name have cast out devils? and in Thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from Me, ye that work iniquity" (Matthew 7: 22,23). We must be careful that we do not embrace workers of iniquity because we hear them speak in an unknown tongue. We must first ask them to state their doctrine. Not every supernatural manifestation can be described as a divine manifestation. The Bible is quite clear that in the last days there would be lying miracles (Matthew 24:24,25; 2 Thessalonians 2:9; Revelation 13:13,14, etc.).

No matter what manifestation is taking place, if it is not found in God's Word then I will have nothing to do with it. God never goes outside the teachings of His own Word. He has given there the plan for Pentecostal behaviour and, if we abide by the Word, there will be no confusion, but a glorious harmony. The people of God will know the presence, power and prosperity of God.

Some Christian folk who say that they have received the baptism in the Holy Ghost evidence a lack of Bible knowledge regarding the work, function and person of the Holy Spirit. I heard a person say that a man or woman could know nothing about the Holy Ghost until he or she was baptised in the Holy Ghost. This is not true nor is it based on Scripture. The Holy Spirit was not brought into the plans of God for the Church period only. The Holy Spirit was involved in the work of creation (Genesis 1:2). In the beginning the Holy Spirit was involved in the work of convicting men of sin (Genesis 6:3). From the time of the fall, the Holy Ghost has been striving with man. In the Old Testament it is recorded that the Holy Ghost came upon certain folk to enable them to perform special functions but He did not come to abide then. "The Spirit of the Lord came upon Gideon" (Judges 6:34). Gideon had a special task to perform and God gave to him special power. Of Saul, 1 Samuel 10:10 says, "And the Spirit of God came upon him, and he prophesied among them". Later, the Spirit of the Lord left him. Samson, that mighty man of God upon whom the Spirit came many times, knew the movings of the Holy Ghost, but later on we read, "He wist not that the Lord had left him". David the psalmist knew the unction of the Holy Ghost: "The Spirit of the Lord spake by me and His word was in my tongue". He also knew of the possibility of God withdrawing His Spirit, for we read, "Cast me not away from Thy presence and take not the Holy Spirit away from me" (Psalm 51). The Holy Spirit is not someone whom God the Father has recently taken into fellowship and partnership. The Holy Spirit is co-equal and co-eternal with God the Father and with God the Son.

The New Testament teaching is that He who once came upon, has now come to abide. He is God in the hearts of His people. He is the spiritual presence of Jesus Christ with His people. Jesus said, "I will pray the Father, and He shall send you another Comforter that He may abide with you for ever". At Pentecost a new day dawned. The Spirit of God became a free gift to all who are prepared to meet two conditions.

The first condition for a genuine baptism in the Holy Ghost is conversion (Acts 2:38,39). Only those who have repented of their sins and have turned to the Lord Jesus for salvation, who have experienced the cleansing blood of the Lord Jesus can receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

The second condition is obedience (Acts 5:32). The result of true conversion will be willingness to obey the Word of God. If you belong to a group that denies Scriptural truths, then, in obedience to God's Word, you will be quick to leave their fellowship. If a Church preaches that salvation is in Mary and Christ, if it teaches that the means of grace is in the church, you will know that this is not Bible teaching and you will be quick to obey the Word of God which declares, "Come ye out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you". Separation in Scripture is twofold: separation from whatever is contrary to the mind of God, and separation unto God Himself. If you are fulfilling these conditions and yet you have not yet received the baptism in the Spirit, I encourage you to pray on. He whom you seek will come suddenly into His temple.

What effect should the Holy Spirit have in our lives? We are certainly not baptised so that we might speak in tongues more than anyone else, excel in prophecy, cast out demons, or heal the sick. The gifts of the Spirit are not to be confused with the person of the Holy Spirit. If you give your child a gift, your child will know the difference between the parent and the gift given by the parent. When you receive the baptism you should receive light on the Scriptures (John 14:26; 16:13). In Acts 2 we have an amazing sermon delivered by Peter, which reveals a wonderful linking of Old Testament Scriptures. Of himself Peter could not have delivered this. The Holy Spirit had illuminated the sacred page.

When you are baptised in the Holy Ghost you should have liberty in speech (Acts 2:14). Not very long before Peter denied Christ, but now he charged the Jewish nation with the death of Christ. The same disciples who had forsaken Him now declared the wonders of God in Christ Jesus without fear or favour. The Holy Spirit had come to abide. When commanded to cease preaching the apostles declared, "We cannot but speak the things we have seen and heard". The whole world must know that Jesus is the Christ, the Saviour of the world.

There is also power for service (Acts 4:33). The tragedy of many an assembly is that many seem to be baptised in gifts and not in power. I have known of assemblies where the gifts are in use at most meetings, but there has been little progress. They possess all the gifts, but lack the oil of blessing. They speak much in unknown tongues, but have no power to speak in their own language a word for Jesus Christ to those who are without God and without hope. Jesus said, "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you", and with this power Jesus said "Ye shall be My witnesses".

The need of the hour is for Holy Ghost people living Holy Ghost lives. There should be a contrast between the Church and the world. The saved are living like the unsaved. There is no outstanding, commanding difference. We do not bear sufficiently God's name upon our foreheads. We are living as did men before the coming of the Holy Ghost. Let us retrace our steps. Back to Jerusalem we must go and tarry there until we be endued with the genuine baptism in the Holy Ghost.

When a person is baptised in the Holy Spirit, he has a love for the Saviour. The Holy Spirit reveals Jesus to us and thus induces love from us. How can we love Someone whom we have never seen? "We love Him because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us". A baptised Christian is taken up completely with Jesus Christ.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

WHEN Jesus hung on the cross at Calvary, He uttered what we have come to know as the seven words from the cross. The first was one of forgiveness for those who had nailed Him to the tree. When was that prayer answered? Was there first an immediate answer, then later a greater one?

It is remarkable that on the day of Pentecost 3,000 were converted and shortly afterwards another five thousand came to Christ through the preaching of the Word. Strangely, in the Book of Acts we are not given any more great numbers of converts. Converts there were, and a few individual ones are recorded, but never again are great numbers mentioned. Under Paul's ministry large churches were established, but no numbers of converts are given. Is it that in the large numbers given in the Acts of the Apostles God was answering the prayer of forgiveness by His Son and forgiving in a great way?

God loves to answer our prayers in a big way. He is always giving in an abundance. Do we limit God by not asking for great things? Is our faith so small that we can ask only for little things? I heard a converted Jew say recently that God has promised to save a remnant of the Jewish people and he said, "O Lord, save a large remnant of my people". We say "Amen" to that man's desire.

The promise in Philippians 4:19 is that God will meet our need according to His riches in glory. If down here He owns the silver and the gold and the cattle on a thousand hills, what must His riches in heaven be?

Our God is rich and He will give us richly!

LONG EATON

Pastor: R.L. Currie

AT a recent Sunday evening service the Sunday school prizegiving took place and over forty scholars received prizes. Mrs. V. Saunderson, the Superintendent, and the speaker for the day, Pastor Maldwyn Jones, presented the prizes. Pastor Jones then spoke to the children and afterwards preached to a church full of members and parents. Singing was by the children (see front cover) and the Crusaders group (Lynne Bonner, Julia Williams, Joy Saunderson).

GLOUCESTER

Pastor: T.J. Broomhall

ON Mothering Sunday some women members of the church took the main part of the morning and evening services. Mrs. Niles, though only recently recovered from illness, gave a heart-stirring message. Pastor Broomhall announced the different items at the evening service, which consisted of testimonies by two of the sisters, a solo, a recitation, a united piece by the sisterhood members and the final message by Mrs. Broomhall, who took as her theme the story of the woman of Samaria. The church was well attended and a rich blessing was had by all.

Pastor J.H. Sainsbury was the preacher for Good Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Each service was well attended. Our choir sang on Friday evening, but the climax of the evening was the stirring message from Mark 15 and 16 concerning the abuse of Jesus, and His subsequent sufferings. On Saturday evening some young people from the A.O.G. gave several items, which included a quartet with the eldest daughter of the A.O.G. minister, Pastor Garner, taking the solo part. His very young daughter sang a delightful piece for the children. Another member sang a solo. Pastor Sainsbury brought a God-given message from Acts 2:1-13 on "The manifest Signs on the Day of Pentecost". On Easter Sunday one felt the pervading presence of the Holy Spirit as we worshipped, followed by communion and the message. The evening service brought to an end a soul-stirring time. One sister raised her hand for salvation.

Some members joined the Church at Cashes Green for their first bank holiday convention, John Hiscox (Swindon) being the guest preacher.

C.M. HARDWICK (Mrs.)

GRANGETOWN, Teesside

Pastor: A.L. Hawkes

OUR all-age programme prizegiving day attracted a larger congregation who enjoyed the inspiring ministry of Pastor T.W. Walker at both morning and evening services. Prizes were awarded to members who had put in the highest attendance. They were presented by Pastor Walker.

As this Sunday was also Mothering Sunday all the mothers in the congregation were asked to sing together before receiving a special gift to take home. The day was rounded off with slides of the work in Ghana, revealing how very much our prayers are needed for the missionary work there.

7. Living in Love

LOVE is a big business today. If "love makes the world go round", it is especially so in the financial world. The spectrum is vast, ranging from the sordid to the sublime, but the key word is love. It sells everything from frozen foods to fashion wear, from cars to candy bars. Perverted, puerile, painful, pitiful, it provides the novelist's staple diet and the movie-maker's box-office success.

Poets and preachers have praised love's powers and lamented its prostitution. At its best it makes man like the Deity and at its worst it makes him like a demon. Solomon extolled its virtues: "Love is strong as death. . . Many waters cannot quench love, neither can floods drown it. If a man offered for love all the wealth of his house, it would be utterly scorned" (Canticles 8:6, 7).

Love lies at the very heart of Christianity. "God is love", declared John. "In this the love of God was made manifest among us, that God sent his only Son into the world, so that we might live through Him" (1 John 4:8, 9). Take love out of Christianity and nothing is left. This love has both vertical and horizontal aspects — verticle between God and man, and horizontal between man and man.

God and Man

"We love Him", wrote John, because He first loved us" (1 John 4:19). Loving began with God. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish but have eternal life" (John 3:16). The realisation of this love has often overwhelmed the hearts of sinful men. David Wilkerson's repeated assertion: "God loves you", broke down the bitterness in the heart of the vicious gangleader, Nicky Cruz.

God's love for us produces a loving response from us. We may fear God, revere Him, obey Him, even worship Him, but, until we are aware of His love for us, we cannot love Him. The great commandment that we should love God supremely can best be fulfilled by those who have visited Calvary and there have seen the greatest demonstration of love in the death of Christ. "This is how we know what love is: Christ gave his life for us" (1 John 3:16, TEV).

As the lover seeks the pleasing of his beloved, so the Christian should seek to please God by loving obedience. "If you love Me", said Jesus, "you will keep My commandments" (John 14:15). This loving relationship issues in holy living, which in turn finds its clearest expression in love for our fellows.

Man and Man

"Love is the badge by which Christ's disciples may be recognised", declared C.E.B. Cranfield. Jesus said, "By this all men will know that you are My disciples, if you have love for one another" (John 13:35). It may be possible to be Christians and not show love to others, but we can only be recognised as such IF we are loving. Instead of excelling in love, too many Christians excel in disguising themselves behind a loveless mask. This is the real puzzle: how can a man love an invisible God yet not love his fellow-man (1 John 4:20)?

Our loving and knowing God enable us to love others. Conscious as we are that we did not earn God's love first of all, we cannot expect our fellows to earn our love, if we are to love as God does. Thus Paul exhorted the believers: "Walk in love, as Christ loved us and gave Himself up for us" (Ephesians 5:2). That is true, God-like love — love of the undeserving. We have received it ourselves, let us show it to others by actively seeking their benefit through concern and compassion.

Nearly!

IN the B.B.C. "Bible Brain of Britain" contest, Arthur Campbell was in the last eight. Each finalist was asked four questions, with four points given for correct answers. Some were easy, others were harder. The winner had four easy questions. "Mine", says Uncle Arthur, "were different: two easy, two harder. I answered correctly the dimensions of Noah's ark, but, when asked what David did with the head of Goliath and where was it taken, the reply that it was taken to King Saul in the valley of Elah was not sufficient, and two points only were given—14 out of 16, so I failed to qualify for final by one mark!"

Thoughts on Pentecost

"STAY in the city until you are clothed with power from on high" (Luke 24:49).

"Wait until you are clothed with power! Clothed! That is a vivid verb. The Greek word for clothing is enduma, a term from which we get our English word endue. So there is no wonder that the translators of the King James' version took advantage of this linguistic link and rendered the text 'Tarry. . . until ye be endued with power'. But the word clothed is stronger, more striking. 'Stay. . . until you are clothed with power'". Ian Macpherson.

"To be baptised with the Spirit is to be immersed in the transforming life of God" John Gunstone.

"I will not leave you comfortless,"
But if I go away,
Will send the Holy Comforter,
Your Royal Guest for evermore,
Abiding day by day.

God's skies are full of Pentecosts,
For you, for me, for all:
Then let us humbly, boldly press,
Our heritage in Christ possess,
That power from heaven may fall.

C.H.Morris.

"The Holy Spirit must have pre-eminence. He handles all our affairs. The early teachers did not wait for a period of years until the young converts had been thoroughly disheartened and demoralised by disappointment and failure. They taught straightaway the overcoming victorious life through the fulness of the Holy Spirit" Corrie Ten Boom.

Come, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire
And lighten with celestial fire.
Thou the anointing Spirit art,
Who dost Thy nine-fold gifts impart.
Thy blessed unction from above
Is comfort, life and fire of love.
Enable with perpetual light
The dullness of our blinded sight,
Anoint and cheer our soiled face
With the abundance of Thy grace.

Keep far our foes, give peace at home:
When Thou art guide, no ill can come.
Teach us to know the Father, Son,
And Thee, of both, to be but One;
That, through the ages all along,
This may be our endless song:
Praise to Thy eternal merit;
Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

Bishop J. Cosins: Creator Spiritus

"Never once in the book of Acts does St. Luke suggest that his story was the story of men who having received the command of Christ to 'go and make disciples of all men', set out to obey it. . . St. Luke fixes our attention, not upon an external voice, but upon an internal Spirit. This manner of command is peculiar to the Gospel. Others direct from without, Christ directs from within; others order, Christ inspires; others speak external words, Christ gives the Spirit who desires and strives for that which He commands; others administer a dead letter, Christ imparts life. This is the manner of command in St. Luke's writings. He speaks not of men, who, being what they were, strove to obey the last orders of a beloved Master, but of men who, receiving the Spirit, were driven by that Spirit to act in accordance with the nature of that Spirit" Roland Allen.

"But you shall receive power-ability, efficiency and might-when the Holy Spirit has come upon you; and you shall be My witnesses in Jerusalem and all Judaea and Samaria and to the ends - the very bounds - of the earth" (Acts 1:8, Amp.).

Let the Spirit of our Head
On all the members rest;
From Thyself to us proceed,
And dwell in every breast;
Teach to judge and act aright,
Inspire with wisdom from above,
Holy faith and heavenly might
And reverential love.

C. Wesley.

Committed to World Revolution

by David G. Woodfield,
Pastor of our Selly Oak Church, Birmingham

A UNIVERSITY student in Moscow told a Christian visitor, "You Christians say that you are going to win the world, but we've done more in fifty years than you've done in two thousand! And do you know why? It is because you are uncommitted. We are. We will win; you see."

In Red China hordes of young people revere an old man. They sing that he is their helmsman on the sea of life. They fight for him and are ready to die for him. They love and worship him. He is ever with them in the form of a little red book. Mao Tse Tung is their first waking thought and their last thought at night.

A young left-wing radical wrote a love letter to his girl-friend. In it he declared: "There is one thing about which I am in earnest and that is the radical cause. It is my life, my business, my religion, my sweetheart, my bread and my meat. I have already been in prison for my ideals and I am ready to go before a firing squad if necessary".

Dedicated young people are rising up all over this country. Young people, tired of the drop out scene with its illicit sex and easy drugs, are cleaning up their lives and turning instead to spiritual issues. They are willing to spend hours in training. They are willing to be reviled and ridiculed for their beliefs. They are willing to give up good jobs and future ambitions in order to devote their whole time to evangelism. They are willing to renounce everything that they once thought important in order to fulfil the burning passion of their lives.

How sad, therefore, to have to report that sometimes the children of darkness set us an example in zeal and enthusiasm. The people referred to in the last paragraph have not turned to Jesus, but are following false prophets.

David "Moses" Berg is a false prophet. You'll find that the Children of God know exactly what they are talking about. They have spent hours in training and preparation. They know their Bibles and will quote chapter and verse with great ease.

Joseph Smith (not ours!) is another false prophet. The two smiling fellows on your doorstep will be very convincing. They have given up two years of their lives and paid all their expenses to come to this land as missionaries. They mean business.

Hare Krishna is long dead. His disciples are very much alive. They are dedicated. You have to be to belong to them. They live austere, ascetic lives and spend hours every day in deep contemplation on the jewel in the heart of the lotus.

The chubby little Indian boy might be a bit of a laugh to us, but his followers are in deadly earnest. His disciples live good, moral lives and many claim to have been delivered from perversion and addiction. He has many intellectuals among his following. They have seen the light and are dedicated. The Guru Maharaj Ji is another false prophet.

All around us the followers of Anti-Christ are masing for the final conflict. They are ready and they are committed to world domination. They are not fooling. We can question their beliefs and their motives, but we certainly cannot question their sincerity and total involvement.

All around us, too, the Spirit of God is working. This Whitsuntide remember that now is the time to work for Jesus. Tomorrow may be too late. Christian young people, we have a great heritage. For two thousand years Jesus revolutionaries have been committed to living, speaking, working and dying for Jesus. Now it's our turn. If we don't reach our generation for Christ then there are plenty of other young people who will reach it for Anti-Christ.

For God's sake and a lost world's sake. . . we must work now, while it is day, for the night is coming when no man can work. Jesus is coming and I want to be committed and totally involved in His work when at last I meet Him.

I'm sure you do, too!

Notes
by Peter Watson

Monday, June 3rd

Acts 2:14-21

"But Peter, standing up. . . said" (v.14).

FROM coward to hero is the story of Peter. If ever proof were needed of the influence that the indwelling Spirit has on a man's life, it is here. Look at this man in Luke 22: unsteady, impulsive, fearful, cowardly, well-meaning, but lacking in moral courage. Here we have the same man, revolutionised, confident, bold, courageous, forcing home unpleasant, damning truths with almost magic eloquence and reasoning. How could we explain the transformation in this man, apart from Pentecost? This is precisely the work of the Holy Spirit — to revolutionise and make us fit for and equal to the task that being Christians brings. "Have you received the Holy Ghost since you believed?" (Acts 19:2).

Tuesday, June 4th

Acts 2:22-36

"God hath made Jesus. . . both Lord and Christ" (v.36).

THIS portion continues Peter's defence of the happenings of that day (vv.7-11) and the events leading to them. Calling on the prophecies of David (Psalm 16:8-11), he reasons of the necessity of the cross and the resurrection, and that this same Jesus whom they had crucified was the chosen of God to fulfill His purposes of redemption for mankind. In this powerful address, Peter acts on a principle which he himself later gives in his Epistle: "Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you" (1 Peter 3:15).

Wednesday, June 5th

Acts 2:37-47

"They continued stedfastly. . . in prayers" (v.42).

A COLOURED woman was asked by her master why she and her Christian friends always prayed together and why they could not each do it at home. They were standing by a coal fire at the time and her reply was: "Sir, separate these coals from each other and the fire will die, but see how bright they burn when together". There is great power and blessedness in the united prayers of God's people, a vital element in the Early Church that contributed much to its progress. Make the prayer meeting a priority in your life. It will kindle the flame in our lives and in the Church.

Thursday, June 6th

Acts 3:1-10

"Such as I have give I thee" (v.6).

THE apostle's response to the needs of the lame man reminds us of the obligations of those who possess the good things of God. Someone said, "What I have I give" should be the law for all Christians in regard to all that they have, and specially in regard to spiritual riches". What God told Abram illustrates His methods with men: "I will bless thee. . . and thou shalt be a blessing" (Genesis 12:2). No man is ever blessed for his own sake. God looks beyond us to those around us. Like Peter in our reading, God wants us to be channels to needy souls and bodies. To bless others is an essential part of the character of God; may it be seen in us, too.

Friday, June 7th

Acts 3:11-26

"Repent ye. . . that your sins may be blotted out" (v.19).

PETER reminds us of this vital part of the gospel; there is no salvation without it. Throughout the New Testament repentance strikes a clear note. It is the declared mission of Christ (Matthew 9:13) and the divine message of our Lord (Luke 13:3). It lay behind his leaving Glory and embracing poverty and death. From His exalted position He proclaims this message to five Churches in Revelation 2,3. Peter here takes up this message as the pre-requisite of anything worthwhile, for it is the first step to God. It must precede faith and it must bear fruit (Matthew 3:8). It is sorely needed today.

Saturday, June 8th

Acts 4:1-22

"They marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus" (v.13).

WELL might they marvel! Unlearned, ignorant fishermen who knew little of rabbinical wisdom were facing a formidable tribunal of rulers, elders, the high priest and the scribes, yet they were perfectly at ease and unembarrassed, speaking easily and confidently in the power of the Holy Spirit. It evoked from their enemies a testimony to a glorious truth: the powerful, transforming influence of Jesus on souls that are much in contact with Him. We do well to take time to be with Jesus for it is the secret of a Christlike spirit and of a ministry that leaves its mark.

Sunday, June 9th

Acts 4:23-37

"And being let go. . . they lifted up their voice to God" (vv. 23,24).

HERE we have the reaction of the infant Church to her first real persecution. Hastening to their own company and making report of all that had happened, they brought the whole matter before God. There was no panic, no long conference to make plans to repay threats with threats, no thoughts of vengeance at all. The Church's power and victory lay with God. They knew it and so with one heart and voice they turned to Him. If only we could grasp the fact that prayer is the mightiest weapon that the Church has!

Editorial

NORTHERN IRELAND has figured in our Editorials from time to time and rightly so. If there was ever a time when our colleagues there needed our sympathy, understanding and prayers, that time is now. Many believe that the vast majority of the Protestant community in the Province feel that they have been asked to concede too much. From this side of the Irish Sea it seems that they have been moved to recent action because they sense that they were being led, perhaps even trapped, into what they would regard as compromise.

The government of Eire have publicly blamed I.R.A. violence as mainly responsible for the breakdown of the moves towards the implementation of the so-called Sunningdale agreement between their government, the then U.K. government and the Northern Ireland delegation, which, we believe, did not include the leaders of Protestant opinion opposed to the line taken by Mr. Brian Faulkner.

It is no part of our mandate to comment on the political aspects, but I feel that I must make a point which I have noted several times over the past four years, namely that all this is happening to our kith and kin. I have said after visiting Ulster on several occasions that, if what I had seen there had happened in Bristol, Birmingham, Glasgow or London, there would have been a tremendous outcry and something would have been done about it. I hold to this view.

Again without commenting on the political issues, may it be added that among those who are described by the media as "extremists" are many Bible-believing, Bible-loving, born-again Christians. Beware of the many innuendoes and slants of the newsmongers.

Many in Ulster say repeatedly and rightly that the final answer to the situation is a spiritual one. The whole United Kingdom needs a move of God.

I understand that the committee concerned in the Newport, Mon. area viewed the infamous film "The Exorcist" and agreed to its being shown locally, it being reported that they saw no harm in it. We hear that seventeen people who saw the film required medical, even hospital, help afterwards. Such unhappy results have accrued elsewhere also. When will they learn not to touch "the unclean thing"?

Converted two years ago in an after-church rally when evangelist Don Summers was the speaker, these Presbyterian youngsters have since been used of the Lord to bring over thirty young people to Christ. Our picture shows the Pastor, Ray Hughes, about to baptise Angela.

Easter Anthology stirs thousands

THE Easter programme presented by the London Crusader Choir, directed by Pastor Douglas B. Gray, commenced with a visit to our Aldershot Church, where a fine, responsive congregation were warmly welcomed by Pastor Mervyn J. Tilley. The Choir contributed a wide variety of gospel songs and included separate renditions by the male section and the ladies' chorus. Guest musician was Godfrey Lewis, a Salvationist musician of the R.A.M.C. Band.

Good Friday again saw the Choir entering the grim gates of Wandsworth prison at 9 a.m. The prison chapel was full almost to capacity. The attention and respect shown to the presentation on the theme of the cross was outstanding, as was the singing of such sacred messages by the men themselves. The same evening, the choir presented another Good Friday anthology at Duke Street Baptist Church, Richmond. Sir Eric Richardson introduced the choir and the guest speaker, Norman Anderson, Q.C.

As for the past forty-five years on Elim's great family day at the Royal Albert Hall the London Crusader Choir were in their usual places leading the stirring ministry of the massed choirs, as well as presenting their solo contributions. Five days later, the Choir were back again in the Royal Albert Hall, the ladies' section being the guest choir at the twenty-fourth annual London Festival of Male Voice Praise. Their singing thrilled the thousands present. During this epic meeting an unusual diversion in the programme took place. Rev. A.J. Matthews (President of the London Festivals of Male Voice) called Douglas B. Gray to the rostrum to receive on behalf of the President, officers and over 500 choirmen, a gift in acknowledgement of his twenty-four years of dedicated gifted leadership as Music Director and Conductor-in-Chief of the Movement. Following a great ovation from the thousands present, Mr. Gray replied in his own relaxed manner, stressing that whatever might have been accomplished was not the work of a man, but the result of the dedication and loyal co-operation of a great team of leaders and choirmen fulfilling the vision of manly praise.

LETCWORTH

Pastor: G.S. Hillman

A VERY happy Sisterhood anniversary was enjoyed. Our guest speaker was Mrs. F.F. Frost, wife of the Pastor of our Ealing Church. We commenced with the hymn, "To God be the glory", after which Mrs.

Bugden led in prayer. Mrs. Frost read Philippians 2:1-13, followed by a solo, "Love's mighty Ocean" by Mrs. A.P. Thomas. Our Sisterhood secretary, Mrs M. Goodwin, read the roll call. Twenty-two churches were represented. The church was packed to capacity, 270 being there. We had to borrow several chairs and some china. We were grateful for such a sunny day. After the roll call we had a chorus session, then followed Mrs. Thomas's second solo, "Be still, my Soul", after which Mrs. Frost's message came, exalting the name of Jesus.

Our President, Mrs. Hillman, chaired the meeting which ended all too soon. After our final hymn, Pastor C. Whittaker of Luton A.O.G. closed in prayer. We sat on, and enjoyed a very good tea. One of the bright spots of all our sisterhood anniversary meetings is the exquisite floral display, which never fails to please, the handiwork of our missionary secretary, Miss Maud Sable.

OTLEY

Pastor: M.R. Hodson

BEING moved in his heart towards the little town of Otley, nesting in the Wharfedale valley of Yorkshire, an Elim minister went, in Spring 1970, to look over the area with a view to conducting an evangelistic crusade and opening a work for God. The proposed campaign did not materialise in 1970, nor has it done so to this day.

Later that year, however, there came the invitation to address a house meeting that was being formed by some Christians who were eager for a closer walk with God. That first meeting, when we talked about "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday and today and for ever" was the beginning of the work which stands today. Soon the newly-formed fellowship was meeting every Friday for united study of the Word of God. As the numbers increased it became increasingly difficult to accommodate the people within the confines of a front room.

Within about three months a nucleus had decided that they wanted to form a church under the banner of Elim and under the leadership of the Pastor, C.E. Lamb, who was conducting the regular weekly house meetings. It was felt that new opportunities for outreach and witness should be sought and that an early step in this direction was to seek accommodation where regular services could be continued.

In due course estate agents advised that accommodation was being vacated in a modern office building in the centre of town and following the normal formalities a lease was undertaken, so another of Elim's baby churches came into being in November, 1971. Friends were admitted into membership and, following a visit from the Field Superintendent, the church was formally accepted into the Elim family by the Annual Conference at Blackpool in May, 1972.

Following Conference, at Whitsuntide, it was a joy to be aware that God was at work in our midst. During a time of united rededication to the Lord in the prayer meeting prior to Whit Sunday, the Pastor's young son (then ten years of age) was baptised in the Holy Ghost and praised and magnified the Lord in other tongues as the Spirit gave utterance. On Whit Sunday evening the subject was, of course, "Pentecost". Invitations were given to those desiring to be baptised in the Holy Ghost to remain behind after the service to seek the Lord for this precious infilling. Before the after meeting closed, a further seven had entered into this new, glorious experience, a true Pentecost indeed for the infant Church in Otley!

The first service for baptism in water had been held in April in conjunction with our Bradford Church and members and friends gave joyful testimony of their experience in Christ. A second baptismal service was planned to be conducted in September and this was of particular pleasure and significance to the Pastor who had the joy of baptising his father and his son in the same service, the three generations being in the baptism together.

The church's first anniversary in November, 1972 was a happy occasion with Pastor's N.G.N. Miller and P. Smith (Rotherham) sharing ministry during the special week-end. The Church Secretary, Mr. G. Pullan, presented a stainless steel tea service to the Pastor and his wife as a token of love from the Church.

Throughout the winter regular monthly film rallies were conducted in the Civic Centre, Otley and it has been a joy to see some dozen or more people respond to the gospel invitation in these rallies.

The Church hopes, eventually, to acquire its own building and already, by the goodness and faithfulness of God, has a well-established building fund. On February 16th last, M.R. Hodson succeeded to the pastorate. The long-awaited crusade is now planned for September.

The prayerful support of our Elim family is requested for this new work within our fellowship.

Reports and impressions of the Easter Conventions at the Elim Mission, Inyanga North, Rhodesia

THERE has been much improvement in our churches this year. This was the second time that we had run our convention, supported by the local churches, without the help of the missionaries. We collected $ 51.00 and four bags of mealie-meal and we managed to buy an ox worth $ 32.00. Over 500 people attended, including a few from the Penhalonga Churches. The meetings were thrilling and our speakers delivered wonderful sermons. Baba Renshaw spoke very strongly on the responsibilities of the local churches. He said that he will be very glad to see churches stand by themselves. I personally enjoyed the outlining of the aim of the Elim Movement. I think that most people were touched by the outlining of these aims.

(Pastor) E.K. Satuku, Elim Church, Kambudzi

THIS was the most thrilling of all the meetings of the past years. Gathered together were all the Elim churches surrounding the main centre, Elim Mission, Inyanga North. Some of the churches which sent members were Penhalonga, Bande, Sanhani, Chifambe, Mbiriyadi and Chiwarira. They met with people from Manjana (the mission church) in prayer and singing the praises of our risen Lord.

Mr. Renshaw preached on the crucifixion. Prayers from the congregation always made it clear how pleased with the Word the people had been. The other preachers were Mr. Griffiths, Mr. Satuku, Mr. McCann and Mr. Maunga. Their main theme was the resurrection of Christ and His willingness to shed His blood.

Sunday morning brought the news that two Christians were murdered in cold blood in the troubled area of N.E. Rhodesia. The Christians at the meeting showed their faith by declaring that it did not worry them much as they knew that the dead were in the hands of the Lord. Testimonies were given at each meeting. Not only were the adults given the gift of knowing God's intentions towards us, as one of our teachers, Mrs. Renshaw, played an important part in teaching the ways of God with pictures. Churches were instructed on how to look after the flock. Throughout the meetings, the physical needs of the people were supplied in the best way. Above all, they went home with their spiritual needs supplied and their spiritual problems solved. They promised to preach to everyone at home about the risen Saviour and His mercy. We who stayed, remained happily, quite sure that the Church of Christ will continue to grow as the Spirit of God continues to abide in the hearts of every Christian.

Marck Mika, Form 4 student,
Emmanuel Secondary School

ON every occasion you get surprised to hear people talk of new ideas and new changes that the world brings to them. Is God's Word too fashioned for young and old to listen to? We had a wonderful, blessed time meeting with Christians at Elim Mission, Inyanga North. Many people came from the churches in Inyanga North and Penhalonga during Easter. The Lord's call is wonderful, even many people who did not know Christ came to listen to the Word of God.

Many responded to Christ's death on the cross and why He had to suffer on their behalf. After every meeting you could hear people say, "How wonderful it is that the Word of God has been new to us again". Three meetings were held each day and people from the nearby villages came even by night to listen to the Word of God. That Christ lives again was wonderful and I think that the Spirit of God worked well with many Christians who were in the meetings. Many started witnessing for Christ and many praised Him in prayers and in singing many songs. Mrs. Renshaw had a well-prepared programme for the youngsters who enjoyed the marvellous story of Tendai, a believer in Jesus Christ. On Sunday, the Christians gathered around the Lord's table and remembered Christ's death. We thank God for the knowledge given to us of the truth revealed in God's word.

J. Madondo, Church Secretary, Manjanja, Head Teacher, Manjanja Primary School

I ENJOYED this convention very much because many groups of people took part. Some sang, some gave testimonies, and a story was given for the young children by Mai Renshaw. This story was about a small boy called Tendai. The part which pleased me was when Tendai was very sick in hospital and the medicine seemed not to have helped him, so his father went to a witch doctor for some medicine, but when he brought the medicine, Tendai refused it because he was a Christian. There was some teaching to young people on marriage by Mr. Renshaw. He said he would refuse to marry people in church if they had done wrong things before they got married. I also enjoyed the teaching of Mai Wiseman from Penhalonga to young men and women from Titus 2:1-15 on how to lead our homes in a Christian way. We heard the preaching from Mr. Maunga about the valley of dry bones and how they were made living people, also from Mr. Griffiths on the resurrection from the dead (1 Corinthians 15). We enjoyed sadza and meat and we were very happy when Mr. Renshaw joined us in eating meat, although he didn't want any sadza! Praise God, we had enough to feed our flesh and our souls!

(Mrs.) Elizabeth Katerere, nurse in the hospital, a deacon's wife

THIS weekend had been earnestly prepared for in many ways. Manjanja was to be host, so Christians contributed in many ways: mealie-meal, meat and accommodation. All the meetings made me very rich in spirit and I can't remember a time when I gained so much for my future life. Among the many topics, the ones that touched me most were on the crucifixion, tithing and death. The crucifixion of Christ really moved me — when Jesus died on the cross with nails in His flesh, bleeding, being beaten, and all the insults, but yet He died with a prayer on His lips. Praying for those who crucified Him, He really gives us confidence in life after death. In the word on tithing, I found that there are other souls who still live in darkness, who have never heard about Jesus. For those to know and receive Christ, they need preachers to reach them. We Christians should realise this and give as much as we can afford to help preachers reach the poor, lost souls. In the last sermon on death, I learned that death comes to us unknowingly and it shocks most people. Yet, as it says in the Bible, if we accept Christ into our hearts and practise Christianity, we have a hope after death. I hope we will all remember what we heard over this weekend and continue to rejoice in our Saviour's work.

(Mrs.) O. Dandawa, staff nurse, Elim Hospital

EASTER signifies the death and crucifixion of our Lord Jesus Christ which is a sad event. I do not know how other churches celebrated it, but we at Elim, knowing the joy that we gain from the cross, whether rich or poor, of every race, we celebrated it in a different style, with great joy and blessing. The services started on Friday morning with a word by Mr. Renshaw on John 19. At every service were harmonious songs. When a band of our Elim men stood in front to sing praises, it was so beautiful. In the evening, we heard from Mr. Griffiths how Jesus died on the cross. We heard His gentle voice, which showed His great love as He spoke to the thief on the cross beside Him. Miss Fisher sang a song called, "What sort of King would He be". On Saturday morning, the men went out into the villages inviting people to come to the Sunday services. On Saturday afternoon, we heard how a person who is without the Lord Jesus Christ is like the dead bones in Ezekiel 22. Mr. Maunga also sang "Across the bridge there'll be no sorrow". We had some stories about Tendai by Mrs. Renshaw. Early Sunday morning, I was awakened by a shout of praises to the risen Lord. Our Elim men were marching into the church with candle light, singing, while the women were already in the church. Later that morning, we gathered around the Communion table to thank the Lord for what He had done for us. On Sunday evening, Mr. Griffiths preached on death being as a sleep to the Christian, quoting from 1 Corinthians 15. We all felt proud of our victory in Jesus as he showed us that He rose from the dead. Thus we knew that it was because Jesus had risen that we were gathered together. So everyone had many things to praise God for and those who attended the meetings felt deep inside that they would rather have Jesus than silver or gold.

8. Living in Peace

"PEACE, perfect peace, in this dark world of sin. . . by thronging duties pressed. . . with sorrows surging round. . . with loved-ones far away. . . our future all unknown. . . death shadowing us and ours?" asked hymn-writer E. Bickersteth. For many, the quest for peace is like chasing rainbows, but, however vainly, we still seek peace. Our problem is aptly described by the Bible: "The way of peace they do not know" (Romans 3:17).

Where is peace to be found? Negotiations by statesmen and demonstrations by protestors have not brought peace to the world, nor have the ease of the indolent and the seclusion of the hermit brought peace to the heart. Before we can know that, we must know the peacemaker.

God declared: "I make peace" (Isaiah 45:7). He made peace through His Son, who bears the title, "Prince of Peace" (Isaiah 9:6) and has made "peace by the blood of his cross" (Colossians 1:20). We were enemies of God because of our evil behaviour, but the war is now over and we are reconciled to God through the death of His Son (Colossians 2:21,22). The generosity of God's pardon is such that we are immediately granted the full privileges of friendship; we are not "put on probation" to see if we are worthy.

Having peace with God, we are encouraged to "have no anxiety about anything, but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving to let our requests be made known to God. And the peace of God, which passes all understanding, will keep our hearts and minds in Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:6,7). The "last will and testament" of the Lord Jesus was a peace that would be unaffected by circumstances (John 14:27). G.H. Morrison described this indwelling peace as: "The possession of adequate resources". In God is all that we need to maintain peace.

A newly-converted prisoner recently told me: "What struck me most about real Christians was the sense of peace that they spread". Jesus declared: "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called sons of God" (Matthew 5:9). The quarrelsome Christian could hardly expect to be recognised as a child of the God of peace.

If the internal conflict is truly gone from our lives, if the rebelliousness is dissolved in the alchemy of divine pardon, then we should radiate peace. We will

by Ian R. Hall,
Pastor of our
Ryde Church

often be under pressure, but this need not cause us to lose our peace by retaliating. "If possible, so far as it depends upon you", wrote Paul, "live peaceably with all" (Romans 12:18). The secret is in finding that place of quiet stillness at the heart of the whirlwind of tumult. We must dwell deeply with God.

For the persecuted Thessalonian believers Paul prayed: "May the God of peace himself sanctify you wholly. . . may the Lord of peace Himself give you peace at all times in all ways" (1 Thessalonians 5:23; 2 Thessalonians 3:16). In these troubled days we need the same prayer to be fulfilled if we are to live in peace.

There must be more than this! by John Keith

AS I walk the open green fields and hills
And contrast them to London street
And all the smoke from yonder mills,
There must be more than this to meet.

As I stand and watch the sand and sea
And touch a lovely, budding tree,
Then my ears with bullets ring.
It is so long since we've had spring!

As I touch and feel that sheet of ice,
It makes me see that we need Christ.
Into this world He came to die;
Soon He will come. Look to the sky!

As I think and dream of that lovely day
When Christ will come in bright array,
So, my friends, there's work to be done —
We must tell others the victory's won!

President's Perspective

by George Canty

IN the area of the West of England Presbytery I have a yardstick by which to make some kind of judgment. For twelve years I was the District Superintendent here and am now seeing it again after twelve years absence.

So far it has been "surprise surprise", with a vigour, strength and spiritual eagerness better than I would have said existed if I had been asked — buildings vastly improved, church outreach organised, new freedom in the services, and a real witness to Pentecost everywhere.

One wonders what else many of these Elim folk could do to make more impact on their districts. They have had conversions and healings. The public doesn't want to know. It might be glibly easy to contrast today's Elim with the roaring successes of forty years ago (which I do remember) though I sincerely question whether the sheer hard work, enterprise and persistence such as I've witnessed this week could have been found quite so often or generally in "the old days". Pastors and people have shown a degree of sacrifice and resourcefulness over recent years which deserves far greater reward and which would have guaranteed prosperous church conditions in other places and times. One cannot calculate work and faith merely by public response. The seed is being sown, but the field is hard.

My largest congregation was, of course, in the Conference of the Assemblies of God, Minehead, where I delivered one sermon. More than 2,000 listened, some accepted Christ as Saviour, and 100 or more crowded to the front in dedication.

Some of these offered to serve the Home Missions' department for a year without salary, and they will be sent to do useful work all over the country. Our own Elim youth are no less keen, being Pentecostals, and I'm sure would often be willing to give a year to their own home assembly full-time. There is no need to rob one church to help another even, though evangelists would certainly be glad of their help.

Time would fail to detail the variety of imaginative local activities undertaken by ministers and members. This engagement with the task makes the future look somewhat brighter to me than before I began my itinerary, in the West at least.

We are blessed with a wealth of gifted and committed workers, and I can't help but appreciate it all. I take heart, and thank God who inspires His own workers.

Thoughts from the Book of Exodus

9. The divine Message and human Diplomacy (Exodus 5:1,3)

by F. Lavender,

Pastor of our Croydon Church

ON returning to Egypt, Moses and Aaron called together the elders of Israel. They told how the Lord had appeared to them and performed the signs which He had given them, and Israel rejoiced and believed the wonderful news. Encouraged by this response, Moses and Aaron went to Pharaoh and boldly declared the message of God. Pharaoh, however, rejected their demand and asked contemptuously: "Who is the Lord?". Moses and Aaron then tried to reason with Pharaoh and even presented the Lord as a terrible monster ready to visit Israel with vengeance. Pharaoh rejected their pleas and refused to listen to any entreaties and made Israel groan by increased savagery.

Moses went despondently to the Lord and asked:

"What has gone wrong?". The fault was in Moses, for it was the miraculous signs that had convinced Israel. The Lord had told Moses to perform the same signs before Pharaoh and, had he done so, Pharaoh would have been compelled to listen to him. Instead, the brothers tried to impress the king by human diplomacy and reasoning. When Moses and Aaron returned to Pharaoh and performed the signs before him the climate changed. Pharaoh still refused to let Israel go, but the oppression faded.

We are commanded to take the gospel to all people and the Lord has promised to confirm the message by miracles (Mark 16:15-18), but so often we are more concerned to try to make the gospel seem reasonable to men. The apostle Paul declared that the gospel was not proclaimed by him in enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power (1 Corinthians 2:1-5; 1 Thessalonians 1:5). We, too, should turn from human wisdom and powerless novelties and should look in simple faith to the Lord to confirm His Word, for signs and wonders leave men and women without excuse, whether or not they repent and turn to Christ.

The Stirchley Story

by Ken Smith

"THE object of my life for thirty-four years has been the work of God in Stirchley". There's prayerful, practical, devotion for you. They were the words of Mrs. E. Base; the secretary of our Stirchley Church, Birmingham, at the opening service when speaking of the years of patient waiting, witnessing, and working for the Lord in the area. What an inspiration and a thrill it was to attend the day's celebrations, but I could not help realise that, behind it all, as in every endeavour for the Lord, was much sacrifice and prayer. "Great things often hinge on a very small thing" she added, and mentioned the remark made to her years ago that a young man had started the work in the fire station. It was in the main a children's work, but a regular meeting was later commenced. Their venues have included a Methodist church, Salvation Army premises, and the local Quaker hall. Commencing with four people, the work struggled on for years. They went after every building that came on the market, including shops, garages, and all.

Mrs. Base told of one man whom she approached who "simply laughed at me", for "land's too precious and too dear" he said, but she remembered to send him an invitation to the opening. I wonder if he came! She told of how they were "thrown out" of the Institute (now the Elim Pentecostal Church in Stirchley) by the caretaker, who gave them the smallest room that he could find in the building. This building, in my experience, has the greatest accommodation area in any Elim assembly.

I was glad to learn that the Sunday school is increasing. An all-age Christian education programme has commenced. Having as their minister, Pastor J.B. Coleman, who is in the teaching profession will prove a great help. He certainly is highly spoken of by his people and how nice it is to hear of the mutual love and appreciation of each other, especially when you know that he hails from Stirchley. In this cause it is not true that "a prophet is not without honour, save in his own country". "Pastor John Coleman is God's man for this place" sounded like music in my ears!

I liked the poem that Mr. Sam Lacey, one of the original four, compiled for the celebrations. What it lacked in literary style was more than compensated for by it's homely, spiritual, touch. Another brother told me of rum bottles, "fag ends", and rubbish that they cleared out of the place. It was refreshing to hear the treasurer say: "It's wonderful how the Lord is meeting all our needs", without recourse to any fund-raising efforts, of course.

I have reservations about inviting local dignitaries to speak, though I would certainly invite them to hear the service, especially the gospel, but Stirchley had the local Member of Parliament, and Justice of the Peace, to add "weight" to the opening. A good sprinkling of local clergy were there, too. It was evident that John Coleman had worked hard to foster good relations within the community. As long as one keeps one's testimony and convictions, this can be useful, and I am sure that he will. Pastor Jack Osman, known to so many in the Birmingham area, opened the Church, and his delight was obvious, for it was the first Elim Church he had ever opened.

I was glad to hear Pastor R.J. Morrison, District Superintendent, make the plea that other Elim churches ought to be opened in the Birmingham district. Stirchley is a pointer in the right direction. Credit for the work must be given especially to Pastor and Mrs. Coleman and to the faithful four who kept the vision through many weary days; but to Him be given all the glory.

Good gardeners know of propagation by division and this is certainly a good example of its spiritual application.

Sharing Jesus

Words and drawing by Ruth Todd

IN the big, green forest, the squirrels were preparing for winter. They collected all the nuts that they could find and hid them. Then, when the cold months of winter came and there were no nuts on the trees, they would have some stored away and would not go hungry.

There was one big, grey squirrel who collected more than anyone else. He was greedy and selfish and hid his nuts in a hollow tree next to his house. He pushed the smaller squirrels away and took the nuts that they wanted.

That year winter was early. The snow fell thickly and the squirrels could not collect any more nuts. They had to rely on their winter stores. Some squirrels had been unable to collect many nuts and so went hungry.

One day the wise owl came to the big, grey squirrel and said, "There are many squirrels who are ill and hungry. Please will you spare some of your nuts for them? We know that you collected more than you need".

But the squirrel said, "No. They should have collected their own nuts. They'll have to go hungry. I'm not sharing my nuts".

The other squirrels were angry and called him selfish. He lost all his friends and became very unhappy and lonely. But it was his own fault, wasn't it?

I wonder if you are selfish like the squirrel? He collected so many nuts, but he refused to share them with the others who needed them. Jesus wants us to share with others and the best thing that we can share is His Good News. In Mark 16:15, Jesus said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature". Just as the squirrels needed the nuts, our friends need Jesus. If we share Jesus with our friends we will be obeying Jesus and we'll be much happier.

There is a Friend

by Mrs. J. White

EVANGEL Secretary at Ipswich

THERE is a Friend that sticketh closer
Than a brother, Oh so dear,
A Friend whose love, it never changes,
A Friend whose arm is ever near.

There is a Friend who understands me,
Who knows my needs before I call,
A Friend who reads my deepest longings
A Friend who satisfies them all.

There is a Friend I meet in secret
And Oh, the sweetness of His voice!
A Friend who gives me strength and comfort,
This Friend, He makes my soul rejoice.

There is a Friend, whate'er befalls me,
He has promised to see me through,
A Friend, not just today, but always,
A Friend whose Word is sure and true.

There is a Friend, He died to save me,
In His own Body He bore my sin,
A Friend who cleanses all my vileness,
This Friend alone gives peace within.

This precious Friend is now in heaven,
He has gone my mansion to prepare.
This Friend is coming soon in glory,
To take me to my home up there.

With Him and all the ransomed gathered
What rapturous praises we shall sing
Through endless days; in all its fulness
We'll know the friendship of our King.

"The Sands of Time are sinking"

by Adelaide Henderson

"Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting" (Daniel 5:27)

NERO fiddled magnificently and his favoured ones danced triumphantly while Rome's fire cruelly smouldered into a blazing inferno, a picture of the Godless world of today and, from another slant, of the Church, not entirely excluding Pentecostals.

Recklessly intoxicated with the lure of its debased moral practices, a God-defiant world is fast hastening to its inevitable doom, but let it be clearly stated that God still has His 7,000 who have not bowed to Baal. As Pentecostals, we form a big section of this company.

When, then, is our attitude to this God-defiant other slant? A mere handful of men and women in the Early Church turned the world upside down because, being Pentecostal like ourselves, they were possessed of a burning passion to tell a bitterly-opposed community of Christ-rejectors that the Christ whom they had crucified had risen from the dead and was alive at God's right hand and that their only hope of salvation was to repent and to accept this risen Christ as their Saviour. Their witness was dynamic and the results were marvellous. Vast multitudes were swept into the kingdom. These converts, baptised in Holy Ghost power, as were the apostles, went everywhere drawing souls to Jesus, and, together with their leaders, they formed a mighty Church bristling with life and aglow with the power of God, as seen in the Book of Acts.

God has endued us with the same power, but, though we see good evangelism, good evangelists and, considering these hard days, good results, we do not see revival. What is the hindrance?

Prayerlessness!

Revival must come down from above; it cannot be worked up. Prayer has always been the power which has sparked off revival, however, as seen in the 1859 revival in Ulster and in countless other places. An agonising, praying church can start a mighty move of spiritual power in any community. Is it God's time for this? There never was a time more ripe, more needy, more desperate than now. Are we smug, complacent Pentecostals not living every day among people heading for a lost eternity? No glib excuse that we dislike pushing religion down people's throats will God accept, nor the conventional politeness that we cannot upset our neighbours by bringing in religion. There is no need to upset people. Win them by Paul's method, by using guile. Use a little Irish oil (the writer's method, at times!). Any reasonable means can be utilised, but we must try hard to make a breakthrough for God, for the need is urgent and the days are desperate.

Prayer brings vision and with it a holy concern for the spiritual well-being of others and a God-guided way of approach to those others. As Christians, we know that, deep down in the hearts of the God-defiant as well as the more complacent, respectable unbelievers, there is a gnawing fear of death and what may follow. This is the touchstone by which, with careful tact, we can bring forth a brave, staunch witness that, by His death, Christ abolished death and all its fears, and that to all who accept Him as Saviour, death only leads to a life of endless joy in heaven.

Each one of us will have to give account to God one day of how we have used the gracious unction of the Holy Spirit which He has given to us. Let us wait before heaven's searchlight for the answer to our needs, not from a "holier-than-thou" position, but with tears and with bleeding hearts. This is the spirit in which I write.

In 1915 I was converted under the ministry of Principal George Jeffreys in his first church in Hunter Street, Belfast, and received a mighty baptism in the Holy Spirit ten days later. Afterwards I was ordained as a minister before going to Congo (now Zaire) as a missionary. For almost sixty years I have ministered in the ranks of Elim both overseas and in the homeland and am not retired yet, but am still ministering in and through the power of prayer. The Pentecostal fires have blazed in my heart all through and still do. I have often felt totally inadequate, but a diligent, vigilant, sacrificial prayer habit has kept those fires ablaze to this day.

To the Pentecostal Church God has entrusted His revolutionising power, His best weapon with which to combat the outrageous strategy of Satan and his allies who are at work in the world. God help us to realise afresh our responsibility and to face this solemn trust with renewed zeal and earnestness, God's clock is about to strike. The sands of time are sinking fast.

(N.B. The text at the head of this article is for the whole Church and therefore for the Pentecostal Church).

Ministering Angels

by Hugh Sawyer

THE extent of the kingdom of almighty God defies the vivid imagination of man, inasmuch that, despite his mortal creative genius, his intellectual and calculative abilities, brilliant as they now are, are actually so restricted that in his non-comprehensive frustration he can but define the heavenly kingdom, should he accept its actuality and its population of celestial beings, as a vast domain of immeasurable dimensions situated in realms of outer space beyond the range of human estimation, constituting an immortal eternity, without beginning or ending.

Nevertheless, to all believers, and, praise God, they are still innumerable, even in this apostate age, spiritual geography is their least concern. They rejoice in the knowledge that the heavenly kingdom is the blessed abiding place of their divine Father and His adorable Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, their Redeemer and, when their own earthly labours are over, their own eternal home.

In this ethereal kingdom of light, when there is no night, celestial beings are very active, seraphims, cherubims and angels, all diligently engaged on their various tasks of service to almighty God. Angels are celestial messengers appointed by God to serve His children while they are domiciled upon the earth. Hebrews 1:14 declares: "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?" All Christian believers come under that category. It is a blessed consolation to know that, when a believer has run the course of his earthly pilgrimage, these same angels will tenderly bear his liberated soul up to the courts of Paradise, there to rest in blissful peace to await his risen Lord's pleasure.

Man's mighty achievements, acclaimed by the masses as "something out of this world", are but puny affairs in comparison to the spectacular, supernatural power wielded by the angels of God. They are not always messengers of peace and goodwill as observed by the shepherds of long ago when they descended from heaven to announce the birth of Jesus. Should the occasion demand, they can be avenging angels sent on missions of colossal destruction, as witness the fate of Sodom and Gomorrah, the outcome of their sordid wickedness. Owing to God's displeasure with David, He sent an angel who slaughtered 70,000 men of Israel and humbled the nation. (1 Chronicles 21:14).

The supernatural power invested in one mighty angel could bring about more carnage and destruction on this unsuspecting world than a scientist in his wildest dreams could ever imagine. Of a certainty, had Jesus, when faced by that infuriated mob who came to arrest Him in the Garden of Gethsemane, called upon but one of that twelve legions of angels which His Heavenly Father would have sent to His aid, then that whole rabble would have instantly been blasted from the face of the earth. Neither could the array of imperial Rome's legions of soldiery have stood their ground before such an angelic onslaught.

At a later date cruel Herod harrassed the Early Church, slaying James in the process. He threw Peter into prison under sentence of death and placed a guard of sixteen soldiers over him to prevent his escape (they did not fear his rescue). On the eve of his execution, Peter slept, chained to two soldiers. It says much for Peter's faith in his risen Lord that he was able to sleep soundly under such adverse circumstances. Suddenly an angel appeared in the darkened dungeon and the whole place was instantly flooded with light of supernatural brilliance and not a soul stirred! Peter was awakened by the angel who immediately struck the restraining chains from him. He commanded Peter to dress quickly and, as if in a dream, Peter obeyed. The angel beckoned and Peter, stepping over the prostrate forms of his captors, followed him. Noiselessly, the barred door opened and closed as they passed through. The guards, still at their posts, heard and saw nothing. They were stricken as were the guards outside the sealed tomb wherein lay the body of the crucified Christ. Unchallenged, Peter and the angel passed through the prison to the outside world. The outer gate opened of its own accord. It closed as they passed through to freedom. The angel vanished and Peter was left on his own to make his way to safety. When morning came and Peter's escape was discovered, so enraged was Herod, that, after unsatisfactorily questioning them, he commanded the innocent keepers to be put to death, a fate he himself suffered shortly after at angelic hands.

Another Slant

by Ken Smith, Pastor of our Erdington, Birmingham, Church

INTERVIEWING often depends on a buoyant economy and, as a nation, ours has not been that for some time, so neither is mine! We have just completed a social survey on the subject of family planning.

One experience was when I knocked at a door and said, "Is your husband at home?". "Watch it", he replied, with a few other expressions. I passed it off with the remark, "You can't tell the difference these days, can you?", and indeed you can't, more's the pity.

I wondered what the young man, not yet twenty-five, who was married, with no children, and who recently had a vasectomy would say. The smart, sleek sports car outside and the luxury flat inside told their own tale, and I just thought of his views in thirty years' time. Why cannot folk realize that it's not possessions, but people which bring satisfaction in life?

I found that among the middle class professional men vasectomies were prevalent, among reps. especially, and also among middle-management in industry, rather among than working-class people. Perhaps the pressure of their work and the desire to get on was the cause, or personal recommendations by friends — so-and-so had the operation, so I must — seemed to be a major point. I wondered again about their reactions in old age. Doesn't the Bible talk of "sowing to the wind, and reaping the whirlwind"? This must be true in the moral realm, as well as the spiritual. With the coming of prosperity undreamed of by our parents, it seemed to me that to many family life, as we know it, is old-fashioned and unacceptable. This is certainly an attitude that is contrary to nature and to the divine concept of human existence, and will bring consequent moral problems.

Another outcome of the survey showed that the overwhelming majority of single young men have physical relationships with the other sex. A number of times I set aside my interviewing and gave them guidance, for their actions would lead to disaster, and for others, too. You do not know how the other half lives until you engage in this type of work. I feel that it is necessary to know in order to have an intelligent concern for our young folk. It is so clear to me that, if the parents throw aside the Ten Commandments (and even some Christians will not accept that they have any claim on our generation, but were for God's people, Israel, in the Old Testament), then one can expect the children to have problems. It's just as if one took down all the warning signs on our roads and expected motorists to have accident-free journeys. Because our nation has ditched the moral warning signals, surveys such as the one I conducted show appalling promiscuity. It is not popular to say "No", but there are times, when that is the word to use. God give us courage to use it!

The happy little four years old granddaughter of one of our late and beloved ministers was listening to the pastor at Sunshine Corner telling the story of Moses and the burning bush. He asked, "Why did God tell him to take off his shoes?". Up shot her hand. Her reply was, "To warm his feet by the fire!".

Later the minister asked, relative to the same story, "What is holy ground?". Up went the hand again, and the girl answered, "You'd fall down it!".

Incidentally, to the same young lady, a mammal is "a mammy camel!" I guess that came out of the visit of the wise men in the Christmas story, somehow.

Kamalondilondikichipu

by A. Nicolson

NO! — my typewriter has not gone berserk, nor have I tried to invent a new game-winning word for Scrabble! Believe it or not, Kamalondilondikichipu is the name of a Christian in Zaire. One is reminded of that place in Wales which boasts of the longest name in Britain.

Names are fascinating, especially when they have certain meanings, as Kamalondilondikichipu has, but I won't go into that one! So often names, particularly in Africa, are associated with events, personal and otherwise.

There is one name which is full of meaning for millions of people. It is not a long name and it is not difficult to pronounce, indeed, it is a name that the youngest child can say.

The name is JESUS. This name, too, has a meaning. It means Saviour and it is associated with the greatest event in history, the coming of God's Son to earth to be the Saviour of the world. The name JESUS is unique; it is the only name by which men, women, boys and girls can be saved.

Some names go down in history books because of outstanding leadership. Others are recorded as a result of the evil influence of those who bore such names. None could bear a name because they were able to deal with sin, except JESUS of Nazareth.

Points for Preachers

An Outline

The Words of a wise Woman
2 Samuel 14:14

1. Death is Inevitable: "we must needs die".
2. Life is Irrevocable: "as water spilt on the ground".
3. God is Impartial: "neither doth God respect any person". Yet...
4. His Love is Redeeming: "He deviseth means". The great Epistle to the Romans is an exposition of this.

Exiles from God by choice (unlike Absalom), we have been reconciled by "That wonderful redemption, God's remedy for sin".

Words

"Try to" or "Try and"?

THOUGH widely used, even by highly-educated people, "try and" is doubtful grammar. Modern grammarians are strangely non-committal and do not outrightly reject it, but the writer feels that they are at fault. "Try to" is certainly correct, but can both be? Alternatives wouldn't fit at all: "endeavour and"; "attempt and"; "strive and"; and the participle "trying and" would be definitely wrong. "I will try and speak correctly" or "I will try to speak correctly" — which? Talk this out with your colleagues.

A Quotation

"Take my Silver and my Gold"

Frances Ridley Havergal's own Explanation

"I DO think that the couplet 'Take my silver and my gold, not a mite would I withhold' is peculiarly liable to be objected to by those who do not really understand the spirit of it! It does not mean that, because we have ten shillings in our purse, we are pledged to put it all in the next collecting plate, else we would have none for the next call! But it does mean that every shilling is to be, and I think I may say is, held at my Lord's disposal, and is distinctly not my own, but, as He has entrusted to me a body for my special charge, I am bound to clothe that body with His silver and gold, so that it shall neither suffer from cold or bring discredit on His cause. As a rule I never spend sixpence without the distinct feeling that it is His, and must be spent for Him only, even if indirectly".

And a year later: "The Lord has shown me another little step and, of course, I have taken it with extreme delight. 'Take my silver and my gold' now means shipping off all my ornaments (including a jewel cabinet which is really fit for a countess) to the Church Missionary House, where they will be accepted and disposed of for me. I retain only a brooch or two for daily wear, which are memorials of my dear parents. The whole value goes to the C.M.S. I had no idea I had such a jeweller's shop, nearly fifty articles being packed off. I don't think I need tell you that I never packed a box with such pleasure".

GLEANINGS

The Man by S. E. Petts

"Behold the man!" (John 19:5).

IN these days, when men are making wicked suggestions about the physical nature of Christ, we need to declare that He was no weak, effeminate creature.

On holiday at the seaside I saw some fishermen hauling their boat up the beach. I offered my help. They scrutinised me from head to toe then said, "No thanks, we can manage". Perhaps I didn't give them the impression of strength. Seamen have little confidence in mere land-lubbers!

It is not so concerning Jesus, however. When He approached some fishermen who knew the perils of the deep and said, "Follow Me", without hesitation, "straightway", they did just that. His manliness must have played a part in their decision. So much open air life must have given Him a tan.

As a carpenter who had to fell trees and saw them into planks before use, the rippling muscles of His arms must have been plainly evident.

See Him standing at the prow of a boat tossed in the storm, His hair streaming in the wind and the rain glistening on His face, and hear Him command the elements: "Peace, be still!"

The disciples recognised Him as a man for an emergency. They followed Him to the end. So should we. Well might Pilate cry, "Look, what a man!"

Bottled History

ON our return from the Annual Conference at Morecambe, we arrived, tired but happy, at our Salisbury Church to be confronted by three excited workmen who had been busily engaged in stripping part of the schoolroom walls in the course of repair work. Embedded in the masonry behind a memorial tablet the men had discovered a clear glass bottle 10" X 3" still sealed and containing documents and newspapers. The three newspapers, all published on June 19th, 1880, turned out to be The Salisbury Times, The South Wilts. Express and The Salisbury and Winchester Journal. Each contained the announcement of the laying of the memorial stone of the new Sunday school premises on June 24th, 1880 at the United Methodist Free Church, Milford Street. These halls together with the Church building became an Elim church in 1959. On further perusal of the newspapers I learned that the original Sunday school had no suitable premises and had been meeting with difficulty in a hired hall. The trustees determined to build a new schoolroom with classrooms at the cost of £1,800. A complete list of the twenty-four trustees appointed in 1874 was deposited in the bottle together with a printed list of twenty-four teachers, the names of eleven Sunday school officers and three auxiliaries and a teachers' plan covering four months of the year. The school met both in the morning and the afternoon. The Sunday school motto for the year was: "The entrance of Thy word giveth light" (Psalm 119:130). What a fine school it must have been to necessitate the services of twenty-four teachers, four visitors, two collectors, and a librarian, as well as the usual appointments. There were to be a teachers' meeting on the first Tuesday of every month, a teachers' prayer meeting every other Tuesday, missionary boxes were to be opened twice a year and all teachers were instructed to fulfil their appointments or provide accredited substitutes. This precise document seemed to spell out all the best of Methodist tradition, a meticulous and dedicated approach to and conception of Christian service. The last document was a preachers' plan. The names and addresses were of great interest to our local folk.

It seems very sad that such an excellent church with so many workers eventually had to close its doors. It is a warning to our assemblies and individual workers to stand true and never to be over-confident, but to walk humbly with God. We are not infallible or invincible; our wisdom and strength come from God alone and we need to rely on Him completely. God is no respecter of persons or denominations and does not hesitate to by-pass those who grow careless or cold, or who have departed from sound doctrine. Satan has many ways of attacking and destroying the witness of a Church and one method he uses is to belittle the authority of the Scriptures. We must be alert to his devices and his cunning. First principles of faith, doctrine and conduct must be upheld and a regular check of our standards is a wise procedure.

I love the story of young King Josiah and of the discovery of the book of the Law in the Temple, neglected or forgotten for over half a century, discovered at last by the high priest. The king rent his clothes when confronted with the Law of the Lord and realised how far the nation had departed from God's standards. He took immediate steps to seek God and to lead the nation to repentance. In 2 Kings 23:25, we read words of commendation concerning him. There is need for a company of Josiahs today, who will, as fearlessly as he did, reverence and obey the law of the Lord and acknowledge that history proves that we neglect it at our peril. We have only to read v.26 of the same chapter to realise that God punishes neglect and defiance of His perfect law.

BOOK REVIEW

Your Half of the Apple: God and the single Girl, by Gini Andrews, published by Lakeland, price 50p, postage and packing 7p extra.

THERE is certainly a need among young Christian people for guidance on standards, attitudes and morals in the midst of the permissive generation of the seventies. Your Half of the Apple takes the complex subject of the role of the unmarried women in the Christian Church today. Gini Andrew's style is chatty, colloquial and, I felt, rather condescending in parts. She covers a wide vista of subjects, from marriage to make-up, discussing attitudes to other people and oneself, commitment to the Lord, analysing the state of singlehood and of marriage in quite a penetrating, frank way. She bases her thoughts on the Bible and stresses throughout the need for a close, committed walk with Christ. Perhaps an even greater use of the Bible is needed, though, taking more of the relevant verses and looking at them in more depth. Your Half of the Apple is thought-provoking, but I hope that we see other books on this subject soon.

Ghana Head of State urges use of "Church Power"

CHRISTIANS in Ghana have been urged by Head of State Col. I.K. Acheampong to resort to "church power" to help to cure the country's ills. In a public appearance before a church-related group he referred to student power and women power, and said, "Today permit me to talk of the power of the Church, or the power of the living Word of God. You, the Church, hold in your hands the most precious gift that heaven has bestowed, the living Word. Let the living Word pierce the darkness that now envelopes Ghana. Let the Word be heard in every corner of this land; in the marketplaces, in the drinking bars, everywhere, not just in the big cities and towns. We, the rulers, are doing our best to correct the wrong of the past, but we need your help and your prayers always".

Everything that a Three-year-old should know

by Sue Ritter

I'LL be three years old soon... in terms of Christianity I mean. To celebrate my birthday, I thought that I would look back to the most important lessons that I've learned since my rebirth.

There's a verse in the Bible that starts: "You have need of patience..." In my case this was never more fitting. If I didn't receive my promise on the spot I used to wonder what was wrong! Not realising that God answered prayer in more than one way ("Yes", "No" and "Wait"), I would wonder if perhaps He hadn't been listening. I would request something from the Lord and in my mind I could see clearly how I wanted my answer to come about. It never occurred to me that God might have a better plan and that my great idea could only give me second best.

One day I asked myself the question: "Who is serving whom? Am I God's servant or is He mine?" Which brings me swiftly to my second lesson...

Grace: to admit that, after all, you were wrong; to give in to the whims of others; to say "Sorry, Lord!". I've met some people who never seem to be too busy to help you, people who will listen to your moans and groans with sympathy. It's not until days later that you find out that that person had been suffering from migraine and had not said a word to you about it. That's grace. Grace also says: "You're the best; you deserve it!" and "I admire the way you do that, I'd be hopeless!" — and grace means it! I learned that grace and endurance are two different things!

My next lesson was rather harsh; it causes controversy among young people: the dos and don'ts! For well over the first year I could see nothing wrong with going to the pictures, though on coming out of the cinema I would have stabs of doubt. Not that I had been to see some hair-raising show, but somehow the atmosphere was wrong. It was in the atmosphere that I discovered why I felt so doubtful. How could I be wrong in going to see the "Ten Commandments"? Then it hit me: it wasn't the film at all; it was the people in the cinema! I was sitting among people with no respect for God, in an atmosphere of smoke and bad language. I was just one of a crowd of people, no different from anybody else. As a Christian I should be different; I don't need that kind of world!

Then someone told me that I should change my way of dress, that I was causing distress to older people who didn't care for casual clothes. This was told me in love by a good friend. I thank the person now; I didn't at the time! My retort was, "If you think that God wants me to change my dress, I'm afraid that He's going to have to foot the bill" — which was exactly what the Lord did! The very next day I received a cheque through the post for £20!

I think that many lessons on dos and don'ts have to be learned the hard way because they involve personal decision as one can't point to a verse in the Bible that specifically guides.

My next revelation came as a surprise: the devil was alive and kicking very hard! I had always acknowledged that there was a devil and that he whispered bad things in your ear. I soon learned that he had the power to do much more than that. He can take over a person (though this is comparatively rare). I found that he was cunning enough to make people think that they were possessed when there was nothing wrong with them. I realised that, if I suddenly felt depressed, then the devil usually had something to do with it. Once I could turn round and say, "Get thee behind me, Satan" to this trick of his, he would change his tactics and catch me in another way!

All children of God in the terms of John chapter 1 have their "calling", but in the early stages we all fancy ourselves as missionaries, Arthur Blessitts or Dave Wilkersons. The majority of us worry about this when we are first saved. What we don't want to know is that God uses ordinary Christians to further the kingdom of God just as much as he uses evangelists. We desperately want to do something special for Christ. — I found out that I still had to ask the old question "Who is serving whom? Am I going to do it myself, or wait for God to tell me what to do?"

I was faced with two problems. Both of them were drug addicts. At first I was horrified to see people in such a mess; it was beyond me that people could get a kick out of cutting themselves up and then drinking themselves sick. Both these lads needed help. They were completely separate cases and did not know each other. I tried to help.

All that happened was that I lost sleep, got terribly worried and ended up shattered, while the two addicts just carried on taking LSD. I didn't know then that there were dedicated Christians who gave up their time to work at re-habilitation centres for such people as these. I didn't know that even if a drug addict gave his life to Christ, he would need nursing and caring for. You can't just get an addict (or spiritualist, etc.,) converted and then just plonk him back into his old existence.

People were called to take on these jobs; I was not one of them. Here again the Bible came to my rescue with a wonderful verse: "For God is at work in you, both to will and to work for his good pleasure" (Philippians 2:13). All was not lost. I was called; the Bible

Monday, June 10th

Acts 5:1-16

"Thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God" (v.4).

DISCIPLINE in the Church is an unpleasant necessity if we are to maintain its purity, power and testimony. Here we have God purging his Church in a most distressing manner. Peter faced his responsibilities and God did the rest. Peter, in close communion with God, was a true shepherd of the flock, more keen to preserve than to pamper. Ministers do well to heed 1 Timothy 5:20: "Them that sin rebuke. . . that others also may fear". Members should welcome such a God-inspired rebuke, for its aim is the protection and purity of the Church. The results in this instance glorified God and added many to the Church (vv.12, 14).

Tuesday, June 11th

Acts 5:17-26

"Go, stand and speak" (v.20).

AFTER trying to disrupt the Church from within, the devil now attacked from outside and secured the imprisonment of the apostles as common criminals, but the morning revealed an empty cell and the disciples standing in the Temple teaching! They had but one reason for exposing themselves to their enemies and possible re-arrest: obedience to God (vv.19, 20). It was enough; they needed not to fear. If obedience to God is the only reason that we can give for doing what we do, we need not fear, no matter how exposed we are to threats of criticism, or whatever, no matter how justifiable. God is on our side.

Wednesday, June 12th

Acts 5:27-42

"And they departed. . . rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for His name" (v.41).

THE Living Bible suggests that the disciples were counted worthy in the eyes of God, while other commentators suggest that it was the Jewish council who judged them worthy to suffer as Jesus Himself had been made to suffer. It is of little concern; it was a matter of great rejoicing to the disciples to be considered worthy to suffer at all. A great philosophy throughout life is to rejoice in the suffering and shame that living for God brings and to esteem it a privilege to be deserving of such. Read Romans 8:18.

Thursday, June 13th

Acts 6:1-15

"They stirred up the people" (v.12).

THIS danger is very real. Personal animosity against someone with whom we have had a dispute and lost can have far-reaching effects if it is not arrested quickly. Hebrews 12:15 reminds us of the danger of allowing a root of bitterness to spring up within our hearts, not only to our own lives, but also to the lives of others. Stephen's martyrdom began with a simple dispute, but it didn't end there. May we never allow ourselves to be trapped by the devil into disrupting and damaging the work of God by "sowing discord among brethren", for the Lord hates this (Proverbs 6:19). Let us "Follow peace with all men" (Hebrews 12:14).

Friday, June 14th

Acts 7:1-22

"Envy" (v.9).

AS Stephen recounted the history of Israel, he reminds his accusers that it was for envy that Joseph was sold into captivity. What a dreadfully evil thing envy is and what havoc it has caused. It made Cain slay his brother (Genesis 4:2-8); sent Jesus to Calvary (Matthew 27:18), divides and unsettles churches (1 Corinthians 3:3) and homes (Luke 15:28). Its presence brings "confusion and every evil work" (James 3:16). Envy is that feeling of hurt and anger at others' success or preferment. The Church is most vulnerable because of its diversity of gifts and men. Our safety from this troublesome monster is a mighty baptism of that divine love which "envieth not" (1 Corinthians 13:4).

Saturday, June 15th

Acts 7:23-43

"He supposed his brethren would have understood. . . that God by his hand would deliver them" (v.25).

HERE was an experience in the life of Moses that really shook him, but it did him good. God used the presumption of His servant to temper and train him for the delicate job of handling a dispirited, fickle people. Whether God in some way had intimated to him His designs we do not know, but it was all credit to Moses that he had good feelings for his brethren (v.23). His background probably convinced him that God would use him and led to his presuming the thoughts of his people in bondage. It is good to be zealously affected, but it is wise to wait God's time, for "My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways My ways saith the Lord" (Isaiah 55:8).

Sunday, June 16th

Acts 7:44-60; 8:1-3

"And He kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. . . and he fell asleep" (v.60).

WHO can help but admire this courageous lay preacher, the first martyr of the Christian Church? He died as he lived, breathing the very spirit of a loving Christ as he prayed for their forgiveness. Who can tell the fruit of such a life and witness? It certainly was true that the "blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church" (8:1, 4). Who knows, too, whether there was an eternal link between Stephen's witness, conduct and prayer and the conversion of the watching Saul?

What is there in it for me?

by A. S. F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

THIS is the same question that I asked at Easter. Now we come to Pentecost, meaning fiftieth, the second great festival of the Jews. The commencement of the Christian Church on the day of Pentecost, preceded as it was by Christ's resurrection and ascension, attaches a peculiar interest to this season. More and more people today are taking interest and I wonder at times what there is in it for them.

When I ask, I am told, "It's wonderful! It makes me feel great and so happy and I just love it and all the others". I ask, "But how does it manifest itself?" "Well, we get together and sing and shout and let the glory out. Man, you just know it's real. We kiss each other, put our arms around each other! We are just one big happy family," they say. So that is it, and I am afraid that about sums it up for some.

I praise God for my baptism in the Holy Spirit. What does it mean to me now? For well over forty years I have been filled with the Holy Spirit and Acts chapter 2 has been my own personal experience, speaking in languages as the Spirit has enabled me, speaking of the great things that God has done. The Bible has been a new book. The Holy Spirit has taken of the things of God and revealed them unto me, and I believe that in a little way by His help and gifts, I have been able to minister to others.

The Holy Spirit has given me a love for fellowship at all times, but especially in the house of God. I believe there are three musts. I have already mentioned two and the next is a passion for souls. This is what my experience in the Holy Spirit has given to me.

I have not the space to write of its effect on my prayer life, or on my faith. Praise God, the experience that I received in the old Elim Church in Salisbury changed my whole life, for it made it possible for me to preach and teach the gospel. Before, I was so nervous that I could not even read a passage of Scripture in public. To Him be all the glory!

It does seem that many, after their baptism in the Holy Spirit, feel important and put on a superior air.

I believe that to receive the Holy Spirit and whatever gift or gifts He sees fit to give us ought to keep us very humble. I like the thought brought out by Conybeare and Howson, when writing of spiritual gifts. They say, "Where the exercise of such gifts is spoken of as a matter of ordinary occurrence". These gifts were in operation and it was natural that they should be. "These miraculous powers are spoken of both in the Acts and Epistles as a matter of ordinary occurrence; and in that tone of quiet and often incidental allusion in which we mention the facts of our daily life".

Each Christian community is the Church universal in miniature, a part of the Body of Christ. "So the many of us form one body in Christ while each is related to all others as a member" (Romans 12:3). Christ is the Head of that Body and each believer is a member of the Body, but we all have the same Spirit and without that Spirit we would be dead, as once we were. "Ruach", rendered "spirit", always represents what is invisible except by its manifestations.

The Holy Spirit is invisible, except by His manifestations. In this wonderful dispensation of the Spirit, He is manifesting Himself as divine power and is giving spiritual gifts. "But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal" (1 Corinthians 12:7). Please read 1 Corinthians 12:8-11.

May God keep us humble if He sees fit to use us in some way that He pleases. "But all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit dividing to every man severally as He will" (1 Corinthians 12:11).

said so. When helping a friend through a hard, difficult patch, Scripture says that we should beware lest we too fall into the same difficulty.

You may think that you realised all these lessons in your first year as a Christian; that could well be. We don't all grow up identically. In your church you will see some people grow strong in prayer very quickly, while others may shine in the Bible studies. That way I can learn from you and you can learn from me! We are never too old or too young to be able to help each other.

My last lesson, is that I don't know it all. I pray that I will continue to grow in grace as long as I give my all to Jesus.

If you haven't given your all to Jesus, just think; it could be your birthday today!

DID you notice the startling thing that was said in a recent court case? A fire had occurred in the London area. Six people died. It was alleged that the manager of the hotel in which the blaze took place had been given ample warning, but, it was said, he had refused to give the alarm signal as he did not want to frighten people. It would appear that, by the time attempts were made to arouse everybody concerned, it was too late to save the victims.

Decisions taken in a moment of pressure are often regretted later. If only we could have all the detailed plans in our minds by way of hindsight as foresight instead! We must not lay too much blame if indeed the allegations are true. The man concerned will suffer enough and who is to tell what one would do in similar disastrous circumstances?

Our Evangelistic Committee held a conference and rally at Coventry recently and much discussion took place in the afternoon meeting concerning Ezekiel's dread warning, "Their blood will I require at thy hands". Those taking part treated this matter with all the deference that the subject demands. The stimulating urgency of the gospel message was rightly pressed home.

It set me thinking. Romans 3:23 changes your view on life. You look around at the local population and so many of them are such nice people. Mr. A. tirelessly trots off for the 8.15 to Town every weekday morning and still manages to give time to the local youth club in the evenings. Mrs. B. struggles to bring up a family of six, two of whom seem permanently to be ill, yet she always has a smile. Senior Citizen Mr. C. who suffers still from World War I wounds somehow copes with the shopping for Mrs. D. next door, who can't get out because of illness. Young Miss E. cares for her widowed mum, but still fits in a full-time job behind the local grocery store counter and so cheerfully, too.

They are sinners all. They need a Saviour. Who is going to tell them? Are we sometimes worried about causing alarm and despondency and keep quiet?

I suppose we are. But we shouldn't be. After all, hell is an alarming place.

History was made recently when the first wedding in our new Aldershot Church building took place. The pastor married Phyllis May Willison to George Thomas Pratt. A large crowd of friends and relations were present. The strong Christian faith of bride and groom was shown in the choice of hymns and in the address which the pastor gave. On another occasion the Assembly were hosts to a large number of Christians from other local churches for the film "Following the Spirit". This was a great challenge to us all. There is a growing interest in the work of the Holy Spirit among some of the Christians in the district.

Church Reports

BRECON

Pastor: G.H. Neale

WE praise the Lord for His continuing blessing on the work at Brecon. Our year began with our Sunday school prize-giving at which over seventy children received books for attendance. As a result of the growth of our Sunday school the Church has purchased a 28 ft. caravan which has been converted into a mobile classroom to allow the formation of two new classes. It is also being used by the newly-formed Junior Crusader Group.

Our Spring programme included a special effort at Easter when we were host on Good Friday morning to the Brecon Free Churches. On the Saturday evening the Crusaders brought an evangelistic service entitled, "New Life in Christ". The Sunday evening service was entitled, "Christ is risen". On Easter Monday a full coach travelled to the Royal Albert Hall, London.

For our last two baptismal services we used a local Baptist church, but, due to rebuilding work taking place there, a baptismal service that we had planned for November had to be postponed on several occasions, so the Pastor and three young men of the Church tackled the job of building one in our own Church. As a result of their labours, we have a baptistry of our own and at our first baptismal service in our own Church, five young people followed the Lord through the waters of baptism.

PONTYPRIDD

Pastor: R. Hughes

THE oldest member of our Church entered the presence of the Lord recently. Mrs. Catherine Roderick, a former missionary to South Africa and the wife of the late Rev. William Roderick, who handed over the independent Pentecostal mission to Elim on his retirement, was an excellent example of God's handiwork. This beloved sister graced the kingdom of God for more than eighty-seven years with her prayerful lips, pure living and dedicated spirit.

At her funeral, Mrs. Una Pearce, the church missionary secretary, paid tribute to a neighbour and friend, "who taught me in Sunday school fifty years ago". Mr. Don Gimblette, senior deacon, echoed the sentiments of all when he said, "Mrs. Roderick was a great saint".

The last time she was in church she prayed the closing prayer after Communion and, though weak, she sang "The old rugged Cross" in hospital when a team of visitors ministered in song. Her request was that all donations should go to the Elim Missionary Society, but perhaps the most fitting tribute to her godly life was paid by her grand-daughter-in-law, a devout Roman Catholic, who asked the Lord into her life after the funeral, "That my faith might be like hers". She "being dead yet speaketh".

AT a special Mother's Day thanksgiving service, Mrs. John Tyler of Caerphilly gave a thrilling testimony to healing from cancer. Involving the Junior Crusader singers ensured the presence of unsaved parents and God honoured the effort with several decisions from among the singers and a senior student at the local Polytechnic also yielded to Christ.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA

Pastor: A. Nicolson

A SATURDAY missionary conference was held here by the Eastern Presbytery. We welcomed our Missionary Secretary, Pastor L. Wigglesworth, and our missionary from Ghana, Pastor D. Kilpatrick. The afternoon conference session commenced with a quick resume of the Elim work overseas by Pastor Wigglesworth. Pastor Kilpatrick who gave us a history of the work in Ghana. The meeting was then thrown open for questions. These were many and varied, yet all revealed a keen desire to discover ways by which the work of God abroad could be furthered.

At the rally in the evening our visitors ministered with blessing. This service was ably supported by the Chelmsford Choir. A gift of £50 from the day's offering was given to our Missionary Society.

On the Sunday Pastor Wigglesworth ministered in word and song to our spiritual benefit and uplift. Pastor Kilpatrick went to our Leigh-on-Sea Church and also spent the afternoon at our Rayleigh Sunday school prize-giving.

We thank God for the ministry of these servants of His.

M.S. LYNDON

CLACTON-ON-SEA

Pastor: P.K.G. Rose

OUR children's campaign was conducted by Pastor J. Harrison, assisted by our Pastor. Four schools were canvassed and invitation cards were given to the children. The first night saw the church full of excited, expectant children of all ages.

On average 120-150 children turned up each evening, with about 200 different children attending during the week. Bright chorus singing was on the agenda. Each child was given a card to record the highest points for prizes. Bible memory, painting and drawing competitions, and film strips and Bible quizzes were attractions. The climax came on Sunday afternoon when well over 100 children attended to receive their prizes of Christian education books, pencils, pictures texts, etc. This campaign was a great success. Thirty-five decision cards were completed. Sunday school teachers and members of the church were actively involved in this rewarding crusade.

We also give thanks to God for another six applications for membership with more to follow. Two young lads, aged nine and twelve, sons of one of our members, gave their hearts to the Lord. They also testified from the pulpit of His saving grace. We give God all the glory and pray His continued blessing on the work in young lives.

S.K. BOLTON

APRIL 8th, 1974 will be a day that I and hundreds of others will stamp in their memories through the shock of hearing of the tragic accident that terminated the lives of our dear friends Pastor and Mrs. Burton Haynes and Miss M. Inkpen. Hundreds of beautiful, loving tributes could be given by those who loved them and knew them. I knew Pastor Burton Haynes before he became our Pastor as a calm, forthright preacher, always with a smile, a man with a lovable nature. What a thrill it was for me when I sat on the same platform with Pastor Burton Haynes and others at his induction service on Thursday July 6th, 1961, knowing that I was to be his church secretary. From that date a wonderful friendship existed between the Pastor and myself. During the twelve years that I worked with him as his secretary I realised that first, in every business transaction whether material or spiritual, for him God came first. The Clacton Church Session did all in their power to show appreciation to Pastor and Mrs. Haynes for the wonderful ministry and sincere love that they gave to the Clacton flock.

On April 15th, 1972 the Pastor celebrated his fortieth anniversary in the ministry. It was a blessing to all to see the love in their faces when presented with a leather-bound book beautifully inscribed, "Down Memory Lane", containing over 400 signatures from all parts of the British Isles. On June 8th, 9th, 1973, with much regret, we had to say farewell to Pastor and Mrs. Haynes. It was my privilege to pay tribute on behalf of the church at the retirement service. I referred to the text: "He walked with God".

Two words cover the very essence of the life of Pastor Haynes: "Gracious" and "Compassion". His personal manner poured out love, wherever he happened to be. He had a charming manner, that made it impossible to have an argument in his presence. He had the gift of bringing calmness on troubled waters, when everything failed. One of the Pastor's ministries which was outstanding was visiting the sick and lonely; this was well known in the Clacton area. He was always supported by Mrs. Haynes. She was always at his side when in need, sharing in everything and always putting God first. During Pastor Haynes' illness while in Clacton, I spent much time with him in his home and in hospital. One could understand that bond of love which united them in serving the Master they loved so much. We may not understand God's plans, but I am sure that their desire when God called them home would be "Please God, call us both together".

I also pay tribute to our dear friend, Miss M. Inkpen, who was a great Christian lady, a real prayer warrior, who loved to come to Clacton and share with her dear friends, and the flock in an understanding Christian fellowship.

We who are left to remember can now meet them as we walk down memory lane, and perhaps be endowed with those two qualities, graciousness and compassion.

CHRIS G. ARMSTRONG

WEST BROMWICH

Pastor: R.M. Kingsbury

THE appeal was given and people were invited to come forward for counselling. Pastor George Canty, in West Bromwich for the first night of a six day campaign, was almost overwhelmed by the crowd who surged towards the front. The church was packed and the majority of the congregation were unsaved. About forty people were counselled for salvation that night and about eighty were prayed for by Pastor Canty for Divine Healing. Over 100 people were counselled for salvation during the week.

Prior to the campaign our members distributed 12,000 leaflets and 200 posters. We held special prayer meetings for some weeks beforehand, during which some of our young people were baptised in the Holy Spirit. We had 7 a.m. prayer meetings during the campaign period. Even so we were taken aback at the tremendous response from non-churchgoers. The church was packed every night; there were over 200 on the final evening.

There was a tremendous sense of expectancy in all the meetings and people were enthralled by the ministry of Pastor Canty, both his "sermons in oils" and the inspiring way in which he related the Christian experience to the contemporary situation. We are grateful to him for fitting us into his hectic schedule and for the way in which he gave himself to ministering to the people's various needs.

One lady who was prayed for had a tumour on the brain. She visited hospital on the Monday after the campaign and was told that she would not have to undergo surgery as the tumour has shrivelled up!

WHITEHAVEN

Pastor: S.C. Cain

RECENTLY five candidates followed the Lord through the waters of baptism, after the gospel service convened by our Pastor. Bro. H. Postlethwaite (one of our founder members) gave a very inspiring message to a large congregation, after which, the five candidates, with ages ranging from eleven to seventy-eight years, obeyed the Lord's command. Each candidate gave a personal testimony to the saving and keeping power of their Lord and they were each given a promise from the Word of God, by Bro. R. Stephenson. Our Pastor conducted the baptisms. We also had a visit for the day from a group of students from a Manchester university. They ministered in song and in personal testimony, telling of how God had wonderfully saved them and of His untold blessings. This was truly a wonderful day spent in God's house.

G. WARBRICK

EVESHAM

Pastor: J.R. Brown

SOME folk are backward in telling of what they do and even under pressure are rather reluctant to advertise their activities. The wife of our Pastor at Evesham has just been telling me about their Church's visit to the nearby prison to conduct a Sunday morning service there. When she told me the story I said this must go in the EVANGEL. I have the impression it won't go in, unless I give the report myself!

This comparatively new and small church — though it's got a big witness — has an opening into this prison and conducted their first service recently. The Chaplain of the prison was there and sat among the congregation, saying that he wanted to be ministered to. The Governor and his wife were present and he said how much he had enjoyed the service and especially the spontaneous prayers and he invited the company to return again. Other visits are planned for further Sundays. Our Pastor has been invited to assist the Chaplain in counselling and discussions among the prisoners on some Thursday evenings when the prisoners are visited in their cells.

We rejoice in work such as this which so often remains unheard of and unsung. Nevertheless it is a real evangelistic effort for the extension of the kingdom of God and the winning of men and women for Him.

J.T. BRADLEY

SHEFFIELD

Pastor: A. Brooks

WE were pleased to welcome back Pastor and Mrs. A.V. Gorton for our ladies' weekend. The sisterhood formed a choir for the occasion under the direction of our Pastor's wife, who was also the convener of the weekend services. Our guest soloists were Mrs. J. Reeve-Baker (Mosborough) and Mrs. O. Riley (Castleford). It was an anointed, Spirit-filled weekend. The final blessing was as Mrs. Brookes joyfully announced the final clearance of the debt on the church extension, hard-workingly erected during Pastor and Mrs. Gorton's ministry in Sheffield.

Our much delayed (owing to the power crisis) fellowship tea turned into a nice surprise, for 164 came for tea. Mrs. Brooks with help from deacons' wives and other ladies prepared a four-course meal, tastefully and decoratively laid out. The spiritual feast was our Bible Week with Christopher Gornold Smith. His inspiring topic was, "The Bible comes Alive", with illustrated slides, films and recordings. We had record attendances at every weeknight service.

This spirit of love and blessing continues in our general midweek and Sunday services, with much increased numbers to encourage us. We pray and praise God that this will continue, not only in Sheffield, but in all our Elim family.

(Miss) C.I. LADLOW

BALLYSILLAN, Belfast

Pastor: A.F. Seeman

THE continuing violence and unrest in Belfast do not help to create an easy atmosphere in which the gospel can be proclaimed or its words heeded. Some have hardened their hearts and believers feel and know some of the tension and strain, but God is still moving by His Spirit. In the normal weekly meetings we have known of the anointing of God that brings release and power. Prayers have been answered in a way that is bringing a renewal of confidence in God within the Church. New faces are seen in the gospel meetings. Some have experienced the healing power of God. The Sunday school anniversary was an opportunity to reach more for the Lord and the church was full on a recent Sunday evening when the children acted a play on the call of Moses. Linking his message with the life of Moses, the visiting speaker gave a challenging word to all present.

BOOK REVIEWS

The Christian Message for Contemporary Man, by Stephen F. Olford, published by WORD Books, price 45p, postage and packing 4p extra.

THIS paperback is made up of five studies based on 1 Corinthians 1 and 2. This is, I believe, a challenging book and a must for every believer. The very headings make one think: e.g. 1. THE CONTRADICTION OF THE CHRISTIAN MESSAGE. The writer brings before us the tragic effect on the Church's message to the world of divisions in the Church. We need to pray that our churches will be known by the love that members have one for another and not by differences or personal prejudices.

Spoken by the Spirit, by Ralph W. Harris, published by Gospel Publishing House, price 65p, postage and packing 5p extra.

THE author has been an American Assemblies of God minister for thirty-five years. "The focus... is upon... other tongues that have been identified as known languages" (p.6). There is documentation of identification of over fifty languages ranging from Arabic to Zulu. Dates given stretch from 1920 to 1973. Places mentioned are as far apart as Viet Nam, Jerusalem, and New York. It is an attempt to advance a new line of evidence in defence of present-day tongues. Some of the instances recorded make interesting and impressive reading, though the verification details will not always satisfy the sceptic. The omission of some claimed utterances in non-evangelical situations, e.g. Roman Catholic priests (p.32), would have made this book even more useful in evangelical circles.

John Harris

Neither Male nor Female, by Q.M. Adams, published by Stockwell, price £2.10, postage and packing 19p extra.

THE stated purpose of this book is to define the role of women in today's church. In sections one and two, the author studies the importance of women in the plan of God in the Old and New Testaments. This leads to section three which deals in some depth with translation problems and the teaching of the Epistles. In amplifying the original Greek the author expounds such well-worn phrases as "Let your women keep silence" and the controversial passage of 1 Corinthians 11:4-15. In the last two chapters, the author makes the bold assertion that in the spiritual realm women are equal with men and should be considered by men as fellow-workers in the gospel.

Planet Earth's last Hope, by Alan Hayward, published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott Ltd, price £1.75, postage and packing 7p extra.

THIS is the third book of recent times to incorporate "Planet Earth" in the title. This book is of British origin. The author is a principal scientific officer in a government research laboratory and a convinced Christian. His academic qualifications are outstanding and his knowledge of the Scriptures becomes evident as one reads. The book gives a convincing answer to the environmental crisis that we are facing. He avers that man is destroying the world that gives him life and chooses to have "an affluent, effluent, society".

Of the nine chapters, the first three deal with many problems that man is creating for himself on this planet, while the others deal with the one and only hope, the return of Jesus Christ. His chapter dealing with the Jew is thought-provoking, as is the one depicting "Man's final Fling". Dealing with Christ's future reign on earth is depicted under the title, "World Government - at Last". The book closes with an emphasis on the need for "a permanent state of readiness". I have pleasure in recommending this book to every thoughtful reader.

News of the World to Come, by Ian Macpherson, published by Prophetic Witness Publishing House, price £1, postage and packing 12p extra.

HAVING first read the manuscript of this book as a member of the Prophetic Witness Council, it has been a pleasant exercise to review it in book form.

The theme of the Second Coming has never been so relevant and, though the selection of reading material in the realm of eschatology is very wide, here is a book which every student of prophecy should own. The author is a pleasing speaker, as many who read this review will know, and his literary ability is on the same level. Here is a book which takes familiar aspects of the truth of the Advent and makes them more precious, while tackling the more controversial aspects, making them more understandable. Such chapters as "The Signs of the Times", "The Political Scene", "Religious Trends" and "His Appearing and His Kingdom", need to be read to be appreciated. These are only four of the twelve interesting chapters within the volume. This book is delightfully illustrated and convincingly arranged. I have much pleasure in recommending it to all those who "love His appearing".

W.J. Maybin, D.Th.

Coffins for Traitors, by Gordon Parke, published by Scripture Union, price 45p, postage and packing 7p extra.

I MUST say rightaway that this book really gripped me. It is an excellent story based on that part of English history called the Jacobite uprising. It is easy to read and is a thrilling story which includes a clash of arms and a touch of humour. The description of the personalities and places involved makes fascinating reading. Above all, the gospel is clearly presented, the Scriptures are honoured and prayer is given an important place. It would make a good prize for boys and girls in their early 'teens, although I feel sure that grown-ups would enjoy it as well. I know that this is a paperback, but really the binding is of poor quality. I could not help but feel that it was a pity that such a splendid story should have been treated with such a poor binding.

A.A. Biddle

Counselling the Drug Abuser, by Frank Wilson, published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott Ltd, price 40p, postage and packing 5p extra.

HERE is a welcome book that fits the scene for counselling addicts. It offers sound, practical advice on how to carry out a vital ministry in a needy field. Mr. Wilson lovingly spells out the dangers and hazards, the dos and don'ts of such a ministry. A well-intentioned but misguided approach because of lack of knowledge and experience can do more harm than good. The addict and ex-addict need special care and rehabilitation and the author, who has been deeply involved in this work, clearly shows this.

He has some interesting thoughts and advice on how the local church can be of help. Older, mature church members can be a source of love and care to the addict. This ministry is not, as some think, for young people only. The book is well worth reading by every Christian.

John Fry

Israel and the Nations, by F.F. Bruce, published by The Paternoster Press, price £1, postage and packing 10p extra.

THIS masterly survey of Israel's history from the Exodus to the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D.70 has long been a textbook in colleges. Now, in paperback, it reaches a wider public. Its clear, concise narrative will help and guide any reader of the Bible. Its summary of the centuries between Malachi and Matthew is brilliant.

The paragraph on page 36 regarding Solomon's supposed "copper refinery", however, is now known to be mistaken. We cannot accept a second invasion by Sennacherib (page 72), the reference to "Deutero-Isaiah" (page 97), or the implication of a late date and Palestinian origin for Daniel.

Christopher Gornold Smith

Prayers from a Woman's Heart, by Judith Mattison, published by Marshall Morgan and Scott, price 30p, postage and packing 4p extra.

THIS little book of prayers is very true to its title and I've read it with delight. It consists of prayers for Family, Friends, Feelings and for Faith. These prayer poems are in the modern idiom and are conversational in style. The author's introduction reads: "These prayers are some of my conversations with God and I hope they suggest thoughts for personal prayer and serve to strengthen your relationship with God and love for others and for life". They do just these things and I recommend the book to you.

Margaret M. Ladlow

First Christmas, the true and unfamiliar story, in words and pictures, by Paul L. Maier, published by Mowbrays, price £1.95, postage and packing 13p extra.

"I'M dreaming of a white Christmas?" - no, the first Christmas has become even more of a living, lively reality since reading this book. It would take many words to express my appreciation for it. A wonderful heart-warming experience was mine. The first Christmas seemed as yesterday and I was there as an eyewitness. There are many books about Christmas legends and folklore and I have read many of them, but I have never read a book like this. Aspects of events give one a sharper, clearer focus on history, geography, archaeology, and astronomy, but Bethlehem and the story of Jesus' birth and its background become fundamental and positive. Yes, I was not dreaming when reading this book, but my train of thoughts led me to the birth of Jesus in Bethlehem, its people and places, realising that God moves in mysterious ways His wonders to perform. The book helped me to understand God's timing (Galatians 4:4).

Leon C. Quest

It was on a Monday Morning, by John Jackson, published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott, price 40p, postage and packing 4p extra.

THIS collection - forty in all - of brief broadcast talks could, as the title suggests, make a good start for a Monday morning, and in fact for every morning. Each talk is like a seed which, received into the heart, could serve as an inspiring thought for the rest of the day. I've no doubt that this book will serve many useful purposes, especially in that category of a thought for the day. It is not intended to take the place of daily Bible reading, but it might be used as a starter.

S. Penney

Watchtower Chaos, by Valerie Tomsett, published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott, price 40p, postage and packing 4p extra.

THIS book is a startling exposure of this sinister sect, whose teaching is of death, not life, based on fear, lying, division, and hatred, substituting Armageddon for the glorious Second Advent of Christ. Lying is encouraged under the guise of "Theocratic war strategy". Their aim is world rule by dividing and conquering. It sounds bizarre, until one reads: "In 1972 2½ million 'new subscriptions', i.e. converts were made". Under the heading "What can be done?" Valerie Tomsett gives some sensible actions that God's people can take to regain souls lost to Jehovah's Witnesses. The book should be in the hands of every minister, church leader and Christian worker. It is fascinating reading and a mine of information.

9. Living with infirmities

by Ian R. Hall

Pastor of our Ryde Church

"I DO try to be good all the time, but then I forget," explained the small boy caught in misbehaviour. This problem is not confined to childhood, for we all have to contend with "infirmities". The Lord Jesus recognised this when in the garden he warned his sleepy disciples: "Watch and pray that you may not enter into temptation; the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak" (Matthew 26:41).

This weakness or infirmity (Gk. astheneia — no strength) is not necessarily sinful: it is rather the natural consequence of our being human. The devil, however, subtly directs temptations at our weakest points, e.g., a natural appetite for food may be used to tempt a man to gluttony. While we are not condemned for our weakness, we are if we yield to it instead of controlling it.

Discipline

The Biblical illustrations of our relationship to God stress our need of disciplinary training if we are to live holy lives. The disciple is one subject to discipline. The athlete toughens his body by rigorous exercises, thus Paul testified: "I harden my body with blows and bring it under complete control, to keep from being rejected myself after having called others to the contest" (1 Corinthians 9:27, TEV). Similarly the soldier is subjected to intense training, so Paul exhorted a young minister: "Take your share of hardship like a good soldier of Christ Jesus" (2 Timothy 2:3, NEB). As sons "He disciplines us for our good, that we may share his holiness" (Hebrews 12:10). The branch in the vine is pruned "that it may bear more fruit" (John 15:2). Obviously the sloppy, uncontrolled life has no real place in Christianity. What God wants is real manliness — and that takes discipline.

Dependence

The precise nature of Paul's infirmity, his "thorn in the flesh", is not revealed, but his victory over it is obvious. "God said to me, 'My grace is sufficient for you, for my power is made perfect in weakness.' I will all the more gladly boast of my weaknesses, that the power of Christ may rest upon me" (2 Corinthians 12:9). Christ is fully aware of the frailty of human nature and of the ease with which temptation comes because He has shared our lot and proved that holy living is possible. "Let us then with confidence draw near to the throne of grace, that we may receive mercy and find grace to help in time of need" (Hebrews 4:15,16).

"Likewise the Spirit helps us in our weakness; for we do not know how to pray as we ought" (Romans 8:26). We can depend on the Holy Spirit's aid, not only in prayer, but also in daily living, for his Christ-given title of "Comforter" indicates his work as Helper and Strengthener. If we are to know constant victory we must learn to rely on the power of God's Spirit. Paul prayed that the Ephesians might know "the mighty inner strengthening of his Holy Spirit" (3:16).

Hurtful to our pride as our infirmities may be, they can work for our good as we daily discipline our lives and, by depending on the power of God, prove the triumph of His grace. "That is why, for Christ's sake, I delight in weaknesses. . . For when I am weak, then I am strong" (2 Corinthians 12:10, N.Int.V.).

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,

HAVING read the report of the opening of the new Bristol City Temple, my wife and I gave praise to God for the work that He has done over the years through such pioneers as P.S. Brewster, Willard Cantelon and W.R. Jones. How well I remember it all from the beginning and rejoice with them. Maybe the pioneers have reminded each other of what happened in 1951, when the Elim Youth Committee, then composed of D.B. Gray (then National Youth Secretary), H.W. Greenway, P.S. Brewster, and myself felt led to go into Bristol for a weekend rally. The Bristol Methodist Central Hall became the place of revival for that weekend. The services were wonderful. Crowds gathered and the Spirit of God moved mightily upon the people. Many were saved, but the most outstanding memory was the touch of divine healing on the sick that day. The Committee was so blessed and overwhelmed we even suggested that one of the Committee should stay there, book a hall and carry on meetings. Within that time there was born in the heart the vision for a revival and healing campaign. P.S. Brewster answered the call and thus the work of God took root and one of the greatest campaigns ever took place. One is also reminded of the day when Alex Tee, then assistant to Mr. Brewster at Cardiff, invaded Bristol with some large posters. Wherever he saw a place to stick one he did so, in fact the police contacted Mr. Brewster and zealous Alex Tee had to return to Bristol to remove some!

Another Slant

by Ken Smith, Pastor of our Erdington Church, Birmingham

"I've lived eighty-three years, and folk have told me how to live, but nobody has told me how to die. How do you prepare for death, for you know it comes to us all?". How pathetic that in Birmingham with all the evangelistic endeavour undertaken there, this request should be made. Another interviewer was asked this when conducting a survey for Age Concern, the National Old People's Welfare Council, recently, remembered that I was a minister, and 'phoned me. I said that, unless one knows, one cannot tell others, so I was able to witness to the good lady who had kindly 'phoned me. I was able to get a message through to Pastor Jesse Williams to visit the old lady who lives near our Kings Heath Church.

I returned from the Conference to conduct the same survey on behalf of this Charity in the Gornal area of Dudley. I found only one elderly person in the day's interviewing who had anything to look forward to in life. How he loved the Lord, and how refreshing after my experiences in Conference to meet a man so contented with his lot, for he was a living testimony that "godliness with contentment is great gain". He was nearly ninety and told me that he had not a worry in the world and that he looked forward to a happy ending and going to be with the Lord, so all this went down on the interview. He was the happiest man I have ever met. He radiated the love of Christ. "I'm as good as in heaven; I couldn't be any happier there," he added after the interview. He said, without prompting, "You're a preacher, and saved, aren't you?". I never felt that I gave a clerical impression, nor really wanted to, but he must have seen it! I was amazed to find that he had never heard of Pentecostal churches, nor of the Jeffreys brothers, but he testified to having been healed of cancer nearly fifty years ago, with no knowledge of divine healing services. His testimony of healing came without any prompting from me, so glad was he to tell me all that God had done for him. He was a real Methodist ranter and we reminisced of some of the old names in Methodism. He considered that his Sunday worship was "better than a bottle of medicine". For nearly two hours he ministered to me; his joy was a rebuke to my fits of depression. His father, converted from cock fighting and gambling, got a horse and cart for a coal round to "make an honest living". He was warned by another horse dealer that the horse would not live for a fortnight. He replied, "I've prayed about this 'oss, and the Lord won't loose me down". The horse lived for thirteen years, heaving his coal cart round the Black Country.

What a contrast to the man whom I had previously interviewed. He had nothing to look forward to. He had his own lorry drivers, who became a director, and, through various devices, had put the old man off the board of directors, and had left him almost penniless and embittered. I told him that he had been so busy making a living that he had forgotten to live. He couldn't work that one out, then he exclaimed, "You're a preacher, aren't you?". There he lived with his glass-fronted bookcase exhibiting his shrunken heads from all over the world, black ones, brown ones. He wanted a white one to crown the lot! They were perfectly featured and the size of a tennis ball. It was like sitting with the dead, both physically and spiritually, as he told me of his bitterness and loneliness. I told him of the Lord and left him some tracts. He has all the time in the world to read them. Pray for that man. He was as ignorant of the gospel as any in "darkest Africa", probably more so.

To bring the message of God's love to these older people does your soul good. Do seek out the lost and the lonely in your neighbourhood and give them a word of witness. Most were glad of my call. It did them good to have a chat with somebody. I had only two refusals; they were suspicious, which is understandable.

On my way I had visited our oldest member, who is ninety years of age, and in a geriatric ward in a Birmingham hospital. I was happy to discover that the lady in the next bed loved the Lord, and neither of them knew it, so now they are able to share Christian fellowship, and they need it desperately in such surroundings.

Pause for Thought

by Trevor Partington,
Covenant Hall, Stafford

THE young lad living next door to me has been learning to ride a bicycle. He covered a few feet and then fell off. One of the neighbours encouraged him to get up and try again. "Keep going and look ahead," she shouted. He needed to learn that, unlike his tri-cycle, it is only when you keep going on a two-wheeler that you can balance. It requires a step of faith. The more confident that you are in going forward the easier it is to stay upright.

In our approach to God there are times when we won't commit ourselves until we have what we regard as satisfactory proof of God's existence, or proof of His willingness to help us. Consequently we lose our balance. We fall from the progress that God wants us to make. The New Testament says: "He that cometh to God must believe that He is (that He exists), and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him" (Hebrews 11:6). Children find that they get their balance once they begin to ride a bike; we find that God is real once we begin to trust Him. We must take God at His Word if ever we are to discover that that Word is true. God cannot prove that He answers prayer unless we pray. Are you still afraid to take that step of faith? The boy next door to me would still be waiting to find his balance if he hadn't actually set off on his bike.

*Faith, mighty faith, the promise sees
And looks to that alone;
Laughs at impossibilities,
And cries: "It shall be done!"*

GLEANINGS

Our Occupation

by S. E. Petts

"Occupy till I come" (Luke 19:13).

WE need to remember that we own nothing. All that we have belongs to God. There is nothing in this world that is good that does not come from God. No man can make something out of nothing. Our lives were given to us by Him. This is why He has the right to ask of us one day, "What did you do with the life that I gave you?". That is the meaning behind this parable where three men were loaned different sums of money and at their Lord's return were asked to account for their stewardship. We are only stewards of our lives; we are given a body to "occupy" for our Lord until He returns. The parable not only makes clear that there will be an accounting day, but that we shall be rewarded according to the way we have used what was loaned to us. Those who do much for their Lord will receive greater rewards than those who do less. Paul wrote about our resurrection bodies: "There is one glory of the sun and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars, for one star differeth from another in glory". Some folk will have more glory in their celestial bodies than others. It will depend on how they have occupied. The parable also says that the one who didn't use his life in his Lord's service lost all. What reward, if any, awaits you? Ask yourself how you have occupied the life that God gave you for His service.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

Golden Idols

Acts 7:40,41

by Sheila Price

THE Hebrews were tired of journeying across the desert and Moses had great difficulty in keeping them happy and contented. They blamed Moses for everything. When it was too hot, or too cold, they blamed him. When there was a shortage of food, or water, they blamed him. "It's all your fault, Moses", they cried. "We were better off as slaves! You promised to lead us to a land flowing with milk and honey, but we've followed you for ages and still there is no sign of it!"

When they reached Mount Sinai Moses told the people to make camp while he went into the hills to meet with God. He was gone for a long time and the people got bored waiting for him. Some thought that he had got lost and others thought that he had died on the mountain. One day they gathered up all their gold bangles, rings and ornaments and took them to Moses' brother. "Moses won't be back, Aaron," they said. "Make us an idol, a golden idol, to lead us". Aaron lighted a fire, melted down the gold and moulded it into the shape of a calf.

All day long the Hebrews danced and sang around their idol. They worshipped it and offered sacrifices

The Great Servant

Isaiah 42:1-4

by T. Woods

OUR God is liberal, kind, generous, but how unobtrusive He is! He satisfies the hungry with good things. Millions are fed every day by His generous hand. The Lord has served men all the time. He created a lovely world with a view to establishing man in the midst of delight. When the tables were turned on Him by man's revolt, he unveiled the promise of a coming Deliverer.

If we are to bear any conformity to Him, our lives must be ministries amid the grace that He has imparted unto us.

Jesus is the ideal Servant

"Behold My servant", called in the eternities, consenting before the awful calamity of man's fall and failure, to redeem, to recover, to ransom and to fulfil. "Servant" means "bondman". Christ was God's Bondman. He became that voluntarily. Every service must have the stamp of the volunteer upon it. Wherever Jesus went, He was God's Volunteer. Morning by morning His ear was opened. He knew His great vocation. He was not His own. He looked higher than the counsels of men. He knew what was in people, but He loved them, and laid out His life for them every day. He planned His days with a view to the benefit of all around Him. While those lepers with aching limbs and broken hearts were labouring against the foul disease, He was bowed in His Father's presence, assuaging their griefs and their sicknesses as He bowed the knee, and, when they touched His presence, inspiration was born and faith quickened, the deed was done. "AS THEY WENT, THEY WERE HEALED".

The heartaches of millions rushed into His tender heart. He was bound to no other but His Father. Sin could not touch Him, Satan found nothing in Him that he could touch, but the Father had all of Him. Amid His energies of compassion, He laid hold of the woes around Him. He assuaged griefs as they approached Him. Bereaved hearts felt His healing touch. Wounded spirits felt His soothing power. He was God's bondsman, God's Servant meting out healing, hope and release to the captives around Him. We must emulate Him in this sorrow-ridden world with its soil and shame. Let us seek to be like Him who was ever God's Servant.

Jesus was upheld

"Whom I uphold", and "uphold" means "sustain, maintain, keep up". God is for ever concerned about

His servants, those who have yielded to Him, who trust Him fully and find Him wholly true. The perfect Bondman, the perfect Slave is upheld, He who vacated the eternal throne-right and the sceptre to become a man, to take the fashion or form of a slave, to humble Himself to every task, and finally to humble Himself unto death. What a life Jesus lived — humble, beautiful, amazingly kind, alarmingly compassionate. How perfectly was virtue blended in that peerless life. How courageous, brave, selfless, uncompromising, gentle, gracious was Jesus.

"Whom I uphold": He was sustained, maintained. Poverty did not disturb Him. He conquered poverty and reigned supreme. He became poor, but He did not become deficient. He drew from other resources and He enriched many: "As poor, yet making many rich". Being divorced from human aid, He drew from above. His treasures were in heaven and He shares them with us. His vision was heaven and He has imparted it to us. He lived above the toils and cares of this world, but He was never indifferent to the needs around Him. HE MARCHED OUT OF HIS CHAMBER OF COMMUNION AS A MIGHTY WARRIOR AND DISPELLED LEGIONS OF DEVILS AND CANCELLED HOSTS OF PAINS AND SICKNESSES.

Mine Elect

Jesus was always in favour with His Father. He maintained in His soul the smile of heaven. He did always those things which pleased His Father, and God says, "Mine elect, in whom My soul delighteth". The favour of the Lord is far better than the smiles of men. Jesus guarded His communion. He was always in touch. That is why so many were touched, healed, blessed and fired by His ministry, why they said, "Never man spake like this Man", why men sold out for Him and followed Him. He was like a fresh morning amid the sultry heats of this world, bringing sunshine into thousands of lives. Since then He has brought sunlight into millions of lives. He has visited us and delighted us. Though His perfections shame us, we love Him and aspire to His lovely, unimpeachable, elevated life.

"In whom My soul delighteth": there was always a response to the Father in the heart of the Son. He learned obedience by the things that He suffered. He blended with God in every action and the delight between the Father and Son was mutual. May that sweet, winsome submission completely stir our hearts to follow in His steps who did no sin, neither was guile found in His mouth, who, when He was persecuted, threatened not, but committed His judgment to His Father. He has won God's delight for ever, and He has shared it with us.

"I HAVE PUT MY SPIRIT UPON HIM"

The radiance of Christ's wonderful life was a product of the radiance of the Spirit upon Him. God placed Him in command through the baptism in the Holy Ghost. Christ was a Servant, but He was Jehovah's Servant. He was under orders, but He was in command. We do not triumph in the might of the flesh, but in the power of the Spirit. To them that have no might He increaseth strength. They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength. Young says "Pass to power". God says, "My strength is made perfect in weakness".

The Lord lays stress on the need for a Spirit-filled life. God's ideal Servant was Spirit-filled, God-anointed, God-commissioned, God-controlled, God-blessed, God-furnished, and triumphant. "I HAVE PUT MY SPIRIT UPON HIM".

Standing in the synagogue of Nazareth, Jesus opened the scroll, found the place and read, "The Spirit of Jehovah is upon Me". That was the secret of His triumphant life. Peter said, "Him that God anointed with the Holy Ghost" and "He went about doing good and healing all that were oppressed of the devil". We gather our devotions around One who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without spot unto God on our behalf. The Lord Jesus never reeled in impotence. He moved in power, splendid and triumphant. Let that be the encouragement for the hour in which we live. Let the Church move forward, God-anointed and God-confirmed amid a complete dependence on the Spirit's might. Hell's dominions shuddered as God's Anointed One entered the arenas of this rebellious world. MISSION MEANS MIGHT IN THE VOCABULARY OF HEAVEN. GOD'S CHALLENGES BRING INTO PLAY GOD'S ENABLINGS. The hour is late and the night is dark, but the anointing will still break every yoke.

THE SPIRIT CREATED URGENCY IN CHRIST.

He shall bring forth judgment to the nations. Matthew says, "He shall show judgment to the Gentiles (or nations)". "Judgment" means more than mere justice. It means that He will bring forth a verdict for the nations. Jesus did not come to judge the world, to condemn it: He came to save. It is here in v.3: "A bruised reed shall He not break, and the smoking flax shall He not quench: He shall bring forth judgment unto truth". What a ministry Jesus set up in the earth. If sin is not judged, then truth will perish.

The Servant here is the perfection of obedience.

When He found Himself in the fashion of man and knew that He was God, very God, He did not advertise Himself: "He shall not cry nor lift up His voice (v.2). He never played for popularity. He was born lowly, lived lowly, and died lowly, but in His death His accomplishments were immeasurable. Though Golgotha's agony was great and the awful abandonment took place when He cried, "My God, why hast Thou forsaken me?", it was all in the plan. His mission was reaching its apex when He bowed to the lowest depths. His triumph was reaching perfection when it seemed as though demons and wicked men were prevailing. He was placing the topstone on the mighty plan of redemption when He was down in the depths of what seemed like outward despair.

Our darkest moments are not the worst. Out of the depths we can cry. When our souls cleave to the dust we can look up to Him who is touched with the feelings of our infirmities. Jesus carried His mission to maturity. He became obedient to death, even the death of the cross, and then Jehovah took over, and anointed lips sound the triumph note, "Him hath God raised up having loosed the pains of death because it was not possible that he should be holden of it".

What exuberance was His as He strode forth from the sepulchre, immortal and glorious from the captivity of death, and what triumph followed.

*But soon the Victor rose Triumphant o'er His foes,
And led the vanquished host in chains,
He threw their empire down,
His foes compelled to own,
O'er all the Great Messiah reigns.*

to it. When Moses returned and saw the noisy, drunken crowd he was filled with anger. "What is the meaning of this?" he demanded of Aaron, and Aaron, instead of admitting responsibility, put the blame on the people. "It is their fault, Moses. They made me do it!" he said.

Many people today love gold more than they love God. Just like the Hebrews, they worship it, sing about it and dance around it. Some folk cheat, lie and steal for money and there are those who willingly give up their friends for money, as Judas did. Others give their lives in search of gold. During the American gold rush in the nineteenth century nearly 5,000 people died in the Indian wildernesses on their way to the Sacramento river in search of the gold that had been discovered there. What a sacrifice for earthly treasure this was!

Nearly 2,000 years ago a young Man died on the cross at Calvary. His name is Jesus. He sacrificed His life that we might have eternal treasure.

The Southampton Church Session

The Pastor, W. J. Maybin

Our Southampton Church

Researcher: Philip.G. Parsons

THE Elim work in Southampton dates back to 1927 when Principal George Jeffreys held a three-week campaign in the Central Hall. Numerous testimonies of healing resulted, some being saved and healed in the same service. One such person tells how that for years she had suffered intense pain in her hip as a result of rheumatic fever when she was young. She described her condition as if "her hip was in a vice", but, when she was prayed for, she was instantaneously delivered. Another woman dying of cancer was miraculously healed.

In the early days of the new church that was established, there was no building that could be called home. Services were held in various hired halls, until in May 1929 the Lord provided a fine Methodist church with several ante-rooms, in a residential area of the city. One interesting incident that happened in these premises during the war years under the ministry of Pastor Lemuel Morris, who is now retired and resident in the area, reveals the protection of the Lord. in a remarkable way. Other churches had changed their evening gospel services to the afternoons, but Pastor Morris was convinced that they should continue as usual. One Sunday morning, while preparing for the morning service, he heard a voice telling him to have the gospel service that day in the afternoon. Despite his personal opinion, the voice was so convincing that he announced to the morning worshippers that the service would be held in the afternoon. That evening, when the people would have been assembled in the church, soon after 7 p.m., a bomb struck the building. God is good!

A number of well-known and beloved ministers have pastored the church, including the President, Pastor G. Canty. During the ministry of Pastor J.W. Newman, a new church was erected to replace the bombed building. It was opened by the late Pastor E.C.W. Boulton in 1951 during his second Presidential period. Currently about 75 to 85 meet on Sunday mornings, and 100 to 120 on Sunday evenings, under the ministry of Pastor W.J. Maybin. The offerings are the highest in the history of the church. Well over 100 children are reached weekly through the three Sunday schools, and about fifty young people in the youth work at Aldermore School, Junior Crusaders and Cadets in the church during the week. Women are well catered for in the sisterhood and young wives' fellowship.

A distinctive feature in the ministry of the church is the recording of the Sunday evening services. These tapes are taken to the aged and sick. This ministry is reaching an increasing number of people who cannot get to the church, both Elim friends and some of other denominations.

One desire fills the heart of minister and members — to see God do a new thing. Since Christianity is more often caught than taught, it is felt that the American was right who said: "The progress or the contagion of the kingdom of heaven is 'soul by soul'. As Christians we are committed to the infinite significance of the person". We want to see ourselves in light of the prime mission of the Church and line all our activities with that mission.
